Where a party is bound to repair ratione tenure, that circumstance must be set forth on the record. Thus even against a lord of the manor it will not suffice to charge a prescription without these expressions. R. v. Bucknall, 2 Le Raym. 792, 804. Where this duty is charged the indictment must show the place in which the lands are situate. 2 Hale, 181. The very terms "by reason of his tenure" should then also be inserted, and the courts will not allow the words "owner and proprietor" to be substituted in their room. R. v. Kerrison, 1 M. & S. 439. But in presentments by the grand jury there is no occasion to show who ought to repair, if it is sufficient if the defect be shown and the bridge stated to be public. Andr. 285.

A corporation must be charged as being bound by prescription. 13 Rep. 33.

Plea to—It hath been resolved that it is not sufficient for the defendants to an indictment for not repairing a bridge, to excuse themselves, by showing either that they are not bound to repair the whole, or any part of the bridge, without showing what other person is bound to repair the same: and it is said that in such case the whole charge shall be laid upon such defendants, by reason of their ill plea. 1 Hawk. c. 77, s. 4.

In an indictment for not repairing a highway, a special verdict was found. The indictment alleged that a certain part of the highway, at the township of Quick, in the West Riding, &c., to wit, a certain part thereof lying next adjoining the west end of a certain public bridge there called Tamewater Bridge, and within the distance of 300 feet thereof, &c. was and yet is very ruinous, &c. And that the inhabitants of the West Riding of, &c. of right ought to repair, &c. Plea, not guilty. The evidence (as far as it is material to this point) was, that the township of Quick lay in the parish of Saddleworth in the said riding, which parish had been immemorially divided into four districts called Mears, in one of which means, called Shaw Mear, the highway in Quick (hereinbefore mentioned) lay; and that the 300 feet at the other end of the bridge lay in another mear; and that each mear had respectively repaired the said respective highways, &c. The main argument was upon the liability of the county to repair these ends of 300 feet each, in the same manner as they were liable to repair the bridge. This was decided in the affirmative. But in arguing, it was said by Mr. Hobroyd, who was counsel for the crown, and not contradicted by the court, that no question could arise as to any special liability of the respective mears, because the general issue only was pleaded; and any question of that sort, he said, could only be raised by a special plea. He cited R. v. City of Norwich, 1 Strn. 180, 182. The counsel for the defendants argued against this, upon the principle of assuming that these ends were highways and not parts of the bridge. This, however, the court overruled. R. v. W. R. Yorkshire, 7 East, 588; 3 Smith's Rep. 467, S.C.

It is suggested, however, that this doctrine must be understood only of indictments against the county, and not of indictments against individuals, or bodies corporate. 1 Russ. 356; 3 Sum. 169, n. 10.

Though the county, under the plea of not guilty, can only prove that the bridge was not a public bridge, or that it was in good condition, they may give evidence that particular individuals have been accustomed to repair, not immediately for the purpose of throwing the liability on them, but to afford ground for the jury to conclude that the bridge is not public. R. v. ——, 2 M. & S. 262.

It is said that where the defendants plead, whether necessarily or otherwise, that others ought to repair, and traverse the charge against themselves, the attorney-general may, in such case, take a traverse upon a traverse, by insisting that the defendants are bound to repair, and traversing the charge against the parties named in the plea; that, on this last traverse issue must be taken, and that the attorney-general may afterwards surmise that the defendants are liable to repair, and that the whole matter shall be tried by an indifferent jury, &c. 1 Hawk. c. 77, s. 5; 492

In a plea by the inhabitants of a county, that the inhabitants of a particular township have immemorially repaired the highway at the end of a county bridge, situate within the township, it is not necessary to allege any consideration for such prescription. R. v. W. R. Yorkshire, 4 B. & A. 623; 493

The plea must correspond exactly with the facts which come out in evidence. Therefore, a plea by the inhabitants of the county, that certain townships had immemorially used to repair a bridge, is disproved by evidence that the townships had enlarged the bridge to a carriage bridge, which they had before been bound to repair as a foot bridge. R. v. W. R. Yorkshire, 2 East, 353; and see R. v. Surrey, 2 Campb. 455; R. v. Duchess of Buccleugh, 1 Salk. 357; 6 Mod. 150; R. v. Cumberland, 3 B. & P. 351. Post, Highways, Vol. III. p. 70.

So where upon an indictment against a county, the defendants pleaded that J. S. was liable ratione tenure, and it appeared that J. S. had purchased part of an estate, the owner of which, both before and after the purchase, had repaired the bridge: it was held, that this was not sufficient evidence to support the plea. R. v. Oxfordshire, 16 East, 223. *Et per Lord Ellenborough, C. J. “The defendants have not maintained their plea. It is pleaded that M. and all those whose estate he hath, have immemorially repaired. Now, there is no evidence that he and those who had the estate have repaired, for it is pleaded that since he purchased the estate another person has repaired. It would have been more correct to have pleaded that ‘he and those whose estate he hath with others have repaired,’ instead of which, the burden is cast on him impartially, without giving him the benefit of a contribution from Lord Cadogan.” But I should be sorry to conclude the county from bringing forward their case.”

Certiorari.—By 1 Ann. st. 1, c. 18, s. 5, no presentment or indictment for not repairing bridges, or highways at the ends of bridges, shall be removed by certiorari out of the county into another court.

In the case of Rex v. Inhabitants of Cumberland, 6 T. R. 194, the chief question was, whether an indictment for not repairing a bridge could be removed by certiorari or not? To show that it could not, the defendants relied on the above clause; but the prosecutor contended that it was intended only to prevent defendants removing such presentments or indictments, and did not take away the certiorari from the prosecutor. Lord Kenyon, C. J. stated several cases in which informations and indictments for non-repair of bridges had been removed by writs of certiorari applied for by the prosecutors. And that therefore the court were of opinion that the certiorari was properly issued. He also stated, that if it were otherwise it would be an anomalous case in the law of England, for that in these cases the defendants are the inhabitants of a county, and if the indictments cannot be removed by certiorari, they must be tried by the very persons who are parties to the cause.

This case afterwards came by writ of error before the House of Lords, where the above judgment was affirmed. 3 Bot. & Pul. 354.

A certiorari lies to remove an order made by the justices concerning the repair of a bridge, pursuant to a private act of parliament; and the justices ought to return the private act upon which their order is founded. Dalt. 504.
VI. (3.) Prosecutions for Non-Repairs.

R. v. Hamworth, 2 Stra. 900. Upon motion to quash a certiorari to remove an indictment against the defendants at sessions, for not repairing a bridge, it was insisted, that by stat. 1 Ann. c. 18, the certiorari is taken away. To which it was answered, and resolved by the court, that this act extendeth only to bridges where the county is charged to repair; and that where a private person or parish is charged, and the right will come in question, the act of the 5 & 6 Will. c. 11, hath allowed the granting a certiorari; and therefore they refused to quash.

In such a case the certiorari must be moved for before judgment has been pronounced in the inferior court. Therefore where, upon an indictment at the quarter sessions for not repairing a bridge, a verdict was found for the crown, and judgment pronounced accordingly, the Court of King's Bench would not allow a certiorari to issue to remove the indictment for the purpose of taking objections to it. Per Curiam. The defendants have thought proper to take the chance of succeeding at the sessions. They ought clearly to have applied for a certiorari before the trial, and it ought not to issue in this late stage of the proceedings. They can now avail themselves of objections to the indictment by writ of error only. R. v. Mochynlleth, 1 B. & C. 142; 3 D. & R. 388, S. C.

EVIDENCE.—The preceding observations will for the most part show the requisite evidence for the prosecution or defence; and see further, post, 3 Wills., Vol. III. p. 70—75.

Where the indictment charged a corporation with a prescriptive obligation to repair a bridge, and a charter of a corporation granted by Edw. VI. was given in evidence, from the terms of which it appeared to be doubtful whether the corporation had before existed immemorially, and whether lands had not been given for the repair of the bridge; 14 East, 348; but parol evidence was given that the corporation had in fact repaired the bridge as far back as living memory could go; it was held that parol evidence and the charter might be taken in aid of each other, and that the preponderance of evidence was, that this was a corporation by prescription, although words of incorporation were used in the incorporating part of the charter only; and that the corporation were still bound to repair by prescription and not by tenure. Id.

By the 1 Ann. st. 1, c. 18, s. 13, upon the trials of informations and indictments for the non-repair of bridges, the inhabitants of the town, corporation, county, &c. where the bridge is, are competent witnesses. Previous to this statute such witnesses were, in some instances, held to be competent on the ground of necessity. 2 Show. 47; 2 East, 561.

TRIAL.—It seemeth that no inhabitant of a county ought to be a juror for the trial of an issue, whether the county be bound to such repairs or not; and therefore the jury must come from some adjacent county. 1 Hawk. c. 77, s. 6.

And it seemeth that the same objection may lie as to the justices, where they are (as it may happen) all interested: in which case it seemeth that the trial shall be in the next county; for where an impartial trial cannot be had in the proper county, it shall be tried as near to the same as may be; as in the case of R. v. Norwich, concerning a county bridge, the trial was in Suffolk. 2 Burr. 859, 860. But now, by a special statute, viz. 1 Ann. st. 1, c. 18, supra, an inhabitant of the county in such case may be a witness.

Where the bridge lies within the county of a city or town corporate, and the point in dispute is whether the inhabitants of the city or the county at large ought to repair, on a suggestion of these facts on the record, and that consequently no impartial investigation can take place in either of those jurisdictions, the venue will be awarded into the county adjacent to the larger division. 1 Stra. 177.
such warrant or warrants shall be appointed; and such sheriff or bailiff is and are hereby required to impanel, summon and return such number of persons accordingly; and out of the persons so impanelled, summoned, and returned, or out of such of them as shall appear upon such summons, the justices of the peace, or any two of them, shall, and they are hereby empowered and required to draw by ballot, and to swear or cause to be sworn, twelve men, who shall be the jury for the purposes aforesaid; and in default of a sufficient number of jurymen so returned, the said sheriff or bailiff shall take such other honest and indifferent men of the bystanders, or that can speedily be procured to attend that service, to make up the number of twelve; and all persons concerned shall have their lawful challenges against any of the said jurymen when they come to be sworn; and the said justices of the peace, or any two of them, shall have power from time to time to impose a fine or fines on such sheriff or bailiff; or his deputy or deputies, making default thereof in the premises, and on any of the persons who shall be summoned and returned on such jury, and who shall not appear, or, appearing, shall refuse to be sworn on the said jury, or, being sworn, shall refuse to give or shall not give a verdict, or shall in any other manner wilfully neglect his or their duty therein, and also on any person who, being summoned and required to give evidence before the said jury, shall refuse or neglect to appear, or, appearing, shall refuse to be sworn or to give evidence, so that no such fine be more 10l. nor less than 20l. on any one person for one offence."

Sect. 3. "That in case any jury shall give in and deliver a verdict for more money, as the value of such stones and amount of such damage, than what shall have been offered for the purchase thereof by such surveyor or other person or persons as aforesaid, the costs and expenses of summoning and maintaining the jury and witnesses shall be borne and paid out of the rates to be collected within such county respectively; but if such jury shall give in and deliver a verdict for no more or for less money than the money which shall have been so offered by such surveyor or other person or persons as aforesaid, then the costs and expenses of summoning and maintaining the said jury and witnesses shall be borne and paid by the person or persons with whom such controversy or dispute touching the value of such stones and amount of such damage shall arise, and shall be levied by the warrant of one of the said justices by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the person or persons made liable to the payment thereof."

Sect. 4. "That if any person or persons shall or may think himself, herself or themselves aggrieved by any thing done or to be done in pursuance of this act, such person or persons may, within the space of three calendar months next after the cause of complaint shall have arisen, appeal to the justices of the peace at any general quarter sessions of the peace to be holden for the limit wherein the cause of complaint shall arise, every such appellant first giving or causing to be given fourteen days' notice at least in writing, of his or her intention to bring such appeal, and of the cause or matter thereof, to the person or persons against whom such complaint shall be made, and within three days next after such notice entering into a recognizance before some justice of the peace acting for the county wherein the cause of complaint shall arise, with two sufficient sureties conditioned to try such appeal, and to abide by the order of and pay such costs as shall be awarded by the justices at such session aforesaid; and the said justices at such session, upon due proof of such notice being given as aforesaid, and of the entering into such recognizance, shall hear and finally determine the cause and matter of every such appeal in a summary way, and make such award to the party appealing or appealed against, as the said justices shall think proper; and the determination of such justices so assembled shall be binding and conclusive to all intents and purposes."

It was said by Buller, J., in R. v. Justices of Glamorganshire, 5 T. R. 279, "As to the power of justices to change roads, by changing the local situation of a bridge, there certainly are old cases against it, and they were properly decided; because previous to stat. 14 Geo. III. c. 33, the sessions had no power to change the situation of bridges; but that act impliedly gives them that power, for it enables them to purchase lands adjoining any county bridge, for the more commodious enlarging and convenient rebuilding the same. This, therefore, impliedly gives them the power of altering the position of the bridge to suit the convenience of the public." Vide stat. 43 Geo. Ill. c. 59, infra, which expressly enables justices to alter the position of bridges which are in decay.

As to widening bridges, ante, 489.

The defects in the laws for repairing and rebuilding county bridges, by enabling the justices at sessions to purchase lands under certain circumstances for such purposes, (which was in some degree supplied by stat. 14 Geo. II. c. 33, s. 1,) are more completely remedied by stat. 43 Geo. Ill. c. 59, s. 2, by which it is enacted, "that where any bridge or bridges, or roads at the ends thereof, repaired at the expense of any county, shall be narrow and incommodious, it shall and may be lawful to and for the said justices, at any of their general quarter sessions, to order and direct such bridge or bridges, and roads, to be widened, improved, and made commodious for the public; and that where any bridge or bridges, repaired at the expense of any county, shall be so much in decay as to render the taking the same wholly down necessary or expedient, it shall and may be lawful to and for the said justices, at any of their said general quarter sessions, to order and direct the same to be rebuilt, either on the old site or situation, or on any new one more convenient to the public, contiguous to or within two hundred yards of the former one, as to such justices shall seem meet; and if, for the purpose of altering the situation, or of widening or enlarging any such bridge or bridges, road or roads as aforesaid, it shall be necessary to purchase any land or ground, [or by stat. 54 Geo. III. c. 90, "any building or buildings, or other erections,"] it shall and may be lawful for such county surveyor or surveyors, by and under the direction of such justices at their general quarter sessions as aforesaid, to act out and ascertain the same, not exceeding in the whole one acre at any one such bridge as aforesaid, and to contract and agree with the owner or owners of such land, and persons interested therein, for the purchase thereof, either by a sum in gross or by an annual rent, at the option of such owner or owners; and if the said surveyor or surveyors cannot agree with the said owner or owners for the purchase thereof, or the recompence to be made for the same, or by reason of such owner or owners not being to be found, shall be prevented from treating, then and in every such case the said justices in their general quarter sessions shall impanel a jury, and assess the compensation and satisfaction for such land, and for the trespass and damage to be done by the execution of the powers of this act, in the same manner as they are authorised and empowered to do by the said above-mentioned act of the thirteenth year of the reign of his present Majesty, in relation to highways; and all and every the clauses, powers, provisions, exemptions, penalties, matters, and things in the said act contained, as well with respect to impanelling juries, examining and swearing witnesses, payments of expenses, enabling bodies politic, corporate, and collegiate, and other incapacitated persons, to sell and convey, and all other the powers and provisions of the said act, shall be, and the same are hereby extended and applied to the works by this act authorised to be done and performed, as far as the same are applicable, as fully and effectually, to all intents and purposes, as if the same were herein particularly repeated and re-enacted; provided that no money shall be applied to the amendment or alteration of any such bridge or bridges, until presentment shall have been made of the insufficiency, inconveniently, or want of repairation of such bridge or bridges, in pursuance of some or one of the statutes made and now in force concerning public bridges."

Sect. 4. "That the inhabitants of counties shall and may sue for any damages done to bridges and other works maintained and repaired at the expense of such counties respectively, and for the recovering of any property belonging to such counties, in the name of their surveyor, and also shall and may be sued in the name of such surveyor; and no action or prosecution to be brought or commenced by or against the inhabitants of counties, by virtue VII. Destroying or Injuring Public Bridges.

The 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 13, enacts, "that if any person shall unlawfully and maliciously pull down, or in anywise destroy any public bridge, or do any injury with intent, and so as thereby to render such bridge or any part thereof dangerous or impassable, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for life, or for any term not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding four years; and, if a male, to be once, twice, or thrice publicly or privately whipped, (if the court shall so think fit), in addition to such imprisonment."

See the general clauses of this act, post, Malicious Injuries to Property, Vol. III.

The 9 Geo. 2, c. 29, s. 5, made it a capital offence to attempt to destroy Westminster bridge. However, that clause, and also all such clauses in the other bridge acts, were repealed by the statute 1 Geo. 4, c. 116.

The 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 27, repeals the 1 Geo. 4, c. 116, except as to its repealing such other acts.

VIII. Forms, List of.

Order of two Justices to repair a County Bridge, under 52 Geo. III. c. 110, s. 1, (No. 1.)
Certificate to be returned to Sessions, pursuant to 52 Geo. III. c. 110, s. 2, (No. 2.)
Indictment against a County for suffering a Public Bridge to be out of repair, (No. 3.)
Presentment at a Quarter Sessions of a Bridge, which the County ought to repair, being out of repair, (No. 4.)
Indictment against an Individual for not repairing a Bridge, which he ought to do, (No. 5.)
Indictment for not repairing a Highway within distance of 300 Foot from a Bridge, (No. 6.)
Commitment under 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 13, for destroying a Bridge, (No. 7.)
Indictment for a like offence, (No. 8.)
Commitment on like Act, for doing Injury to a Bridge to render it dangerous, (No. 9.)
Indictment for a like offence, (No. 10.)
(No. 1.)

County of

TO the parish of in the said county. We to wit. and two of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, duly appointed, in pursuance of the statute in that case made and provided, to superintend the county bridges, ramparts, banks, cops, and other works appertaining to the same, and the roads over the same, and so much of the roads at the ends thereof as by law is to be repaired at the expense of the said county, within the division or hundred of in the said county, having on this day inspected the county bridge situate in the parish of in the said county, and within the said division or hundred; and it appearing to us, on our own inspection thereof, to be necessary for the purpose of preventing the further decay and injury of the same, to order the immediate repairs and amendments to be done to the same, as in the schedule of particulars by you prepared and signed and hereto annexed: Now, therefore, we, the said justices, do hereby order and direct you, immediately to repair and amend the said county bridge, according to the said schedule of particulars by you prepared and signed and hereto annexed, provided that the sum to be expended in such repairs shall not exceed the sum of Given under our hands this day of 18

(No. 2.)

County of

TO the justices of the peace at the general quarter sessions, to be holden as in the said county, the day of 18. We

and two of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, duly appointed, in pursuance of the statute in that case made and provided, to superintend the county bridges, ramparts, banks, cops, and other works appertaining to the same, and the roads over the same, and so much of the roads at the ends thereof as by law is to be repaired at the expense of the said county, within the division or hundred of in the said county, do hereby certify to the said court of quarter sessions, that on the day of last, we did inspect the county bridge situate in the parish of in the said county, and within the division aforesaid; and it having appeared to us, on our own inspection thereof, that and that it was necessary, for the purpose of preventing the further decay and injury of the same, to order the immediate repairs and amendments to be done to the same, as follows, viz.

therefore we, the said justices, did, on the said day of

, make our order, in writing, signed with our respective hands, and did thereby order and direct of the parish of in the said county of immediately to make the said repairs and amendments, provided that the sum to be expended in such repairs should not exceed the sum of pounds. And we, the said justices, do hereby further certify, that the said repairs, so directed to be made as aforesaid, have been made accordingly by the said

, and that the reasonable price and charges payable to the said for the same amounts to the sum of as per account hereto annexed, and verified on the oath of

Given under our hands this day of

, in the year of our Lord 18

(No. 3.)

THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that on, he, there was and from thence hitherto hath been and still is [don't state it was imme-morally public] a certain common and public bridge, commonly called bridge, situate and being in the parish of

in the county of

in the common King's highway leading from the [market town of

] in the county aforesaid, towards and unto the [market town of

] in the same county, being a common highway for all the liege subjects of our said Lord the King on foot and with their horses, coaches, carts, and other carriages, [according to the fact,] to go, return, pass, repass, ride, and labour upon and over every year, at all times of the year, [see ante, 507.] at their free-will and pleasure; and that the same during all the time aforesaid of right ought to have been used, and still of right ought to be used by all the said liege subjects for the purposes of that behalf aforesaid, and that the said common and public bridge on the day and year aforesaid, and continually from thence until

(a) Ante, 502. The Act gives this form. (b) Ante, 503. The Act gives this form. (c) See other Forms, 3 & 4 Geo. II. 593, et seq.
the day of the taking of this inquisition, at the parish of aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, was and yet is ruinous, broken, dangerous, and in great decay, for want of needful and necessary upholding, maintaining, amending, and repairing the same, so that the liege subjects of our said Lord the King, in, upon, and over the said bridge on foot, and with horses, coaches, carts, and carriages, could not and cannot pass and repass, ride, and labour, without great danger of their lives and loss of their goods, as they ought and were accustomed to do, and still of right ought to do; to the great damage and common nuisance of all the liege subjects of our said Lord the King upon and over the said bridge on foot and with their horses, coaches, carts, and other carriages about their necessary affairs and business, going, returning, passing, riding, and labouring; and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity; and that the inhabitants of the county of aforesaid of right have been, and still of right are bound to repair and amend the said common bridge when and so often as it shall be necessary.

(No. 4.)

[Commence as usual, post, Presentation, Vol. V. p. 221.] that at a general quarter sessions of the peace of our Lord the King, holden at for the said county, on, &c. before E. F. G. H., &c. Esquires, and others, justices of our said Lord the King assigned to keep the peace of our said Lord the King in and for the said county, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and misdemeanours committed within the said county, it is presented by the oath of A. B. &c. [the names of the grand jurors.] good and lawful men of the said county, sworn and there sworn and charged to inquire for our said Lord the King and the body of the said county as followeth, that is to say, aforesaid; the jurors present for our Sovereign Lord the King upon their oath, that a certain bridge over the river commonly called bridge, lying and being in the several parishes of and in the said county of in the King's common highway there, leading from [the market town of ] in the county of to [the market town of ] in the county of for and during twenty years last and upwards, being a common King's highway for all the liege subjects of our said Lord the King, with their horses, carts, and carriages, to go pass, ride and travel at their free-will and pleasure, on, &c. was and continually from thenceforth hitherto hath been and still is in great decay, broken down, and ruinous, so that the liege subjects of our said Lord the King, upon and over the said bridge with their horses, carts, and carriages, could not and cannot go pass, ride, and travel, without great danger, to the grievous damage and nuisance of all the liege subjects of our said Lord the King upon and over the said bridge, going, passing, riding, and travelling, against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity; and that the inhabitants of the county of aforesaid, the common bridge aforesaid, (so as aforesaid being in decay,) ought to repair and amend when and so often as it shall be necessary.

(No. 5.)

[Proceed as in the form (No. 3), ante, 511. to the words crown and dignity, and then conclude as follows]: and that C. D. late of [gentleman], by reason of his tenure of certain lands, situate, lying, and being in the parish of in the said county of during all the time aforesaid was and still is bound to repair and amend the said common bridge as often and whenever it hath been and shall be necessary.

(No. 6.)

— THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that from time immemorial there was and yet is a common and ancient King's highway leading from [the market town of ] in the [west riding of the ] county of towards and unto [the market town of ] in the county [palatine] of in, through, and over the [township] of in the [west riding of the ] county of aforesaid, used for all the liege subjects of the King for themselves, with carriages, &c. to pass, &c. [as ante, 511.] And that a certain part of the said highway at the said [township] of in the [west riding] aforesaid, to wit, a certain part thereof lying next adjoining the west end of a certain public bridge there, called [bridge], and within the distance of 300 feet thereof, beginning at the west end of the said public bridge and extending from thence westwards, containing in length [45] feet, and in breadth [seven] yards, and a certain other part thereof lying next adjoining to the [east] end of the said bridge, VIII.][Forms.

and within the distance of 300 feet thereof, beginning at the east end of the said bridge, and extending from thence eastwards, containing in length 150 feet and in breadth seven yards, on, &c. at, &c. was and yet is very ruinous and in decay for want of repair, &c. [as ante, 507], so that the subjects of the King cannot safely pass to the common nuisance, &c. [as ante, 512], against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity, and against the form of the statute in such case made and provided. And that the inhabitants of the west riding of the county of the said common highway so as aforesaid being in decay, of right ought to repair and amend when and so often as it shall be necessary.

(No. 7.)

[Commencement as usual, as ante, 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. a certain public bridge there situate, commonly called Bridge, unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously did pull down and destroy; against the form of the statute in such case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual, as ante, 8, to the end.]

Commitment under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 15, for destroying a bridge.

(a)

(No. 8.)

—THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C. D. late of on, &c. with force and arms, at, &c. aforesaid, a certain public bridge there situate, commonly called Bridge, then and there unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously did pull down and destroy; against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity. [If any doubt as to the name or situation of the bridge, add another count or more.]

Indictment for a like offence. (a)

(No. 9.)

[Commencement as usual, as ante, 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously did, &c. [state the injury done, see the act, ante, 510], with intent thereby the said bridge ("such bridge or any part thereof") to render dangerous and impassable; against the form of the statute in such case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual, as ante, 8, to the end.]

Commitment on like act for doing injury to a bridge to render it dangerous, &c. (a)

(No. 10.)

—THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C. D. late of on, &c. with force and arms, at, &c. unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously did, &c. [state the injury done], with intent thereby then and there the said bridge to render dangerous and impassable; and that the said C. D. then and there did thereby render the same dangerous and impassable; against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity.

Indictment for a like offence. (a)

British Plate Glass Company. See Malicious Injuries to Property, Vol. III.

Broker. See Extortion, Vol. II.; Larceny, Vol. III.

Vol. I.

(a) See the act, ante, 510.
Buggery.

What it is.

Buggery (from the Italian buggare, a buggarer, this vice being said to have been brought into England out of Italy by the Lombards) is a detestable and abominable sin, amongst Christians not to be named, committed by carnal knowledge against the ordinance of the Creator and order of nature by mankind with mankind, or with brute beast, or by womankind with brute beast. 3 Inst. 58.

Where the defendant was indicted for having committed this offence with a woman, a majority of the judges held that this was within the statute, but two or three of them held that it was not; no opinion was publicly given. R. v. Wiseman, Fortescue, 91.

If it be committed on a boy under fourteen years of age, it is felony in the agent only. 1 Hale, 670; 3 Inst. 59.

Where the prisoner forced open a child’s mouth, and put in his private parts, and proceeded to a completion of his lust, the judges were of opinion that this did not constitute the offence of sodomy. R. v. Jacob, R. & R. C.C. 331.

Punishment for.

In ancient times, according to some authors, this offence was punishable with burning, the others say with burning alive.

The stat. 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 15, enacts, “that every person convicted of the abominable crime of buggery, committed either with mankind or with any animal, shall suffer death as a felon.”

See the general clauses affecting all the provisions of this act, post, Malicious Injuries to Persons, Vol. III.

This statute repeals the 25 Hen. VIII. c. 6, and 5 Eliz. c. 17.

The act differs from the former ones by having the word animal therein instead of beast.

Observations.

The law as regards the mode of proving the offence is materially altered from what it previously was, for by 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 18, after reciting, “that whereas upon trials for the crimes of buggery and of rape, and of carnally abusing girls under the respective ages hereinbefore mentioned, offenders frequently escape by reason of the difficulty of the proof which has been required of the completion of those several crimes;” for remedy thereof it is enacted, “that it shall not be necessary in any of these cases to prove the actual emission of seed in order to constitute a carnal knowledge, but that the carnal knowledge shall be deemed complete upon proof of penetration only.”

Before this statute it was not a felony unless there was an emission, but merely a misdemeanor.

The evidence in a prosecution for sodomy is the same as in rape, see post, Maps, Vol. V. with two exceptions; 1st. That it is not necessary to prove the offence to have been committed against the consent of the person upon whom it was perpetrated; and 2dly. Both agent and patient (if consenting) are equally guilty. 3 Inst. 59; 1 Hale, 670.

It may be proper to suggest to magistrates, before whom persons are brought on charges of this kind, that they should not bind over the parties accused to answer the capital part of this charge, unless it appears that the crime was complete.

In proportion as the crime is most detestable, so ought the proof of guilt to be the clearest and most undoubtedly. 1 East’s P. C. 480; 4 Bla. Com. 215.

An admission by the prisoner that he had committed such an offence at another time and with another person, and that he had a tendency towards such practices, ought not to be received in evidence in an indictment for this offence. R. v. Cole, by the twelve judges, Phil. on Evid. 7 ed. 181.
The indictment has the words contra nature ordinem rem habuit venereum, et carnaliiter cognovit: but Mr. J. Foster says, this was never thought sufficient without also charging peccatum illud sodomiticum, anglicè dictum buggerie. adiunct et ibidem nequitiam feloniac, &c. commissit, et perpetruvü; and he refers to Co. Est. 351 b, as a precedent settled by great advice. 1 East's P. C. 480.

By the articles of the navy (22 Geo. II. c. 33, s. 19,) if any person in the fleet shall commit the unnatural and detestable sin of buggerry or sodomy with man or beast, he shall be punished with death by the sentence of a court martial.

As to the offence of an assault to commit sodomy, see ante, 278, 279.

---

Forms.

(No. 1.)

[Commencement as usual, as ante, 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. feloniously did assault one A. B., and then and there feloniously, wickedly, diabolically, and against the order of nature, had a venereal affair with the said A. B.; and then and there knew the said A. B.; and then and there feloniously, wickedly, diabolically, and against the order of nature, with the said A. B. did commit and perpetrate that detestable and abominable crime of buggery; against the form of the statute in that case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual to the end.]

Commitment for sodomy.

(No. 2.)

[Commencement as usual, as ante, 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. in the said country, with a certain [cow.] feloniously, wickedly, diabolically, and against the order of nature, had a venereal affair, and then and there feloniously, wickedly, diabolically, and against the order of nature, carnally knew the said [cow]; and then and there feloniously, wickedly, diabolically, and against the order of nature, did commit and perpetrate that detestable and abominable crime of buggery; against the form of the statute in that case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual to the end.]

Commitment for bestiality.

(No. 3.)

THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C. D. late of, &c. on, &c. with force and arms, at, &c. in and upon one A. B. then and there being, feloniously did make an assault, and then and there feloniously, wickedly, diabolically, and against the order of nature, had a venereal affair with the said A. B., and then and there carnally knew him the said A. B. and then and there feloniously, wickedly, diabolically, and against the order of nature, with the said A. B. did commit and perpetrate that detestable and abominable crime of buggery (not to be named amongst Christians); against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity.

Indictment for sodomy.

(No. 4.)

THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C. D. late of, &c. with force and arms, on, &c. at, &c. aforesaid, with a certain [cow] then and there being, feloniously, wickedly, diabolically, and against the order of nature, had a venereal affair, and then and there feloniously, wickedly, and diabolically, and against the order of nature, carnally knew the said [cow]; and then and there feloniously, wickedly, diabolically, and against the order of nature, with the said [cow] did commit and perpetrate that detestable and abominable crime of buggery (not to be named amongst Christians); against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity.

Indictment for bestiality.
Building Act.

This act is the 14 Geo. III. c. 78, relating to London and its precincts, the provisions, however, being extremely long and local, are not here inserted.

In the case of Rix and another, 4 D. & R. 332; 2 D. & R. M. C. 249, S.C. where justices omitted to set out in the record of a conviction on the act the evidence adduced on the hearing of the information as nearly as possible, in the words used by each of the witnesses, in pursuance of the 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, a mandamus was granted to compel them to set it out.

Bull Baiting. See Cattle, Ill-treatment of, post, 569.

Bullion. See Coin, Vol. I.

Bum Boat Act, 2 Geo. III. c. 28. See post, Excise and Customs, Vol. III.

Burglary.

Offences against the house of another, which fall short of burglary, belong to tit. Larceny, and are to be found under the head Larceny (from the House) Vol. III., and see tit. House, Vol. II.

I. What is Burglary, 517.

1. What a Breaking, 517.
   [7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 11.]

2. What an Entry, 520.

3. What a Dwellinghouse, 521.
   [7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 13.]

4. Who is the Owner of, 523.

5. At what Time Offence must be committed, 527.

6. What Intention necessary to constitute Offence, 528.

II. Indictment, &c. for, 529.
   [7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 11.]

III. Verdict, 530.

IV. Punishment, 531.
I. What is a Burglary.

The word burglar seemeth to have been brought unto us out of Germany by the Saxons, and to be derived from the German burg, a house, and larron a thief, probably from the Latin, latro, latomia.

Burglary is a felony at common law, in breaking and entering the mansion-house of another, in the night, with intent to commit some felony within the same, whether the felonious intent be executed or not. Hale's Sum. 79.

(1.) What a Breaking.

To amount to a breaking within this branch of the definition, the entrance must be obtained either by fraud, conspiracy, threat, or force.

But every entrance into the house by a trespasser is not a breaking in this case; there must be an actual breaking. As if the door of a mansionhouse stand open, and the thief enter, this is not breaking. So, if the window of the house be open, and a thief with a hook or other engine draweth out some of the goods of the owner, this is no burglary, because there is no actual breaking of the house. But if the thief breaketh the glass of a window, and with a hook or other engine draweth out some of the goods of the owner, this is burglary, for there was an actual breaking of the house. 3 Inst. 64; 1 Hale, 551.

There is no need of any demolition of the walls, or any manual violence, to constitute a breaking. Lord Hale says, "these acts amount to an actual breaking; viz. opening the casement or breaking the glass window, picking open the lock of a door, or putting back the lock, or the leaf of a window, or unlatching the door that is only latched." 1 Hale, 552.

Where a glass window was broken, and the window opened with the hand, but the shutters in the inside were not broken; this was ruled to be burglary by Ward, C. B., Powis and Tracy, justices, and the Recorder; but they thought this the extremity of the law; and on a subsequent conference, Holt, C. J., and Powel, C. J., doubting and inclining to another opinion, no judgment was given. 2 East's P. C. 487. See R. v. Bailey and Spencer, post, p. 520, 518.

Where an entry was effected by taking the glass out of a door, it was helden to be a burglary. R. v. John Smith, Russ. & R. C. C. 417.

If a thief enter by the chimney it is a breaking; for that is as much closed as the nature of things will permit. 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 4; 4 Bla. Com. 226.

Getting into a chimney of a house is a sufficient breaking and entering to constitute burglary, though the party does not enter any of the rooms of the house. Thus in R. v. Brice, R. & R. C. C. 450, the prisoner got in at a chimney, and lowered himself a considerable way down, just above the mantelpiece of a room on the ground floor. Holroyd and Barrough, Js., thought this was not a breaking and entering of the dwellinghouse, on the ground that he was not in the dwellinghouse till he was below the chimney-piece. The rest of the judges, however, held otherwise; for that the chimney was part of the dwellinghouse, that the getting in at the top was a breaking of the dwellinghouse, and that the lowering himself was an entry therein.

Where the prisoner effected an entry, by pulling down the upper sash of a window, which had not been fastened, but merely kept in its place by the pulley-weight; the judges held this to be a sufficient breaking to constitute burglary, even although it also appeared that an outside shutter, by which the Burglary.

Where an entry was effected, first into an outer cellar by lifting up a heavy iron grating that led into it, and thence into the house by a window; and it appeared that the window, which opened by hinges, had been fastened by means of two nails as wedges, but could notwithstanding easily be opened by pushing: the judges held that opening the window, so secured, was a breaking sufficient to constitute burglary. R. v. Hall, R. & R. C. C. 355.

But if a window thus opening on hinges, or a door, be not fastened at all, opening them would not be a breaking, within the definition of burglary. Even where the heavy flat door of a cellar, which would keep closed by its own weight, and would require some degree of force to raise it, was opened; it had bolts by which it might have been fastened on the inside, but it did not appear that it was so fastened at the time: the judges were divided in opinion whether the opening of this door was such a breaking of the house as constituted burglary. R. v. Cullum, R. & R. C. C. 157. It was held in Brown's case, 2 East's P. C. 487, that it was. It seems the only difference between these two cases is, that in Brown's case there were no interior fastenings, but in Cullum's there were, though not used. In a later case it has been held by Bolland, Baron, that the lifting up of a trap door covering a cellar, which was merely kept in its place by its own weight, and which had no fastenings, because it being a new trap door, they had not been put on, is not a sufficient breaking to constitute a burglary. R. v. Lawrence, 4 C. & P. 231.

Where a window was a little open, and not sufficiently so to admit a person, and the prisoner pushed it wide open and got in, this was held to be no sufficient breaking. R. v. Smith, Car. C. L. 293; R. & M. C. C. 178, S. C.

If there be an aperture in a cellar window to admit light, through which a thief enters in the night, this is not burglary. R. v. Lewis, 2 Car. & P. 628.

Some part of the house must be broken.

Where the prisoner opened the area gate with a skeleton key, and from the area passed into the kitchen through a door which did not appear to have been shut at the time: the judges held that opening the area gate was not a breaking of the dwellinghouse, as there was no free passage, in the time of sleep, from the area into the house. R. v. Davis, R. & R. C. C. 322.

So, breaking a door which formed part of the outward fence of the curtilage of a dwellinghouse, and which opened, not into any building, but into a yard only, was held not to be a breaking of the dwellinghouse: the premises consisted of a dwellinghouse, warehouses and stables, surrounding a yard; there was an immediate entrance to the dwellinghouse from the street, and a gate and gateway, under one of the warehouses, leading into the yard; the prisoner entered the premises by breaking this gate; the judges held that this was not burglary; that breaking this gate, which was part of the outward fence of the curtilage, and not opening into any of the buildings, was not a breaking of any part of the dwellinghouse. R. v. Bennett, R. & R. C. C. 289.

As to what is a dwellinghouse, see post, 521, and post, house, Vol. III.

Where the offender, with intent to commit a felony, obtains admission by some artifice or trick for the purpose of effecting it, he will be guilty of burglary. Thus where thieves, having an intent to rob, raised the hue and cry, and brought the constable, to whom the owner opened the door; and when they came in they bound the constable and robbed the owner; this was held a burglary. So if admission be gained under pretence of business; or if one take lodgings with a like felonious intent, and afterwards rob the landlord; or get possession of a dwellinghouse by false affidavits without any colour of title, and then rife the house; such entrance being gained by fraud, it will be burglary. 2 East's P. C. 485.

So in A. Hawkins's case, O. B. 1704, 2 East's P. C. 485; she was indicted for burglary; upon evidence it appeared that she was acquainted with the house, and knew that the family were in the country; and meeting with the boy who kept the key, she prevailed upon him to go with her to the house, by the promise of a pot of ale; the boy accordingly went with her, opened the door, and let her in, whereupon she sent the boy for the pot of ale, robbed the house, and went off; and this being in the night time, it was adjudged that the prisoner was clearly guilty of burglary. And see 8 T. R. 302.
What a Breaking.

I. (1.)] 519

What a Breaking.

If a servant conspire with a robber, and let him into the house by night, this is burglary in both: 1 Hale, 553; 1 Hawk. c. 36, s. 14; R. v. Cornwall, 2 Inst. 384; for the servant is doing an unlawful act; and the opportunity afforded him of doing it with greater ease rather aggravates than extenuates the guilt.

A breaking may be also in law, as where in consequence of violence commenced or threatened, in order to obtain entrance, the owner, either from apprehension of the force or with a view more effectually to repel it, opens the door through which the robbers enter. But where no fraud or conspiracy is made use of, or violence commenced or threatened, in order to obtain an entrance, there must be an actual breach of some part of the house, though it need not be accompanied with any violence as to the manner of executing it. 2 East's P. C. 486.

A burglary may be committed by a breaking on the inside: for though a thief enter a dwellinghouse in the night time through the outer door being left open, or by an open window, yet, if when within the house, he turn the key or unlatch a chamber door, with intent to commit felony, this is burglary. 2 East's P. C. 488.

And this may be done by a servant, who sleeps in an adjacent room, unlatching his master's door, and entering his apartment with intent to kill him, 1 Hale, 544; 2 East's P. C. 488; or to commit a rape on his mistress, Gray's case, 1 Stra. 481.

But Lord Hale doubts whether a guest at an inn is guilty of burglary by rising in the night, opening his own door, and stealing goods from other rooms. 1 Hale, 554.

And it seems certain that breaking open a chest or trunk is not in itself burglary; 1 Fost. 109, 9; 2 East's P. C. 488; and, according to the better opinion, the same principle applies to cupboards, presses, and other fixtures, which, though attached to the freehold, are intended only the better to supply the place of moveable depositaries. Fost. 109. And Mr. J. Foster there says, "in questions between the heir or devisee, and the executor, (see 2 Vern. 508; 1 P. Wms. 94,) those fixtures may with propriety enough be considered as annexed to, and parts of the freehold. The law will presume that it was the intention of the owner, under whose bounty the executor claimeth, that they should be so considered; to the end that the house might remain to those who, by operation of law, or by his bequest, should become entitled to it, in the same plight he put it or should leave it, entire and undefaced. But in capital cases I am of opinion that such fixtures, which merely supply the place of chests and other ordinary utensils of household, should be considered in no other light than as mere moveables, partaking of the nature of those utensils, and adapted to the same use." See 1 Hale, 555; 2 East's P. C. 489; see also Mr. Amos's useful work on Fixtures.

It was formerly doubted whether the breaking might not be subsequent to the entry; as if the prisoner being in the house, without violence should break it, in order to escape with his booty; 1 Hale, 554; but this difficulty was removed by 12 Ann. c. 7.

And now by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 11, it is enacted, "that every person convicted of burglary shall suffer death as a felon; and it is hereby declared, that if any person shall enter the dwellinghouse of another with intent to commit felony, or being in such dwellinghouse shall commit any felony, and shall in either case break out of the said dwellinghouse in the night time, such person shall be deemed guilty of burglary." See post, 531. The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, repeals the 12 Ann. c. 7.

Unlocking and opening a half door of a house and running away, is a sufficient breaking out of the house. R. v. Lawrence, 4 C. & F. 231.
Burglary.

(2.) What an Entry.

It is essential that there should be an entry as well as a breaking. 1 Hale, 555.

It is deemed an entry when the thief breaketh the house, and his body, or any part thereof, as his foot or his arm, is within any part of the house; or when he putteth a gun into a window which he hath broken, (though the hand be not in,) or into a hole of the house which he hath made, with intent to murder or kill; this is an entry and breaking of the house; but if he doth barely break the house, without any such entry at all, this is no burglary. 3 Inst. 64; 2 East's P. C. 490.

Thieves came by night to rob a house; the owner went out and struck one of them; another made a pass with a sword at persons he saw in the entry, and in so doing his hand was over the threshold. This was adjudged burglary by great advice. 2 East's P. C. 490.

In the case of George Gibbons, Old Bailey, June, 1752, Est. 107; 2 East's P. C. 490; who was indicted for burglary in the dwellinghouse of John Allan, it appeared in evidence that the prisoner in the night time cut a hole in the window shutters of the prosecutor's shop, which was part of his dwellinghouse, and putting his hand through the hole took out watches and other things, which hung in the shop within his reach; but no entry was proved, otherwise than by putting his hand through the hole. This was held to be burglary, and the prisoner was convicted.

Introducing the hand through a pane of glass, broken by the prisoner, between the outer window and an inner shutter, for the purpose of undoing the window latch, is a sufficient entry. R. v. Bailey, R. & R. C. C. 341. So would the mere introduction of the offender's finger. R. v. Davis, R. & R. C. C. 499; and see 1 Hale, 533.

It is even said that discharging a loaded gun into a house is a sufficient entry. 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 11; 1 Hale, 555; 4 Campb. 220; Pickering v. Rudd, 1 Stark. Rep. 48.

If the instrument with which the house is broken happen to enter the house, but without any intention upon the part of the burglar to effect his felonious intent (as, for instance, to draw out the goods) with it, this will not be a sufficient entry to constitute a burglary. R. v. Hughes & al. 1 Leach, 406; see R. v. Roberts, 2 East's P. C. 487.

We have already seen how far descending by a chimney will constitute an entry, ante, 517.

The prisoner raised a window which was not bolted, and he thrust a crowbar under the bottom of the shutter (which was about half a foot within the window) so as to make an indent on the inside of the shutter, but from the length of the bar his hand was not inside the house. This was held not to be a sufficient entry to constitute burglary. R. v. Rust & Ford, R. & M. C. C. 183; Cor. C. L. 293, S. C. by the name of R. v. Roberts.

Where the house was broken, but not entered, and the owner for fear threw out his money, it was helden to be no burglary; though clearly robbery, if taken in the presence of the owner. 2 East's P. C. 490.

Where thieves bored a hole through the door with a centre-bit, and part of the chips were found in the inside of the house, by which it was apparent that the end of the centre-bit had penetrated into the house, yet as the instrument had not been introduced for the purpose of taking the property or committing any other felony, it was decided that this entry was not sufficient to constitute burglary. R. v. Hughes, 2 East's P. C. 491.

If divers come in the night to do a burglary, and one of them break and enter, the rest of them standing to watch at a distance, this is burglary in all.

3 Inst. 64.

The entry need not be at the same time as the break in the night; therefore, if thieves break a hole in the intent to enter another night and commit felony, accordingly, it is burglary.
What a Dwellinghouse and Residence.

(3.) What a Dwellinghouse and Residence.

The breaking and entering, to constitute a burglary, must be into the dwellinghouse of another, that is to say, a house which the occupier or his family regularly reside in.

It has been said that a church may be the subject of burglary; 3 Inst. 64; 1 Hale, 556; but this seems questionable; see 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 17; the late act, 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 11, merely mentions "dwellinghouse."

A house under repair, or a building intended for and constructed as a dwellinghouse, in which no one lives, though the owner's property is deposited there, is not a place in which burglary can be committed; for it cannot be deemed his dwellinghouse, until he has taken possession and began to inhabit it; 1 Leach, 185; Fuller's case, 2 East's P. C. 498; 1 Leach, 196, n.; Elamore v. St. Brivells, 8 B. & C. 461; nor will it make any difference if one of the workmen engaged in the repairs sleep there in order to protect it; 1 Leach, 186, in notis; nor though the house is ready for the reception of the owner, and he has sent his property into it preparatory to his own removal, will it become for this purpose his mansion. R. v. Holland, 2 East's P. C. 498; R. v. Thompson, Id.; 2 Leach, 771.

So if the landlord of a house purchase the furniture of his out-going tenant, and procure a servant to sleep there in order to guard it, but without any intention of making it his own residence, a breaking into the house will not amount to burglary. R. v. Davis, 2 Leach, 876; R. v. Smith, 2 East's P. C. 497; R. v. Fuller, Id. 498; 1 Leach, 196, n.

The mere casual use of a tenement will not suffice. 1 Hale, 557.

Where neither the owner nor any of his family have slept in the house, it is not his dwellinghouse, so as to make the breaking into it burglary, though he had used it for his meals and all the purposes of his business. R. v. Martin, R. & R. C. C. 108.

If a man die in his leasehold house, and his executors put servants in it, and keep them there at board wages, burglary may be committed in breaking it, and it may be laid to be the executors' property. 2 East's P. C. 499.

It is not absolutely necessary to make it burglary that any person should be actually within the house at the time the offence is committed. For if the owner leaves it animo revertendi, though no person resides there in his absence, it will still be his mansion. 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 11.

As if a man has a house in town and another in the country, and goes to the latter in the summer, the nocturnal breaking into either, with a felonious design, will be burglary; 2 East's P. C. 496, Nutbrown's case; so if he goes a journey; R. v. Murray, 2 East's P. C. 496.

And though a man leaves his house and never means to live in it again, yet if he uses part of it as a shop, and lets a servant and his family live and sleep in another part of it, for fear the place should be robbed, and lets the rest to lodgers, the habitation by his servant and family will be a habitation by him, and the shop may still be considered as part of his dwellinghouse. R. v. Gibbons, R. & R. C. C. 442.

But where the prosecutor, an upholsterer, left the house in which he had resided with his family, without an intent of returning to live in it, and took a dwellinghouse elsewhere, but still retained the former house as a warehouse and workshop; two women, employed by him as work-women in his business, and not as domestic servants, slept there to take care of the house, but did not have their meals there, or use the house for any other purpose than sleeping in it as a security to the house; the judges held that this was not properly described as the dwellinghouse of the prosecutor. R. v. Flannagan, R. & R. C. C. 187.

The occupation of a servant in that capacity, and not as tenant, is in many cases the occupation of the master, and will be a sufficient residence to render it the dwellinghouse of the master. R. v. Stock, R. & R. C. C. 185, post, 528; R. v. Wilson, R. & R. C. C. 115.
Burglary.

If a servant live in a house of his master's at a yearly rent, the house cannot be described as the master's house, though it is on the premises where the master's business is carried on, and although the servant has it because of his service. The servant is in such a case the tenant of the master, who might have distrained for rent, and could not arbitrarily have removed him, and consequently the occupation of the servant cannot be deemed the occupation of the master. R. v. Jarvis & al. R. & M. C. C. 7; and see further, post, 524; Barrington, Vol. III.

Every permanent building, in which a party may dwell and lie, is deemed a dwellinghouse, and burglary may be committed in it.

A set of chambers in an inn of court or college is deemed a distinct dwellinghouse for this purpose. 1 Hale, 556; 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 11.

So even a loft over a stable, used for the abode of a coachman, which he rents for his own use and that of his family, is a place which may be burglariously broken. R. v. Turner, 1 Leach, 305.

So also burglary may be committed in a lodging-room. 1 Leach, 89; or in a garret used for a workshop, and rented together with an apartment for sleeping, and if the landlord does not sleep under the same roof, the place may be laid as the mansion of the lodger; 1 Leach, 237; see further post, 526.

But burglary cannot be committed in a tent or booth in a market or fair, even although the owner lodge in it. 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 35; 1 Hale, 557; because it is a temporary, not a permanent, edifice.

The term "mansionhouse," in its common sense, not only includes the dwellinghouse but also all outhouses, as barn, stable, cowhouse, dairyhouse, if they be parcel of the mansion, though they be not under the same roof or joining contiguous to it. 1 Hale, 558, 559.

The 13th section of stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, however, enacts, "that no building, although within the same curtilage with the dwellinghouse, and occupied therewith, shall be deemed to be part of such dwellinghouse for the purpose of burglary, or for any of the purposes aforesaid, unless there shall be a communication between such building and dwellinghouse, either immediate or by means of a covered and inclosed passage leading from the one to the other."

This provision makes an important alteration in the law as it previously stood, for no communication as that pointed out by the act was absolutely necessary at common law to constitute burglary, see cases, infra, note, (a).

(e) The following decisions will show how the law stood previously to the above act of 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29. Their insertion is deemed useful, especially in deciding questions arising as to what is a house to constitute the offence of arson; as to which, see post, Burglary.

This offence was deemed to be committed by breaking open a shop built close to a dwellinghouse, although no one slept in it, and it had no internal communication with the principal mansion. R. v. ——, 1 Leach, 337. And a building used with a dwellinghouse and opening into an inclosed yard belonging thereto was deemed parcel of the dwellinghouse, though it also opened into an adjoining street, and although it had no internal communication with the dwellinghouse. R. v. Litch, R. & R. C. C. 357. And where the prosecutor's house was at the corner of a street, and adjoining thereto was a workshop, beyond which a stable and coachhouse adjoined, all were used with the house, and had doors opening into a yard belonging to the house, which yard was surrounded by adjoining buildings, &c. making altogether an inclosed yard; the workshop had no internal communication with the house, and it had a door opening into the street; its roof was higher than that of the dwellinghouse. The street door of the workshop was broken open in the night and the offender being indicted for burglary and convicted, the judges held this workshop was parcel of the dwelling, and that the conviction was right. R. v. Chalhoun, R. & R. C. C. 334. So where the prisoner broke into a goosehouse opening into the prosecutor's yard, into which his house also opened, and the yard was surrounded partly by other buildings of the homestead and partly by a wall, some of the buildings had doors opening backward, and there was a gate in one part of the arising from property vested in trustees for her separate use, the judges held that a house which she had lived in was properly described as her husband's dwellinghouse, though she paid the rent out of her separate property, and the husband had never been in it. R. v. French, Russ. & Ry. C. C. 491.
I. (4.)] Who is the Owner of the House.

Upon an indictment for burglary in the dwellinghouse of George Gillings, it appeared that Gillings owned and had built the house in question, but had never lived in it; that suspecting his wife of infidelity with one Webdale, they agreed to separate, and he told her she might live in the house in question, and gave her a bed and bedding, &c. for the purpose; she afterwards lived and cohabited with Webdale in the house, with the knowledge of her husband; Webdale paid the expenses of housekeeping, but never paid any rent for the house to Gillings: the judges held, that the house was properly described as the dwellinghouse of the husband. R. v. Wilford, Russ. & Ry. C. C. 517.

A house in part of which a man lives, and other parts of which he lets to lodgers, may be considered and described as his house, though he has taken the benefit of the insolvent debtor's act, and executed an assignment including the house, if the assignee has not taken possession; at least, no objection can be made if in other counts it be stated as the house of the assigns, and in others of the lodger in whose room the offence was committed. R. v. Ball, R. & M. C. C. 30.

In the case of persons employed by the crown or public companies, the same rule prevails as in other cases. If burglary be committed in the invalid office at Chelsea, in Somerset House, in Whitehall, in any of the public offices or royal palaces, the mansion must be laid as the King's. 1 Leach, 324, and in notis; R. v. Williams, 1 Hale, 522.

The same principle applies to corporations; for if a burglary be laid to be in the dwellinghouse of one of the officers belonging to the African Company, it will be bad although a corporation cannot be resident. Kel. 37; 1 Leach, 324, in notis; 2 East, 501.

But it has been held that if the agent of a trading company resides in the house of his employers in town, it may properly be laid as his dwelling. R. v. Marquette, 2 Leach, 930. So a city hall may be described as the residence of the clerk to the company to whom it belongs, id. in notis.

The ground for these two last decisions is stated to be that the punishment of burglary was intended to protect the actual occupant from the terror of disturbance during the hours of darkness and repose, but it would be absurd to suppose that that terror which is of the essence of the crime could from a breaking and entry in one place produce an effect in another. 2 Leach, 931.

J. Picket was indicted for burglary in the dwellinghouse of the East India Company, which is inhabited by their servants; and he was convicted and executed. O. B. April, 1765. 2 East's P. C. 501.

C. Maynard was indicted for burglary in the mansionhouse of the master, fellows, and scholars of Bennet College, in Cambridge. It appeared that he broke into the buttery of the college, and there stole some money; and it was agreed by all the judges, upon a reference to them, that it was burglary. C. Maynard's case, 2 East's P. C. 501.

If by an actual severance all internal communication be cut off, the partitions become distinct houses, so that if one house is divided to accommodate the families of two partners, though the rent and taxes of the whole are paid out of one common fund, each part will be regarded as a mansion. R. v. Jones, 1 Leach, 537; 2 East's P. C. 504; Salk. 532.

If the chamber of a guest at an inn be forced open and his goods stolen, the burglary must be laid in the dwellinghouse of the landlord. 1 Hale, 557; R. v. Proser, 2 East, 502; 2 MS. Sum. 249.

Where inmates have several rooms in a house of which they keep the keys, and inhabit them severally with their families, yet if they enter at one outer door with the owner, these rooms cannot be said to be the dwellinghouses of Burglary.

The inmates, but the indictment ought to be for breaking the house of the owner. But if the owner inhabit no part of the house, or even if he occupy a shop or a cellar in it, but do not sleep therein, the apartments of such inmates shall be considered as their respective dwellinghouses. Corrall's case, 1 Leach, 237; Trapshoe's case, 1 Leach, 427, and see 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 26.

If the owner, who lets out apartments in his house to other persons, sleep under the same roof, and have but one outer door common to him and his lodgers, such lodgers are only inmates, and all their apartments are parcel of the one dwellinghouse of the owner. Kel. 84. But if the owner do not lodge in the same house, or if he and the lodgers enter by different outer doors, the apartments so let out are the mansion for the time being of each lodger respectively, even though the rooms are let by the year. 2 East's P. C. 505, infra.

Where a servant of the prosecutor dwelt in a part of the house, and the rest (excepting the shop) was let off to lodgers: the judges held that the shop, which was in the prosecutor's occupation, was properly described as the dwellinghouse of the prosecutor. R. v. Gibbons, Russ. & Ry. C. C. 442, ante, 521.

Where the prosecutor, having a dwellinghouse with a shop adjoining to it, with separate entrances from the street, but the shop having a back door into a passage in the house, let the shop to his son, who used it as a place of business only, and did not reside there; a burglary having been committed in the shop, the judges held, that it was properly described in the indictment as the dwellinghouse of the father. R. v. Softon, Russ. & Ry. C. C. 202.

If the owner let off a part, but do not dwell in the part he reserves for himself, then the part let off is deemed in law the dwellinghouse of the party who dwells in it, whether it communicates internally with the other part or not; but the part he has reserved for himself is not the subject of burglary: it is not his dwellinghouse, for he does not dwell in it; nor can it be deemed the dwellinghouse of the tenant, for it forms no part of his holding. 1 Leach, 89, 237, 437.

Where a coachman rented the loft over a coachhouse and stables, and he and his family resided in it, a burglary committed in it was held to be well laid to have been committed in the dwellinghouse of the coachman. R. v. Turner, 1 Leach, 305.

The governor of the workhouse at Birmingham, under a contract for seven years with the guardians and overseers of the poor of that place, occupied and dwelt in the governor's house, with the exception of one room, which the guardians and overseers reserved for themselves as an office, and three other rooms as store-rooms; the clerk of the guardians and overseers kept one key of the office, the governor another, for the purpose of securing the effects in case of fire, and the room was cleaned and taken care of by the governor's servant: this office being broken and entered in the night time, the judges held, that it could not be described as the dwellinghouse of the governor. R. v. Wilson, Russ. & Ry. C. C. 118.

So where the owner of a dwellinghouse, warehouse, and countinghouse, within the same curtilage, let the dwellinghouse to his warehouseman at a yearly rent: the countinghouse and warehouse being broken and entered in the night time, the judges held, that this was not burglary; that the counting-house and warehouse could not be described as the dwellinghouse of the master; because the dwellinghouse was occupied by the warehouseman as tenant, and not as servant; nor could they be described as the dwellinghouse of the tenant, for they formed no part of his holding. R. v. Jarvis, R. & M. C. C. 7.

If the owner let the whole of a dwellinghouse, retaining no part of it for his or his family's dwelling, the part each tenant occupies and dwells in is deemed in law to be the dwellinghouse of such tenant, whether the parts held by the respective tenants communicate with each other internally or not.
Who is the Owner of the House.

Thus where the owner of a house divided the shop into two by a partition, each having a door opening into the street, and let one of them and some rooms in the house to Choice, and the other with the remainder of the house to Ryan; at the end of each shop was a door, opening into a common passage, that led to one common staircase; Choice paid 100l. a-year and the taxes for the whole house, for his part; Ryan 80l. a-year for his; each had his separate family, separate kitchen, &c.; but the rooms occupied by each opened on the common staircase above-mentioned: upon an indictment for burglary, it appeared that the prisoner entered at the window of the common staircase, unlocked the door of Ryan’s shop, and entered it; and the judges held, that the place was rightly described in the indictment as the dwellinghouse of Ryan. R. v. Bailey, R. & M. C. C. 23.

One Richards let her dwellinghouse to her son Josiah, and a warehouse, communicating internally with the dwellinghouse, to Josiah and his younger brother, at a separate rent; Josiah lived in the dwellinghouse, and constantly used the communication between that and the warehouse; both brothers carried on their joint business in the warehouse: the warehouse being broken and entered in the night time, the judges held, that it could not be deemed a part of the dwellinghouse, as the dwellinghouse was held under a demesne to Josiah alone, and he alone dwelt in it, and the warehouse was held under a distinct demise to himself and his brother. R. v. Jenkins, Russ. & Ry. C. C. 244.

Where a lodger occupied a sleeping-room on the first floor, and a workshop in the attic, and the rest of the house was occupied by other lodgers, a burglary in the workshop was held by the judges to be well laid to have been committed in the dwellinghouse of the lodger who rented it. R. v. Carroll, 1 Leach, 237.

(5.) What Offence must be Committed.

The entry must be in the night time. 4 Bla. Com. 224.

As to what shall be reckoned night, and what day, for this purpose; anciently the day was accounted to begin only at sun-rising, and to end immediately upon sun-set: but the better opinion now seems to be, that if there be day light, or crepusculum, (twilight,) enough begun or left to discern a man’s face withal, it is no burglary. 3 Inst. 63; 1 Hale, 350; 2 East’s P. C. 509.

But this does not extend to moon-light, for then many midnight burglaries would go unpunished; and besides the malignity of the offence does not so properly arise from its being done in the dark, as at the dead of night, when all the creation, except beasts of prey, are at rest, when sleep has disarmed the owner, and rendered his castle defenceless. 4 Bla. Com. 224.

The ancient law appears to be the most reasonable. In the summer there is but a very short time when there is not day-light sufficient to discover the countenance of the offender; and it is well known that a very considerable portion of the offences of this nature are committed during that light. Besides, the same reason why moon-light is not sufficient to protect the burglar would apply to twilight.

The breaking and entering must both be committed in the night time; if the breaking be in the day and the entering in the night, or the breaking in the night and the entering in the day, it is no burglary. 1 Hale, 551.

But the breaking may be on one night, and the entry on another. 1 Hale, 551.

The breaking, however, must be with intent to enter. Where the prisoner took the glass out of a door on Friday night, with intent thereby to enter the house, and afterwards on the Sunday night, and before the glass was replaced, he entered by the aperture he had thus made: the judges held, that the breaking being originally with intent to enter, and the breaking and the entering being both in the night time, the offence amounted to burglary, notwithstanding the time that had elapsed between the breaking and the entry. R. v. Smith, R. & R. C. C. 417.
What Intention is necessary to constitute Burglary.

There can be no burglary but where the indictment both expressly alleges, and the verdict also finds an intention to commit some felony; for if it appear that the offender meant only to commit a trespass, as to beat the party, or the like, he is not guilty of burglary. 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 18; 3 Inst. 65; 1 Hale, 561.

In the case of R. v. Knight and Roffey the prisoners were indicted for a burglary in the dwellinghouse of Mary Snelling, the indictment stating the intent to be to steal the goods of Leonard Hawkins. It appeared from the evidence that Hawkins, who was an excise officer, had seized some bags of tea in a shop, entered in the name of Smith, as being there without a legal permit, and had removed them to Mary Snelling's, where he lodged. The prisoners and many other persons broke open Mary Snelling's house in the night, with intent to take this tea. Smith did not appear to have been in company with them; but it was shown that they supposed the tea to belong to Smith; and that the act was committed either in company with him, or by his procurement. The jury being directed to find as a fact what intent the prisoners broke and entered the house, found that they intended to take the goods on the behalf of Smith; and upon the point being reserved, the twelve judges were of opinion, that the indictment was not supported, as however outrageous the conduct of the prisoners was in so endeavouring to get back Smith's goods, still there was no intention to steal. But if the indictment had been for breaking the house with intent feloniously to rescue goods seized, &c., which is felony by stat. 19 Geo. II. c. 34, some of the judges thought that it would have been burglary. But even in that case it was agreed, that evidence must be given on the part of the prosecutor to show that the goods were uncustoned, in order to throw the proof upon the prisoners that the duty was paid; but being found in oil cases, or in great quantities in an unentered place, would have been sufficient for that purpose. 2 East's P. C. 510.

It seems the better opinion, that an intention to commit a rape, or other such crime, which is made felony by statute, and was a trespass only at common law, will make a man guilty of burglary, as much as if such offence were a felony at common law; because wherever a statute makes any offence felony, it incidentally gives it all the properties of felony at common law. 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 18.

It is immaterial whether the felonious intent be executed or not: thus they are burglars who, with a felonious intent, break any house or church in the night, although they take nothing away. And herein this offence differs from robbery, which requires that something be taken, though it be not material of what value.

J. Dobbs was indicted for burglary, in breaking and entering the stable of J. Bayley, part of his dwellinghouse, in the night, with a felonious intent to kill and destroy a gelding of one A. B. there being. It appeared that the gelding was to have run for 40 guineas, and that the prisoner cut the sinews of his fore-leg to prevent his running, in consequence of which he died. Parker, C. J. ordered him to be acquitted; for his intention was not to commit the felony by killing and destroying the gelding, but a trespass only to prevent his running, and, therefore, no burglary. But the prisoner was again indicted for killing the gelding, and capitally convicted. Dobb's case, 2 East's P. C. 513; vide 1 Hale, 561.

If the breaking and entering be at different times, both must appear to have been done with the same felonious intent. R. v. Smith, R. & R. C. C. ante, 427.

The felonious intent with which the prisoner broke and entered the house cannot be proved by positive testimony; it can be proved only by the admission of the party, or by circumstances from which the jury may presume it.

Where it appears that the prisoner actually committed a felony after he entered the house, this is satisfactory evidence, and almost conclusive, that
II. Indictment for.

the intent with which he broke and entered the house was to commit that felony. Indeed the very fact of a man's breaking and entering a dwelling-house in the night time is strong presumptive evidence that he did so with intent to steal; and the jury will be warranted in finding him guilty, unless the contrary be proved. Arch. Peet's Acts, 40.

Where a man was found in the night time in the chimney of a shop, just above the mantle-piece, and before he had entered the shop; the jury found him guilty of burglary with intent to steal upon this evidence merely, and the judges confirmed the conviction. R. v. Brice, R. & R. C. C. 450; ante, 517.

As to what is a variance in the statement of the intent, see post, 530.

II. Indictment for.

The indictment must describe the facts necessary to constitute the offence of burglary, viz. the breaking and entering a dwellinghouse of another in the night time, and with some felonious intent.

The words broke and entered must both be inserted, both of them being essential to constitute the offence. 1 Hale, 550.

The word burglariously is necessary; 4 Co. 39, 40; as also the word feloniously, as in other felonies.

It must be stated that the offence was committed in a mansion or dwell-inghouse; and if it be stated to have been in a "house" merely, the proceedings will be defective. 1 Hale, 550.

When the place is an outhouse which adjoins the mansion, it must either be laid in the dwellinghouse generally, or in a stable, &c. part of the dwelling-house, either of which methods may be adopted. 1 Leach, 144; 2 East's P. C.
512, 513.

Care must be taken that the local description of the house be according to the fact, as a variance would be fatal.

If it be not expressly stated where the dwellinghouse is situated, it shall be taken to be situated at the place named in the indictment by way of special venue. See R. v. Nepper, R. & M. C. C. 44.

Where it appeared that the dwellinghouse was in the parish of A. and an outhouse connected and occupied with it in the parish of B., and a burglary was committed in the outhouse; one of the questions reserved for the opinon of the judges was, whether the dwellinghouse was properly described in the indictment, as being in the parish of B.; but the judges gave no opinion upon this point, having decided the case upon another ground. R. v. William Bennett and another, R. & R. C. C. 289.

The name of the owner of the house must be stated with such certainty to a common intent, as is in general necessary in the description of the party who has sustained the injury.

An error in such statement would be fatal. 2 Leach, 774; 2 East's P. C.
514. See the cases and authorities as to who is to be deemed the owner, &c. ant, 523 to 527.

The owner may be described by an assumed name, by which he had been known for the preceding five years, and during that time had never been

Where a person was indicted for burglary in the house of Sarah Lunns, and her name appeared to be London, he was acquitted of the capital part of the charge; 1 Leach, 253, in notis; and though it is said to be doubtful whether the leaving of a blank for the surname would not be vicious; 1 Hale, 558; Moore, 466; there can be but little doubt that at the present day such an omission would be material. 3 Chit. C. L. 1113.

As to the mode of describing the ownership in companies, &c. see post,

If there be any doubt whether the house broken and entered belongs to A., B., or C., to obviate the difficulty, counts alleging it to be the dwelling-house of A., B., and C. respectively should be inserted.
Vol. I. 2 M
It must be stated that the offence was committed in the night time; and it is not only necessary to state a day and year, but also an hour about which the offence was committed; in order that it may appear to the court to be at a time when there could be no day light remaining. If this be wanting, the defendant can only be convicted of a simple larceny.

At the Lancaster Lent Assizes, 1771, R. v. Waddington, 2 East's P. C. 513, there was an indictment for burglary, alleging the fact to have been committed in the night, but not expressing about what hour it was done, Mr. J. Gould held the indictment insufficient as for a burglary, and directed the prisoner to be found guilty of a simple felony only. He said, that according to the old doctrine, a burglary might be committed at any time between sun-setting and sun-rising; but that the rule now established is, that it cannot be committed during the crepusculum; that therefore it is necessary to specify the hour, in order that the fact may appear upon the face of the indictment to be done between the twilight of the evening and that of the morning.

But it is not necessary that the evidence should correspond with the allegation either as to the day or hour, so that it shows the offence to have been committed in the time of darkness. 2 Hale, 173.

Both breaking and entering must be charged to have taken place in the night, or there is no charge of burglary. 1 Hale, 549.

The hour should, though after twelve o'clock at night, be stated to be in the night of the preceding day.

The felonious intent must be stated, and this correctly so; for if it be stated that the defendant intended to commit one species of felony, and it is proved that he intended another, the indictment will be bad. 1 Hale, 561. R. v. Dobbs, 2 East's P. C. 513; R. v. Dingley, 2 Leach, 840; 2 East's P. C. 510, 514.

Where the intent laid was to steal the goods of J. W., and it appeared in evidence that no goods of any person of the name of J. W. were in the house, but that the name of J. W. had been inserted in the indictment by mistake; the judges held the variance to be fatal, and the defendant was accordingly acquitted. R. v. Jenks, 2 East's P. C. 514; 2 Leach, 774.

If an actual larceny is averred, and it is proved that the theft was not complete, the defendants must be acquitted. 2 Leach, 708; R. v. Farnival, R. & R. 445; 2 East's P. C. 514. Nor can a previous stealing in the same house be connected with a subsequent breaking, so as to support this charge.

Ed.

On the other hand, if a felony has been actually committed, an averment of the intent to commit it will suffice. 1 Hale, 560.

Where there is a doubt as to what specific felony was intended, the intention should be laid differently in separate counts. 2 East's P. C. 515.

III. Verdict.

The indictment may be so laid as to comprise several offences, arising out of the same transaction, so that the prisoner may be found guilty of part and acquitted of the rest. As if the prisoner be charged with burglariously breaking and entering the dwellinghouse, and stealing goods of the value of 40s.; he may be acquitted of breaking and entering in the night time, &c., and yet found guilty of stealing in the dwellinghouse. R. v. Witham and Overend, 1 Leach, 88, and 2 East's P. C. 517; and R. v. Hangerford, id. See Indictment, Vol. III. p. 355; @Emery, Vol. II. p. 30.

Or upon such an indictment the prisoner may be acquitted of the capital charges, viz. of the burglary, and of stealing in the dwellinghouse to the value of 40s., and be convicted of the simple larceny. 1 Hale, 561.

Upon an indictment for burglary and larceny against two, one may be found guilty of the burglary and the larceny, and the other of the larceny only. R. v. Butterworth, R. & R. C. C. 520.
IV. Punishment.

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 11, it is enacted, "that every person convicted of burglary shall suffer death as a felon. And it is hereby declared, that if any person shall enter the dwellinghouse of another with intent to commit felony, or being in such dwellinghouse shall commit any felony, and shall in either case break out of the said dwellinghouse, in the night time, such person shall be deemed guilty of burglary."

By this act so much of 18 Eliz. c. 7, as relates to burglary and to persons admitted to the benefit of clergy is repealed.

The first part of the above enactment inflicts a capital punishment on every case which was burglary at common law, and the burglary need not come within the definition in the concluding part of the enactment.

See the general clauses of the act affecting the whole of its provisions, and as to accessories, &c. post, Malicious Injuries to Property, Vol. III.; ante, Accessory, p. 13.

V. Reward for Apprehending, &c., a Burglar.

It may be observed, that it is provided by stat. 24 Hen. VIII. c. 36, that there shall be no forfeiture of lands or goods for killing any person that attempts to commit burglary.

But besides this indulgence to a person killing such an offender in defence of his house, there are special advantages and rewards for apprehending him. See Reward, Vol. V.; 7 Geo. IV. c. 84, s. 28; Costs, Vol. I.

VI. Offence of having House-breaking Instruments.

By stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, s. 4, for the purpose of preventing burglary and house-breaking, it is enacted, "that every person having in his or her custody or possession any picklock key, crow, jack, bit, or other implement, with an intent feloniously to break and enter into any dwellinghouse, warehouse, coach-house, stable, or out-building; or being armed with any gun, pistol, hunger, cutlass, bludgeon, or any offensive weapon; or having upon him or her any instrument with intent to commit any felony act; every person being found in or upon any dwellinghouse, warehouse, coach-house, stable, or out-house, or in any inclosed yard, garden, or area, for any unlawful purpose, shall be deemed a rogue and vagabond within the true intent and meaning of this act; and it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace to commit such offender (being thereof convicted before him by the confession of such offender, or by the evidence on oath of one or more credible witnesses) to the house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding three calendar months; and every such picklock key, crow, jack, bit, and other implement; and every such gun, pistol, hunger, cutlass, bludgeon, or other offensive weapon; and every such instrument as aforesaid, shall, by the conviction of the offender, become forfeited to his Majesty."

In the case of R. v. Brown, 8 T. R. 26, (upon stat. 23 Geo. III. c. 88, now repealed by the above stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, s. 1, a warrant of commitment was helden defective, because it did not state that the defendant was apprehended with the implements of house-breaking upon him at the time of such apprehension. Lord Kenyon, C. J. said that he yielded with great reluctance to the objection.
Burglary.

VII. Forms.

(No. 1.)

Warrant to apprehend a burglar where he actually stole goods.

County of To the Constable of .

FORAS MUCH as A. I. of , in the county of , yeoman, hath this day made information and complaint upon oath before J. P. Esquire, one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, that yesterday in the night the dwellinghouse of him the said A. I. at aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, was feloniously and burglaryously broken open, and [one silver tankard] of the value of [5l.] of the goods and chattels of him the said A. I. feloniously and burglaryously stolen, taken and carried away from thence; and that he hath just cause to suspect and doth suspect that A. O. late of , in the county of , labourer, the said felony and burglary did commit; these are therefore in his said Majesty's name to command you, that immediately upon sight hereof you do apprehend the said A. O. and bring him before me to answer the premises, and to be further dealt withal according to law. Herein fail you not. Given under my hand and seall the day of , in the year .

(No. 2.)

Commitment for like offence.

[Commencement as usual, as ante, p. 8]: on, &c. about the hour of [twelve] in the night, at , in the county aforesaid, the [dwellinghouse] of A. B. there situate, feloniously and burglaryously did break and enter, with intent the goods and chattels of the said A. B. in the said [dwellinghouse] then and there being, then and there feloniously and burglaryously to steal, take, and carry away, and then and there in the said [dwellinghouse], [twelve silver spoons] of the goods and chattels of the said A. B., then and there feloniously and burglaryously did steal, take, and carry away. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual, as ante, p. 8, to the end.]

(No. 3.)

Commitment for breaking out of a house.

[Commencement as usual, as ante, p. 8]: on, &c. at, &c. being in the [dwellinghouse] of A. B. there situate, [twelve silver spoons] of the goods and chattels of the said A. B., in the said [dwellinghouse] then and there being found, then and there in the said dwellinghouse feloniously did steal, take, and carry away: and that the said C. D., so being in the said [dwellinghouse] as aforesaid, and having committed the felony aforesaid, on the day and year aforesaid, about the hour of twelve in the night of the same day, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, feloniously and burglaryously did break out of the said [dwellinghouse], against the form of the statute in that case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual, as ante, p. 8, to the end.]

(No. 4.)

Indictment for burglary, laying an intent to steal as well as actual theft.

—— THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C. D., late of, &c. on, &c. (ante, 530) about the hour of one in the night of the same day, with force and arms, at the parish of, (ante, 529) aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, the [dwellinghouse] (ante, 529) of A. B. (ante, 529) there situate, feloniously and burglaryously did break and enter, (ante, 529,) with intent the goods and chattels of the said A. B. in the said [dwellinghouse] then and there being then and there feloniously and burglaryously to steal, take, and carry away, and then and there, with force and arms, [one silver tea pot] of the value of [5l.] [here state the articles stolen as in larceny] of the goods and chattels of the said A. B. in the said dwellinghouse then and there being found, then and there feloniously and burglaryously did steal, take, and carry away, against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity. [If bank notes or other valuable security be stolen, conclude also, against the form of the statute in that case made and provided.]

(No. 5.)

The like against two persons for a burglary with intent to steal.

—— THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C. D. late of, &c. on, &c. about the hour of [twelve] in the night of the same day, with force and arms, at, &c. aforesaid, the dwellinghouse of A. B. there situate feloniously and burglariously did break and enter, with intent the goods and chattels of the said A. B. in the said dwellinghouse then and there being found, then and there feloniously and burglariously to steal, take, and carry away, against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity.
Forms.

(No. 6.)

THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C. D. late of, &c. on, &c. about the hour of [twelve] in the night of the same day, at, &c. aforesaid, being in the dwellinghouse of A. B. there situated, [twelve silver spoons] of the value of [six pounds] of the goods and chattels of the said A. B. in the said dwellinghouse then and there being, with force and arms, feloniously did steal, take, and carry away; and that the said C. D. being so as aforesaid in the said dwellinghouse, and having committed the felony aforesaid in manner and form aforesaid, he the said C. D. afterwards, to wit, on the same day and year aforesaid, about the hour of [twelve] in the night of the same day, with force and arms, at, &c. aforesaid, the same dwellinghouse of the said A. B. then and there feloniously and burglariously did break and get out of the same, and then and there feloniously did break and get out of the same, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity.

Indictment on 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 11, for burglary in breaking out of a house.

Burial of Dead Bodies cast on Shore.

As to the stealing, selling, and preventing the burial of dead bodies, see ante, Bodies, p. 402.

As to burial of a felo de se, see post, Criminals, Vol. III. p. 258.

As to funerals being exempted from tolls, see post, Highway, Vol. III, p. 187.

The stat. 48 Geo. III. c. 75, after reciting, that "whereas no provision hath yet been made by the laws now in force for providing suitable interment in churchyards or parochial burying grounds, for such dead human bodies as may be cast on shore from the sea by wreck or otherwise, in that part of the United Kingdom called England: and whereas it is expedient that provision should be made for the decent interment of such bodies:" it is enacted, "that from and after the passing of this act, the churchwarden and churchwardens, overseer and overseers of the poor for the time being of the respective parishes throughout England, in which any dead human body or dead human bodies shall be found thrown in or cast on shore from the sea, by wreck or otherwise, shall, and he and they is and are hereby required, upon notice to him or them given that any such body or bodies are thrown in or cast on shore by the sea, and is or are lying within the bounds of the parish for which he or they shall be churchwarden or churchwardens, overseer or overseers of the poor, to cause the same to be forthwith removed to some convenient place, and with all convenient speed to cause such body or bodies to be decently interred in the churchyard or burial ground of such parish, so that the expenses attending on such burial do not exceed the sum which at that time is allowed in such parish for the burial of any person or persons buried at the expense of such parish: provided always, that in case any such body or bodies shall be thrown in or cast on shore from the sea in any extra-parochial place where there is no churchwarden or churchwardens, overseer or overseers of the poor, then and in every such case the constable or headborough of such place shall, on notice being given to him that such body or bodies is or are lying in such extra-parochial place, forthwith cause such body or bodies to be removed to some convenient place, and with all convenient speed cause the same to be buried in such and the like manner as the churchwardens and overseers within England are hereby required to bury such body or bodies."
Burial of Dead Bodies cast on Shore.

Sect. 2. "That every minister, parish clerk, and sexton of such respective parishes shall perform their several and respective duties in such and the like manner as is customary in other funerals, and shall admit of such body or bodies being interred in such churchyards or burial grounds without any improper loss of time, receiving for the same, by way of compensation, such and the like sums as in cases of burials made at the expense of such parishes."

Sect. 3. "That in case any person or persons shall find any such body or bodies cast on shore from the sea, by wreck or otherwise, and shall within six hours thereafter give notice thereof to some one of the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of the parish for the time being in which such body or bodies shall be found, or to the constable or headborough for the time being, in case such body or bodies shall be found in any extra-parochial place, or cause such notice to be left at his or her last or usual place or places of abode, then and in every such case such person or persons shall receive the sum of 5s. for his, her, or their trouble, such sum to be forthwith paid to the person or persons first giving such notice only; but nevertheless that no greater sum than 5s. shall be paid for any one notice, although there may be a greater number of such bodies than one."

Sect. 4. "That in case any person or persons shall find any such body or bodies cast on shore from the sea by wreck or otherwise, and shall not within six hours thereafter give notice to some one of the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of the parish for the time being in which such body or bodies shall be found, or to the constable or headborough for the time being, in case such body or bodies shall be found in any extra-parochial place, or cause such notice to be left at his or their last or usual place or places of abode, then and in every such case such person or persons shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of 5s."

Sect. 5. "That all necessary and proper payments, costs, charges, and expenses which shall be made or incurred in or about the execution of this act, shall be made and paid by the churchwarden or churchwardens, overseer or overseers, constable or headborough for the time being of such respective parishes and places as aforesaid."

Sect. 6. "And for the purpose of reimbursing him or them all such payments, costs, charges, and expenses," it is enacted, "that it shall and may be lawful to and for any one justice of the peace for the county or place within that part of the United Kingdom called England, in which any such body or bodies shall have been removed and buried as aforesaid, by any writing under his hand, (a) to order and direct (b) the treasurer for such county to pay such sum or sums of money to such churchwarden and churchwardens, overseer and overseers, constable or headborough, for his or their costs and expenses in or about the execution of this act (after the same shall have been duly verified on oath,) as to the said justice shall seem reasonable and necessary; and such treasurer shall and he is hereby authorised and required forthwith to pay the sum or sums of money so ordered and directed to be paid to the person or persons empowered to receive the same; and such treasurer shall be allowed the same in his accounts."

Sect. 7. "That in case any such churchwarden or churchwardens, overseer or overseers, constable or headborough, shall refuse or neglect to remove or cause to be removed such body or bodies from the sea shore to some conve-

(a) See form, (No. 1), post.
(b) Where a party framed an order, purporting to be the order of a magistrate on the treasurer of a county, to reimburse one Cost the expenses of burying a dead body cast on shore: it was held by a majority of the judges, that this was a forgery, though there was no such magistrate as the individual mentioned in the order, and though the order did not state Cost to be a parish officer, or that the expenses incurred were reasonable and necessary. R. v. Proud, 1 Brad. & Bing. 399; 2 Moore, 645, S.C.
niest place prior to the interment thereof, for the space of twelve hours after such notice given to him or them, or left in writing at his or their last or usual place or places of abode by any person or persons whomsoever, or shall neglect or refuse to perform the several other duties required of him and them by this act, then and in every such case every such churchwarden or overseer, constable or headborough, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of 5l."

Sect. 8. "That all penalties and forfeitures which shall be incurred under this act, if not paid on conviction, shall be levied and recovered by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender or offenders, by warrant under the hand and seal of any justice of the peace for the county or place where the offence shall happen (which warrant such justice is hereby empowered to grant on the confession of the party, or upon the evidence of any credible witness upon oath,) and the surplus of the money arising by such distress and sale shall be returned on demand to the owner of such goods and chattels, after deducting the costs and charges of making, keeping, and selling the distress; and such penalties and forfeitures, when recovered, shall be paid to the informer or informers; and in case sufficient distress shall not be found, or such penalties and forfeitures shall not be paid forthwith, it shall and may be lawful to and for such justice, and he is hereby authorised and required, by warrant under his hand and seal, to cause the offender or offenders to be committed to the common gaol or house of correction of such county or place, there to remain without bail or mainprise, for any time not exceeding two calendar months nor less than fourteen days, unless such penalties and forfeitures, and all reasonable charges attending the recovery thereof, shall be sooner fully paid and satisfied."

Sect. 9. "That in all cases where any conviction shall be had for any offence or offences committed against this act, or against any order of sessions, or any matter in pursuance of this act, the form of conviction shall be in the words or to the effect following; (that is to say,)

"BE it remembered, that on this day of in the year of the reign of A. B. is convicted before one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the offence of having [as the offence shall be,] and I the said do adjudge him [or them] to forfeit and pay for the same the sum of Given under my hand and seal the day and year aforesaid."

Sect. 10. "That if any person or persons shall think himself, herself, or themselves aggrieved by any judgment or determination, or by any matter or thing done in pursuance of this act, such person or persons may appeal to the justices of the peace at the first general or quarter session of the peace to be holden for the county or place (within which the matter of appeal shall arise) next after the expiration of one calendar month from the time such matter of appeal shall have arisen, the person or persons appealing having first given ten days notice at least of his or their intention to bring such appeal, and of the matter thereof, to the person or persons so appealed against, and forthwith after such notice entering into a recognizance before some justice of the peace for such county or place, with sufficient sureties conditioned to try such appeal and abide the order and award of the said court thereon; and the said justices at such sessions, upon due proof of such notice and recognizance having been given and entered into, are hereby authorised and required to hear and determine the matter of such appeal in a summary way, and to make such determination therein, and to award such costs to either of the parties, or otherwise, as they shall judge proper; and the said justices may, if they see cause, mitigate any fine, penalty, or fortuities, and may also order such further satisfaction to be made to the party injured as they shall judge reasonable; and all such determinations of the said justices shall be final, binding, and conclusive upon all parties to all intents and purposes whatsoever."

Sect. 11. "That where any distress shall be made for any sum of money to be levied by virtue of this act, the distress itself shall not be deemed unlawful, nor the party or parties making the same be deemed a trespasser or trespassers on account of any defect or want of form in the information, Burial of Dead Bodies cast on Shore.

48 Geo. 3, c. 75.
Penalties to be paid by persons incurring the same, and not by the parish.

Lords of manors, &c. to pay the same fee as heretofore on interring dead human bodies, &c.

How expenses of interment shall be defrayed.

summons, conviction, warrant of distress, or other proceedings relating thereto; nor shall the party or parties distrained be deemed a trespasser or trespassers ab initio, on account of any irregularity that shall be afterwards done by the party or parties so distraining, but the person or persons aggrieved by such irregularity shall and may recover full satisfaction for the special damage in an action upon the case.

Sect. 12. "That all penalties and expenses attendant thereon, which shall be incurred under the provisions of this act, shall be paid and borne by the person or persons incurring the same, and that the parish or place wherein such person or persons ought to have acted in the duties prescribed by this act shall be wholly exempted therefrom."

Sect. 13, after reciting, that "whereas in cases of dead wrecks, wherein no living person is found, or owner known, the lords of manors on which any such dead body or dead bodies may be washed in, and who are entitled to wreck there, have usually paid a small fee for the placing such body or bodies in the ground in the state in which the same have been found, and such payments have been addicted and admitted as proof on trials at common law of the right of such lords of manors to wrecks in such manors;" it is enacted, "that in all and every such cases it shall and may be lawful to and for all and every lord or lords of any manor or manors throughout England to pay or cause to be paid to the churchwarden or churchwardens, overseer or overseers, constable or headborough, of such respective parishes and places as aforesaid, such and the like sums as he or they was or were heretofore accustomed to pay for the placing any such body or bodies into the ground as aforesaid; such sums to go in part payment and discharge of the costs and expenses to be incurred in or about the execution of this act, and credit to be given for the same by such overseers, churchwardens, constable, or headborough, in their accounts with the county to which such accounts shall be submitted; any thing in this act to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 14. "And for defraying the expenses of the removal and burial of such body or bodies as aforesaid, and all other expenses necessary for the execution of this act," it is enacted, "that the justices of the peace at the general or quarter sessions may cause such sums of money as shall be necessary for all or any of the purposes aforesaid to be raised in the same manner as rates are directed to be raised by an act made in the twelfth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Second, intituled, "An Act for the more easy assessing, collecting, and levying of county rates."

---

Forms.

(No. 1.)

To the Treasurer of the county of

I, J. P. Esquire, one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the county of having inquired into and ascertained upon oath the payments, costs, charges, and expenses in the account annexed, amounting to the sum of incurred by the overseers of the poor of the parish of in the said county, by reason of a dead human body having been found cast by the sea on the shore of the aforesaid parish, on the day of one thousand eight hundred and and interred by the said overseers of the poor at the like sums as in cases of burials made at the expense of the said parish, do hereby order you immediately on sight thereof to pay unto A. O. overseer of the poor of the before-mentioned parish, the said sum of according to an act passed in the forty-eighth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled, "An Act for providing suitable interment in churchyards or parochial burying-grounds in England, for such dead human bodies as may be cast on shore from the sea, in cases of wreck or otherwise," and the same will be allowed you in your accounts. Given under my hand at in the said county of this day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and .

(a) Ante, 534.
Burning.

I. Offence of, at Common Law, 537.

II. Offence of, by Statute, and how Punishable, 539.

(1.) Burning of Buildings, &c. 539.

[7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 2.]

(2.) —— of Crops, Stacks, &c. 540.

[7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 17.]

(4.) —— of Ships, Stores, &c. 541; post, Ships, Stores, Vol. V.

III. Indictment for, 541.

IV. Punishment for Servants carelessly Firing Houses, &c. 542.

[6 Anne, c. 31, s. 3; 14 Geo. III. c. 78, s. 84.]

V. Using Threats to Burn, 543.

VI. Forms, 543.

I. Offence at Common Law.

MALICIOUSLY and voluntarily burning the house of another by night or by day is felony at the common law. 1 Hawk. c. 39.

Maliciously and voluntarily]—For if it be done by mischance or negligence, it is no felony. 3 Inst. 67.

As if an unqualified person happen to set fire to the thatch of a house; or even if a man were shooting at the poultry of another, by which means the

(a) See the provision, ante, 534 Burning.

OFFENCE AT COMMON LAW.

If a man maliciously intending only to burn one person's house happens thereby to burn the house of another, it is certain that he may be indicted as having maliciously burned the house of that other; for where a felonious design against one man miseth its aim, and takes effect upon another, it shall have the like construction as if it had been levied against him who suffers by it. 1 Hawk. c. 38, s. 5; 1 Hale, 569.

Even if a man by wilfully setting fire to his own house burn also the house of one of his neighbours, it will be felony, (see R. v. Probert, 2 East's P. C. 1031; R. v. Isaac, id; for the law in such a case implies malice, particularly if the party's house were so situate that the probable consequence of its taking fire was that the fire would communicate to the houses in its neighbourhood.

In R. v. Salmon, Russ. & Ry. C. C. 36, it was held not necessary to constitute an offence under the Black Act, 9 Geo. I. (now repealed,) that the prisoner should have malice or spite against the owner of the property burnt, and at all events it is not necessary now by the express provisions of the 26th sect. of 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30.

The intent to injure may be always inferred from the wrongful act of setting fire, for a man must be supposed to intend the necessary consequence of his own act. R. v. Farrington, Russ. & Ry. C. C. 207.

Burning.—Neither a bare intention to burn a house, nor even an actual attempt to do it by putting fire to part of a house, will amount to felony, if no part of it be burned; but if any part of the house be burned, the offender is guilty of felony, notwithstanding the fire afterwards be put out, or go out of itself. 1 Hawk. c. 39, s. 4; 5 East's P. C. 1030; 1 Leach, 48.

The attempt to commit arson is a misdemeanor at common law, and as such may be punished severely. 1 Wils. 139; see ante, Attempts, p. 292.

What house.

The House.—This extendeth not only to the very dwellinghouse, but to all outhouses that are parcel thereof, though not contiguous to it, nor under the same roof; as in the case of burglary, the barn, stable, cowhouse, sheeplehouse, dairyhouse, millhouse. 1 Hale, 567.

But if the barn or outhouse be not parcel of a dwellinghouse, it is not felony unless the barn have hay or corn in it; and then, though it be no parcel of a dwellinghouse, it is felony. 3 Inst. 67.

See tit. Burglary, ante, 531, 532, for what is considered as parcel of the dwellinghouse, and which should govern the question as to what is a house or outhouse in the case of arson. See also post, Treason, Vol. III. p. 277.

Owner of house.

Of Another.—But a person seized in fee, or but possessed for years, of a house standing by itself at a distance from all others, cannot commit felony in burning the same. So a man so seized or possessed of a house in a town, who burned his own with an intent to burn his neighbour's, but in the event burned his own only, was not guilty of felony; it was, however, certainly an offence highly punishable in regard of the malice thereof; and the great danger to the public which attended it; and the offender was liable to be severely fined, and imprisoned during the King's pleasure, and set on the pillory, (a) and bound to his good behaviour. 1 Hawk. c. 39, s. 3; Brecon's case, 1 Leach, 220, 4th ed. Cro. Car. 376.

The frequent commission of the latter offence, and the very serious mischief that resulted from its being merely a misdemeanor, at last attracted the attention of the legislature, and the party who would occasion, by burning his own possession, an injury to another, the extent of which in many cases cannot be calculated, will be liable to the penalty of death; formerly, by 43 Geo. III. c. 58, usually called Lord Ellemborough's Act, and now by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 2, 17. (Vide post, 539, 540.)

(a) Now abolished, except in perjury, by 56 Geo. III. c. 138.
II. (1.)

Offence by Statutes.

Various kinds of property also, the burning of which was no felony at common law, are now made so by the legislature. See infra.

II. Offence by Statutes.

(1.) Burning of Buildings, Churches, and Houses.

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 2, enacts, "that if any person shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any church or chapel, or to any chapel for the religious worship of persons dissenting from the united church of England and Ireland, duly registered or recorded, or shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any house, stable, coachhouse, outhouse, warehouse, office, shop, mill, malthouse, hopoast, barn, or granary, or to any building or erection used in carrying on any trade or manufacture, or any branch thereof, whether the same or any of them respectively shall then be in the possession of the offender, or in the possession of any other person, with intent thereby to injure or defraud any person, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall suffer death as a felon."

See the general clauses affecting all the provisions of this act post, tit. Malicious Injuries to Property, Vol. III. p. 722 to 727.

This provision consolidates the provisions on this subject contained in the statutes. 9 Geo. I. c. 22; 9 Geo. III. c. 29, s. 2; 48 Geo. III. c. 58, and 52 Geo. III. c. 130.

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, wholly repeals 23 Hen. VIII. c. 1; 43 Eliz. c. 13; 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 7; 9 Geo. I. c. 22, (the Black Act); 9 Geo. III. c. 29, and 52 Geo. III. c. 130; and the statutes 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, wholly repeals the 43 Geo. III. c. 58, (Lord Ellenborough’s Act.)

The above clause in the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 2, relating to churches and chapels, is new.

Observations and decisions.

The act should be construed strictly. See Elsmore v. St. Briavells, 8 B. & Cres. 464, 466; 1 Leach, 81; Russ. & Ry. C. C. 295.

The clause, it will be observed, omits the word “burn,” which was in the repealed act of 52 Geo. III. c. 150, and has only the words “set fire to;” it should seem, however, that burning is still necessary, for some part must necessarily be burnt if it was set on fire. It is not necessary in an indictment to aver that the building was burnt. See R. v. Salmon, Russ. & Ry. C. C. 26.

It is to be observed, that the statute 9 Geo. I. c. 22, s. 7, did not alter the nature of the crime of arson, (as it existed before,) or make any new offence, but excluded the principal from clergy more clearly than he was before. North’s case, 2 East’s P. C. 1021; post, 540; *Breen’s case, 1 Leach, 31, 3d ed., 220, 4 ed.; 8 B. & Cres. 465; Russ. & Ry. C. C. 207.

A wife setting fire to her husband’s house is not guilty of an offence within the act. R. v. March, R. & M. C. C. 182.

The building in respect of which the offence is committed must come within the ordinary and established meaning of the words used in the statute. The mere using the building for a particular purpose does not necessarily alter the nature of the building.

What building within the act.

Therefore a building intended for and constructed as a dwellinghouse, but which had not been completed or inhabited, and in which the owner had deposited straw and agricultural instruments, was held not a house, outhouse, or barn within the 9 Geo. I. Elsmore v. St. Briavells, 8 B. & Cres. 461.

A school-room, which was separated from the dwellinghouse by a narrow passage, about a yard wide, the roof of which was partly overhung by that of the dwellinghouse, the two buildings, together with some others, and the court which enclosed them, being rented by the same person, was ruled to be well described as an outhouse. Winter’s case, Russ. & Ry. C. C. 295.

It can scarcely be conceived that a dairyhouse or a millhouse should not Burning.

Sarah Taylor was indicted for setting fire to an outhouse, commonly called a paper-mill. It appeared that she had set fire to a large quantity of paper which was drying in a loft annexed and belonging to the mill; but no part of the mill itself was consumed; and therefore the judges thought the case not within the statute on that ground; though another doubt was started, whether a mill were an outhouse within the meaning of the act. Sarah Taylor's case, 2 East's P. C. 1020; 1 Leach, 49.

North was indicted for feloniously, wilfully, and maliciously, against the form of the statute 9 Geo. I. c. 22, setting fire to a certain outhouse of J. Taylor, situate in Knaresborough. It appeared that the prisoner had set fire to and burnt part of a building of the prosecutor, which was situated in a yard of his at the back of his dwellinghouse, which was in the street of the town of Knaresborough. The building was about four or five yards distant from the dwellinghouse, but not joined to it. The yard was enclosed on all sides, in part by the dwellinghouse, in another part by a wall, in a third part by a railing, which separated it from a field, and in the remaining part by a hedge. The prosecutor kept a public house and also carried on the business of a flax dresser. The buildings set fire to, and in part burned, consisted of a stable and a chamber over it, which was used by the prosecutor as a shop for keeping and dressing flax. It was objected on behalf of the prisoner that this building was not an outhouse within the stat. 9 Geo. I. c. 22, as that must be understood to mean outhouses, which in contemplation of law were not part of the dwelling, which it was insisted this was, and that the indictment should have been for arson at common law. The jury found the prisoner guilty, and the point was reserved. November, 1795, (Hotsham, B. absent,) all the other judges agreed that the verdict was right. They said, that though for some purposes this might be part of the dwellinghouse, yet still in fact it was an outhouse. In Bercume's case it was considered that the stat. 9 Geo. I. did not alter the nature of the crime, or create any new offence, but only excluded the principal from clergy more clearly than he was before. North's case, 2 East's P. C. 1021.

Upon the construction of stat. 9 Geo. I. c. 22, it has been holden that a common gaol is a house within the meaning of it. The entrance to the prison was through the dwellinghouse of the gaoler, and the prisoners were sometimes allowed to lie in it. All the judges held, that the dwellinghouse was to be considered as part of the prison, and the whole prison was the house of the corporation, to whom it belonged. One set of the counts there laid it to be the house of the corporation, another of the gaoler, and a third of the person whom the gaoler suffered to live in the dwellinghouse. Donovon's case, Lanc. 1770, 2 Bl. Rep. 682; 2 East's P. C. 1020.

A cotton-mill was held to be within the meaning of the 9 Geo. III. c. 29, s. 2, relating to the burning of mills. Anon. 2 Russ. Crim. & Mix. 493.

As to the intent to injure, see ante, 537, 538.

As to accessories see post, Malicious Injuries to Property, Vol. III. p. 723; ante, Asquarredo, p. 15.

As to the indictment, see post, 541.

(2.) Setting Fire to Crops, Stacks, Woods, Heath, &c.

The stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 17, enacts, "that if any person shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any stack of corn, grain, pulse, straw, hay, or wood, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof, shall suffer death as a felon; and if any person shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any crop of corn, grain or pulse, whether standing or cut down, or to any part of a wood, coppice, or plantation of trees, or to any heath, gorse, furze, or fern, wheresoever the same may be growing, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court to be transported beyond the seas for the term of seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years; and, if a male, to be once, twice, or thrice publicly or privately whipped, (if the court shall so think fit,) in addition to such imprisonment."
II. (2.)]

Offence by Statutes.

See the general clauses, affecting all the provisions of this act, post, Malicious Injuries to Property, Vol. III.

This provision consolidates the 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 7, a part of the 9 Geo. I. c. 22, and the 4th section of the stat. 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 48, which related to the burning of woods.

The stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, wholly repeals the stats. 27 Hen. VIII. Repeal of acts. c. 6; 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 7; 4 & 5 Will. III. c. 23, s. 11.; 43 Eliz. c. 13; 6 Geo. I. c. 16; 9 Geo. I. c. 22, (the Black Act,) and 11 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 48; and the same stat. repeals so much of the stat. 4 W. & M. c. 23, as "relates to the burning of any grie, ling, heath, furze, gorse, or fern," and so much of the stat. 28 Geo. II. c. 19, as relates to persons burning or destroying grass, furze, or fern, in forests or chases, are also repealed; and also the whole of the stat. 4 Geo. IV. c. 54, except that part which relates to threatening letters, post, Threats, Vol. V.

Part of the above clause, which relates to setting fire to crops, appears to be new, and the punishment for setting fire to heath, &c. is increased.

It was never doubted but that burning one rick, &c. was within the statute 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 7, though that statute has ricks in the plural. See Haswell’s case, 1 Leach, 1.

The property in respect of which the offence is committed must come within the ordinary and established meaning of the words used in the statute, ante, 539. Where the defendant was convicted on the 9 Geo. I. for setting fire to a parcel of unthreshed wheat, the court were of opinion, that as the statute had only made it felony to set fire to a cock, mow, or stack of corn, the warrant of commitment did not charge the defendant with a felony, and he was therefore admitted to bail. R. v. Judd, 2 T. R. 255; and see Elsmore v. St. Briswells, 8 B. & Cire. 461.

In R. v. Turner and another, R. & M. C. C. 241; 4 C. & P. 245, S. C. it was made a question, but not decided, whether a hain or stack was a stack of straw within the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 2, ante, 539.

(3.) Burning Mines.

As to this offence see post, Coals, Vol. I.; Malicious Injuries to Property, Vol. III. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 5, 6, &c.

(4.) Burning Ships, Stores, Magazines, &c.

As to this offence see post, Ships, Stores, Vol. V.

---

III. Indictment, Evidence, &c.

Indictment—The day stated need not be the day proved. Where the indictment alleged the offence to have been committed in the night time, and it was proved to have been committed in the day time, the judges held the variance to be immaterial. R. v. Minton, 2 East’s P. C. 1021.

With respect to the description of the building, it is sufficient to describe it according to the language used in the act on which the indictment is founded; 2 East’s P. C. 1033.

There is no occasion to call the place a dwellinghouse, as in case of burglary, the term house alone will suffice; 1 Hale, 567; and although the premises set on fire form part of the mansion, being within the curtilage, it will be no variance to charge them as an outhouse in general terms; R. v. North, 2 East’s P. C. 1033. So where the indictment described the Burning.

The parish in which the building is alleged to have been situated must be stated according to the fact.

It seems necessary to aver that the defendant "voluntarily (or wilfully) and maliciously" set fire, &c.; see 2 East’s P. C. 1021. At all events it is necessary to aver that the defendant "unlawfully" set fire, &c. and stating that he did so feloniously, voluntarily, and maliciously, is not enough. R. v. Turner, R. & M. C. C. 239.

The name of the owner of the house must be stated in the same manner as in burglary; 2 East's P. C. 1034; and see ante, 529. It is therefore necessary to determine the party to whom the premises belong. This, however, is not so difficult an investigation as in the case of a burglarious entry, for it may be inferred, from the cases deciding that a party cannot, at common law, be guilty of arson by setting fire to houses in which he has an interest, what possession is sufficient in the party charged as the owner. When any doubt is entertained on this part of the subject, the difficulty may be obviated by the insertion of several counts to correspond with the evidence. See 3 Crad. C. L. 1126.

If the premises be described as in the possession of A. B., proof that they are in the possession of the tenants of A. B. will support the indictment. R. v. Bald, R. & M. C. C. 30.

If a man maliciously intending to burn the house of A., happens to burn the house of B., he may be indicted as having maliciously burned the house of B. 1 Hawk. c. 18, s. 18.

Where a parish parson set fire to a house in which he was put to reside by the overseers, and the trustees, in whom the legal ownership was vested, were not known, it was held, that it might be described as the house of the overseers, or of persons unknown. R. v. Richman, 2 East’s P. C. 1034.

As the words of the statute must be strictly pursued, it will be essential, in laying the intent, not to omit the word, "thereby." Anon. 5 Ev. St. 334.

"It is not necessary to aver that the property was burnt, the words of the act being only "set fire to." R. v. Salmon, Russ. & Ry. C. C. 26.

Evidence—It was held by six judges against five, that on the trial of an indictment on 43 Geo. III. c. 68, laying the intention to defraud the insurers, an unstamped policy of insurance could not be given in evidence. R. v. Gelson, 2 Leach, 1007; 1 Taunt. 95; Russ. & Ry. C. C. 138, S. C.

Where a house was robbed and burnt, the defendant’s being found in possession of some of the goods which were in the house at the time it was burnt, was admitted as evidence tending to prove him guilty of the arson. R. v. Richman, 2 East, 1035.

IV. Punishment for Servant carelessly Firing a House.

By stats. 6 Ann. c. 51, s. 3, and 14 Geo. III. c. 78, s. 84, if any servant of a party, through negligence or carelessness, shall fire, or cause to be fired, any dwellinghouse, or outhouse or houses, or other buildings, and such servant be thereof convicted on the oath of one witness before two justices, he shall forfeit 100£, to the churchwardens or overseers of the parish where
V. Using threats to burn.

By the commission of the peace, any justice may cause to come before him all those who to any of the people concerning the firing of their houses have used threats, to find sufficient security for the peace or their good behaviour towards the King and his people; and if they shall refuse to find such security, may cause them to be safely kept in the King's prisons until they shall find security.

The offence of sending letters, threatening to burn houses, &c. is provided for by the 4 Geo. IV. c. 54. See post, Threats, Vol. V.
Warrant thereon.

County of "To the Constable of the parish of ... in the said county.

WHEREAS A. B. of ... hath this day made complaint on oath before me J. P. Esquire, one of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, that [state the offence as in the information.] These are therefore to command you forthwith to apprehend and bring before me, or some other of his Majesty's justices of the peace, acting in and for the said county, the body of the said C. D. to answer the said complaint, and to be further dealt with according to law. Given under my hand and seal, &c.

J. P. (L. S.)

Commitment on 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 2, for setting fire to a building.

[Commencement as usual, ante, p. 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. in the said county, unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously did set fire to a certain dwellinghouse [according to the fact, see the words of the act, ante, 539,] of A. B. there situates, with intent thereby then and there to injure the said A. B. [or to defraud a certain insurance company, called ... see form of indictment, post, (No. 6):] against the form of the statute in that case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual to the end.]

The like for setting fire to a house.

[Commencement as usual, ante, p. 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. in the said county, unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously did set fire to a certain church there situates, [or to a certain chapel there situates, or to a certain chapel for the religious worship of persons dienteing from the united Church of England and Ireland there situates, and duly registered and recorded, see form of indictment, post, (No. 11):] against the form of the statute in that case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual to the end.]

Commitment on 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 17, for setting fire to a stack of corn, &c.

[Commencement as usual, ante, p. 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously, did set fire to a certain stack of barley, [corn, grain, pulse, straw, hay, or wood, according to the fact,] of A. B. then and there being: against the form of the statute in that case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual to the end.]

The like for setting fire to crops, plantations, &c.

[Commencement as usual, ante, p. 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously, did set fire to a certain crop of barley, the property of C. D., then and there standing and growing, [see the words of the act, ante, 540,] against the form of the statute in that case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual to the end.]

Indictment for arson at common law.

—THE jurors of our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C.D. late of, &c. not having the fear of God before his eyes, but being moved and seduced by the instigation of the devil, on, &c. with force and arms, at, &c. aforesaid, feloniously, unlawfully, and maliciously, did set fire to and burn a certain [dwellinghouse] of one A.B. there situates, against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity. [If the house were not a dwellinghouse, but merely a building, which was parcel of the dwelling-house, describe it accordingly.]

Indictment for arson at common law.

—THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that J.S. late of, &c. to wit, on, &c. with force and arms, at, &c. aforesaid, unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously, did set fire to a certain house [according to the fact, see the act, ante, 539,] of J. N. there situates; against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity.
Forms.

(VI.)

(No. 9.)

— THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C. D. late of, &c., on, &c. with force and arms, &c. aforesaid, feloniously, unlawfully, wilfully, maliciously, and unlawfully, did set fire to a certain [dwellinghouse] there situate, then being in the possession of him the said C. D. with intent thereby to injure and defraud the [Royal Exchange] Insurance Company for the insurance of houses and goods from fire, then being a body corporate: [or A. B. and C. D. then being subjects of his said Majesty]: against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity.

(No. 10.)

— THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C. D. late of, &c., on, &c. with force and arms, &c. a certain stack of hay of and belonging to one A. B. feloniously, unlawfully, wilfully, and maliciously, did set fire to, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our said Lord the King, his crown and dignity.

(No. 11.)

— THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that J. S. late of, &c., on, &c. with force and arms, &c. aforesaid, feloniously, unlawfully, maliciously, and unlawfully, did set fire to a certain church there situate; contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our said Lord the King, his crown and dignity.

(No. 12.)

— THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C. D. late of, &c. being an evil disposed person, on, &c. with force and arms, &c. aforesaid, a certain building there situate and being, called the [Lower Cells], (the same then and there being the prison of the borough of the county aforesaid) then and there feloniously, unlawfully, wilfully, maliciously, and injuriously did set fire to, and the same building called the [Lower Cells] did by such firing then and there burn, consume, and destroy, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our Lord the King, his crown and dignity. Second count: And the jurors, &c. do further present, that the said C. D. on the day and year aforesaid, with force and arms, &c. aforesaid, a certain building there situate and being, called the [Lower Cells] then and there feloniously, unlawfully, wilfully, maliciously, and injuriously, did set fire to, and the same building then and there feloniously, unlawfully, wickedly, wilfully, and injuriously, did, by such firing, burn, consume, and destroy, to the evil example of all others, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our Lord the King, his crown and dignity.

(No. 13.)

County of To the Constable of and to the Keeper of the house of correction at

WHEREAS A. B. servant of C. D. of, &c. was on the day of the date hereof lawfully convicted before us, W. S. and S. F. Esquires, two of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, upon the oath of E. F. of, &c. that he the said A. B. did, on the day of last, through negligence, set fire to, or cause to be fired, the dwellinghouse of the said C. D. situate at in the parish of in the said county, by reason whereof, and by force of the statutes in that case made and provided, he the said A. B. hath forfeited the sum of one hundred pounds: And whereas the churchwardens of the parish of the where the said fire did happen, have made appear unto us upon oath, that immediately upon the said conviction they did daily demand of the said A. B. the sum of one hundred pounds, to be distributed by them at the law directs, but the said A. B. did refuse and neglect to pay the same: These are therefore to command you, in his Majesty's name, to convey the said A. B. to the house of correction at Commitment of a servant for negligently setting fire to a dwelling-hose, under stat. 6 Anne, c. 31, s. 3, and 14 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 86. (a)

(a) Ante, p. 542.

Vol. I. 2 N Butcher.

BY stat. 2 & 3 Edw. VI. c. 15, if any butchers shall conspire not to sell their victuals but at certain prices, every such person shall forfeit for the first offence 10l. to the King, and if not paid in six days he shall suffer 20 days' imprisonment, and shall only have bread and water for his sustenance; for the second offence 20l. in like manner, or the pillory; (a) and for the third offence 40l. or pillory, and the loss of an ear, and to be taken as an infamous man, and not to be credited in any matter of judgment; and the sessions or leet may determine the same. See also title Forestalling, Vol. II.

It is an offence at common law to conspire to raise the price of victuals. See post, Conspiracy, Vol. I.

By stat. 4 Hen. VII. c. 3, no butcher shall slay any beast within any walled town except Carlisle and Berwick, on pain of forfeiting for every ox 12d., every cow and other beast 8d., half to the King, and half to him that will sue.

A butcher that selleth swine's flesh meseled, or flesh dead of the murrain, shall for the first time be grievously amerced; the second time suffer judgment of the pillory; (a) the third time to be imprisoned and make fine; and the fourth time forswear the town. Ordinance for bakers. 1 Hawk. Stat. 1, p. 181.

As to how far this would be an offence at common law, see the cases as to selling bad bread, &c. ante, 406, 407.

By stat. 3 Car. c. 1, if any butcher shall kill or sell any victual on the Lord's Day, he shall forfeit 6s. 8d., one-third to the informer and two-thirds to the poor, on conviction before one justice, on his own view, or confession, or oath of two witnesses, to be levied by the constable or churchwarden. See post, Lord's Day, Vol. III.

An indictment against a butcher for selling meat on a Sunday should conclude against the form of the statute; but if the offender keep open shop, the usual method is to indict at the sessions for the nuisance. R. v. Brotherton, 1 Sar. 702; post, Nuisance, Vol. III.

See post, Castle, Vol. I.

(a) This punishment of pillory is now Geo. III. c. 138. See tit. Pillory, &c. abolished (except in cases of perjury, Vol. V. or subornation thereof) by stat. 56
Butter and Cheese.

I. Concerning the Packing, Weight, and Goodness of Butter, 547.
[13 & 14 Car. II. c. 26; 4 Will. III. c. 7; 26 Geo. III. c. 86; 36 Geo. III. c. 73.]

II. Concerning the Shipping of Butter and Cheese for London, 549.
[4 Will. III. c. 7.]

I. Concerning the Packing, Weight, and Quality of Butter.

By stat. 36 Geo. III. c. 86, s. 19, the 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 26, and so much of 4 Will. III. c. 7, as discharges persons from the effect of any part of 13 & 14 Car. II. for preventing frauds in the sellers of butter after the factor or buyer hath contracted for the same, are repealed; and new regulations are made respecting the packing, weight, and sale of butter, as follows:—

By sect. 1 it is enacted, that every cooper or other person who shall make any vessel for the packing of butter shall make the same of good and well-seasoned timber, and tight and not leaky, and shall groove in the heads and bottoms thereof; and every such vessel shall be a tub, firkin, or half firkin, and no other; and shall, when delivered by such cooper or person making the same, be of the weight and proportion and capable of containing the several quantities of butter hereinafter mentioned, viz. every tub shall weigh of itself, including the top and bottom, not less than 111b. nor more than 15lb. avoirdupois weight, and neither such top nor bottom shall be more than five-eighths of an inch thick in any part thereof, and shall be capable of containing 84lb. average of butter, and not less; every firkin shall weigh of itself, including the top and bottom, not less than 71b. nor more than 11lb., and neither the top nor bottom shall be more than four-eighths of an inch thick in any part, and shall be capable of containing not less than 56lb. of butter; and every half firkin shall weigh of itself, including the top and bottom, not less than 4lb. nor more than 6lb., and neither the top nor bottom shall be more than three-eighths of an inch thick in any part, and it shall be capable of containing not less than 28lb. of butter, on pain of forfeiture by the cooper or other person making the same of 10s. for every such vessel. (a)

Sect. 2. And every such maker, before such vessel shall go out of his possession, shall, on the outside of the bottom, with an iron, brand his christian name and surname at full length, in permanent and legible letters, together with the exact weight or tare thereof, on the like penalty.

And by stat. 38 Geo. III. c. 73, s. 1, every such maker shall moreover mark in like manner, in addition to his name, his place of abode or dwelling in the following manner, viz. if he dwell in a city or market town, then the name thereof; if in a village, township, liberty, hamlet, or other division of a parish, then the name of the parish wherein the same is situate; and if in an extra-parochial place, then the name of the next adjoining parish; on pain of forfeiting 10s. for every default therein.

Sect. 2. And every factor or agent for buying or selling butter for others, who shall buy, sell, or offer to sell, or have in his custody for sale, or shall order, consign, forward, or send, any vessel containing butter for sale, which (a) The avoirdupois weight is that by which the sale of butter is regulated, and a custom in a particular place that every pound of butter shall weigh eighteen ounces, is bad, being contrary to the express provision of the legislature, the object of which is to establish a uniformity of weights and measures. Noble v. Darwell, 3 T. R. 271; 4 T. R. 314, 750; but it has never been decided that a custom to sell by a lump of a particular weight exceeding sixteen ounces is invalid in law. See post, Weights and Measures, Vol. V.

2 N 2
Packing of...

36 Geo. 3, c. 73.

Or cheesemongers and others.

Directions for packing of butter.

30 Geo. 3, c. 99.

Quantities to be packed in each vessel.

Butter not to be mixed.

What salt to be used.

Practising fraud in the sale of butter.

To deliver the full quantity.

Not to be re-packed for sale again.

Foreign butter.

Counterfeiting or forg'ing marks.

shall not be made, and externally marked, and have the butter therein imprinted, according to the directions of this and the above act, shall forfeit 20s. for every such offence.

Sect. 3. And every cheesemonger or seller or dealer in butter on his own account, who shall offer for sale, or have in his possession for sale, any vessel containing such butter, which shall not be externally marked as aforesaid, shall forfeit 10s. for every such offence.

By stat. 36 Geo. III. c. 86, s. 3, and every dairyman, farmer, or seller of butter, or other person who shall pack any butter for sale, shall pack the same in vessels so made and marked as aforesaid and no other, and shall properly soak and season such vessel before such packing, and when so soaked and seasoned shall, on the bottom thereof on the inside, and on the top on the outside, with an iron, brand his christian and surname at full length in like letters, and also on the outside of the top, and on the bouge or body thereof, the true weight or tare of such empty vessel when so soaked and seasoned, and also his name in like manner on the bouge or body across two different staves at least, to prevent the same being taken out and changed; and shall distinctly and at full length imprint his christian and surname upon the top of the butter in such vessel when filled, on pain of forfeiting 5l. for every default thereof. (a)

Sect. 4. And every dairyman, farmer, or seller of butter, or other person, packing butter for sale, shall (exclusive of the tare of such vessel), pack in every tub not less than 84lb., firkin, 56lb., and half firkin, 28lb., net, of good and merchantable butter; and no butter which is old or corrupt shall be mixed or packed up into any such vessel with that which is new and sound, nor shall any whey butter be packed or mixed with that which is made of cream, but every such vessel shall be of one sort and goodness throughout; and no butter shall be salted with any great salt, but with fine small salt, and not intermixed with more than is needful for its preservation; on pain of forfeiting 5l. for every offence.

Sect. 5. And if any change, alteration, fraud, or deceit, shall be used or practised, either in the vessel wherein butter is packed for sale as aforesaid, or in the butter itself, whether in quantity, quality, weight, or otherwise, or in any such brands or marks as aforesaid, or in the staves whereon the same shall be placed, or in any other manner howsoever after the packing thereof for sale as aforesaid; every person concerned therein shall forfeit 30l. for every such offence.

Sect. 6. And every cheesemonger, dealer in butter, or other person, who shall sell any tub, firkin, or half firkin, shall deliver therein the full quantity aforesaid, and in default shall be liable to make satisfaction for what is wanting, and be liable to an action for recovery of such satisfaction, with costs.

Sect. 7. And no cheesemonger, dealer, or other person, shall re-pack for sale any butter in any such vessel as aforesaid, on pain of forfeiting 5l. for every tub, firkin, or half firkin so re-packed.

Sect. 8. Provided, that no person shall be liable to any of the penalties of this act for using any such vessel as aforesaid after the British butter packed therein hath been taken thereout, for the re-packing for sale any foreign butter, who shall first entirely cut out or efface the names of the original dairyman, farmer, or seller of butter, leaving the name and tare of the cooper, and the tare of the original dairyman, farmer, or seller thereon, and shall afterwards with an iron brand his name in words at length and the words foreign butter in permanent and legible letters, upon the bouge or body of every such vessel across two staves at the least, to denote that such butter is foreign butter.

Sect. 9. And if any person shall hereafter be convicted of counterfeiting or forging any of the names or marks of such owners, farmers, or dairymen as aforesaid, or any part thereof, or cause the same to be done, he shall for every offence forfeit 40l.

(a) See the form, 550, post.
I.]

Packing and Weight, &c. of.

By sect. 13, 14, and stat. 38 Geo. III. c. 73, s. 4, all penalties above 5l. are to be recovered in the courts at Westminster; and all offences against this act, the mode of determining which is not hereinbefore prescribed, and where the penalty shall not exceed 5l., shall be heard and determined by one justice of the county, &c. or place where the offence shall be committed, or alleged to be committed, who on proof upon oath by one witness may levy such penalties by distress and sale of the offender’s goods, (returning the overplus, after deducting the costs,) to be applied to the use of the informer; and for want of sufficient distress, or if such penalty be not forthwith paid, such offender shall be committed to the gaol or house of correction, without bail, for (not exceeding) three calendar months, nor less than twenty-eight days, unless such penalty and all reasonable charges be sooner paid.

Sect. 11. And the conviction may be drawn out in the following form, or to the like effect:

County of
BE it remembered, that on this day of A. O. is convicted of before J. P. one of his Majesty’s justices of the peace for the said county of [or, for the riding or division of the said county of or, for the city, liberty, or town of as the case may be,] for that the said A. O. on [time of committing the offence,] at [place of committing offence,] did [here state the offence against the act according to the fact,] contrary to the form of the status in that case made and provided; and the said J. P. doth adjudge him or her to pay and forfeit for the said offence the sum of . Given under my hand and seal the day and year first abovementioned.

Which conviction shall be written on parchment, and transmitted to the next sessions to be there filed.

Sect. 11, 12. And if any person shall think himself aggrieved by the judgment of the said justice, he may appeal to the next sessions for the county or place where the offence shall be committed, or alleged to be committed, who, upon receiving such conviction drawn up as aforesaid, shall hear and determine the same, and may award costs to either party, as to them shall seem meet.

Sect. 13. And no such conviction or judgment shall be set aside by such sessions for want of form, if the material facts alleged therein be proved to their satisfaction, nor shall the same be removed by certiorari or other process into any other court. (a)

Sect. 16. Provided, that nothing herein shall extend to the packing of butter in any pot or other vessel not capable of containing more than 14lb.

Sect. 17. Provided also, that every information, prosecution, or suit, shall be commenced within four months after the offence committed.

II. Concerning the Shipping of Butter and Cheese for London.

By stat. 4 Will. III. c. 7, s. 4, “every warehouse-keeper, weigher, searcher, or shipper of butter and cheese, shall receive all butter and cheese that shall be brought to him for the London cheesemongers, and ship the same without undue preference; and shall have for his pains 2s. 6d. for every load; and if he shall make default, he shall, on conviction before one justice, on oath of one witness, or confession, forfeit for every firkin of butter 10s. and for every weigh of cheese 5s. half to the churchwardens and overseers for the use of the poor, and half to the informer, to be levied by the constable by distress and sale.”

Sect. 5. And he shall keep a book of entry of receiving and shipping the goods on pain of 2s. 6d. for every firkin of butter and weigh of cheese, to

(a) In a case which occurred, A. D. 1777, it was held, that an information qui tam upon the old act,§8 Geo. I. c. 27, for a fraud in weighing and packing butter, exhibited in the sheriff’s court, was removable into the Court of King’s Bench by writ of habeas corpus cum causâ. Hartley v. Hooker, Cons. 523.
Butter and Cheese.

be levied and applied in like manner; and for want of distress, to be committed till paid.

Sect. 6. A master of a ship refusing to take in butter or cheese, before he is full laden, (s. 8, except it be a cheesemonger's own ship sent for his own goods,) shall forfeit for every shilling of butter refused 5s. and for every weight of cheese 2s. 6d. to be levied and applied in like manner.

Sect. 10. Persons aggrieved by the determination of the justice may appeal to the next sessions, giving 20l. bond with one or more sureties to the party to pay costs (within a month after), if he is not relieved on his appeal.

Sect. 9. But this act shall not extend to any warehouse in Cheshire or Lancashire.

There are special directions in stat. 8 Geo. I. c. 27, concerning the selling of butter in the city of York, and stat. 17 Geo. II. c. 8, concerning the same in New Malton.

Form.

BE it remembered, that on, &c. at, &c. A. B. of &c. in the said county, [last to wit. $ bearer], cometh before me, J. P. Esquire, one of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, and on his oath giveth me, the said justice, to understand and be informed, that A. O. of &c. in the said county, farmer and seller of butter, within four months last past, that is to say, on, &c. st. &c. did pack for sale and sell to the said A. B. a quantity of butter, of the weight, of &c. pounds, in a tub and vessel, whereon the christian and surname of the said A. O. was no where branded with iron, or otherwise marked on the outside, [as the case may be], against the form of the statute in that case made and provided, whereby the said A. O. hath forfeited for his said offence the sum of 5l.; wherefore the said A. B. prays the judgment of me, the said justice, in the premises, and that the said A. O. may be summoned to appear before me, the said justice, to answer the same.

Sworn and exhibited before me.

J. P.

Conviction.

The act gives a form of conviction, see ante, 549.

Buttons.

[13 & 14 Car. II. c. 13; 4 Wil. III. c. 10; 10 Wil. III. c. 2; 8 Ann. c. 6; 4 Geo. I. c. 7; 7 Geo. I. st. 1, c. 12; 36 Geo. III. c. 60.]

Foreign buttons.

FOREIGN BUTTONS]—BY stat. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 13, s. 2; 4 Wil. III. c. 10, s. 2, no person shall sell or offer to sale, or import, any foreign bone, lace, cut work, embroidery, fringe, band strings, buttons, or needle-work, made of thread and silk, or either of them, or any foreign buttons whatsoever, on pain that he who shall offer them to sale shall forfeit the same and 50l., and the importer shall forfeit the same and 100l. half to the King and half to him that shall sue.

And by sect. 3 of both acts, on complaint and information given to a justice of the peace, at reasonable times, he shall issue his warrant to the constable to enter and search for such manufactures in the shops being open, or warehouses and dwellinghouses of such persons as shall be suspected, and to seize the same.

Wooden buttons.

WOODEN BUTTONS]—BY stat. 10 Wil. III. c. 2, no person shall make, sell, or set on, any buttons made of wood only, and turned in imitation of other buttons, on pain of 40s. a dozen, half to the King and half to him that shall sue in any court of record.
Buttons, (Cloth).

In R. v. Roberts, 1 Ld. Raym. 712, an information was exhibited against the defendant, for having made wooden buttons contrary to the statute. Upon trial, the jury found a special verdict, that all the button was of wood, but there was in it a shank of wire. And after argument, judgment was given for the King, namely, that this was a button of wood, notwithstanding the shank, which is no essential part of buttons; for buttons of silk and hair have no shanks.

Cloth Buttons.—By the said act, 10 Will. III. c. 2, no person shall make, sell, or set on, any buttons made of cloth, serge, drugget, frize, camlet, or other stuffs of which clothes are usually made, on pain of 40s. a dozen, half to the King, and half to him that shall sue in any court of record. (a)

And by stat. 8 Ann. c. 6, no tailor or other person shall make, sell, set on, use, or bind on any clothes, any buttons or button-holes, made of, or used, or bound with serge, drugget, frize, camlet, or other stuffs of which clothes are usually made; on pain of 5l. a dozen, half to the King and half to him that shall sue in any court of record; or on complaint to two justices, they may summon witnesses, and levy the penalty, and return the overplus, if any be; and if any person is aggrieved, he may appeal to the next sessions. (a)

But by this act no power is given to make distress. The next stat. is the 4 Geo. I. c. 7, whereby it is enacted as follows:—

No tailor or other person shall make, sell, set on, use, or bind on any clothes, any buttons or button-holes made of, or used, or bound with cloth, serge, drugget, frize, camlet, or any stuffs that clothes are usually made of (velvet excepted,) on pain of 40s. for every dozen of such buttons and button-holes, or in proportion for any lesser quantity, to be determined by one justice where the offence shall be discovered, or the offender shall inhabit, on oath of one witness, in three months after the offence committed; and to be distributed, (charges of conviction first deducted,) half to the informer and half to the poor of the parish or place where the offence shall be discovered; if not paid, (being lawfully demanded,) in fourteen days after conviction, the justice shall warrant to the constable where the offender dwells, or can be found, to levy it by distress and sale; and where no sufficient distress can be found, he shall be committed to the common gaol of the county or place where he shall be found, to be kept to hard labour for three calendar months.

Sect. 6. Persons aggrieved may appeal to the sessions, giving sufficient notice; and the determination in such sessions shall be final by any order or warrant made by any justice upon any such conviction, and the sessions may allow costs to the party aggrieved.

Sect. 9. Tailors or other persons, causing their apprentices or servants to make such clothes, shall themselves be subject to the penalties in this act contained.

Sect. 8. All such clothes, made with such buttons and button-holes, exposed to sale, shall be forfeited and seized to the uses in this act, to be recovered and disposed of as the other penalties.

And by stat. 7 Geo. I. st. 1, c. 12, no person shall use or wear on any clothes, (velvet excepted,) any such buttons or button-holes, on pain of 40s. for every dozen of such buttons or button-holes, or in proportion for every lesser quantity of such buttons and button-holes, on conviction by confession or oath of one witness; (b) and any justice of the peace, where the offence shall be committed, or the offender shall inhabit, shall, on complaint or information on oath of any credible person, in one month after the offence, summon the party, and on his appearance or contempt, examine the matter, and on due proof by confession, or oath of one witness, convict the offender, and

(a) These statutes are still in force, but do not appear to be much attended to.
(b) See form, post, 666.
Buttons, (Metal).

On refusal to pay when demanded, at the time appointed by the justice, cause the forfeiture by his warrant to be levied by distress and sale; the said penalties to be half to him on whose oath the party shall be convicted, and half to the poor of the parish where the offence shall be committed. And persons aggrieved may appeal to the next quarter sessions, giving eight days’ notice; and the judgment of the said sessions shall be final.

To him on whose oath the party shall be convicted—This is almost the only instance where a share of the penalty is given in express words, in a popular action, to the party on whose oath any person is convicted; and the contrary doctrine seems generally to prevail, that the defendant shall not be condemned upon the sole testimony of the plaintiff, swearing for his own interest. It is certainly against the common law, that such a person should be a witness at all; and therefore his right to give evidence in his own cause, and the power to convict the defendant upon that sole evidence, must depend on the express words of some statute.

Metal buttons.—The first and indeed the only act of parliament to regulate the manufacture of metal buttons, was passed in the year 1796, 36 Geo. III. c. 60. All the other statutes before mentioned were passed for employing and encouraging the consumption of raw silk and mohair yarn, see 7 Geo. I. st. 1, c. 12. At the time of passing the 36 Geo. III. the manufacture and sale of metal buttons had been for many years a great branch of trade in this kingdom, but the increase of the manufacture had been greatly impeded by the fraudulent practice of marking the buttons as “gilt” or “plated,” which, in fact, were not so, to the great injury of the purchaser and of the fair trader. This statute was therefore passed to regulate the sale of metal buttons, but the 20th section enacts it shall not extend to certain buttons.

The first section of this statute, 36 Geo. III. c. 60, enacts, that no person who shall order or apply for any metal buttons from any manufacturer or maker of buttons shall direct the words gilt or plated, or any other word, letter, figure, mark, or device indicating the quality, to be printed, cast, stamped, or marked in or upon any part of such buttons, or any word, letter, figure, mark, or device, whether the same do or do not indicate the quality, to be printed, &c. or marked in or upon the underside of such buttons, unless such person do at the same time order such buttons to be gilt with gold or plated with silver respectively; and no person shall procure or purchase any metal buttons not being so gilt or plated, having the words gilt or plated, or any other word, &c. or device printed, &c. or marked thereon, or any word, &c. printed, &c. on the underside, whether the same do or do not indicate the quality, knowing the same not to be so gilt and plated as aforesaid; on pain of forfeiting in every such case such buttons, and also 5l. for any quantity not exceeding twelve dozen, and if above, after the rate of 1l. for every twelve dozen.

Sect. 2. And no person shall print, cast, stamp, or mark, or cause to be so done, upon any part of any metal button, the words gilt or plated, or any other word, letter, figure, mark, or device, indicating the quality, or on the underside, whether the same do or do not indicate the quality, unless such buttons are before bona fide plated with silver, or afterwards gilt with gold, or destroyed before sold; and no person shall put or affix upon any such buttons having the words gilt or plated, or other words, &c. or device as aforesaid indicating the quality, on any part thereof, or on the underside, whether the same do or do not indicate the quality, any ornament whatsoever, unless those parts not covered thereby be bona fide plated or gilt before such ornament be put or affixed thereon. And no person shall put or pack, or cause to be put or packed for sale, upon any card, paper, or other substance, or sell or expose to sale, any metal buttons, not being gilt or plated as aforesaid, if the words gilt or plated, or any other word, &c. or device as aforesaid indicating the quality, be printed, &c. or marked thereon, or upon such card, (not being the pattern card,) paper, or other substance; or on the underside of such buttons, whether the same do or do not indicate the quality, knowing the same not to be so gilt or plated; on pain of forfeiting, in every such case, such buttons, and also 5l. for any quantity exceeding one dozen, and not exceeding twelve dozen; and if above twelve dozen, after the rate of 1l. for every twelve dozen.

A conviction upon this clause, charging that the defendants did the act "unlawfully and fraudulently, contrary to the form of the statute," is bad, without expressly charging that they did it "knowingly; and such defect is not cured by a proviso in the statute, that no conviction for any offence in the act should be set aside for want of form, or through the mistake of any fact, circumstance, or otherwise, provided the material facts alleged were proved; for this in effect requires all material facts to be alleged, and knowledge is a material fact to constitute such an offence. R. v. Jukes, 8 T. R. 536.

Sect. 3. And no person shall print, &c. or mark, or cause so to be done, in or upon any metal button, any word, letter, figure, mark, or device indicating the quality thereof, except the words gilt or plated; or shall pack or cause to be packed for sale in or upon any card (except the pattern card), paper, or other substance, or parcel; or offer or expose to sale, or cause to be sold or exposed to sale any metal buttons, having any word, &c. or device indicating the quality thereof, other than the words gilt or placed, printed, &c. or marked thereon; on pain of forfeiting such buttons, together with 5l. for any quantity exceeding one dozen, and not exceeding twelve dozen; and if exceeding twelve dozen, after the rate of 1l. for every twelve dozen.

Sect. 4. Provided, that nothing herein shall extend to inflict any fine, penalty, or punishment upon any person, who shall print, &c. or mark, or cause to be printed, &c. the words double gilt in or upon any metal buttons, or put, place, or pack for sale, in or upon any card (except the pattern card), paper, or other parcel, or expose to sale any such buttons, having the words double gilt thereon; provided continually from the time of gilding thereof gold shall remain put and equally spread upon the upper surface of the said buttons, exclusive of the edges, in the proportion of ten grains to such quantity of the said buttons, the upper surfaces of which, exclusive of the edges, shall be equal to the superficies of a circle twelve inches in diameter; or who shall print, &c. the words treble gilt in or upon any metal buttons, or put upon any card, &c. or expose to sale any metal buttons having the words treble gilt thereon, having fifteen grains to the like quantity of buttons as aforesaid, on the like superficies as aforesaid; any thing herein-before said to the contrary notwithstanding.

Except the pattern card.—The defendant was convicted upon the above statute, for unlawfully and fraudulently placing for sale upon certain cards and papers divers dozens of metal buttons, marked with the words double gilt and treble gilt, the same not being so gilt within the meaning of the statute; but the conviction did not negative the exception introduced in the clause, that the buttons had not been exposed to sale in this instance upon the pattern cards; wherefore the court quashed the conviction. R. v. Jukes, 8 T. R. 542.

Sect. 5. And if any person shall make out, send, or deliver, for, with, or in relation to, any metal buttons, any list, bill of parcels, or invoice expressing therein any other than the real quality of such buttons, knowing the same, he shall forfeit 20l.

Sect. 6. No persons shall knowingly intermix, or cause to be intermixed, any metal button or buttons that shall not be bond fide gilt or plated, upon any card (except pattern cards), paper, or other substance, whereon or wherein any metal button or buttons so gilt or plated shall be put, nor intermix the same in any other manner, on pain of forfeiting such buttons, and also 5l. for any quantity exceeding one dozen, and not exceeding twelve dozen; if exceeding twelve dozen, 1l. for every twelve dozen.

Sect. 7. And for the better ascertaining what shall be deemed a gilt or plated button, no metal buttons shall be deemed gilt buttons unless continually, from the time of gilding thereof, gold shall remain equally spread upon the upper surface thereof, exclusive of the edges, in the proportion of five grains to a superficialis of a circle twelve inches in diameter; and no metal buttons shall be deemed to be plated, unless the superficialis of the upper surface thereof be made of a plate of silver fixed upon copper, or a mixture thereof with other metals, previous to the same being rolled into sheets or fillets.

Sect. 8, 14, 15, and 16. One justice, where the offence is committed or the offender resides, may, by warrant, cause such metal buttons as shall be liable to forfeiture under this act to be seized, and to keep them in safe custody, for the purpose of producing the same in evidence upon any prosecution or action, and when no further necessary, such justices shall order such buttons to be destroyed. And two justices where any offender shall reside, or where any offence shall be committed, may hear and determine the same, who, on information or complaint, within three calendar months, shall summon the party accused and witnesses on each side, and examine into the facts, and on proof either by confession, or oath of one witness, shall give judgment for the pecuniary penalty with costs, to be allowed by such justices, and shall levy the same by distress, and cause sale thereof, if not redeemed within five days inclusive of the day of seizure; half to the informer or person suing and half to the poor, and for want of sufficient distress, shall commit such offender to gaol where the information shall be laid, for any time not exceeding three calendar months, unless such penalty and costs be sooner paid.

Sect. 9. If any person shall think himself aggrieved by the judgment of such justices, he may (on giving security with sufficient surety to the amount of such penalty and costs, together with such further costs as shall be awarded in case such judgment be affirmed,) appeal to the next sessions where such conviction shall be made, who may summon and examine witnesses, and hear and finally determine the same, and award costs as they shall think reasonable.

Sect. 10. Provided that the said justices, and also such sessions, may mitigate any such penalty, so as not to reduce the same below one half; or where such penalties shall be less than 40l. below 20l.

Sect. 11 & 12. And the conviction may be in the following form (mutatis mutandis), as the case may be, which shall be effectual without stating the case, or the facts, or the evidence, in any particular manner.

BE it remembered, that on the day of , in the year of our Lord , at , in the county of , A. I. came before us J. P. and K. B., two of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, [city, or place, as the case be,] and informed us that A. O. of , on the day of , new last past, at , in the said county [city, or place, as the case may be,] [here set forth the fact for which the information is laid]: Wherupon the said A. O., after being duly summoned to answer the said charge, appeared before us on the day of , at , in the said county [city, or place,] and having heard the charge contained in the said information, declared he was not guilty of the said offence [or as the case may be, did not appear before us pursuant to the said summons]: [or did neglect and refuse to make any defence against the said charge:] but the same being fully proved before us upon the oath of A. W., a credible witness, [or as the case may be,] acknowledged and voluntarily confessed the same to be true; and it manifestly appeared to us that the said A. O. is guilty of the offence charged upon him in the said information; we do therefore hereby convict him of the offence aforesaid, and do declare and adjudge that he the said A. O. hath forfeited the said buttons, together with the sum of lawful money of Great Britain, for the offence aforesaid, to be distributed as the law directs, according to the form of the statute in that case made and provided. Given under our hands and seals the day of .

And no such conviction shall be set aside for want of form, or through the mistake of any fact, circumstance, or other matter whatsoever, provided the material facts alleged in the conviction be proved to the satisfaction of the said court.

Sect. 13. Witnesses not appearing, having been duly summoned, without reasonable excuse, to be allowed by such justices, or refusing to be examined on oath, shall forfeit 5l.

Sect. 17. Any person may be a witness notwithstanding his being an inhabitant of the parish or place where the offence shall be committed.
Sect. 18. And if any person liable to any of the penalties aforesaid shall, before information against him, discover to two justices the person by whose order he did the act which subjected him to such penalty, so as such person be convicted thereof, he shall not be liable to the penalty, but shall be entitled to a moiety of the penalty as other informers.

Sect. 19. Provided also, that if any maker of buttons, who shall have ordered any metal buttons to be gilt, shall before the burning thereof appear before two justices, and prove by one witness that he ordered the said buttons to be gilt in manner required by this act, and delivered gold sufficient for that purpose, or paid or contracted to pay a proper sum in that behalf, and shall afterwards prosecute such gilder or other person to conviction, he shall not be liable to any fine, forfeiture, penalty, or punishment, on account of the said buttons not being gilt with gold; any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

Sect. 20. Provided also, that this act shall not extend to buttons made of gold, silver, tin, pewter, lead, or mixtures of tin and lead, or iron tinned, or of Bath or white metal, or any of these metals inlaid with steel, or buttons plated upon shells.

Sect. 15. No information shall be exhibited, or action brought, unless within three calendar months after the offence committed.

Sect. 21. Every suit or action commenced against any person for what he may do in pursuance of this act shall be commenced within six calendar months.

---

Forms.

(No. 1.)

County of BE it remembered, that on the day of , in the year of our Lord , in the said county, A. B. of the town of to wit, J. P. Esquire, one of his Majesty’s justices of the peace in and for the said county, and being first duly sworn before me, the said justice, upon his corporal oath, as well for himself as for the poor of the said parish of , gave me, the said justice, to understand and be informed, that A. O. of the parish of , within one month now past, to wit, on the day of , at the parish of , in the county aforesaid, [one dozen of coat buttons bound with cloth] then and there unlawfully and against the form of the statute did use and wear, [or as the case may be] whereby the said A. O. for his offence aforesaid, hath forfeited the sum of 40s. of lawful money of Great Britain; and the said A. B. prayed the judgment of me, the said justice, in the premises, and that the said A. O. may be summoned to appear before me, the said justice, to answer the same, and that such proceedings may thereupon be had as the statute in this behalf made and provided doth direct.

(Signed) A. B.

Exhibited before me on the oath of the said A. B., the informer the day and year first above written.

(No. 2.)

See form of conviction, ante, 554, and see the forms in Paley on Convictions.

---

Buying of Titles.

(a)

I. By the Common Law, 556.

II. By Statute, 556.

[13 Edw. 1. c. 49; 32 Hen. VIII. c. 9; 31 Eliz. c. 5.]

The doctrines of maintenance, champerty, and buying of titles are become in a great measure obsolete as a matter of criminal laws, and very seldom come into notice as affecting the validity of contracts. See 1 Chit. Col. Stat. 130, n.
Buying of Titles.

I. By the Common Law.

It seemeth to be a high offence at common law to buy or sell any doubtful title to lands known to be disputed, to the intent that the buyer may carry on the suit, which the seller doth not think it worth his while to do, and on that consideration sells his pretensions at an under rate: and it seemeth not to be material whether the title so sold be a good or bad one, or whether the seller were in possession or not, unless his possession were lawful and uncontested; for all practices of this kind are by all means to be discountenanced, as manifestly tending to oppression, by giving opportunities to great men to purchase the disputed titles of others, to the great grievance of the adverse parties, who may often be unable or discouraged to defend their titles against such powerful persons, which perhaps they might safely enough maintain against their proper adversary. 1 Hanok. c. 86, s. 1.

II. By Statute.

13 Edw. I, c. 40. By stat. 13 Edw. I. c. 40, no person of the King's house shall buy any title whilst the thing is in dispute; on pain of both the buyer and seller being punished at the King's pleasure.

32 Hen. VIII, c. 9. And by stat. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 9, s. 2, 6, none shall buy any pretended right in any land, unless the seller hath been in possession of the same, or of the reversion or remainder thereof, or taken the rents and profits thereof, for one year next before; on pain that the seller shall forfeit the land, and the buyer the value, half to the King and half to him that shall sue within one year.

Pretended Right.—But he who is in lawful possession may purchase the pretended title of any others.

One year before.—But no conveyance made by one who hath the uncontested possession and undisputed absolute propriety of lands, is in any way within the meaning of this statute. 1 Hanok. c. 86, s. 15.

By stat. 31 Eliz. c. 5, s. 4, the offence of buying of titles may be laid in any county at the pleasure of the informer.

For other matters relating to buying of titles, see Maintenance, Vol. III.

Cables. See Cordage for Shipping, Vol. I.

Calendar.

See Almanac, ante, 128.

By sheriff.

The sheriff is to make a calendar of the prisoners in his gaol, and deliver it to the justices of gaol delivery, stating the prisoners and the crime for which they are detained in custody. 2 Hale, 123; see Suits, Vol. II.

By gaoler.

On the determination of the quarter session, the gaoler is required, on the second day afterwards, to transmit by the post to one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state a calendar, containing the names, the crimes, and the sentences of every prisoner tried at such session, under penalty of 20l. if he shall neglect or refuse to transmit such calendar, or shall wilfully transmit a calendar containing any false or imperfect statement. 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 20.
Cards and Dice.

As to calendar and lunar months, see post, pass, Vol. V.

Calico. See Excise, Vol. II.
Canbriis. See Linen, Vol. III.
Canals. See Rivers, Vol. V.
Candles. See Excise, Vol. II.
Capias. See ante, Arrest, Process, Vol. V.
Caption of Sessions. See Sessions, Vol. V.

Cards and Dice.

[9 Geo. IV. c. 18.]

By the second section of the 9 Geo. IV. c. 18, the duties for cards and dice are:

"For and upon every license to be taken out annually by every maker of playing cards or dice in the United Kingdom, the sum of five shillings:

And for and in respect of every pack of playing cards which shall be made fit for sale or use in the United Kingdom, the sum of one shilling:

And for and in respect of every pair of dice which shall be made fit for sale or use in the United Kingdom, the sum of twenty shillings."

These duties and all other the regulations respecting are under the commissioners of the stamp duties.

The only provision of the act which relates peculiarly to the jurisdiction of magistrates is contained in the 19th section, which enacts, "that whenever there shall be cause to suspect that any person shall make or cause to be made any playing cards or dice in any house or place whatsoever in any part of the United Kingdom, without license duly obtained as by this act required, upon affidavit being made of such suspicion by any person before any justice of the peace for the county or place where such cards or dice shall be or shall be suspected to be making or made, it shall and may be lawful for any officer employed by and acting under the commissioners of stamps, in the day-time, and in the presence of a constable or other lawful officer of the peace (who is hereby required to be aiding and assisting therein), by warrant from such justice of the peace before whom such affidavit shall be made, to be directed to such officer of stamps as aforesaid, which warrant the said justice of the peace is hereby authorised and required to grant, to break open the door or any part of such house or place in which any such cards or dice shall so as aforesaid be suspected to be so made or making, and thereupon to enter into such house or place, and to seize all cards or dice which shall be therein

Search warrant.
Carls and Dice.

Forgery, &c. of.

With respect to the forgery of cards and dice the 35th section of the act enacts, "that if any person shall forge or counterfeit, or shall cause or procure to be forged or counterfeited, any type, die, seal, stamp, mark, plate, or device, or any part of any type, die, seal, stamp, mark, plate, or device, which shall be at any time provided, made, or used, by or under the authority of the commissioners of stamps in pursuance of this act; or shall counterfeit, or shall cause or procure to be counterfeited or resembled, the impression of any such type, die, seal, stamp, mark, plate, or device, or any part thereof, upon any playing card or dice, or upon any label, thread, or paper; or shall forge or counterfeit the name, handwriting, or signature of any sealing officers, or other officer of stamps, to or upon any wrapper, paper, or material in which any dice shall be actually enclosed; or shall forge or counterfeit, or shall cause or procure to be forged or counterfeited, any mark or name, or any part of any mark or name, directed to be used by the commissioners of stamps in pursuance of this act, in order to distinguish the maker of any such cards or dice respectively, and printed or marked on or affixed to or making part of the wrapper, label, or paper in which any playing cards or dice shall be actually enclosed, with intent to defraud his Majesty, his heirs or successors, of any of the duties at any time by law payable upon cards or dice; or shall utter, or sell or expose to sale, or part with for use or play, any card, die, ace of spades, label, wrapper, or J ev whatsoever, with such counterfeit seal, stamp, mark, device, impression, name, or signature, knowing the same to be counterfeit; or shall privately or fraudulently use any seal, stamp, mark, plate, device, or label at any time provided, made, or used by or under the authority of the commissioners of stamps in pursuance of this act, with intent to defraud his Majesty, his heirs and successors, of any of the duties at any time by law payable upon cards or dice; every person convicted of any such offence in due form of law shall be adjudged a felon, and shall suffer death."

But by 1 Will. IV. c. 68, the punishment of death for this offence is abolished, and the offender is subjected to transportation or imprisonment. See Forgery, Vol. II.

As to gaming, see Gaming, Vol. II.; Disorderly House, post, Vol. I.

Carnal Knowledge. See Rape, Vol. V.

Carriers.

In prior editions of this work some law relating to the rights and liabilities of carriers in a civil point of view, is loosely collected; but as this work is intended only for the use of justices of the peace and parish officers, and those who have to consult only the criminal branch of our laws, it is deemed as to omit such matters as irrelevant.

An important act was passed during the last session, viz. 1 Will. IV. c. 68, protecting mail coach contractors, stage coach proprietors, and other common carriers for hire, against the loss of or injury to certain parcels or packages delivered to them for conveyance or custody, the value and contents of which shall not be declared to them by the owners thereof.
Carriers.

Rates for Carriage and Portage of Goods.

Rates for Carriage of Goods—The stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 39, after reciting the 24th section of 2 Will. & M. c. 12, and the 3d section of the stat. 21 Geo. II. c. 28, which empower magistrates at the quarter sessions to fix rates of carriage and impose penalties on persons taking other rates, (which enactments are set out in prior editions of this work, tit. Carriers,) enacts, "that the same shall be repealed," and also "any other powers or provisions in the said recited acts contained, which relate to the setting the rates of the carriage of goods."

There is nothing unreasonable in a carrier requiring a greater sum, when he carries goods of greater value, for he is to be paid not only for his labour in carrying, but for the risk which he runs, which is greater in proportion to the value of the goods. I would not, however, have it understood that carriers are at liberty by law to charge whatever they please: a carrier is liable by law to carry every thing which is brought to him, for a reasonable sum to be paid for the same carriage, and not to extort what he will. Per Lawrence, J. Harris v. Packwood, 3 Taunt. 272.

London Porterage Act.—There are various regulations contained in the act of 30 Geo. III. c. iviii. as to the rates for portage and the delivery of goods by carriers and innkeepers within London and Westminster, the borough of Southwark and places adjacent, which, though local, yet as they concern so large a portion of the magistracy and public, it is thought fit here to notice.

The act is only cumulative in its provisions, and does not take away the modes of punishing offences (therein mentioned) which existed previously to the passing of the act, and therefore it was held in R. v. Douglas, 1 Campb. 212, that a person might be indicted on 30 Geo. II. c. 24, for obtaining by false pretences a larger sum than he was entitled to.

By the first section of the act, after reciting "whereas great exactions and abuses are daily practised in the portage or delivery of boxes, baskets, packages, parcels, trusses, game, and other things, within the cities of London and Westminster, and the borough of Southwark, and the suburbs and liberties thereof respectively, and other parts contiguous thereto, brought by stage waggons, carts, public stage coaches, or carriages: and whereas the laws now in being are insufficient for the prevention of such exactions and abuses: it is hereby declared, "that from and after the 9th day of July, 1790, no innkeeper, warehousekeeper, or other person, to whom any box, basket, package, parcel, truss, game, or other thing whatsoever, not exceeding fifty-six pounds weight, is brought by any stage waggons or cart, or any public stage coach or carriage, or any porter or other person employed by such innkeeper, warehousekeeper, or other person, in the portage or delivery of any such box, basket, package, parcel, truss, game, or other thing within the cities of London and Westminster, and the borough of Southwark, and the suburbs and liberties thereof respectively, and other parts contiguous thereto, not exceeding the distance of half a mile from the end of the carriage pavement in the several streets and places within the said cities, borough, and liberties, shall ask or demand, or receive or take, in respect of such portage or delivery, any greater rate or price than the several rates or prices herein-after mentioned; (that is to say,)

"For any distance not exceeding a quarter of a mile, the sum of three pence:

"For any greater distance than a quarter of a mile, but not exceeding half a mile, the sum of four pence:

"For any greater distance than half a mile, but not exceeding one mile, the sum of six pence:

"For any greater distance than one mile, but not exceeding one mile and a half, the sum of eight pence:
Carriers.

"For any greater distance than one mile and a half, but not exceeding two miles, the sum of ten pence; and so in like manner the additional sum of three pence for every further distance not exceeding half a mile."

Sect. 2. "That if any porter or other person employed in the porterage or delivery of such boxes, baskets, packages, parcels, trusses, game, or other things as aforesaid, shall ask or demand, or receive or take, of and from any person or persons in respect of such porterage or delivery, any greater sum or sums than the rates or prices herein before fixed in that behalf, such porter or other persons shall for every such offence forfeit a sum not exceeding twenty shillings, nor less than five shillings."

Sect. 3. "That before any such box, basket, packet, package, parcel, trunk, game, or other thing whatsoever is sent from the inn, warehouse, or other place to which the same is brought or conveyed, there shall be made out and given to the porter or other person employed in the delivery thereof, a card or ticket, whereon shall be distinctly printed, written, or marked the name and description of the inn, warehouse, or other place from whence the same is sent, and the sum due for the carriage thereof, and also the sum due for the porterage or delivery thereof, according to the rates and prices aforesaid, and the Christian name and surname of the porter or other person employed in such delivery, which card or ticket shall be delivered by the porter or other person employed as aforesaid, at the same time, and together with such box, basket, packet, package, parcel, trunk, game, or other thing; and if any such box, basket, or other article shall be sent from any inn, warehouse, or other place without such card or ticket as aforesaid, every such innkeeper, warehousekeeper, or other person, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding forty shillings, nor less than five shillings; and any porter or other person employed in the delivery of any such box, basket, or other article, who shall not at the time of such delivery leave therewith such card or ticket aforesaid, or who shall willfully alter, obliterate, or deface any thing written, or expressed thereon, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of forty shillings; and if any such porter or other person shall, upon the delivery of such box, basket, or other article, ask or demand, or take or receive any larger sum for the carriage of such article than is written or expressed as aforesaid, every such porter or other person shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of twenty shillings."

Sect. 4. "That every box, basket, package, parcel, trunk, game, or other thing, brought to any inn, warehouse, or other place, by any public stage coach or carriage, other than stage waggons, for the purpose of delivery within the limits aforesaid, (except where the same shall be directed to be left till called for,) shall be delivered according to the direction thereof within six hours after the arrival of any such box, basket, or other article at such inn, warehouse, or other place, unless such arrival shall be between the hours of four in the evening and seven in the morning, and in that case every such delivery shall be made within six hours after such hour in the morning, and in default thereof every innkeeper, warehousekeeper, or other person, to whose inn, warehouse, or other place such box, basket, or other article shall be brought as aforesaid, shall forfeit and pay for every such offence any sum not exceeding twenty shillings, nor less than ten shillings."

Sect. 5. "That every box, basket, package, parcel, trunk, game, or other thing brought to any inn, warehouse, or other place, by any public stage wagon for the purpose of delivery within the limits aforesaid, (except where the same shall be directed to be left till called for,) shall be delivered according to the direction thereof within twenty-four hours after the arrival of any such box, basket, or other article at such inn, warehouse, or other place, and in default thereof every innkeeper, warehousekeeper, or other person, to whose inn, warehouse, or other place such box, basket, or other article shall be brought as aforesaid, shall forfeit and pay for every such offence any sum not exceeding twenty shillings, nor less than ten shillings."

Sect. 6. "That every such box, basket, package, parcel, trunk, game, other thing brought to such inn, warehouse, or other place as aforesaid, which shall be directed to be left till called for, shall, upon the demand of the person properly authorised to receive the same, be delivered to such person without any charge other than what is justly due for the carriage thereof, and the additional sum of two pence for the warehouse room thereof; and if the same be not delivered to such person upon such demand, or any charge other than as aforesaid be made or received in respect thereof, every innkeeper, warehousekeeper, or other person, to whose inn, warehouse, or other place such box, basket, or other article shall be brought as aforesaid, shall forfeit and pay for every such offence or overcharge any sum not exceeding twenty shillings, or less than ten shillings.”

Sect. 7. “That if such box, basket, or other article so directed to be left till called for be not sent for from such inn, warehouse, or other place before the end of one week after the same is brought to such inn, warehouse or other place, it shall be lawful to and for such innkeeper, warehousekeeper, or other person to charge and receive the further sum of one penny for the warehouse room thereof, and so in like manner if the same be not sent for before the end of the second or any subsequent week to charge the further sum of one penny weekly.”

Sect. 8. “That if any such box, basket, or other article brought to such inn, warehouse, or other place as aforesaid, which is not directed to be left till called for, shall, before the same is sent for delivery from such inn, warehouse, or other place, be demanded by any person properly authorised to receive the same, such box, basket, or other article shall be thereupon delivered to such person so demanding the same; and it shall in such case be lawful to and for such innkeeper, warehousekeeper, or other person, to charge and take the sum justly due for the carriage thereof, and also the sum of two pence for the warehouse room thereof; but if the same be not delivered to such person upon such demand, or any charge other than as aforesaid be made or received in respect thereof, every innkeeper, warehousekeeper, or other person, to whose inn, warehouse, or other place such box, basket, or other article shall be brought as aforesaid, shall forfeit and pay for every such offence any sum not exceeding twenty shillings, or less than ten shillings.”

Sect. 9. “And, for the preventing the misbehaviour of porters or other persons employed in the porterage or delivery of such boxes, baskets, packages, parcels, trusses, game, or other things as aforesaid, it is further enacted, “that upon complaint made of any non-delivery, neglect, misconduct, or misbehaviour in such employment to any justice of the peace within whose jurisdiction the offence has been committed, or the offender shall be or reside, it shall and may be lawful to and for such justice of the peace to grant a warrant to bring before him the person against whom such complaint shall be made, and upon proof, made upon oath, (which oath such justice is hereby empowered to administer,) of any such non-delivery, neglect, misconduct, or misbehaviour of such porter or other person, to impose a fine or penalty upon such porter or other person not exceeding the sum of twenty shillings, or less than five shillings.”

Sect. 10. “That if any person to whom such box, basket, package, parcel, truss, game, or other article as aforesaid shall be directed, shall, upon the delivery thereof, neglect or refuse to pay to the porter or other person employed to deliver the same the money justly due for the carriage thereof, and also due for the porterage or delivery thereof, according to the rates aforesaid, or for the warehouse room thereof, as the case may be, it shall and may be lawful to and for any justice of the peace within whose jurisdiction such neglect or refusal shall be made, or the person charged with such offence shall reside, upon complaint thereof made, to grant a warrant to bring before him the person against whom such complaint shall be made, and upon proof thereof, made upon oath, (which oath such justice is hereby empowered to administer,) to award reasonable satisfaction to the party grieved, for his damage and costs, and for his loss of time in recovering the same, and on non-payment of the sum so awarded, by warrant under his hand and seal, to levy the same by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender, Carriers.

rendering to such offender the overplus of such distress, if any there be, after deducting the charges of making the same.

Sect. 11. "That no person shall be prosecuted for any offence against this act, unless information of such offence be given to a justice of the peace within fourteen days next after the commission of such offence."

Sect. 12. "That nothing in this act shall extend, or be construed to extend, to authorise the employment of any porter or other person in the portage or delivery of parcels within the city of London contrary to the laws and usages of the said city."

Sect. 13. "And, for the speedy recovery of all and every the penalties and forfeitures which shall be incurred under this act, it is further enacted, "that it shall and may be lawful for any one or more justice or justices of the peace within whose jurisdiction any offence or offences against this act shall be committed, or the person charged with such offence shall reside, upon complaint or information to him or them made, to summon the party or parties accused, and also the witnesses on either side, to appear before him or them at a certain time or place in such summons to be specified, and upon the appearance of the party or parties accused, or in default of him, her, or their appearance according to such summons, (due proof being made of the service of such summons,) to proceed to hear and determine the matter in a summary way, and upon due proof made of the offence, either by the voluntary confession of the party or parties accused, or by the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, (which oath or oaths the said justice or justices is or are empowered to administer,) to convict the party or parties, and to award and adjudge the penalties imposed by this act to be paid by such offender or offenders, together with reasonable costs and charges attending such conviction, and upon non-payment of the sum so awarded, either immediately or at such time as the said justice or justices shall appoint, not exceeding seven days, such justice or justices before whom such conviction shall be had or are hereby empowered and authorised to issue his or their warrant for apprehending such offender; and in case such offender shall escape or go out of the jurisdiction of such justice or justices, it shall and may be lawful for any other justice of the peace of the county or place where such offender shall be found, by indorsement of such warrant, to authorise the execution thereof within the jurisdiction of such justice, and the justice or justices who granted such warrant may, upon the offender being brought before him or them, commit such offender to some public prison or house of correction of the city, county, or place in which such offence shall have been committed, or such offender shall have resided, there to remain without bail or mainprise for any term not exceeding one calendar month, or less than fourteen days from the day of every such commitment, unless such offender shall sooner pay the sum to be mentioned in every such warrant of commitment."

Sect. 14. "That if any person or persons shall be summoned as a witness or witnesses to give evidence before any such justice or justices of the peace touching any matter contained in this act, and shall have had a reasonable sum of money paid or tendered to him for his loss of time and expenses, and shall neglect or refuse to appear at the time and place for that purpose appointed, without a reasonable excuse for such his or their neglect or refusal, to be allowed of by such justice or justices, every such person shall forfeit or pay for every such offence any sum not exceeding forty shillings, nor less than twenty shillings, to be levied and paid in such manner and by such means as herein before directed with respect to other penalties; and if any person or persons summoned as a witness or witnesses to give evidence as aforesaid shall appear at the time and place for that purpose appointed, but shall refuse to answer any lawful questions such justice or justices may think proper to put to him, such justice or justices may commit every such person to some prison or house of correction of the city, county, or place within the jurisdiction of such justice or justices, for any time not exceeding fourteen days from the time of every such commitment."

Sect. 15. "That the justice or justices of the peace before whom any offender shall be convicted as aforesaid shall cause the said conviction to be made out in the following form of words, or any form of words to the same effect; (that is to say),
Carriers.

BE it remembered, that on this day of [as the case may be] for the said A. B. on the day of [as the case may be] for the said A. B. on the day of now last past, did, contrary to the statute in that case made and provided [here state the offence against the act]; and I [or we] do declare and adjudge, that the said A. B. hath forfeited the sum of lawful money of Great Britain for the offence aforesaid. Given under my hand and seal, [or our hands and seals], the day and year aforesaid.

And the said justice or justices before whom such conviction shall be had shall certify the same to the next general or quarter sessions of the peace to be held for the city, county, liberty, or place wherein such conviction was had, to be filed and kept amongst the records of the said general or quarter sessions, and such conviction shall be good and valid in the law to all intents and purposes, and shall not be quashed, set aside, or judged void or insufficient for want of form only, and shall not be liable to be removed by certiorari into his Majesty's Court of King's Bench, but shall be deemed and taken to be final to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

Sect. 16. "That all and every person and persons who shall think him, her, or themselves aggrieved by the judgment or determination of any such justice or justices as aforesaid, may appeal to the justices of the peace for the city, liberty, county, or place where such judgment shall be given, at their next general or general quarter sessions of the peace; unless such next general or general quarter sessions of the peace shall happen to be held within six days next after any such conviction, and in such case such person or persons may appeal to the second general or general quarter sessions of the peace which shall be held for any such city, liberty, county, or place next after any such conviction, but no such appeal shall be received, heard, or determined unless the appellant or appellants shall first enter into a recognizance with two sufficient sureties, before such justice or justices so convicting as aforesaid, in the sum of ten pounds each, to appear and prosecute every such appeal with effect; and the justices of the peace at such general or general quarter sessions of the peace are hereby authorised and required, on every such appeal being made, and on reasonable notice thereof given to the other party, finally to hear and determine the matter of every such appeal, and to make such order and to award such costs therein as they in their discretion shall see meet, and which said order and determination shall be final and conclusive to all parties, and no certiorari shall be allowed to remove any such proceedings or determination."

Sect. 17. "That one moiety of the penalties by this act imposed shall, when recovered, go and be paid to the person or persons who shall prosecute to conviction any such offender or offenders, and the other moiety to the poor of the parish in which the offence shall be committed."

Sect. 18. "That no person shall be sued or prosecuted for any thing done in pursuance and in execution of this act after the expiration of six months from the time when the offence was committed, and every such suit or prosecution shall be brought in the city, county, or place where such offence shall have been committed, and not elsewhere; and every person so sued shall and may plead the general issue, (not guilty,) and may give this act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon; and if a verdict shall be found for the defendant or defendants, or if the plaintiff shall become nonsuit or discontinue his action after the defendant shall have appeared, or if judgment shall be given upon a demurrer against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, the defendant or defendants in every such action shall receive double costs, and have the like remedy for the same as defendants have in other cases for the recovery of their costs."

Sect. 19. "That this act shall be deemed and taken to be a public act, and shall be judicially taken notice of as such by all judges, justices and other persons whomssoever, without specially pleading the same."
Carriers.

TRAVELLING ON A SUNDAY.

By stat. 3 Car. I. c. 1, no carrier with any horse or horses, nor waggon-man, carman, or wainman, with their respective carriages, shall, by themselves or any other, travel on the Lord's Day, on pain of 20l. on conviction in six months, before one justice, (or mayor,) on view or confession, or oath of two witnesses, to be levied by the constable or churchwardens by distress, to the use of the poor, except that the justice may reward the informer with any sum not exceeding a third part.

The driver of a van travelling to and from London and York is a carrier within the meaning of stat. 3 Car. I. and liable to be stopped and convicted in the penalty of 20l. for travelling on the Lord's Day. Exparte Middleton, 3 B. & Cres. 164; 4 D. & R. 824, S. C.

See further and for forms, post, Lord's Day, Vol. III.

CARRYING, &c. GAME.

As to this offence, see post, Game, Vol. II.

PAINTING NAME, &c. ON CART.

By stat. 13 Geo. III. c. 78, s. 59, the owner of every waggon, wain, or cart, shall cause to be painted on some conspicuous part thereof his Christian and surname and place of abode in large legible letters, and continue the same thereupon; and the owner of every common stage-waggon or cart, employed as travelling stages from town to town, shall, besides, paint Common Stage Waggon or Cart, (as the case may be,) on pain of forfeiting not exceeding 5l. nor less than 20l. See Highways, Vol. III. p. 64, and form, id. p. 106.

See also the 50 Geo. III. c. 48, s. 7, and 9 Geo. IV. c. 40, s. 14, as to stage coaches, post, Stage Coaches, Vol. V.

LARCENY BY OR FROM CARRIER.

It hath been holden that a carrier embezzling goods, which he has received to carry to a certain place, is not guilty of felony, because there was not a felonious taking; but is liable only to a civil action. 1 Hawk. c. 33, s. 3, 5.

But it hath been resolved that if a carrier open a pack, and take out part of the goods, with intent to steal it, he may be guilty of felony; in which case it may be said, not only that such possession of a part distinct from the whole was gained by wrong, and not delivered by the owner, but also that it was obtained basely, fraudulently and clandestinely, in hopes to prevent its being discovered at all, or fixed upon any one when discovered. 1 Hawk. c. 33, s. 5.

Also it hath been resolved if goods be delivered to a carrier, to be carried to a certain place, and he carries them to another place, and disposeth of them to his own use, that this is felony; because this declareth that his intention originally was not to take the goods upon the agreement and contract of the party, but only with a design of stealing them. Kel. 81, 82.

Where the prosecutor had sent forty sacks of wheat to the prisoner, a warehouseman and wharfinger, for safe custody, and the prisoner emptied several sacks of the wheat contained in them, which he sold, and then substituted for it other wheat of an inferior quality; it was doubted at first whether, as the prisoner had appropriated to his own use the whole of the wheat in each of the sacks which he had emptied, he could be deemed guilty of larceny; but upon the question being referred to the judges, they were unanimously of opinion that taking the whole of the wheat out of a sack was as much larceny as the taking of a part merely; and the prisoner had judgment accordingly. R. v. Bruzer, R. & R. C. C. 337; post, Vol. III. p. 518, 528.
Carriers.

65

Carriers.

Upon an indictment against the captain of a ship for larceny, it appeared that the ship, laden with casks of butter, and bound from Waterford to Newhaven, put into Cowes on her way, through stress of weather; most of the casks were stove in the hold, and battened down, but some were on deck; the prisoner had thirteen of them on deck landed at Cowes, pretending they were his own property; and when he arrived at Newhaven, he informed the consignees that these casks had been thrown overboard: the judges held that this was not larceny; but it seemed to be admitted at the trial, that if the prisoner had broken bulk by taking the thirteen casks from those which were battened down, he must have been convicted. R. v. Edward Madox, Ross. & Ry. 92; post, Vol. III. p. 528.

This rule as to carriers and other bailees, however, does not extend to their servants: if the servant of a carrier convert the property entrusted to him to his own use, he will be guilty of larceny, even in cases where a conversion by his master would be merely a breach of trust. Upon an indictment for stealing a quantity of barilla, it appeared that the prosecutors employed one Bryant, a master-carman, to cart some barilla for them from the London Docks, and Bryant sent Harding his carter for it: Harding, in collusion with others, whilst on his way from the docks with a cart-load of the barilla, allowed the others to take away the whole of it, together with the cart, horses, &c.: some doubt being entertained whether, as the barilla was delivered to Harding to carry, he could be deemed guilty of larceny in converting it to his use, the question was submitted to the judges; but they were unanimously of opinion that this was larceny in the servant, and that it was immaterial whether the barilla was stated to be the property of the prosecutors or of Bryant. R. v. Harding and others, R. & R. 125; and see further, post, Larrey, Vol. III. p. 528.

Where goods are stolen from the carrier, he may prefer an indictment against the felon, as for his own goods; for though he has not the absolute property, yet he has such a possessory property that he may maintain an action of trespass against any one who takes them from him, and so may indicted a thief for taking them; and the indictment will be good also, if it charge that the goods are the property of the real owner. Kel. 39.

There is a special case, wherein it is said, that a man may commit larceny by stealing his own goods delivered to the carrier, with intent to make him answer for them; for the carrier had a special kind of property in the goods, in respect whereof, if a stranger had stolen them, he might have been indicted generally, as having stolen the said carrier’s goods; and the injury is altogether as great, and the fraud as base, where they are taken away by the very owner. 1 Hawk. c. 34, s. 30.

Where goods are delivered to a carrier, and he is robbed of them, he shall be charged and answer for them, by reason of the hire: this was at the common law, before the hundred was answerable over to him; because such robbery might be by consent and combination carried on in such a manner that no proof could be had of it. Lane v. Cotton, 1 Salk. 143.

And although it may be thought a hard case that a poor carrier who is robbed on the road, without any manner of default in him, should be answerable for all the goods he takes, yet the inconvenience would be far more intolerable if he were not so; for it would be in his power to combine with robbers, or to pretend a robbery, or some other accident, without a possibility of remedy to the party; and the law will not expose him to so great a temptation, but he must be honest at his peril. S. C. 12 Mod. 482. See the case of Latham v. Stanbury, 3 Stark. C. N. P. 143; post, Larrey, Vol. III.
Cattle

Carts. See Taxes, Vol. V.

Casual Death. See Deed, post.

Catholics. See Papists, Vol. V.

---

Cattle

I. Importation of Cattle into England, 566.
6 Geo. IV. c. 105.

II. Buying and selling &c. Cattle, 566.

III. Killing or Maiming Cattle, 567.
7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 16.

IV. Stealing of Cattle, 569. See Larum, Vol. III.
7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29.

V. Ill-treatment of Cattle, 569.
8 Geo. IV. c. 71.

VI. Slaughtering Horses, and some particular Offences relating to them. See Horses, Vol. III.

---

I. Importation of Cattle into England.

The Stat. 9 Geo. III. c. 39, s. 10, relative to the import of foreign hides, is repealed by the 6 Geo. IV. c. 105. See post, Grist and Customs, Vol. II.

The 5 Geo. III. c. 43, s. 11, relative to the importation of cattle from the Isle of Man, and the 5 Geo. III. c. 10, made perpetual by the 16 Geo. III. c. 9, relative to the importation of cattle from Ireland, are repealed by the 6 Geo. IV. c. 105. See post, Grist and Customs, Vol. II.

By the sixth article of the union with Scotland, no Scots cattle carried into England shall be liable to any other duties than those to which cattle of England are liable.

---

II. Buying and Selling, &c. of Cattle.

None shall buy and sell in the same market.

By stat. 3 & 4 Edw. VI. c. 19, and 3 Car. c. 4, s. 7 & 8, no person shall buy any ox, steer, ront, cow, heifer, or calf, and sell the same again alive in the same market or fair, on pain of forfeiting double value, half to the king, and half to him who shall sue. And the said stat. 3 & 4 Edw. VI. c. 19, is not repealed by stat. 12 Geo. III. c. 71, which repeals the general forestal-
III.]

Killing or Maiming of Cattle.

Killing or maiming of cattle.

III. Killing or Maiming of Cattle.

The stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 16, enacts, "that if any person shall unlawfully and maliciously kill, maim, or wound any cattle, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for life, or for any term not less than four years, or to be imprisoned (a) for any term not exceeding four years; and if a male, to be once, twice, or thrice publicly or privately whipped, (if the court shall so think fit,) in addition to such imprisonment."

See the general clauses affecting all the provisions of the act, post, Malicious Injuries to Property, Vol. III.

This provision is nearly a re-enactment of that part of the stat. 4 Geo. IV. c. 54, which relates to this offence, with an alteration of the term of imprisonment, and a change of the words "unlawfully and maliciously," to "unlawfully and maliciously," and omitting the words after the word cattle, "whether from malice conceived against the owner or otherwise," though this latter provision is re-enacted in the 25th section of the act.

The stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, repeals the 37 Hen. VIII. c. 6; 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 7; 9 Geo. I. c. 22, (the Black Act); and also the whole of the stat. 4 Geo. IV. c. 54, except so far as relates to threatening letters.

It is no offence at common law to maim a horse. Thus an indictment at common law charged that the prisoner "on the 23d of May, 33 Geo. III. with force and arms at, &c. one black gelding of the value of 30l. of the goods and chattels of William Collyer, then and there being, then and there unlawfully did maim, to the great damage of Collyer, and against the peace," &c. But upon reference to the judges after conviction, they all held that the indictment contained no indictable offence; for if the case were not within the Black Act, the fact in itself was only a trespass; for that the words vi et armis did not imply force sufficient to support an indictment. R. v. Ranger, 2 East's P. C. 1074. This, however, is now remedied by the above act; and see post, 569, as to cruelty to cattle.

Malice—To bring a case within the 9 Geo. I. the offender must have been actuated by malice against the owner of the animal, and not merely against the animal itself. See R. v. Pearce, 2 East's P. C. 1072; 1 Leach, 527, S. C.; R. v. Keen, 2 East's P. C. 1073; 1 Leach, 539, n. S. C.; R. v. Shepherd, 1 Leach, 539; 2 East's P. C. 1073, S. C.

And malice against the servant or relative of the owner was not within the act, (R. v. Austen, Russ. & Ry. C. C. 490); nor was malice against a stranger. Curtis v. Hundred of Godley, 3 B. & Cres. 248; 5 D. & R. 73, S. C.

But this would be otherwise under the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, the 25th section of which provides that the act shall apply to cases whether the offence were conceived against the owner of the property in respect of which it was committed or otherwise.

(a) Or imprisoned and kept to hard labour, sect. 27 of same act, post, Malicious Injuries to Property, Vol. III.
Cattle.

It is not necessary to give evidence of express malice, for this will be presumed till the contrary appears; 2 East's P. C. 1074; ante, 538. If it appear that the act was done purposely, the jury may thence presume that it was done maliciously. In Dawson's case, who was indicted for poisoning horses, in order to prevent them from running a race, defendant having betted against them, it was held that this intent was sufficient to bring the case within the act, and defendant was convicted and executed. See 3 Chit. C. L. 1087, n.

If, however, it appear on the evidence that the defendant was a servant to the prosecutor, and, in irritation, because his master would not let him have another horse to drive in a team, he committed the injury on the horse which he desired to have exchanged, he will not be deemed within the act. 1 Leach, 539.

Nor will a man who maims cattle to prevent their trespassing on an enclosure, id. in notis; 2 East's P. C. 1073.

Nature of cattle.

Description of Cattle]—Horses, mares, and colts, as well as oxen, &c. are within the meaning of the act, (Paty's case, 2 Bla. Rep. 721; 2 East's P. C. 1074); so are asses, (R. v. Whitney, R. & M. C. C. 3); so are pigs, (R. v. Chappell, R. & R. C. C. 77.)

Nature of injury to.

Nature of Maim or Wound]—Unless the maim or wound were mortal, it was not felony within the statute of Car. II. 2 East's P. C. 1076. But it is otherwise under the present act.

J. Haywood was tried on an indictment on the Black Act, (9 Geo. I. c. 3, s. 2), containing two counts; one for maliciously maiming, the other for maliciously wounding a gelding, against the statute, &c. It appeared that the prisoner had maliciously and with an intent to injure the prosecutor, driven a nail into the frog of the horse's foot, which had at the time rendered the horse useless to the owner; but at the trial the prosecutor said that the horse was likely to do well, and to be perfectly sound again in a short time. After conviction, judgment was respited upon a doubt whether the horse was likely to recover, and as the wound was not a permanent injury, the offence were within the statute. In Michaelmas Term, 1801, all the judges held the conviction right. The words of the stat. 9 Geo. I. c. 22, are, "shall unlawfully and maliciously kill, maim, or wound any cattle," &c. which word "wound" appears to be used as contradistinguishing from a permanent injury, such as maiming. R. v. Haywood, 2 East's P. C. 1076; R. & R. C. C. 16, S. C.

Injuring a sheep by setting a dog at it, is not a maiming or wounding within the act. R. v. Hughes, 2 C. &.P. C. N. P. 420; R. v. Chalkley, R. & R. C. C. 258.

Pouring acid into the eye of a mare, and thereby blinding her, is a maiming within the act. R. v. Ovens, R. & M. C. C. 205.

Indictment.

Indictment]—It is not necessary to aver that the animals are cattle, in order to bring them within the statute, (2 Bla. Rep. 738); but the indictment must state the species of cattle wounded or injured; to state that the prisoners wounded certain cattle is insufficient. R. v. Chalkley, Russ. & Ry. C. C. 258. If the statement be, that he maimed certain cattle, viz. a mare, there must be evidence that the animal maimed is of the description specified. Id.

On an indictment for maliciously killing two sheep, the property in them may be laid to be in the agister. R. v. Woodward, 2 East's P. C. 653.

As to the other points on indictments in general, post, Indictment, Vol. III.

Commitment on 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 39, s. 16, for killing or maiming cattle.
V. Ill-treatment of Cattle.

The stat. 3 Geo. IV. c. 71, intituled "An Act to prevent the cruel and improper treatment of cattle," sect. 1, after reciting that whereas it is expedient to prevent the cruel and improper treatment of horses, mares, geldings, mules, asses, cows, heifers, steers, oxen, sheep, and other cattle, enacts, "that if any person or persons shall wantonly and cruelly beat, abuse, or ill-treat any horse, mare, gelding, mule, ass, ox, cow, heifer, steer, sheep, or other cattle, and complaint on oath (b) thereof be made to any justice of the peace or other magistrate within whose jurisdiction such offence shall be committed, it shall be lawful for such justice of the peace or other magistrate to issue his summons or warrant, (c) at his discretion, to bring the party or parties so complained of before him, or any other justice of the peace or other magistrate of the county, city, or place within which such justice of the peace or other magistrate has jurisdiction, who shall examine upon oath any witness or witnesses who shall appear or be produced to give information touching such offence, (which oath the said justice of the peace or other magistrate is hereby authorised and required to administer); and if the party or parties accused shall be convicted (d) of any such offence, either by his, her, or their own confession, or upon such information as aforesaid, he, she, or they so convicted shall forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 5l. nor less than 10s. to his Majesty, his heirs, and successors; and if the person or persons so convicted shall refuse or not be able forthwith to pay the sum forfeited, every such offender shall, by warrant under the hand and seal of some justice or justices of the peace, or other magistrate within whose jurisdiction the person offending shall be convicted, be committed (e) to the house of correction or some other prison within the jurisdiction within which the offence shall have been committed, there to be kept without bail or mainprize for any time not exceeding three months."

Bull baiting is not punishable under the act, because bulls are not expressly mentioned therein. Ex parte Hill, 3 C. & P. 223; 1 Man. & Rytl. Mag. Ca. 105, S. C.

Sect. 2. "That no person shall suffer any punishment for any offence committed against this act, unless the prosecution for the same be commenced within ten days after the offence shall be committed; and that when any person shall suffer imprisonment pursuant to this act, for any offence contrary

---

(a) See stat. 21 Geo. III. c. 67, for preventing the mischiefs that arise from driving cattle within London and Westminster, and bills of mortality.
(b) See form, (No. 1), post.
(c) See form, (No. 2), post.
(d) See form, (No. 3), post.
(e) See form, (No. 4), post.
Cattle.

ILL-TREATMENT OF CATTLE.

3 Geo. 4, c. 71.
Proceedings not to be quashed for want of form.

Form of conviction.

“BE it remembered, that on the day of in the year of our Lord A. B. is convicted before me, one of his Majesty’s justices of the peace for [or mayor or other magistrate of] as the case may be] either by his own confession, or on the oath of one or more credible witnesses or witnesses, [as the case may be] by virtue of an act made in the third year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Fourth, intituled ‘An Act to prevent the cruel and improper treatment of cattle,’ [specifying the offence, and time and place where the same was committed, as the case may be] Given under my hand and seal, the day and year above written.”

Justices to order compensation to persons vexatiously complained against.

Limitation of actions.

Thereto, in default of payment of any penalty hereby imposed, such person shall not be liable afterwards to any such penalty.”

Sec. 3. “That no order or proceedings to be made or had by or before any justice of the peace or other magistrate by virtue of this act shall be quashed or vacated for want of form, and that the order of such justice or other magistrate shall be final; and that no proceedings of any such justice or other magistrate in pursuance of this act shall be removable by certiorari or otherwise.”

Sec. 4. “And for the more easy and speedy conviction of offenders under this act,” it is enacted, “that all and every the justice and justices of the peace, or other magistrate or magistrates, before whom any person or persons shall be convicted of any offence against this act, shall and may cause the conviction to be drawn up in the following form of words, or in any other form of words to the same effect, as the case shall happen; viz.

Sec. 5. “That if on hearing any such complaint as is hereinbefore mentioned, the justice of the peace or other magistrate who shall hear the same shall be of opinion that such complaint was frivolous or vexatious, then and in every such case it shall be lawful for such justice of the peace or other magistrate to order, adjudge, and direct the person or persons making such complaint to pay to the party complained of, any sum of money not exceeding the sum of twenty shillings, as compensation for the trouble and expense to which such party may have been put by such complaint; such order or adjournment to be final between the said parties, and the sum thereby ordered or adjudged to be paid and levied in manner as is hereinbefore provided for enforcing payment of the sums of money to be forfeited by the persons convicted of the offence hereinbefore mentioned.”

Sec. 6. “That if any action or suit shall be brought or commenced against any person or persons for any thing done in pursuance of this act, it shall be brought or commenced within six calendar months next after every such cause of action shall have accrued, and not afterwards, and shall be brought, laid, and tried in the county, city, or place in which such offence shall have been committed, and not elsewhere; and the defendant or defendants in such action or suit may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence at any trial or trials to be had thereon, and that the same was done in pursuance and by authority of this act; and if the same shall appear to have been so done, or if any such action or suit shall not be commenced within the time before limited, or shall be laid or brought in any other county, city, or place than where the offence shall have been committed, then and in any such case the jury or juries shall find for the defendant or defendants; or if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall become nonsuit, or shall discontinue his action or actions, or if judgment shall be given for the defendant or defendants therein, then and in any of the cases aforesaid such defendant or defendants shall have treble costs, and shall have such remedy for recovering the same as any defendant or defendants hath or may have for his, her, or their costs in any other cases by law.”

(No. 1.)

Information on 2 Geo. 4, c. 71, for ill-treatment of a horse, &c.

County of [THE information and complaint of A. I. of in the county of [g gentlemen]made on oath before me J. P. Esquire, one of his Majesty’s justices of the peace in and for the said county, the day of, yr. at, yr. who on his oath says that A. O. of in the said county, [labourers] within ten days next Forms.

Before the exhibiting of this information, to wit, on, &c. at, &c. in the said county, did wantonly and cruelly beat, abuse, and ill-treat a horse, [mare, gelding, mule, ox, cow, heifer, steer, sheep, or other cattle, as the case may be] the property of contrary to the statutes made in the third year of the reign of King George the Fourth, intituled "An Act to prevent the cruel and improper treatment of cattle," whereby he the said A. O. has forfeited the sum of (a) to his Majesty. Whereupon he the said A. O. prays the judgment of me the justice aforesaid in the premises. A. I. Before me, J. P.

(No. 2.)

County of To A. B. the constable of in the said county of and others whom this may concern.

WHEREAS information and complaint upon oath have been made before me J. P. Esquire, one of his Majesty’s justices of the peace in and for the said county, by A. I. of in the county aforesaid, [gentleman,] that within ten days next before, &c. [then set forth the offence as stated in the information verbatim]: these are therefore to require you to apprehend the said A. O. and bring him before me at in the said county, on the day of instant, at the hour of in the moon, to answer unto the said information and complaint, and to be further dealt with according to law. Hereon fail not. Given under my hand and seal the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and J. P. (L.S.)

(No. 3.)

The 3 Geo. IV. c. 71, s. 4, ante, 570, gives the form of conviction.

(No. 4.)

County of To the constable of in the said county, and to the keeper of the house of correction at in the said county.

WHEREAS A. O. of in the said county, [labourer,] is convicted before me J. P. Esquire, one of his Majesty’s justices of the peace in and for the said county, upon the oath of A. W. of in the county aforesaid, [gentleman,] a credible witness, [or upon his own confession, as the case may be,] for that the said A. O. on, &c. at, &c. in the said county, did [here state the offence as stated in the conviction,] whereby he the said A. O. has forfeited for his said offence the sum of [five pounds] to his Majesty, but which I have mitigated to (c) and which sum he the said A. O. refused to pay: these are therefore to require you the said constable to convey the said A. O. to the said house of correction at aforesaid, and deliver him to the said keeper thereof, together with this processe; and you the said keeper are hereby commanded to receive the said A. O. into your custody in the said house of correction, there to be kept without bail or mainprise for (d) unless the said sum so due to his Majesty shall be sooner paid. And for so doing this shall be your sufficient warrant. Given under my hand and seal the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and J. P.

Certificates of Justices and Proof by. See Evidence, Vol. II. p. 52; see also, ante, Attorney, p. 203; post, Physicians, and Parish Registers, Vol. V.

(a) Not exceeding 8l. nor less than be preferable in the first instance.

10s.

(c) Not less than 10s.

(b) In many cases a summons might (d) Not exceeding three months.
CERTIORARI.

Certiorari. (a)

I. What it is, and use of, 572.
II. What Proceedings Removable by, and when taken away by Statute, 572.
III. At whose instance Grantable, and on what Grounds, 574.
IV. Time of Applying for Writ, 576.
V. How to be Granted and Allowed, 578 to 581.
[5 W. & M. c. 11; 8 & 9 W. & M. c. 33; 5 Geo. II. c. 19; 13 Geo. III. c. 18.]
VI. Form and Requisites of Writ, 581.
VII. Effect of Writ, 582.
VIII. Return to it, 584.
IX. Quashing it, 585.
X. Subsequent Proceedings, 585.
XI. Costs of, 586 to 589.
XII. Forms, see List of, post, 590.

I. What it is.

A CERTIORARI is an original writ, issuing out of the court of chancery or the King's Bench, directed in the King's name to the judges or officers of inferior courts, commanding them to certify or to return the records of a cause depending before them, to the end that the party may have the more sure and speedy justice before the King or such justices as he shall assign to determine the cause. 1 Bac. Abr. Certiorari, A.; Com. Dig. Certiorari.

Also the justices of the peace may deliver or send into the King's Bench indictments found before them, or recognizances of the peace taken before them, or force recorded by them, without any certiorari. Dalh. c. 195.

If there be an indictment to be removed, and the defendant be in actual custody, it is usual to have an habeas corpus to remove the defendant, and a certiorari to remove the record, for without the former the defendant must continue in the same custody. 2 Hale, 210; 1 Comr. 285; 1 Salk. 149; post, Habeas Corpus, Vol. II.

The use of a certiorari is for the superior court to consider and determine the validity of appeals, indictments, or presentments, and the proceedings thereon, and to quash or confirm them as there may be cause; or to try indictments or presentments where it is surmised that a partial or insufficient trial will probably be had in the court below; or to plead the King's pardon; or to issue process of outlawry against an offender in those cases where the process of the inferior court will not reach him. 4 Bl. Com. 321.

No writ of error lies on summary convictions, and therefore this writ of certiorari is the only mode by which such revision can be obtained at common law.

II. What Proceedings removable by, and when taken away by Statute.

Except where a statute otherwise directs, (as in the case of stat. 30 Geo. II. c. 24.) a certiorari lies in all judicial proceedings in which a writ of error does not lie; and it is a consequence of all inferior jurisdictions erected by act of parliament to have their proceedings returnable in the King's Bench. 2 H. & C. 453; 580; R. v. justices of Cranbury, 3 D. & R. 35.

(a) As to the writ of certiorari in general, see 1 Chit. Cr. L. 371 to 402; 2 Hawk. c. 27; Bac. Ab. Certiorari; Com. Dig. Certiorari.

And therefore a certiorari lies to justices of the peace, even in such cases which they are empowered by statute finally to hear and determine; and the superintendency of the Court of King's Bench is not taken away without express words. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 23.

For the certiorari being a beneficial writ for the subject, cannot be taken away without express words. If, therefore, a statute, authorising a summary conviction before a magistrate, give an appeal to the sessions, who are directed to hear and finally determine the matter, it does not take away the certiorari, even after such an appeal made and determined. R. v. Jukes, 8 T. R. 542.

Although the Conventicle Act, (22 C. II. c. 1.) enacted that "no other court whatsoever should intermeddle with any causes of appeal upon that act; but that they should be finally determined in the quarter sessions only; yet it was decided that the Court of King's Bench was not ousted of its right by certiorari. R. v. Moreley, 2 Burr. 1040.

Also it was there said, that the words abovementioned only meant, that the facts should not be re-examined. Id.

Also that where a statute does not expressly take away a certiorari, and direct that no certiorari shall issue, the court will grant one. Id.

Even where a statute takes away a certiorari it does not extend to the crown. R. v. Anson, 2 Chit. Rep. 134; 5 T. R. 542.

Where the indictment was framed on an offence created by a statute taking away the certiorari contained also counts for another offence as to which it was not taken away, the writ was held issuable and granted. R. v. Saunders, 5 D. & R. 611.

And where by the words of a statute the certiorari is taken away, but by its general tenor is only done to give the option of appeal to the sessions, the right of proceeding by certiorari is only barred by the party adopting the method of appeal. R. v. Eaton, 2 T. R. 89; see post, 574.

A certiorari does not lie to remove other than judicial acts, therefore it does not lie to remove a mere order of court or warrant of a magistrate. R. v. Lloyd, Cald. 309; Say, 6.

A poor rate cannot be removed by certiorari. R. v. King, 2 T. R. 255; Doug. 116.

Or a recognizance. Leaft, 321.

All indictments and presentments are in general removable by this writ before they are tried. R. v. Rossell, Comp. 458, 369; R. v. Wadley, 4 M. & S. 508; R. v. Hube, 5 T. R. 542.

In the case of summary proceedings, orders, and convictions before magistrates, the proceedings may be removed by certiorari after judgment, because they can only be removed by certiorari; but where judgment has been given on an indictment, the record must be removed by writ of error. R. v. Seton, 7 T. R. 373; R. v. Penningoe, 1 B. & C. 142; 2 D. & R. 209, S. C.; post, 577.

But for some special cause an indictment may be removed after conviction, as where the judge is doubtful what judgment to give. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 31, and see further, post, 576, as to the time when the application for the writ should be made.

A rule has obtained in the King's Bench not to grant a certiorari to remove orders of justices from which appeals lie to the sessions, before the matter be determined on such appeals, because it would take away that privilege; but if the time for appealing be expired, the objection no longer exists; (Salk. 147;) and this rule only extends to abridge the authority of the court in cases where the right of appeal is limited to a particular time, as to the next quarter session; but where there is no restriction as to time, the rule does not apply, for otherwise the order could never be removed. Cald. 172.

Various acts of parliament take away the right to the writ of certiorari in different cases. They will be found under the particular titles in this work.
III. At whose instance Grantable, and on what Grounds.

It hath been adjudged, that wherever a certiorari is by law grantable for an indictment, the court is bound of right to award it at the instance of the prosecutor, because every indictment is the suit of the King, and he has a prerogative of suing in what court he pleases. But it seems to be agreed that it is left to the discretion of the court either to grant or deny it at the prayer of the defendant. R. v. Lewis and others, 4 Burr. 2456; 2 Hawk. c. 27, a. 27. And where the King’s name is only used by a private prosecutor a material distinction arises, for though the writ is usually awarded as a matter of course, even from the Old Bailey, it is in the power of the judges to refuse it or to award a procedendo, if cause be shown why it ought not to have been issued. See Cases in King’s Bench, 39; 4 Burr. 2458; 2 Burr. 753.

On a motion to remove by certiorari a conviction by a justice on stat. 16 Geo. III. c. 30, (a) to prevent the stealing of deer, it was objected that no certiorari lay; for by the 23d section it is enacted that no conviction or judgment should be removed by certiorari. But the court were of opinion, that the result of the several provisions in the act was, that the defendant had an option either to remove the proceedings from before the convicting justice by certiorari, or to appeal to the sessions; that if he had adopted the latter mode, the certiorari would have been barred, but not in the former case. Buller, J. The language of the court has always been, that the King has a right to remove proceedings by certiorari of course; but that where a defendant makes an application of this sort, he must always lay a ground for it before the court. Lord Mansfield, C. J. has laid down this distinction again and again, that on the part of the crown it is a matter of course for the court to grant it, but not so on the part of the defendant. And Buller, J. on a subsequent day said, that the rule requiring the defendant to lay a ground before the court for granting a certiorari had obtained since the time of Car. II., and that it appeared that it was then held as clear law, that a certiorari ought not to be granted in vacation, but in open court, and upon a ground shown. R. v. Eaton, 2 T. R. 89.

If one party have the exclusive right of appealing, he may waive his privilege and at once remove the proceedings. R. v. Harman, 11 Andr. 343.

When the prosecutor applies for or consents to the defendant’s application, it is generally granted as a matter of course. See R. v. Stennard, 4 T. R. 161, where the attorney-general moved for the defendant and the motion was granted as of course.

Where a person is by law the prosecutor of any case, he may authorise another to sue out a certiorari in his name. R. v. Penderyn, 2 T. R. 360.

Where there are several defendants, all should concur in the application on their or one of their behalves. R. v. Hunt and others, 2 Chit. Rep. 130.

In the exercise of their discretion on prosecutions by indictment the Court of King’s Bench seldom grant the writ of certiorari at the request of the defendant when the offence charged against him is serious, and particularly affecting the public.

(a) Now repealed by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27; see per, Gums, Vol. II.; Martens, Vol. III.
III.] At whose instance grantable, and on what Grounds.

Thus they generally refuse to remove an indictment for perjury, forgery, or any heinous misdemeanour, because the delay tends to discourage if not wholly to defeat the prosecution. 2 Hock. c. 27, s. 28; 1 Sid. 84; 2 Stra. 717; in murder, see 3 D. & R. 301.

So they are still more reluctant to grant these applications without the assent of the prosecutor when they are made to remove proceedings from a jurisdiction of superior eminence, as before justices of assize or gaol delivery, or from the Old Bailey, or from the Middlesex sessions, or any other court where any of the judges preside. R. v. Duchess of Kingston, Exp. 283; 1 Salk. 144; 1 Som. Ca. 314; Barr. 877, 1202; 1 Ken. Rep. 135; 1 Chit. C. L. 379.

But if it be shown that there is a probability of partiality or unfairness in the trial, the certiorari will in all cases be awarded. 2 Stra. 704; R. v. Fawle, 2 Id. Raym. 1452.

As if the prosecutor's attorney be under-sheriff and attended the grand jury at the time of finding the bill, or the like, the writ will be granted. 2 Stra. 1068; 1 Stra. 580; 1 Salk. 150.

It is not sufficient ground for the issuing of a certiorari that prejudices existed against the defendant, unless there was some prejudice in the court below. R. v. Matthews, 1 Chit. Rep. 751, n.

If the prosecution appear to rest on slight foundation, or if it be doubtful whether in point of law it be sustainable, and the defendant's general character be good; (1 Stra. 549; 1 Salk. 151;) or if the prosecution seem to originate in malice; (1 Barn. 141;) or where there has been vexations delays and harassing proceedings, or by reason of the absence of the judges, or otherwise, a trial has not been obtained; (2 Stra. 1049; Hardw. 370; 1 Chit. C. L. 380;) the court will allow a certiorari.

Where the defendant was a public officer, and his personal attendance daily necessary, the court granted a certiorari to remove the indictment to the county where the defendant resided. 1 Chit. Rep. 571, n.

In case of a nuisance, where it is necessary to the defence to have a view of the premises, the court will allow him a certiorari for the purpose, upon affidavit that he cannot otherwise obtain it. 1 Barn. 214; 1 Som. Ca. 180.

The court will not grant a certiorari on behalf of the defendant to remove an indictment from the sessions on an affidavit that it was an unusual proceeding, that he was advised that several matters of law of the greatest importance would arise upon the trial of the indictment, and that it was fit and proper it should be tried before persons learned in the law. R. v. Harrison, 1 Chit. Rep. 571.

In the case of convictions and other summary judicial proceedings, the same degree of discretion will be used before granting a certiorari for the defendant or private prosecutor, and the court will not grant the writ unless it be shown that some injustice has been or will be done in the inferior jurisdictions. R. v. Bass, 5 T. R. 252. Et per Lord Kenyon—A certiorari is not to be granted ex debito justiciae, but the application is made to the sound discretion of the court, which will not be well exercised, if they do not give an opportunity to the party applying for the writ to litigate any probable cause. Et per Ashhurst, J.—If it had appeared that the justices had exceeded their jurisdiction, the court would have granted a certiorari in order that the conviction might be quashed, even though no objection were made to the want of jurisdiction below. Id.

The court refused to grant a certiorari to remove a conviction under the 52 Geo. III. c. 93, for sporting without a certificate, on the ground that the jurisdiction does not appear on the face of the conviction without an affidavit negating the jurisdiction. R. v. Long, 1 M. & R. 139.

In general a mere informality in a conviction ought not of itself to be the inducement for removing it, but that inducement ought to be some substantial defect in the justice and legality of the proceeding itself.

In a case after conviction for selling with other than the Winchester bushel a certiorari was allowed, on the ground of the vendee having been rejected as an incompetent witness. R. v. ——, 2 Chit. Rep. 137.
TIME OF APPLYING FOR WRIT.

Where an appeal against an order of removal is adjourned on the ground of the justices being equally divided, the Court of King's Bench will not grant a certiorari for the purpose of quashing the order of removal and the order of adjournment upon affidavits showing that the apparent equality of votes was occasioned by the vote of a magistrate who was a rated inhabitant of the respondent parish and had joined in making the order of removal, on the ground that the Court of King's Bench has no jurisdiction to review the order even if erroneous. \( R. v. Uske, 2 M. \& R. 172; S. C. nom. R. v. Monmouthshire, 8 B. \& Crec. 137, 304. \)

The court refused to grant a certiorari in the first instance to remove an order for the appointment of overseers for the purpose of having it quashed on a suggestion that the justices made the appointment from corrupt and improper motives, the propriety of the appointment being matter of appeal to the sessions. \( R. v. Somersetshire, 1 D. \& R. 443. \)

IV. Time of applying for Writ.

On Indictments, &c.—In prosecutions by indictments and informations in the Crown Office, the application for the writ of certiorari should regularly be made before issue joined. \( 2 Haw. c. 27, \text{a. 10}. \)

In all cases the application should be made time enough for the trial to take place at the next holding of the court in which it is the object to have it heard. \( R. v. Perkins, 1 Chit. C. L. 2d edit. 381. \)

It seems agreed, that a certiorari shall never be granted to remove an indictment after conviction, unless for some special cause; as where the judge below is doubtful what judgment to give. \( 2 Haw. c. 27, \text{a. 31}; \text{n. d. 376}. \)

In \( R. v. Nickolls, 2 Stra. 1227, \) an indictment was removed into the Court of King's Bench by certiorari, after conviction, and before judgment. Upon which a doubt arose what the court could do, the certiorari being brought before judgment: and this court not being apprised of the circumstances of the offence, could not tell what judgment to give: and in Carth. 6, it is said, they cannot give judgment. A rule therefore was made to show cause why the certiorari should not be quashed, so as to remit it back to the sessions; which was afterwards made absolute.

And in \( R. v. Guynne and others, 2 Burr. 749, \) the court (on a defended motion) granted a procedendo, at the instance of the defendants, upon an indictment for an assault at the quarter sessions at Brecon, removed into the King's Bench by certiorari, because the certiorari had not issued till after the defendants had confessed the assault below; though the conviction was not after trial, and though several of the justices were sworn to be near relations of Mr. Guynne, one of the defendants, namely, his father, two brothers, and an uncle.

In \( R. v. D. Jackson, 6 T. R. 145, \) the defendant had been convicted at the quarter sessions upon an indictment for extortion, and then removed the indictment between verdict and judgment, and obtained a rule, calling upon the prosecutor to show cause why judgment should not be arrested for some objections to the indictment. And Lord Kenyon said, that the removing of proceedings in this stage from inferior jurisdictions ought to be discouraged; that in cases where the punishment is discretionary, and this court should be of opinion, after hearing the case argued, that the judgment ought not to be arrested, a procedendo must be awarded, and the party sent back again to the inferior jurisdiction, to receive judgment; that he thought the court should adopt the same mode in this instance; and that the defendant might bring a writ of error after judgment, if the record were erroneous.

This decision seems to have been confined to cases in which the judgment was discretionary, but if the verdict should be at the Midsummer sessions, after Trinity term, and the defendant come in, as he must, to receive judgment at the ensuing Michaelmas sessions, and the judgment be not discretionary, but definite by law, it is manifest that it might be a vexatious case, if a certiorari could not be issued between the verdict and judgment, inasmuch as it might happen, where imprisonment for a month or other certain period was the legal penalty, that before the certiorari could be sued out, the defendant might have suffered the greater portion of the judgment. Observations of Mr. King, editor of the 22d edition of Burn's Justice.

And in the above case of R. v. Seton, the certiorari which had issued before verdict was quashed, quia improvidè emanavit.

No certiorari will be granted to remove an indictment from sessions, for the purpose of having a new trial. R. v. Oxford, 13 East, 411. The defendants were indicted at the assizes, and found guilty of the non-repair of a public bridge. And afterwards a motion was made in the Court of King's Bench for a certiorari to remove thither the indictment and proceedings, for the purpose of moving for a new trial. But it was resolved by the court, that they had not the power of entering into the merits of verdicts, and granting new trials in proceedings before inferior jurisdictions; and they refused the certiorari.

The court will not grant a certiorari to remove an indictment from the quarter sessions after judgment has been pronounced in that court. R. v. Penwynog, Machynlleth, 1 B. & C. 142; 2 D. & R. 209; 3 D. & R. 388, S. C. In this case, a bill of indictment for not repairing a bridge had been found against the defendants at the quarter sessions for the county of Montgomery. At the trial a verdict was found for the crown, and judgment pronounced accordingly, that a fine be imposed upon the defendants. Sir William Owen now moved for a certiorari to remove the indictment into the King's Bench for the purpose of taking objections to it, and after stating that it was doubtful whether a certiorari ought to issue in this stage of the proceedings, he referred the court to The Queen v. Dixon, ante, 576; and R. v. Oxfordshire, supra, and R. v. Nicholls, ante, 576; where Lee, C. J. recognises the authority of The Queen v. Dixon, 1 Salk. 150; and he suggested that it would be hard upon the defendants to refuse this application, as the consequence would be, that they must have recourse to the more costly remedy of a writ of error. Per Curiam.—The defendants have thought proper to take the chance of succeeding at the sessions. They ought clearly to have applied for a certiorari before the trial, and it ought not to issue in this late stage of the proceedings. They can now avail themselves of objections to the indictment by writ of error only. Rule refused.

Where there has been a special verdict, even at the Old Bailey, it may be removed in order to be argued and more solemnly decided in the superior court. 2 Id. Raym. 1574; 2 Haw. c. 27, s. 31.

But in the case of R. v. Nichols, 13 East, 412, (notis), which was the case of an indictment for a conspiracy, Lee, C. J. said, he knew no instance of a special verdict from Hicks's Hall removed into the King's Bench, and that if a conviction were removed thither by certiorari, the court would not give judgment upon it.

It seems, however, that this is only so where the fine is uncertain. Id.

If the application be neglected until too late, the only course left to the party is a writ of error, under which, however, defects only apparent on the face of the indictment can be taken advantage of. See post, Error, Vol. II.

On Summary Proceedings]—In the case of summary proceedings, orders, and convictions before magistrates, the proceedings may be removed by certiorari after judgment, because they can only be removed by certiorari. R. v. Seton, 7 T. R. 373.

A rule was made in the Court of King's Bench, E. 1 Anne, Reg. Generalis, that no certiorari should be granted to remove orders of justices, from which the law has given an appeal to the sessions, before the matter be determined on the appeal, because it hinders the privilege of appealing; and if any order be removed before appeal, it shall be sent down again; but if the time of appeal be expired, the case is not within the rule. By Holt, C. J. But afterwards, M. 4 Anne, in the case of Shellington, it was held that ad.
Certiorari.

But in the case of the borough of Warwick, (2 Str. 991,) there was an appeal from a poor-rate, and the sessions made an order that the churchwardens should produce the books at an adjourned day; before which a certiorari was brought to remove that order: and it was held to lie, though the appeal was depending, else the order must be obeyed before the validity of it can be determined. It was also held that an appointment of overseers may be removed before an appeal to the sessions; for the rule laid down in 1 Salk. 147, extends only to the case where there is a limited time for appealing, as to the next quarter sessions; but the statute of 43 Eliz. c. 2, is not so restrained, and, consequently, it can never be said that the time for appealing is out; and if the appeal from an appointment is lodged, there can be no certiorari till the sessions have made a determination; and a certiorari brought, pending such appeal, shall be superseded.

V. How to be granted and allowed.

(1) On indictments or presentments.
In term time.

(1.) On Indictments or Presentments.—By stat. 5 W. & M. c. 11, s. 2, and 8 & 9 W. & M. c. 33, it is enacted, that in term time no writ of certiorari whatsoever, at the prosecution of any party indicted, shall be granted out of the King's Bench, to remove any indictment or presentment of trespass or misdemeanor, before a trial had, from before the justices in sessions; unless such certiorari shall be granted or awarded upon motion of counsel, and by rule of court made for the granting thereof.

In vacation.

But by stat. 5 W. & M. c. 11, s. 4, in the vacation, writs of certiorari may be granted by any justice of the King's Bench; whose name shall be inscribed on the writ, and also the name of the person at whose instance it is granted.

Practice.

These acts do not extend to applications for certiorari by prosecutors, and the proceedings to be taken by them remain as at common law. 2 Haw.] c. 27, s. 52.

In term.

During term time the writ is granted by the court on motion by counsel, as a matter of course when applied for by the prosecutor, but when moved for by the defendant, it must be made in open court founded on an affidavit stating the grounds for the application. See form of an affidavit, post, (No.1.)

No affidavit is necessary where the Attorney General applies for the defendant. 4 Burr. 2458; 4 T. R. 161; ante, 574; sed vid. R. v. Burgess, 1 Kent. Rep. 531.

The affidavit should be entitled only "In the King's Bench," and not in the name of the prosecutor in the court below. 1 B. & Cress. 267; sed vid. 2 Stras. 704.

Corroborating affidavits may be read after a rule has been granted, but not affidavits containing new matter. R. v. Berkeley, 1 Kent. 81.

In vacation a flat for a certiorari may be obtained from any one of the judges of the Court of King's Bench, on laying a proper affidavit before him at his chambers, if the application be made by the defendant.

The judge's signature must be placed to the flat. 3 Salk. 80.

The clerk in court, on the authority of such signature, makes out the writ and delivers it to the person applying for it, together with the recognizance to be entered into. Hand's Proc. 58.

Recognizance, &c.

Recognizance[—To prevent the improper removal of indictments and presentments for crimes less than felonies from the general or quarter sessions, the 5 W. & M. c. 11, s. 2, enacts, "that all the parties indicted, prosecuting such certiorari, (id. est, a certiorari applied for by the defendant, indicted at sessions for a trespass or misdemeanor, supra,) before the allowance thereof, shall find two sufficient manuporters, who shall enter into a recognizance before one or more justices of the peace of the county or place, in the sum of 20l. with condition at the return of such writ to appear and plead to the said indictment or presentment in the said Court of King's Bench, and at his and their own costs and charges to cause and procure the issue that shall be joined upon the said indictment or presentment, or any plea relating thereto, to be tried at the next assizes to be held for the county wherein the said indictment or presentment was found, after such certiorari shall be returnable, if not in the cities of London, Westminster, or county of Middlesex; and if in the said cities or county, then to cause or procure it to be tried the next term after, wherein such certiorari shall be granted, or at the sitting after the said term, if the Court of King’s Bench shall not appoint any other time for the trial thereof; and if any other time shall be appointed by the court, then at such other time, and to give due notice of such trial to the prosecutor, or his clerk in court; and that the said recognizance and recognizances, taken as aforesaid, shall be certified into the said Court of King’s Bench, with the said certiorari and indictment, to be there filed, and the name of the prosecutor (if he be the party grieved or injured) or some public officer, to be indorsed on the back of the said indictment, and if the person prosecuting such certiorari, being the defendant, shall not, before allowance thereof, procure such manuscript to be bound in a recognizance as aforesaid, the justices of the peace may and shall proceed to trial of the said indictment at the said sessions, notwithstanding such writ of certiorari so delivered.”

The like provisions are enacted by the 5 W. & M. c. 11, s. 5, concerning the removal of indictments by certiorari within the counties of Chester, Lancaster, and Durham.

These provisions only extend to writs of certiorari on indictments at the sessions. 3 Barr. 2462; 2 Stra. 1165.

If the bail be not found before the justices or the judge as thus prescribed, the certiorari ought not to be allowed. 1 Salk. 149; Com. Dig. Certiorari, B.

If the persons offering to be sureties appear to be worth 20l, the justices cannot refuse them. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 50.

If several persons be included in the same indictment, and some of them find sureties, and the others not, it is said that the proceedings as to the first will be valid. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 50; Com. Dig. Certiorari, B; but this seems questionable, see Keat v. Goldstein, 7 B. & C. 525; 1 M. & R. 305, S. C.

It seems that a married woman need not enter into the recognizance. 2 Hale, 213.

(2) On Convictions or Summary Proceedings.—For the preventing of delays and expenses by certiorarics on convictions and summary proceedings, by stat. 13 Geo. II. c. 18, s. 5, it is enacted, “that no writ of certiorari shall be granted, issued forth, or allowed, to remove any conviction, judgment, order, or other proceedings had or made by or before any justice or justices of the peace of any county, city, borough, town corporate or liberty, or the respective general or quarter sessions thereof, unless such certiorari be moved or applied for within six calendar months next after such conviction, judgment, order or other proceedings shall be so had or made, and unless it be duly proved upon oath, that the said party or parties suing forth the same, hath or have given six days’ notice thereof in writing to the justice or justices, or to two of them, (if so many there be,) by and before whom such conviction, judgment, order or other proceedings shall be so had or made, to the end that such justice or justices, or the parties therein concerned, may show cause, if he or they shall so think fit, against the issuing or granting such certiorari.”

A notice to remove an order of justices by certiorari must state the name of the party applying for the writ. R. v. Lancashire, 4 B. & A. 289. Et per curiam.—“The notice should be given by the party suing out the writ, and that circumstance should appear upon the face of the notice itself, for the object of it, stated by the statute, is to enable the justices to show cause against the granting the certiorari, and they may show for cause that the party suing out the writ was a stranger to the county, and not interested in the order. The justices therefore ought to have their attention called to the name of the party by the notice itself.”

The six calendar months limited for the application must be computed from the date of the conviction. R. v. Bough, 4 T. R. 281.
Certiiorari.

A certiorari to remove an order of sessions subject to a case to be stated, must be applied for within six calendar months after the order made, and not within six months after settling the case. In strictness, cases ought to be settled sedente curia. R. v. Sussex, 1 M. & S. 631, 734; R. v. Kaye, 1 D. & R. 436; and so as to an order of sessions, Lord. 544.

In the case of R. v. Glamorganshire, 5 T. R. 279, it was determined that before any application for a certiorari to remove proceedings before justices of the peace, six days' notice thereof in writing must be given to the magistrates previous to the application for the rule to show cause why such certiorari should not be granted.

But a certiorari to remove an indictment from the sessions may be sued out by the prosecutor without giving the six days' previous notice required by the statute, in the case of removing " convictions, judgments, orders, and other (summary) proceedings." R. v. Battama and others, 1 East, 298.

In support of the motion there must be an affidavit of the service of the six days' notice, which should not be entitled in any cause. Exp. Nohro, 1 B. & C. 267.

The circumstance of an order of sessions having been made subject to a case for the opinion of the Court of King's Bench, will not dispense with the six days' notice. R. v. Sussex, 4 M. & S. 631.

By stat. 5 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 1, after reciting that "whereas in many cases where his Majesty's justices of the peace by law are empowered to give or make judgments or orders, great expenses have been occasioned by reason that such judgments or orders have, on appeals to the justices of the peace at their respective general or quarter sessions, been quashed or set aside upon exceptions or objections to the form or forms of the proceedings, without hearing or examining the truth and merits of the matter in question between the parties concerned; therefore to prevent the same for the future, it is enacted, "that after the 24th day of June, 1732, upon all appeals to be made to the justices of the peace at their respective general or quarter sessions to be holden for any county, riding, city, liberty or precinct, within that part of Great Britain called England, against judgments or orders given or made by any justices of the peace as aforesaid, such justices so assembled at any general or quarter sessions shall and are hereby required from time to time, within their respective jurisdictions, upon all and every such appeals so made to them, to cause any defect or defects of form that shall be found in any such original judgments or orders, to be rectified and amended without any cost or charge to the parties concerned, and after such amendment made shall proceed to hear, examine and consider the truth and merits of all matters concerning such original judgments or orders, and likewise to examine all witnesses upon oath, and hear all other proofs relating thereto, and to make such determinations thereupon as by law they should or ought to have done, in case there had not been such defect or want of form in the original proceeding; any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 2. "And whereas divers write of certiorari have been procured to remove such judgments or orders into his Majesty's Court of King's Bench at Westminster, in hopes thereby to discourage and weary out the parties concerned in such judgments or orders by great delays and expenses; be it therefore enacted, "that no certiorari shall be allowed to remove any such judgment or order, unless the party or parties prosecuting such certiorari, before the allowance thereof, shall enter into a recognizance with sufficient sureties before one or more justices of the peace of the county or place, or before the justices at their general quarter sessions or general sessions where such judgment or order shall have been given or made, or before any one of his Majesty's justices of the said Court of King's Bench, in the sum of 50l. with condition to prosecute the same at his or their own costs and charges with effect, without any wilful or affected delay, and to pay the party or parties, in whose favour and for whose benefit such judgment or order was given or made, within one month after the said judgment or order shall be confirmed, their full costs and charges, to be taxed according to the course of the court where such judgments or orders shall be confirmed; and in case the party or parties prosecuting such certiorari shall not enter into such recognizance, or shall not perform the conditions aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for the said justices to proceed and make such further order or orders for the benefit of the party or parties for whom such judgment shall be given, in such manner as if no certiorari had been granted."
How to be granted and allowed.

Sect. 3. "That the recognizance and recognizances to be taken as aforesaid shall be certified into the Court of King's Bench at Westminster, and there filed with the certiorari and order or judgment removed thereby; and if the said order or judgment shall be confirmed by the said court, the persons entitled to such costs for the recovery thereof, within ten days after demand made of the person or persons who ought to pay the said costs, upon oath made of the making such demand and refusal of payment thereof, shall have an attachment granted against him or them by the said court for such contempt, and the said recognizance so given, upon the allowing of such certiorari, shall not be discharged, until the costs shall be paid and the order so confirmed shall be complied with and obeyed."

It should seem from the wording of the first section of this act, and the words "such judgment or order," in sect. 2 of the same, that this only applies to cases where an appeal is given. Vide note to R. v. Dunn, 8 T. R. 218.

Recognition]—This statute requiring the party removing a conviction by a magistrate into King's Bench, to enter into a recognizance with two sureties in 50l. conditioned to prosecute the writ with effect, &c. is not complied with by the party and his sureties entering into a recognizance in 25l. each, but it must be in the entire sum of 50l. R. v. Dunn, 8 T. R. 217.

The two sureties must be in addition to the party suing out the certiorari. R. v. Boughay, 4 T. R. 281.

If a certiorari be regularly issued, the court will not proceed upon it till it has been regularly returned. And the party suing out the writ has no right to call upon the magistrate to allow and return it, until he has entered into a proper recognizance as the statute requires. R. v. Dunn, 8 T. R. 219.

Where one has been committed, and appealed to the sessions, a certiorari cannot issue pending the appeal; but only when that has been determined. R. v. Sparrow and another, 2 T. R. 196, n. [The case was of a commitment for vagrancy, and an appeal against the same.]

VI. Form and Requisites of Writ.

The writ must not materially vary in its description of the record which it is intended to remove. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 75. If, therefore, it profess to remove an indictment only, it will not be effectual to remove the whole record after conviction. Id. 2 D. Raym. 971.

And even more formal objections have sometimes been holden to be material. Cro. Jac. 254; 1 Sid. 448; 1 Roll. 754; Hale, 214; 1 Salk. 145. Thus if it describe the indictment to be taken before seven justices, when the proceeding itself mentions eight; Cro. Jac. 254; and see other instances, 1 Chit. C. L. 387.

A material variance in the names or additions will also prejudice, as if the wrong name be inserted. 1 Salk. 264; Cro. Jac. 933; 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 81.

But if the mistake be only in the spelling, and the sound remains unaltered, it will not be material. Cro. Eliz. 173; 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 81.

If more defendants be named than appear on the record, the variance will be fatal. 1 Stra. 116; 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 81.

(a) See in general, 1 Chit. C. L. 387 to 390; 2 Hawk. c. 27.
Certiorari.

Where it is intended to remove the record after verdict, it must be expressly framed for that purpose, or it will be invalid. 2 Ld. Raym. 938, 971; 13 East, 417.

The defendant must have a day given him in the superior court when an indictment after verdict is removed by this writ. 2 Ld. Raym. 971; 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 81.

The writ ought to be directed to the judge or magistrates of the inferior court, before whom the proceedings were originally taken. 3 Keb. 13; 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 38.

In some cases, however, it may be directed to the proper officer known to have the actual custody of the record. Dyer, 163; 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 38.

If the person who ought to certify the record, as a justice of the peace, &c. happen to die while it remains in his custody, the certiorari may be directed to his personal representatives, who must certify. 2 Keb. 750; 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 39.

It may be directed to a justice of assize to certify a record of assize taken before his companion in his absence. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 39.

When the certiorari is intended to remove an indictment or recognizance from the sessions, it is directed either to the justices generally, or to some of them in particular, and not to the custos rotulorum; though it seems that it may be returned by him, especially if he style himself a justice of the peace. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 40.

And a certiorari to remove an order made by two justices, may be directed to the sessions, and by them returned to the superior jurisdiction. 1 Stra. 470.

If by mistake it be directed to the wrong person, it has been held that no other party can take any advantage of the error, if after the proceedings are duly returned by the parties to whom it was directed. 4 T. R. 499.

The writ must, when it removes any recognizance, or when the defendant is in actual custody, be signed by the chief justice, or, in his absence, by one of the judges of the court from whence it is awarded. 1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 13, s. 7. But in other cases there is no necessity for the judge to sign the writ, but only the seal by which it is ordered to issue. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 37.

If it be taken out in vacation and tested, as it may be, of the preceding term, the seal must be signed some time before the essoin day of the subsequent term, or the whole will be irregular. 1 Salk. 150; 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 37.

This writ should be delivered to the chairman of the sessions in open court, or other chief judge of the court, though if it appear that any how came to the knowledge of the justices or judges, it must be obeyed by them. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 57; 1 East, 299. In practice it is delivered to the clerk of the peace, or clerk of assize. 1 Chit. C. L. 390.

VII. Effect of the Writ.

The effect of the writ is to remove all proceedings of the nature described therein, which have taken place between the teste and return, although the proceedings originated after the teste. The justices below are bound to obey the writ after production of it, and notice to them in fact of such production when sitting in their judicial capacity; and after that, all further proceedings before them on the matter are erroneous, and coram non judice. R. v. Battams, 1 East, 298; 1 Salk. 148; 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 57.

But it hath been adjudged, that if a certiorari for the removal of an indictment before justices of the peace be not delivered before the jury be sworn for the trial of it, the justices may proceed. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 62; 1 Salk. 144.

And the justices may set a fine to complete their judgment after a certiorari delivered. 2 Ld. Raym. 1515.
VII.]

Effect of the Writ.

It operates as a supersedeas only from the time of its being actually delivered, and not from the time of its being issued; 7 T. R. 373; and it will altogether lose its effect if not delivered before its return. Id.

It cannot operate as a supersedeas until the defendant has complied with the directions of the statute, ante, 579, 580. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 59.

It is however said, that if a supersedeas come out of a superior court to the justices, they ought to suercease, although the supersedeas be awarded against law; for they are not to dispute the command of a superior court, which is a warrant to them. Crompt. 129.

If an indictment be removed after issue by certiorari, and afterwards remanded, the inferior courts may proceed to trial upon it in the same way as if the writ had never been awarded. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 61.

But if they go on after the due delivery of the writ, where such conduct is illegal, they may be punished by attachment for contempt of the superior jurisdiction. Id. s. 62; 1 Salk. 148.

A certiorari removes the record itself out of the inferior court; and, therefore, if it remove the record against a principal, the accessory cannot there be tried. 2 Hawk. c. 29, s. 54.

If the defendant be convicted of a capital offence, the person of the defendant must be removed by habeas corpus, in order to be present in court, if he will move in arrest of judgment. And herein the case of a conviction differs from that of a special verdict; where the presumption of innocence may be supposed to continue, and therefore the personal presence of the defendant in that case is not necessary at the argument of it. R. v. Spragg, 2 Burr. 880; ante, 577.

It hath been held that a certiorari for the removal of a recognizance for the good behaviour, or an appearance at sessions, will supersede the obligation of it; but this would be highly inconvenient, and the contrary seems to be supported by the better authority. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 65.

A certiorari removing an indictment from the Old Bailey to the King's Bench, will discharge a recognizance if a prisoner have been admitted to bail on a charge of perjury. R. v. Richardson, 2 Leach, C. C. 560. But it is otherwise if the prisoner be in actual custody. Id.

In the case of R. v. Reason, 6 T. R. 375, it was determined that if justices acquit a defendant against whom an information is laid before them for a penalty, this court cannot reverse the judgment, though the justices state (on the return of a certiorari) evidence, which prima facie is sufficient to convict, and no contradictory or explanatory evidence. And the court said, that the evidence given was entirely and exclusively for the consideration of the justices below, who were placed in the situation of a jury; and as they had acquitted the defendant, this court could not substitute themselves in the place of the justices acting as jurymen, and convict him; that they could not judge of the credit due to the witnesses whom they did not hear examined; that they could only look to the form of the conviction, and see that the party, if convicted, had been convicted by legal evidence; and they must consider on this return that the magistrates had determined on the facts, and not on the law of the cases as distinguished from the facts.

Touching the distinction between a conviction removed by certiorari and one brought before a court upon an appeal; on an appeal the whole case is gone into, and evidence is to be given to support the conviction; but when the conviction is removed by certiorari, the facts cannot be made the subject of inquiry. R. v. Jukes, 8 T. R. 542.

In a late case where the sessions on an appeal quashed a conviction on the 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 108, s. 4, for a defect in form without hearing the merits, and their order was removed by certiorari into King's Bench; that court being of opinion that there was no defect in the form, quashed the order; and sent back the case to the sessions to enter continuances and hear the appeal on the merits. R. v. Ridgeway, 5 B. & A. 527; 1 D. & R. 192, S. C.; see also the case of R. v. Eaton, ante, 1 T. R. 89, ante, 574. .
VIII. Return to the Writ.

The certiorari may be sometimes to remove and send up the record itself, and sometimes only the tenor of the record (as the words therein be,) and it must be obeyed accordingly; Dalt. c. 195; 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 76; if the return do not show the writ has been obeyed, it will be defective.

A return of the tenor of an indictment from London, is good by the Charter of London. 1 Keb. 252.

Whenever the purport of the writ is not to proceed upon the record to be removed, but only to try an issue of null ius record, it is sufficient to certify the tenor of the record, whatever the language of the writ may be. 3 Keb. 13; 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 71.

If any thing be inserted in the return by way of explanation or otherwise, which is not commanded, it will not vitiate, but be rejected as surplusage. 2 Salk. 493; Bac. Abr. Certiorari, H.

Who to make return.

The return should be made by the party to whom it is directed; a return by the deputy of that party, or any other person, will not do. 2 Salk. 479; 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 66.

And although the custom rotulorum keep the records, yet must the justices to whom it is directed return the certiorari; and, therefore, if it be directed to the justices of the peace, and the clerk of the peace only return it, nothing is thereby removed. Id. s. 71.

Upon a certiorari to remove an indictment of a riot, or forcible entry, or the like, the return must have these words, as also to hear and determine divers felonies, &c. according to the commission; for if the return mention only that they are justices of the peace without such words, the return is insufficient. Dalt. c. 195.

Form of return.

The proper mode of making the return seems to be to indorse on the back of the writ, “the execution of this writ appears in a certain schedule hereunto annexed,” and then to send the schedule on a distinct piece of parchment, annex it to the record of the indictment, and transmit them together to the superior jurisdiction; 1 Sound. 134; and the words “humbly certify,” &c. are unnecessary and improper. Carth. 223.

The schedule must be made on parchment, for it will be quashed if on paper. 1 Barnard. 113.

A copy of the record will not do. 4 B. & Crez. 401; 6 D. & R. 497, S.C.

If the words “the jurors of our Lord the King upon their oaths present,” be omitted, the return will be invalid. Carth. 223.

The return must be under the seal of the inferior court, to whom it is directed; and if they have no proper seal, under any other seal they may think fit to employ. Cro. Eliz. 821; 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 65, 70.

A return to a certiorari was sent back to the justices by the court to be amended, because they did not put their seals to it, or describes themselves as justices of London. R. v. Kenyon, 6 B. & Crez. 640.

The return and the recognition, (if any,) should, when ready, be transmitted to the Crown Office of the Court of King’s Bench.

If the return be defective, the court will, by a side-bar rule, allow an amendment thereof. 4 East, 175, n; 1 Sound. 249, n.

Amendment of.

Enforcing return.

The return may be enforced by a side-bar rule, commanding a return after six days’ notice; but if this side-bar rule be obtained without sufficient ground, the defendant may move to have that rule discharged. 1 East, 299.

After this side-bar rule and notice, in general the inferior jurisdiction are bound to make return, even though it should appear that the writ was improperly granted. 1 East, 306; 5 T. R. 543.

A clerk of the peace cannot refuse to transmit the records in his custody on account of the fees due to him, for he has no lien upon them to justify his detainer; 1 Leach, 201; for his fees his remedy is by action; for his charges of bringing the defendant up, the defendant may be remanded. 1 Stru. 308; 2 Stru. 1262.
X.

Quashing the Writ.

If the return be still withheld, an alias, then a pluries, or a causum nobis signifies, will be awarded, and then an attachment. Compact 116; Fütz. N.B. 243.

If the person to whom a certiorari is directed do make a false return, yet the court will not stay filing it on affidavit of its being false, except in public cases, as in cases of commissioners of sewers, or for not repairing highways, or for some such special causes; because the remedy for a false return is either an action on the case at the suit of the party grieving, or an information at the suit of the King. Dallt. c. 195; see Justices, Vol. III. p. 484.

IX. Quashing the Writ.

If the writ be misdirected or otherwise has been improperly granted, if returned, it will be quashed, upon cause being shown to the jurisdiction from whence it was awarded. 7 T. R. 373.

If not returned the court will grant supersedeas.

After a rule for a certiorari had been made absolute, and the return thereto filed, it appeared that the writ had issued improvidence, the court ordered it to be superseded, and the return taken off the file. R. v. Wakefield, 1 Burr. 488; 2 Kent. 164, S. C.

When the record is not removed in consequence of an error in the return, the court will either quash the writ and order a new one; 1 Salk. 147; 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 82; or they will allow the court below to proceed and take such order for the defendant's appearance before either tribunal as the circumstances of the case may require. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 82. Or if the court think they issued the writ improperly, they may order it to be superseded, and the return taken off the file. 1 Burr. 488; 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 63.

When the writ is returned to the crown office, the prosecutor's clerk in court makes out a venire for the defendant to appear; upon which the solicitor gets him summoned by the sheriff, and upon the return of it, the defendant usually appears, when he is entitled to an imparlance to the following term: but if he does not then appear, the prosecutor's clerk in court, upon the production of the sheriff's return to the venire, makes out a distringas, upon which 40s. issues are levied on the defendant's effects; and if there is no appearance on the return of that, on the affidavit of the writ having issued and being returned as above, the court will award an alias; and after that a pluries, &c., enlarging the issues on every writ until the defendant appears, when they will compel him to pay the costs of the writs of distringas out of the issues levied. But if the sheriff returns the venire non est inventus, then, upon the production of such return, the clerk in court makes out a capias for the sheriff to take the defendant into custody, which he will do; whereupon the defendant, to procure his enlargement, must enter an appearance, upon which he will be discharged by supersedeas. If the defendant be taken on a warrant, which a judge may grant on the return of the venire, the defendant must then put in bail before he is discharged. Hand. Proc. 42, 3; 1 Chit. C. L. 396, 7.

X. Subsequent Proceedings.

After the return has been made and the indictment removed at the instance of the defendant, if the bail in the recognizance are exceptional, the prosecutor's solicitor may compel the defendant to add sufficient bail, by taking out and serving on the defendant's clerk in court a judge's summons for a procedendo, unless better bail be put in. Hand. Proc. 39.

If the defendant do not find sureties, then, upon the attendance of the summons, the judge will order the procedendo to issue, and by which the indictment and proceedings will be sent back to the court in which the prosecution was begun. Id.
Certiiorari.

And if the indictment were removed after issue joined, the inferior court is to proceed to trial as if no certiorari had been issued. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 61.

After the defendants have been admitted to bail, the court will not, on affidavit of aggravating facts, increase the bail. 2 Chit. Rep. 109.

The prosecutor may compel the defendant to proceed to trial according to his recognizance, by taking out and serving on his clerk in court a side-bar rule, to estreat the recognizance, unless he appears and pleads within the term, and proceeds to trial at the sitting of nisi prius after the term, if in town; and in the country, at the next assizes. Hand. Proc. 40. And unless the prosecutor, by obtaining and serving the usual rules, compels the defendant to proceed to trial, the recognizance will not be considered as forfeited. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 54. See 5 B. & A. 728.

When the recognizance has been forfeited, the court will not hear any motion to quash the indictment or certiorari. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 55.

All the subsequent process is the same as if the cause had originally been commenced in the court to which the certiorari has removed it. Hand. Proc. 40, 43, 49.

The notice of the motion for the judgment of the court, when obtained against defendant, is given to the bail as well as to the defendant. Hand. Proc. 49, 44.

XI. Costs, as to.

By 5 & 6 Will. & M. c. 11, s. 3, if the defendant prosecuting the writ of certiorari be convicted of the offence for which he was indicted, then the court of K. B. shall give reasonable costs to the prosecutor, if he be the party grieved or injured, or be a justice, constable, or other civil officer, who prosecutes on account of any thing that concerned him as officer, to be taxed according to the course of the said court, who shall, for recovery thereof, within ten days after demand and refusal of payment, on oath, have attachment awarded; and the recognizance not to be discharged till the costs are paid.

This statute is a remedial one; see post, 589, n.

Offence.—The act extends to the costs of the prosecution of an offence, whether it be a nonfeasance or a malfeasance. 3 M. & S. 471; post, 598.

Reasonable Costs.—The master of the crown office, in taxing the costs, ought only to consider those which are subsequent to the certiorari. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 56.

The costs of conveying a defendant to gaol, in execution of his sentence, are reasonable costs within the statute. R. v. Gilbie, 5 M. & S. 550. The defendant was indicted for a misdemeanor at the Northumberland quarter sessions, and removed the indictment by certiorari into the King's Bench, and was afterwards found guilty, and sentenced to two years' imprisonment in the gaol for that county, in execution of which sentence he was conveyed thither at the prosecutor's expense. This expense was allowed to the prosecutor by the master, in taxing the costs. A rule nisi having been obtained for the master to review his taxation, it was argued, on showing cause, that this allowance was warranted by stat. 5 & 6 Will. & M. c. 11, s. 3, which enacts, "that if the defendant prosecuting the certiorari be convicted of the offence for which he was indicted, the court of K. B. shall give reasonable costs to the prosecutor. And it was urged, that if the indictment had been left with the sessions, this expense would not have been incurred, because the defendant would have been on the spot; wherefore it was by the defendant's own act, who removed the indictment, that the cost was incurred, and it is a part of the reasonable costs. The prosecutor, in discharge of his duty, had a right to see that the sentence of the court was executed. In support of the rule it was urged, that the statute Will. & M. did not contemplate costs such as the present, nor, indeed, any costs after judgment. And as to the defendant being the occasion of this expense, the sentence might as well have been to the prison of this court as to the county gaol. The place, therefore, of imprisonment was the act of the court. The recognizance of the defendant extends to the costs of the trial, and not of execution. The cases R. v. Cholsey, 2 Coop. 726, and Q. v. Sumers, 1 Salk. 55, were cited. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "Under the terms of the recognizance the defendant was bound to pay all reasonable costs. These costs, if not immediately occasioned by the certiorari, were certainly incurred in consequence of it. If the indictment had remained below, no such expense would have been incurred. The defendant's own act, therefore, may be said to have occasioned the expense. It is reasonable that the defendant should bear the expense for which no other fund is provided." *Et per Bayley, J. It is a part of the prosecution to carry it to is legal conclusion. *Per curiam. Rule discharged.
The prosecutor cannot have the costs of a special jury. 1 Esp. 299.
The amount of the costs to be taxed is not limited by the recognizance, which is only a further security for them, and the court will not discharge the recognizance till the taxed costs are paid to the prosecutor. R. v. Teal, 13 East, 4.

If the court, on the certificate of the King's coroner, have given to the prosecutor one-third of the fine, they will order that sum to be deducted from the amount of the taxation. 4 Burr. 2125. But the payment of the fine does not discharge the recognizance for the costs. 2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 53.

In R. v. Bartram, 8 East, 299, the defendant was indicted for perjury, and the indictment was removed from the sessions to the King's Bench by certiorari. The prosecutor gave notice of trial to the defendant, but on the day of trial withdrew the record without having countermanded the notice in due time. And it was held by the court that he must pay the costs of the trial as in other cases. And see 2 Chin. Rep. 159; R. v. Johnson, R. & M. C. C. 173; R. v. Watton, 4 C. & P. 229.

Where a prosecutor having removed an indictment by certiorari, gave notice of trial for the assizes, and brought down the record and withdrew it after it had been entered for trial, it was considered that the judge at the assizes could not order the prosecutor to pay the defendant the costs of the day; but that the motion must be made in the court of King's Bench. R. v. Watton, 4 C. & P. 229.

In R. v. Tremaine, 5 B. & Cenx. 761; 8 D. & R. 590, 684, S. C.; where a true bill for perjury was found, and the judge at the assizes having refused to try it on account of manifest imperfections in the record, a new bill was preferred, whereupon the defendant was found guilty, but a new trial granted, and then the prosecutor, instead of taking down the old record, again preferred a new indictment for the same offence, and removed it into K. B. by certiorari, the court refused to stay the proceedings upon that indictment, until the prosecutor paid the costs of the former proceedings.

If the defendant forfeit his recognizance under the statute, by not going to trial at the time specified, it will not be discharged on the application of the bail, until the costs of not proceeding to trial have been paid, notwithstanding the defendant was afterwards acquitted and taken in execution for the amount of the taxation. 3 Burr. 1461; 15 East, 572.

Party grieved—The act does not apply to persons intended to be aggrieved, but only to those who have suffered actual injury. R. v. Ingleton, 1 Wils. 139. The defendant was indicted for attempting to set fire to the house of one Easton in York, and the indictment also charged that the defendant solicited Mason, one of the prosecutors, to help to set fire to the house. Mason and one Glenton informed the mayor of York of this, who bound Mason and Glenton over to prosecute the defendant. The said defendant removed the indictment by certiorari into the court of K. B., and was thereupon convicted and fined. On payment of the fine, it was moved that the recognizance should be discharged. Unto which it was objected that the defendant was obliged to pay the costs of the prosecutors. But by the court—"This case is not within the act; for the act extends only to officers and persons really injured, which neither Glenton nor Mason are, for there was no damage done to the house, but only intended to be done, nor are either of them officers." And the recognizance was discharged.

In R. v. Smith, 1 Burr. 54, it was moved that before the recognizance should be discharged the prosecutor should have his costs. The objection was that no name of any person, as being the party grievéd or injured, or a public civil officer, was inscribed upon the indictment. But by the court, it is enough, if it be proved that the prosecutor was such officer, and here it is proved by affidavit. And it was ruled that the prosecutor should have his costs, before the recognizance should be discharged.

Persons dwelling near to a steam-engine, the smoke of which affected themselves, their furniture, and dwelling-houses, and was very offensive and injurious, have been held parties grievéd within the statute, and entitled to their costs under it, upon the removal by certiorari from the sessions into the King's Bench, of an indictment presented by them for the nuisance. R. v. Dewnap, 16 East, 194. And Lord Ellenborough there observed, "that although a nuisance may be public, yet there may be a special grievance arising out of the common cause of injury, which presses more upon particular individuals than upon others not so immediately within the influence of it."

The prosecutor of an indictment for stopping up an ancient and common footway, which he had used for some years, and had since been obliged to take a more circuitous route, was held to be a party grievéd within the meaning of stat. 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 11, s. 3. R. v. Williamson, 7 T. R. 32.

And in another case, several persons were held entitled to costs under stat. 5 W. & M. c. 11, as prosecutors of an indictment removed by certiorari for not repairing a highway, one as constable of the manor within which the highway lay, the others as parties grievéd, they having used the way for many years in passing and repassing from their homes to the next market town, and being obliged by reason of the want of repair to take a more circuitous route. R. v. Taunton St. Mary, 3 M. & S. 465.

In another case, however, where the prosecutor of an indictment for obstructing a highway did not apply for the costs until after the defendant's recognizance had been discharged, and until two years after judgment, and it did not appear that he had ever used the highway before it was stopped, and whilst it was stopped declared he did not care about it, the court held that he was not entitled to costs, although the prosecution was at his expense. The court thought he was not a party grievéd; that there ought to have been some special and peculiar injury accruing to him from the obstruction, besides that which affects all the subjects in common with him. R. v. Inclendon, 1 M. & S. 268. See also Miles v. Rose, 4 M. & S. 101.

Where the expenses of an indictment for a misdemeanour are defrayed by subscription, and the nominal prosecutors incur no expense, they are not entitled to costs under the act. R. v. Cook, 1 Man. & Ry. 526.

In the same case it was made a question, whether the near relations of a person whose body has been disinterred for the purposes of dissection are parties grievéd within the act. Id.

Public officers. Public Officers]—The costs thus given by the statute of Will. to persons acting in public capacities can only be claimed by them when they prosecute for some offence which actually comes within their own peculiar cognizance, and not a public grievance, with which they think fit to interfere.

A justice prosecuting a gaoler for an escape is not entitled to costs. R. v. Sharpness, 2 T. R. 47. The prosecutor, a justice of the peace, had indicted the defendant, who was the keeper of the gaol at St. Alban's, for suffering a prisoner to escape, who had been committed by him for felony; upon which indictment the defendant had been convicted. And it was contendted that the prosecutor was entitled to costs under the 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 11, s. 3, as being a public officer prosecuting for the benefit of the public. Askew v. J. "It appears to me, the defendant ought not to be charged with the costs; this is not one of those instances mentioned in the 3d section of the act, which only extends to those officers who prosecute or present ex officio, or where the prosecution is carried on by the party aggrieved. If a justice were to present a road, and the same were afterwards turned into an indictment, there the justice would be entitled to costs; or if a justice were to indict a constable or other inferior officer for disobeying his order, in such case also he would be entitled to his costs: but this is not a prosecution carried on by him as a magistrate, for any other person might have indicted the defendant; the offence in this case was such as concerned the general justice of the realm.” Buller, J.—“From a review of all the cases in a MS. notebook, it appears that the prosecutor is not entitled to his costs: this book does not indeed include a case from Basingstoke, which came before this court a few years ago, but there I understand the prosecution was carried on by the clerk of the peace, whose duty it was to draw up all presentments of constables in form of indictments; and it was there determined that the prosecutor was entitled to costs. But here I cannot say it was the duty of the prosecutor as a justice of the peace to prosecute this defendant; the case originally came before him in the character of a magistrate on the complaint of some other person, and if the justice chose to take the prosecution out of private hands and to conduct it himself, he cannot be said to prosecute as a magistrate, but like any other individual. The court has always construed this act of parliament as strictly as possible; (a) there was one case indeed on this statute, (R. v. Gater, M. 16 Geo. III.) the law of which I doubt, where it was held, that a person who was injured and was really the prosecutrix, was not entitled to costs, because her name did not appear on the back of the indictment, although it was well known she was the real prosecutrix; but I believe that case has been since overruled. (See R. v. Smith, ante, 588.) In another case, afterwards, the question was whether the prosecutor was entitled to a costs of a trial at bar; and it was determined that he was not, because the statute only extended to small offences. These cases show that the court has always put a strict construction on this act.” (a) Rule absolute.

In R. v. Kettleworth, 5 T. R. 33, it was held that a justice of the peace, who indicted a road out of repair, was entitled to costs after a removal of the indictment by certiorari if the defendant be convicted. “If the verdict had been for the defendant, (Lord Kenyon, C. J. said,) and it had appeared that the prosecution was vexatious, the attorney might have been compelled to disclose his real client.”

See the case of R. v. Taunton St. Mary, 3 M. & S. 465, ante, 588, as to a constable’s right to costs of certiorari.

The terms in the act “if the Defendant prosecuting such Writ of Certiorari be convicted,” mean convicted by a judgment; in a case, therefore, where the judgment was arrested, the court held that the defendant not having been found guilty of any offence which the law recognizes as such, (and therefore not considered as guilty persons,) ought not to be mulcted with costs for having removed a bad indictment from an inferior jurisdiction into the King’s Bench. R. v. Turner and others, 15 East, 570.

Death]—If a defendant remove an indictment into the King’s Bench by certiorari, giving the usual recognizance under stat. 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 11, and be found guilty, and die before the day in bank, his bail are liable to pay the costs. R. v. Turner, 3 B. & C. 160; 4 D. & R. 816, S. C.

The sum when duly ascertained by the master becomes a vested debt, and if the prosecutor die before it is paid his personal representatives may recover it. 1 T. R. 104; 15 East, 573.

(a) But this seems incorrect. The act is considered a remedial law. See per Lord Kenyon, C. J. in R. v. Kettleworth, 5 T. R. 33.
XII. Forms, List of.

Affidavit by Defendant for a Certiorari to remove an Indictment for not repairing a Highway, (No. 1.)

Recognizance to appear and plead to an Indictment, (No. 2.)

Notice of Bail after removal of Indictment into the King's Bench, (No. 3.)

Certiorari to Justices of Assize to remove an Indictment from Assizes at instance of Prosecutor, (No. 4.)

Certiorari to remove an Indictment from the Quarter Sessions into the King's Bench and its return, (No. 5.)

Return from a Session, (No. 6.)

Notice of intended Motion for Certiorari to remove a Conviction, &c. (No. 7.)

Writ of Certiorari to two committing Justices to certify information, examination, and deposition, upon which Prisoner was committed, (No. 8.)

Certiorari to two Justices of the Peace to remove a Conviction into the King's Bench, (No. 9.)

Return of Order of Sessions confirming Conviction, (No. 10.)

Return from a single Justice, (No. 11.)

---

(No. 1.)

In the King's Bench.

A. B. of, &c. [gentleman,] make oath and say, that at the last general quarter sessions of the peace held in and for the county of S, a bill of indictment was preferred and found against the inhabitants of the parish of C, in the said county, for a misdemeanour in not repairing a certain common King's highway, leading from M, in the said county of S towards and unto the town of B, in the county aforesaid, from the entrance into a lane called D, at a place called D, opposite to J. F.'s house, containing in length one quarter of a mile, and in breadth fifteen foot, extending from thence in a western direction as far as N. bridge, in which said indictment it is alleged that the inhabitants of the parish of C aforesaid ought to repair and maintain the said common King's highway, when and as often as it shall be necessary, and the deponent swears, that the right or title to repair said highway will come in question upon the trial of the said indictment and this deponent is advised and verily believes; and the determination of the said indictment may materially affect other parishes similarly circumstanced, by reason of the inclosures lately made in that part of the country, under and by virtue of an act of parliament passed in the thirty-seventh year of his present Majesty's reign, intituled, "An Act," &c. and this deponent further saith he is advised and believes that it will be proper to have the said indictment tried by a special jury, and absolutely necessary that the jury before whom the said indictment is tried should, previous to the trial thereof, view the said highway, which the defendants cannot have the benefit of at the sessions.

---

(No. 2.)

This form is given merely to show the nature of the affidavit required. See ante, 578.
indicted, and at his own proper costs and charges shall cause and procure the issue or issues that shall be joined thereon to be tried in the same term, or at the next assizes to be helden for the said county of if the said court shall not appoint any other time for the trial thereof, or if any other time shall be appointed by the said court for such trial, then at such other time, and shall give due notice of such trial to the prosecutor of such indictment or indictments, or to his clerk in court, and shall appear from day to day in the said court, and shall not depart therefrom until discharged by the said court, then this recognizance to be void, or else to remain in full force.

By the Court.

Taken in court the day and year aforesaid.
A. B. clerk of the peace for the said county.

In the King's Bench.

(No. 3.)

The King against
A. B. on the prosecution of G. H.

Notice of bail after removal of indictment into King's Bench.

SIR,

TAKE notice, that the above-named defendant will put in bail in this cause before the honourable Mr. Justice [Bayley.] at his chambers in [Sergeants' Inn, Chancery Lane,] to-morrow, at o'clock in the forenoon, for his appearance in this honourable court in next term, and there to answer and plead to the indictment you preferred against him at the last [general quarter] session of the peace of the county of and which you have since removed into this honourable court; the names of the said are C. D. of, &c. [gentleman,] and E. F. of, &c. [merchant.] Dated this day of

A. D.

Your's, &c.

J. J. attorney for the above-named defendant.

To Mr. K. L. attorney for the prosecution.

(No. 4.)

WILLIAM the Fourth, by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith, to our justices assigned to hold our amizes in and for our county of and to every of them greeting. We being willing, for certain reasons, that all and singular indictments of whatsoever trespasses, contempts, and misdemeanors, whereby C. D. is indicted before you (as is said,) be determined before us and not elsewhere, do command you and every of you, that you or one of you do send under your seals, or the seal of one of you, before us, on [the morrow of All Souls,] whatsoever we shall then be in England, all and singular the said indictments, with all things touching the same, by whatsoever name the said C. D. is called in the same, together with this our writ, that we may further cause to be done therein what of right and according to the law and custom of England we shall see fit to be done. Witness, Charles Lord Tenterden, at Westminster, the day of

in the year of our reign.

KENYON.

Indorsed, "At the instance of the prosecutor."

(No. 5.)

WILLIAM the Fourth, by the grace of God, of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith, and so forth, to the keepers of our peace and to our justices, to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors committed within our county of and to every of them, greeting. We being willing, for certain reasons, that all and singular indictments of whatsoever trespasses, contempts and assaults, whereby G. A. and M. O. [gentlemen] are indicted before you, (as it is said,) be determined before us and not elsewhere, do command you and every of you, that you or one of you do send, under your seals, or the seal of one of you, before us, on [the morrow of All Souls,] whatsoever we shall then be in England, all and singular the said indictments, with all things touching the same, by whatsoever the name the said G. A. and M. O. are therein called, together with this our writ, that we may further cause to be done thereon what of right and according to the law and custom of England we shall see fit to be done. Witness, Charles Lord T. at Westminster, the nineteenth day of November, in the year of our reign.

By the Court.
The return to a certiorari for removing an indictment may be made in the following manner, on a distinct piece of parchment.

First, on the back of the writ write the following words:

The execution of this writ appears in a certain schedule hereunto annexed.

If it be remembered, that at the general quarter session of the peace of our to wit. § Sovereign Lord the King, held at in and for the said county of on Wednesday, in the first week after the close of [Easter] day of in the year of the reign of our Sovereign William the Fourth, King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain, &c. before A. B., C. D., E. F., and others their fellows, justices of our said Lord the King, assigned to keep the peace of our said Lord the King within the said county of and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors in the said county committed, upon the oath of W. J., B. J., &c. [here insert the names of the jurors by whom the bill was found.] good and lawful men of the county aforesaid, then and there sworn and charged to inquire for our said Lord the King, and the body of the said county, it is presented in manner and form as appears in a certain indictment annexed to this schedule.

P. Q. Clerk of the Peace for the said County.

(No. 7.)

Notice of intended motion of certiorari to remove a conviction, &c. (a)

To A. B. Esquire, one of his Majesty’s Justices of the Peace in and for the [or as the case may be].

WHEREAS you did on the day of in the year of our Lord take the examinations of and upon such examinations as aforesaid, [or as the case may be.] did issue your order, [or did convict, &c. as the case may be.] And whereas it appears that [here state the objections to the order, conviction, or other proceeding.], and moreover that the said order, [conviction, or other proceeding.] was irregular and illegal, wherefore the said being resolved to seek a remedy for the injury which he [or they] has [or have] received and sustained by means of the said order [or conviction or other proceeding]; I do hereby, on the behalf of the said according to the form of the statute in that case made and provided, give you notice that his Majesty’s Court of King’s Bench will, in six days from the time of your being served with this notice, or as soon after as counsel can be heard, be moved on behalf of the said for a writ of certiorari to issue out of the said court, and to be directed to [the proper officer of the quarter session of the peace, if it be a record of session, or otherwise to the justice in whose possession it ought to be], for the removal of the record of, &c. [as the case may be] into his Majesty’s said Court of King’s Bench. Dated, &c.

P. Q. Attorney for the said

(No. 8.)

Writ of certiorari to two committing justices, to certify information, examination, and deposition, upon which prisoner was committed.

WILLIAM the Fourth, by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith, to C. D. and E. F. Esquires, two of our justices assigned to keep our peace in and for our county of and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors committed within our said county, and to every of them greeting. We being willing, for certain reasons, that all and singular informations, examinations, and depositions taken by and remaining with you, or either of you, in a certain case of felony or suspicion of felony charged against A. B. and for which you or one of you have committed the said A. B. to the prison of as it is said, be sent by you before us, do command you and every of you, that you or one of you do send us, immediately after the receipt of this our writ, all and singular the said informations, examinations, and depositions, with all things touching the same, as fully and perfectly as they have been taken before you and now remaining in your custody, by whatsoever name the said A. B. is called in the same, together with this writ, that we may further cause to be done therein what of right and according to the law and custom of England we shall see fit to be done. At Westminster, the day of in the year of our reign

By the court, [or as the case may be].

Witness, Charles Lord Tenterden.

(a) See ante, 579.
(No. 9.)

WILLIAM the Fourth, by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith. To [A. B., Knight, Mayor of the city of York] and [J. L., Knight,] two of our justices assigned to keep our peace in and for our said city [or county], and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanours committed within our said city [or county], and to every of them greeting. We being willing for certain causes, that all and singular records of conviction, of whatsoever trespasses and contempts against the form of the statute, intituled, "An Act, &c." whereby C. D. is convicted by you (as it is said), be sent by you before us, do command you, that you send, or one of you do send, all and singular the records of conviction aforesaid, with all things touching the same, by whatsoever name the said C. D. may be named therein, before us, under your seals or the seal of one of you, on [the morrow of All Souls], wherever we shall then be in England, together with this our writ, that we may further cause to be done thereon that which of right and according to the law and custom of our realm of England we shall see fit to be done. Witness, Charles Lord Tenterden, at Westminster, the day of [in the year of our reign].

(No. 10.)

At the general quarter sessions of the peace of our Lord the King, held at in and for the said county, on in the first week after the close of Easter, to wit, on the day of in the year of our Lord and in the year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord William the Fourth, before M. N., O. P., &c. justices of our said Lord the King, assigned to keep the peace of our said Lord the King in and for the county of and also to hear and determine divers felonious trespasses and other misdemeanours committed within the said county.

WHEREAS by a conviction or judgment bearing date the day of in the year under the hands and seals of, &c. thereby setting forth, &c. [set out the whole of the conviction in the third person and in the past tense.] And whereas the said C. D. [the person convicted] did appeal against the said conviction or judgment to the then next and now last court of general quarter sessions of the peace, held at in and for the said county of on Tuesday, the day of January, in the year, &c. when the said appeal was ordered to be continued to this present session, and of which said order of continuance the said A. B. [the prosecutor] had ten days' notice previous to this present session. Now upon hearing the said appeal, and what hath been alleged and proved on each party's behalf, and full debate and consideration had in the premises, it is ordered by this court that the first mentioned conviction or judgment shall be and is hereby confirmed and made absolute. And it is further ordered by this court, that the said C. D. upon sight of this order, or a copy thereof left with him, pay to the said A. B. the sum of towards the costs and charges in the law by him the said C. D. reasonably expended in and about the defence of the said appeal.(a)

By the Court.

Adjournment.

(No. 11.)

County of I, A. B. one of the keepers of the peace and justices of our Lord the King, assigned to keep the peace within the said and also to hear to wit. and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and misdemeanors in the same committed, by virtue of this writ to me delivered, do under my seal return unto his Majesty, in his Court of King's Bench, the of which mention is made in the same writ, together with all matters touching the same. In witness whereof, I, the said have to these presents set my seal. Given at in the said county, the day of in the year of the reign of Return from a single justice.

(a) The whole of the conviction, as returned by the magistrate, is directed to be here set out, but no more than the substance need be set out.

Vol. I. 2 Q
Challenge to Fight. (a)

We have already seen that the attempt or incitement to commit felony is in itself a misdemeanor, and so is the sending a challenge to fight, or the giving language which tends to the same end, or the acts of posting and opprobrious expressions, which have the tendency to a breach of the peace, and they are indictable as misdemeanors at common law; ante, 292. 6 East, 464; 3 Inst. 157; Com. Dig. Battle, (B); 1 Hawk. c. 53, s. 3; 3 East, 581.

Mere words, which though they may produce a challenge, do not directly tend to that issue, as calling a man a liar, are not necessarily criminal; 2 Ld. Raym. 1031; 6 East, 471; though it is probable they would be so, if it could be shown they were meant to provoke a challenge. And the same words, if written, might probably form the subject of an indictment or action for a libel. 6 East, 471.

The 9 Ann. c. 14, s. 8, so far as it relates to the forfeiture and punishment of persons assaulting and besting, or challenging or provoking to fight, any other person, on account of money won at play, is repealed by 9 Geo. IV. c. 31.

A challenge is one of those offences for which a criminal information will be granted by the court of King's Bench, though this will not be done where the party applying has first incited the proposal; 1 Burr. 316; and on this occasion the original letters need not be produced, but copies of them will suffice, if sufficiently verified as correct. 1 Burr. 402. See Information, Vol. III.

The indictment in most respects resembles that for sending a threatening letter. See post, Threats, Vol. V.

The venue may be either in the county where the challenge is concocted or where it is received. 2 Campb. 506.

The punishment is fine and imprisonment, or both, as in other cases of misdemeanor. It is in the discretion of the court. 3 East, 584; post,Judgment, Vol. III; Misdemeanor, Vol. III.

As to duelling, see post, Duelling, Vol. I.; Suicide, Vol. III.

Forms.

(No. 1.)

Commitment for sending a challenge. [Commencement as usual, as ante, p. 8]: on, &c. at, &c. wickedly, wilfully, and maliciously did compose, write, send, and deliver, to one A. B., a certain letter and paper writing containing a challenge to fight a duel with and against him the said C. D. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual, as ante, p. 8, to the end.]

(No. 2.)

Commitment for provoking a man to send a challenge. [Commencement as usual, as ante, p. 8]: on, &c. at, &c. wickedly, wilfully, and maliciously did speak, declare, say, and publish to and in the presence and hearing of one A. B., certain provoking, malicious, and scandalous words, with intent to instigate, excite, and provoke the said A. B. to fight a duel with and against him the said C. D. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual, as ante, p. 8, to the end.]

(No. 3.)

Indictment for sending a challenge to fight a duel. (b) THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C. D. late of, &c. being a person of a turbulent and quarrelsome temper and disposition, and contriving and intending not only to vex, injure, and disparage one A. B., and to do the said A. B. some grievous bodily harm, but also to provoke, instigate, and excite

(a) See this offence fully considered by (b) See various other forms, 3 Chit.

Grose, J. in passing sentence on Rice. C. L. 546.

on criminal information for sending a challenge. 3 East, 581.
the said A. B. to break the peace and to fight a duel with and against the said C. D. in, &c., with force and arms, at, &c., wickedly, wilfully, and maliciously did compose, write, send, and deliver, and cause and procure to be composed, written, sent, and delivered unto the said A. B. a certain letter and paper writing containing a challenge to fight a duel with and against the said C. D., and which said letter and paper writing is as follows, that is to say: [set out the letter verbatim, with innuendoes, if necessary] to the great damage, scandal, and disgrace of the said A. B., and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity.

And the jurors aforesaid upon their oath aforesaid do further present, that the Second count said C. D., contriving and intending as aforesaid, afterwards, to wit, on the day and year aforesaid, with force and arms, at the parish aforesaid in the county aforesaid, wickedly, wilfully, and maliciously did provoke, instigate, excite, and challenge the said A. B. to fight a duel with and against him the said C. D. to the great damage of the said A. B., and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity. [If no duel was fought alter the second count, stating merely the attempt to provoke, &c.]

(No. 4.)

[Commence as in the form (No. 3) to the *, and then thus:] wickedly, wilfully, and maliciously did speak, declare, say, and publish to, and in the presence and hearing of, the said A. B. these words following, that is to say: [here set out the words used,] with intent to instigate, excite, and provoke the said A. B. to challenge him the said C. D. to fight a duel with and against him the said A. B., to the great damage of the said A. B., and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity.

---

Champertiy. See Maintenance, Vol. III.

Chapel. See post, Church, Vol. I.

Character. Evidence as to. See post, Evidence, Vol. II. p. 87; Rape, Vol. V.

Charges. See post, Costs, Vol. I.

---

Charitable Donations. (a)

[52 Geo. III. c. 102.]

THE stat. 52 Geo. III. c. 102, for registering and securing of charitable donations, after reciting that "whereas charitable donations have been given for the benefit of poor and other persons in England and Wales to a very

(a) The 52 Geo. III. c. 101, relates to charitable trusts.
Charitable Donations.

The like of charitable donations which may hereafter be founded.

Clerks of the peace to provide proper books wherein registers shall be made.

Notice to be given in the London Gazette, if persons to be benefited shall not be wholly within one county.

If donations shall not be registered, a petition may be presented to the Lord Chancellor, or complaining thereof.

considerable amount, and many of the aforesaid donations appear to have been lost, and others, from the neglect of payment and the instigation of those persons who ought to superintend them, are in danger of being lost, or rendered very difficult to be preserved," enacts, "that a memorial or statement of the real and personal estate, and of the gross annual income, investment, and the general and particular objects of all and every charity and charities, and charitable donations, for the benefit of any poor or other persons in any place in England and Wales, which shall have been founded, established, made, benefited, increased, or secured, together with the names of the respective founders of or benefactors thereto, where known, and also of the person or persons in whose custody, possession, or control, the deeds, wills, and other instruments whereby such charities or charitable donations shall have been founded, established, made, benefited, increased, or secured, may be, and also of the names of the then trustees or trustees, feoffees or feoffees, possessed or possessors of such real or personal estate, shall, from and after six calendar months after the passing of this act, be registered by such person or persons who shall then be the trustee or trustees, feoffee or feoffees, possessors or possessors thereof, or some or one of such persons, in manner and form contained in the schedule to this act annexed, in the office of record of the peace of the county, or city or town, being a county of itself, within which such poor or other persons shall be; and such memorial or statement shall be signed by such person or persons causing the same to be registered and left in the said office of such clerk of the peace, who shall forthwith transmit a duplicate or copy of the same unto the Enrolment Office of the High Court of Chancery."

Sect. 2. "That wherever any such charity or charitable donations shall be founded, established, made or benefited, increased or secured, by any deed, will, or other instrument hereafter to be made or executed by any person or persons, that then a like memorial or statement, according to the directions hereinbefore contained, shall be registered, and left and transmitted as aforesaid, by such person or persons as are hereinbefore mentioned, within twelve months after the decease of such person or persons by whom such any such will, deed or deeds, or other instrument shall have been made or executed."

Sect. 3. "That for the purpose of such registries of such memorials or statements, the clerk of the peace for the time being of each and every county or city or town, being a county of itself, or riding within England and Wales, shall, as there shall be occasion, provide proper books of parchment or vellum, wherein such registers shall be made and entered; and every such original memorial or statement, and every such book provided as aforesaid, shall be carefully kept and preserved for public use and inspection in the office to which it shall belong, together with a correct index, to be made from time to time by such clerk of the peace, of such charities and charitable donations, distinguishing each by the name of the original or first donor or founder thereof, where known, or the appellation or title most generally used for such charity or charitable donations."

Sect. 4. "That in case the persons to be benefited by any such charity or charitable donations as aforesaid shall not be wholly within any one county, then and in such case such clerk of the peace of the county where any such charity or charitable donation shall be registered, shall forthwith notify in the London Gazette the name or title thereof, according to the appellation or title used in the index aforesaid, and the names of the several places wherein the objects of such charity or charitable donations shall be, and the particular or general objects thereof, and also the name of the county wherein such memorial or statement shall have been registered."

Sect. 5. "That if any such charity or charitable donation shall not be duly memorialized, stated, and registered according to the provisions of this act, it shall and may be lawful for any two persons or more, interested in such charity or charitable donations, to present a petition to the Lord Chancellor, Lord Keeper or Lords Commissioners for the custody of the great seal, or Master of the Rolls for the time being, or the Court of Exchequer, complaining thereof; and they are hereby required to hear such petition in a summary way, and upon affidavits, or such other evidence as shall be produced upon such hearing, to determine the same, and to make such order therein, and with respect to the costs of such application and proceedings, as to him or them shall seem fit, and which order shall be final and conclusive."
Charitable Donations.

Sect. 6. "That no proceedings under the provisions hereinbefore mentioned shall extend or be construed to extend to decide any right or title as to the property that shall be so registered, or as to the persons who shall be entitled, or claim to be entitled, to the benefit thereof, or any interest therein."

Sect. 7. "That all and every clerk of the peace of the several counties and ridings in England and Wales, shall, as often as required, make searches concerning all memorials and statements directed by this act to be entered in his or their office as aforesaid, and shall also give copies of the same under his hand, if required by any person whatsoever, who shall tender or be willing to pay him the sum or sums hereinafter directed to be allowed to him for such copies of such memorials or statements as aforesaid."

Sect. 8. "That every such clerks of the peace shall be allowed for the registering every such memorial or statement as is by this act directed, the sum of four shillings, and no more, in case the same do not exceed four hundred words; but if such memorial or statement shall exceed four hundred words, then after the rate and proportion of one shilling an hundred for all the words contained in such entry, and the like fees for the like number of words contained in every copy of any entry given out of the said register, and no more; and for every notification in the London Gazette, the costs of such notification, and the further sum of ten shillings for drawing and inserting the same, and transmitting the duplicate or copy hereinbefore mentioned unto the Enrollment Office of the High Court of Chancery, and no more."

Sect. 9. "That where any difficulty shall occur in making and preparing such memorial or statement as aforesaid, so as to render it necessary to employ any longer time than is allowed by the provisions of this act for registering such memorial or statement as hereinbefore is mentioned, it shall and may be lawful for the Court of Quarter Sessions for the county, or city or town, being a county of itself, wherein such memorial or statement is intended to be registered, to allow, on application made to them, and on examination of the circumstances, such further time, not exceeding six calendar months, as to such court shall seem necessary to be given for the purpose of duly registering such memorial or statement as hereinbefore is mentioned."

Sect. 10. "That it shall and may be lawful for the Court of Quarter Sessions of the county, or city or town, being a county of itself, wherein such statement or memorial shall have been registered, to allow such reasonable costs and charges attending the preparing and registering, notifying and transmitting such memorial or statement, with reference to the income of the charity or charitable donation, to such person or persons causing the same to be registered, and such court shall think fit; and it shall and may be lawful for such person or persons who shall have caused such memorial or statement to be registered, to deduct out of the income, funds, rents, and profits in his or their hands of such charity or charitable donation so by him or them memorialized and stated and registered, the sum and sums so allowed, and no more: provided always, that the said Court of Quarter Sessions shall not allow any sum whatever for and in respect of such costs and charges, unless it shall be stated to them upon the declaration in writing of the person or persons applying for such allowance, and signed by him or them, that such memorial or statement is to the best of his, her, or their knowledge and belief true in every respect, and that it doth contain to the best of his, her, or their knowledge and belief, a true and full account of the real and personal estate, annual gross income, investment, and the particular or general objects of the charity or charitable donation of which such memorial or statement shall have been registered, together with the names of the respective donors or benefactors thereto, where known, and also of the person or persons in whose custody, possession, or control, the deeds, wills, and other instruments hereinbefore mentioned, shall at such time be, and also the names of the trustee or trustees, feoffee or feoffees, possessor or possessors of such Charitable Donations.

PROVISIONS

52 Geo. 3, c. 102.
Not to extend to any donation not secured upon lands; nor to charitable institutions.

Act not to extend to any royal foundations, nor to certain institutions:

Nor to charitable institutions of Quakers.

Nor to charitable foundations, the accounts of which are directed to be passed in the court of chancery, &c.

Divers charities may be stated in the memorial.

Saving clause.

52 Geo. 3, c. 102.

real and personal estate: provided always, that none of the provisions herein before contained shall be construed to extend to any charity or charitable donation not issuing out of or secured upon any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, or directed by the founder or donor thereof to be secured thereon, or to be permanently invested in government or any public stocks or funds, nor to any charitable donation whatsoever, which by the direction of the donor thereof, or by the lawful rules of any charitable institution whatsoever, may be wholly or in part expended in and about the charitable purposes for which the same may have been given, at the discretion of the governors, directors, managers, or the trustee or trustees of such charitable institution at any time whatsoever."

Sect. 11. "That nothing in this act shall be construed to extend to any hospital, school, or other charitable institution whatsoever, which shall have been founded, improved, or regulated by or under the authority of the King's Most Excellent Majesty, or any of his royal predecessors, or of any special act of parliament thereunto particularly relating; nor to any charitable donation under the superintendence of any such hospital, school, or institution, nor to the governors of the corporation of the charity for the relief of poor widows and children of clergymen, nor to any friendly society, the rules whereof shall have been confirmed according to the provisions of the act or acts for the encouragement and relief of friendly societies; nor to either of the Universities of Oxford or Cambridge, nor to any college or hall thereto belonging, nor to any charitable bequest, devise, gift, or foundation whatsoever belonging thereto, or under the control, direction, superintendence, or management of the said Universities or either of them, or any college or hall therein respectively; nor to the Radcliffe Infirmary within the University of Oxford; nor to the colleges of Westminster, Eton, or Winchester, or any of them; nor to any cathedral or collegiate church within England and Wales; nor to the Charter House; nor to the corporation of the Trinity House of Deptford Strond; nor to any funds applicable to charitable purposes for the benefit of any persons of the Jewish nation."

Sect. 12. "That nothing in this act contained shall extend to any charitable foundation or donation which shall have been or shall be given to and for the benefit of any person or persons of the society of people called Quakers, and which shall be under the superintendence and control of persons of that persuasion."

Sect. 13. "That nothing in this act contained shall extend to any charity or charitable donation or foundation, the accounts of the income and expenditures whereof shall have been directed to be passed in the High Court of Chancery, nor to any charity or charitable donation or foundation, the annual gross income whereof shall not exceed forty shillings, and of which the trustee or trustees, feoffee or feoffees, possessor or possessors, some or one of them, shall within six months after the passing of this act deposit in the hands of the minister of the parish wherein any of the objects of the charity, charitable donation, or foundation, shall be, a written memorial or statement in like form as in the schedule hereunto annexed is contained, and which by such minister shall be forthwith deposited in the parish chest."

Sect. 14. "That where any body corporate, guild, or fraternity, shall be entrusted with the possession or distribution of divers charities or charitable donations or foundations, or of the rents and profits thereof, that in such cases all such charities, charitable donations and foundations, may be registered and stated in one and the same memorial."

Sect. 15. "Saving always to the King's Most Excellent Majesty, and to all other persons, such power of superintending and regulating charities and charitable establishments, and the property and funds thereof, as they respectively had before the making of this act."

SCHEDULE to which this Act refers.

A MEMORIAL or statement in pursuance of an Act for the registering and securing of charitable donations; whereby it is declared by the undersigned [state the name or names of the persons who sign the memorial or statement] that the real or personal estate [state this as the case may be] of the [state the title, or appellation of the charity or charitable donation] consists of [state this as the case may be]; and if real estate, whether it be in lands, tenements, or hereditaments, and of what tenure, and where the same are situate, or whether of any charge or incumbrance on any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, and where situate: and if personal estate, describe the nature of it, and how secured] and the gross annual income arising therefrom amounts to [state the sum] and the objects of which charity or charitable foundation are [state the general or particular objects of the charity] and which charity or charitable foundation was, according to the best of my [or our, as the case may be] knowledge and belief, founded by [state by whom; and if benefited, increased, or secured by any other person, state the same and by whom] and the deeds, wills, and other instruments [state this as the case may be]; and if no deeds, wills, or other instruments exist, state the same] are, to the best of my [or our, as the case may be] knowledge and belief, in the custody, possession, or control [state this as the case may be] of [state the name of the body corporate or natural person] and the trustees, feoffees, or possessors [state this as the case may be] of the said real and personal estate [state this as the case may be] are, to the best of my [or our, as the case may be] knowledge and belief [state the name of the body corporate or natural person, as the case may be].

(Signed)
A. B.
C. D.
E. F.

Trustees or trustees, feoffees, possessor or possessors of the real or personal estate [as the case may be] of the charity or charitable donation hereby memorialised and registered.

---

Cheat.

OF cheats punishable by public prosecution there are two kinds.

I. By the Common Law, 599.

II. By Statutes, 602.

[50 Geo. III. c. 59; 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 53.]

III. Indictment for, 605.

IV. Forms, 606.

---

I. By the Common Law.

Hawkins lays it down that "cheats, which are punishable by the common law, may in general be described to be deceitful practices, in defrauding or endeavouring to defraud another of his known right, by means of some artful device, contrary to the plain rules of common honesty; as by playing with false dice; or by causing an illiterate person to execute a deed to his prejudice, by reading it over to him in words different from those in which it was written; or by persuading a woman to execute writings to another, as her trustee, upon an intended marriage, which in truth contained no such thing, but only a warrant of attorney to confess a judgment; or by suppressing a will; and such like." 1 Hawk. c. 71, s. 1.

But this general doctrine would include a variety of injuries for which the party's only remedy would be by action on the case, and not by indictment; and it is now settled that at common law no mere fraud, not amounting to felony, is an indictable offence, unless it affects the crown or the public.

Thus the deceitful receiving of money from one man to the use of another, upon a false pretence of having a message and order to that purpose, is not punishable at common law by a criminal prosecution, because it is accompanied with no manner of artful contrivance, but only depends on a bare naked lie; and it is said to be needless to provide severe laws for such mischiefs, against which common prudence and caution may be a sufficient security. 1 Hawk. c. 71, s. 2; 2 East's P. C. 818.

---

Cheats by the common law described.

False message not indictable as a cheat.
CHEATS

Cheat. [1]

Cheat. [1]

In a case where a party obtained money of another, by pretending to come by the command of a third person to demand a debt or the like in his name, who was no voucher or token for his authority, it was held not indictable, for it was the party's own fault to trust him. And, by the Court, "We are not to indict one man for making a fool of another: let him bring his action." R. v. Jones, 2 Ld. Raym. 1013; 1 Salk. 379; 6 Mod. 105, S. C.

A person for a counterfeit pass was adjudged to the pillory, and fined. Dall. c. 32.

On an indictment against the defendant, a miller, for changing corn, and returning bad corn instead of it, it was considered maintainable; for being a cheat in the way of trade, it is deemed an offence against the public. R. v. Wood, 1 Sess. Ca. 217.

But in a later case, it was held not indictable for a miller receiving good barley to grind at his mill, to deliver a musty and unwholesome mixture of oat and barley meal, different from the produce of the barley: and Lord Ellenborough, C. J., there said, "The allegation that the quantity (of meal) delivered was musty and unwholesome, if it had alleged that the defendant delivered it as an article for the food of man, might possibly have sustained the indictment: but I cannot say that its being musty and unwholesome necessarily led to an inference that it was not for the food of man, and it is not stated that it was to be used for the sustentation of man, only that it was a mixture of oat and barley meal. As to the other point, that this is not an indictable offence, because it respects a matter transacted in the course of trade, and where no tokens were exhibited by which the party acquired any greater degree of credit; if the case had been that this miller was owner of a soke mill, to which the inhabitants of the vicinage were bound to resort in order to get their corn ground, and that the miller, observing the confidence of this his situation, had made it a colour for practising a fraud, this might have presented a different aspect; but as it is, it seems no more than the case of a common tradesman who is guilty of a fraud in a matter of trade or dealing." R. v. Haynes, 4 M. & S. 214; ante, 406.

A person, falsely pretending that he had power to discharge soldiers, took money of a soldier to discharge him, and being indicted for the same, the court held the indictment to be good. Serlestaed's case, 1 Latch. 202.

As there are frauds which may be relieved civilly, and not punished criminally, (with the complaints whereof the courts of equity do generally abound); so there are other frauds, which in a special case may not be helped civilly, and yet shall be punished criminally: thus if a minor go about the town, and pretending to be of age, defraud many persons by taking credit for considerable quantities of goods, and then insist on his nonage; the persons injured cannot recover the value of their goods, but they may indict and punish him for a common cheat. Barl. 100.

And in the case of Q. v. Orbell it was held to be an indictable offence to get a person to lay money on a race, and to prevail with the party to run booty; for though the cheat was private in this particular, yet it was public in its consequences. 6 Mod. 42. Sed quia. The parties might at all events have been indicted for a conspiracy.

So where two effected a cheat, by means of the one pretending to be a merchant and the other a broker, and as such bartering pretended wine for hats, they were convicted. R. v. Macartney & Fordeburne, 2 Ld. Raym. 1179. But the ground of that judgment was that it was a conspiracy. 2 East's P. C. 624.

Finally, the distinction which, as it seemeth, will solve almost all cases of this kind, was taken in the case of R. v. Wheatley, 1 Bla. Rep. 273; 2 Burr. 1125, S. C. The defendant was indicted and convicted for selling beer short of the due and just measure, to wit, sixteen gallons as and for eighteen. Upon a motion in arrest of judgment, it was said by the court, this is only an inconvenience and injury to a private person, arising from that private person's own negligence and carelessness in not measuring the liquor upon receiving it, to see whether it held the just measure or not. "Offences that are indictable must be such as affect the public, as if a man use false weights and measures, and sell by them to all or to many of his customers, or use them in the general course of his dealing: so if there be any conspiracy to cheat; for these are deceptions that common care and prudence are not sufficient to guard against. These are much more than private injuries; they are public offences." But in the present case it is a mere private imposition or deception. No false weights or measures are used; no conspiracy; only an imposition upon the person he was dealing with, in delivering him a less quantity instead of a greater; which the other carelessly accepted. It is only a non-performance of his contract; for which non-performance the other may bring his action. So the selling an unsound horse for a sound one is not indictable. The buyer should be more upon his guard; and the distinction which was laid down, as proper to be attended to in all cases of this kind is this; that in such impositions or deceits where common prudence may guard persons against their suffering from them, the offence is not indictable; but where false weights and measures are used, or false tokens produced, or such methods taken to cheat and deceive, as people cannot by any ordinary care or prudence be guarded against, there it is an offence indictable.
Offence at Common Law.

If therefore a person sell by false weights, though only to one person, it is an indictable offence; but if, without false weights, he sells to many persons a less quantity than he pretends to sell, he is not indictable. R. v. Young, 3 T. R. 104.

An indictment at common law charged the defendant with deceitfully intending, by divers crafty means and subtle devices, to obtain possession of certain lottery tickets, the property of A., pretending that he wanted to purchase them, and delivered to A. a fictitious order for the payment of money, purporting to be a draft upon a banker for the amount, which he knew he had no authority to draw, and would not be paid; by which he obtained the tickets, and defrauded the prosecutor of the value. It was objected in arrest of judgment that the defendant was not charged with having used any false token to accomplish the deceit; for that the banker's check drawn by the defendant himself, entitled him to no more credit than his bare assertion that the money would be paid. And the objection was held good, and the judgment arrested. R. v. Laro, 6 T. R. 565.

But in another case, on an indictment on the repealed stat. 30 Geo. II. c. 24, where it appeared that the prisoner had obtained property by giving a draft on his banker and pretending he had cash there to pay it, Bayley, J. (before whom the prisoner was tried) said that this point had been recently before the judges, and that they were all of opinion that it is an indictable offence fraudulently to obtain goods by giving in payment a cheque upon a banker with whom the party keeps no cash, and which he knows will not be paid. R. v. Jackson, 3 Campb. 370. H. W. in R. v. Gibbs, 1 East, 185, Ld. Kenyon again held that an indictment for a cheat at common law cannot be maintained unless some false token be made use of: a mere false affirmation is not sufficient. 2 East's P. C. 818.

All frauds affecting the crown and the public at large are indictable, though arising out of a particular transaction or contract with the party. 2 East's P. C. 821.

Therefore an indictment lies for wilfully, deceitfully and maliciously supplying prisoners of war with unwholesome food, not fit to be eaten by man. Trew's case, 2 East's P. C. 821.

So obtaining the king's bounty for enlisting as a soldier by an apprentice, reclaimable by his master, is an indictable offence at common law. In such case, the indenture of apprenticeship must be proved by one of the two subscribing witnesses, in order to warrant the conviction. R. v. Jones, Coventry Lent Assizes, 1777; 2 East's P. C. 822; 1 Leach, 174.

Some of the above offences are punishable not only by fine and imprisonment, but further with other infamous punishment; as in Letham's case, who was three times set on the pillory (a) for cheating with false dice. Cro. Jac.

(a) Abolished by stat. 56 Geo. III. subornation of perjury. See title Ills. c. 136, except in cases of perjury or burg., &c. Vol. V.

Cheats at Common Law.

A mere false affirmation is not indictable as a cheat.

The general rule.

False weights.

Drawing false cheques.

Frauds upon the crown or public.

Enlistment by an apprentice.

Punishment.
II. By Statute.

The stat. 7 and 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, a. 53, after reciting that "whereas a failure of justice frequently arises from the subtle distinction between larceny and fraud," enacts "that if any person shall by any false pretence obtain from any other person any chattel, money, or valuable security, (a) with intent to cheat or defraud any person of the same, every such offender shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, and being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for the term of seven years, or to suffer such other punishment, by fine or imprisonment, (b) or by both, as the court shall award: provided always that if, upon the trial of any person indicted for such misdemeanour, it shall be proved that he obtained the property in question in any such manner as to amount in law to larceny, he shall not by reason thereof be entitled to be acquitted of such misdemeanour; and no such indictment shall be removable by certiorari; (c) and no person tried for such misdemeanour shall be liable to be afterwards prosecuted for larceny upon the same facts." See the general clauses affecting all the provisions of this act, post, [Harr}eyy, Vol. III. 550 to 556.

The 7 and 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, wholly repeals the stat. 33 Hen. VIII. c. 1, (respecting privy tokens, &c.) and the stat. 52 Geo. III. c. 64; and also repeals so much of the stat. 30 Geo. II. c. 24, "as relates to obtaining by false pretence or pretences, any property as therein mentioned;" and so much of the stat. 3 Geo. IV. c. 114, (the act as to Hard Labour,) as relates to this offence.

The latter part of the 7 and 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, a. 53, enacting that the offence of felony shall not merge in the misdemeanour if it appear there was a felony, is new and very important; for before the act, if it appeared the offence amounted to larceny, defendant was acquitted, and very nice questions arise as to what amounted to larceny where false pretences are used. 2 East's P. C. 889; R. v. Adams, R. & R. C. C. 225.

What a False Pretence within the Act[—]There may be a sufficient false pretence within the act by the acts and conduct of the party, without any verbal representations of a false and fraudulent nature. The fact of uttering a counterfeit note as a genuine note is tantamount to a representation that it was so. R. v. Freeth, R. & R. C. C. 127; R. v. Story, id. 81. See 3 C. & P. 420.

If a person obtain goods from another upon giving him in payment his check upon a banker, with whom in fact he has no account, this, (though not indictable as a fraud at common law, (R. v. Lava, 6 T. R. 565, ante, 601,) is a false pretence within the act. R. v. Jackson, 3 Campb. 370.

But obtaining credit in account from the party's own banker, by drawing a bill on a person on whom the party has no right to draw, and which has no chance of being paid, is not within the above act, though the banker pays money for him in consequence thereof to an extent he would not otherwise have done. R. v. Wavell, R. & M. C. C. 224.

It will not avail the defendants that the pretence consists in a false representation of something to take place at a future time, as that a bet had been laid that a certain pedestrian feast would be performed, for it is equally within the intention of the statute. R. v. Young and others, 3 T. R. 98.

(a) As to what is such valuable security, see sect. 5 of the act, post, [Har}eyy, Vol. III. p. 561.

(b) As to hard labour or solitary confinement, see sect. 4 of the act, post, [Har}eyy, Vol. III. p. 552.

(c) Where counts are joined for a conspiracy, at common law, to obtain goods by false pretences, the certiorari is not taken away. R. v. Saunders, 5 D. & R. 611.
II.

Offence by Statute.

So if a man be authorised to inspect and pay a number of journeymen, and to draw on the clerk of the masters for the amount of the sums earned, and he delivers in a false account, and draws on the clerk for the amount in such false account, he will be guilty under the statute; as he would never have obtained the credit unless he had delivered his fictitious estimate. R. v. Wickell, 2 East, P. C. 830.

And if a carrier obtains money by pretending to have delivered goods and to have lost the receipt given him by the person to whom they were directed, he may be indicted for the statutory offence. R. v. Airey, 2 East's Rep. 30.

R. v. Count Villeneuve, 1778, cited in 3 T. R. 96, which was tried before Morton, C. J., of Chester, and Buller, J., at Chester. The defendant applied to Sir T. Broughton, telling him that he was instructed by the Duke de Lauzun to take some horses from Ireland to London, and that he had been detained so long by contrary winds that his money was spent. Sir T. Broughton was thereupon induced to advance some money to him. But it afterwards appearing that the whole story was a fiction, the defendant was tried for a cheat on the statute 30 Geo. II. and convicted. The judgment was affirmed.

If a person procuring a tradesman to sell him goods as for ready money, direct him to send his servant with them to his lodgings, and then deliver fabricated bills in payment, retaining the goods, though he cannot be prosecuted for felony in stealing them, he may be found guilty of obtaining them by false pretences. 2 Leach, 614.

It seems that obtaining money from the county treasurer by a forged order, purporting to be signed by a magistrate, for payment of expenses of conveying vagrants, is an offence within the act. R. v. Rushworth, Russ. & Ry. C. C. 317; 1 Stark. C. N. P. 306, S. C.

But a pretence that the party will do an act he did not mean to do, as a pretence that he will pay for goods on delivery, is not a false pretence within the act. R. v. Goodhall, id. 461; R. v. Clifford, in K. B. 1824.

If one professes to sell an interest in property and receives the purchase money, the vendee taking the usual covenant for title, and it turns out that the vendor had in fact previously sold his interest in the property to a third person, this is not sufficient to support an indictment for obtaining money by false pretences. R. v. Coddrington, 1 C. & P. 661.

If a man assume the name of another to whom money is required to be paid by a genuine instrument, this is not within the act. R. v. Story, Russ. & Ry. *C. C. 81.

Where the defendants were charged with obtaining money by colour and pretence of their being collectors of the property tax, and it appeared in evidence that they had in fact been appointed collectors by the commissioners, though in an informal manner: this was held not to be a false pretence within the meaning of the act. R. v. Dobson, 7 East, 219.

The Property obtained—A person endeavouring by a counterfeit letter to defraud another of money, and being apprehended on suspicion of such fraud before he hath got the goods into his possession, seems not to be within this statute. R. v. Brian, 2 Ex. Ca. 27. See Russ. & Ry. C. C. 107, n.; R. v. Phillips, 6 East, 464.

The Property obtained—The statute in the 5th section defines what shall be deemed a valuable security within the meaning of the act. See the section, post, Hartley, Vol. III. p. 551.

Where a prisoner by false pretence obtained a check on a banker on unstamped paper, payable to D. F. J., and not payable to bearer, this was held not a valuable security, as it would have been a breach of the law for the banker to pay it. R. v. Yates, 1828; Carr. C. L. 333; R. & M. C. C. 170, S. C.

The Intent—The pretence must be only for the purpose of obtaining the property. A pretence to a parish officer as an excuse for not working, that the party has not clothes, when he really has, though it induce the officer to give him clothes, is not obtaining goods by false pretences within the act. R. v. Wokeing, Russ. & Ry. C. C. R. 504.

The intent may be implied sufficiently from the facts of the case. See ante, 508.

Certiorari.—The statute expressly takes away the right to a certiorari; however, where counts are joined on this act with counts for a conspiracy at common law, to obtain goods by false pretences, the certiorari is not taken away. R. v. Saunders, 5 D. & R. 611. See ante, Certiorari, p. 512.

Other Statutes relating to.—There are several enactments respecting particular persons and things, which make the obtaining of property under a particular species of fraud a larceny, and which will be found considered, post, Larceny, Vol. III. Amongst these are frauds of agents, servants, lodgers, manufacturers, and persons employed in public offices. As to the offence of personating bail, see ante, 308; personating soldiers or seamen, post, Military Law, Vol. III.; Seamen, Vol. V.

The stat. 56 Geo. III. c. 59, for the more effectually preventing the embezzlement of money or securities for money belonging to the public, by any collector, receiver, or other person entrusted with the receipt, care, or management thereof, enacts, "that if any person or persons to whom any money or securities for money shall be issued for public services, shall from and after the passing of this act embezzle such money, or in any manner fraudulently apply the same to his own use or benefit, or for any purpose whatever except for public services, every such person so offending, and being thereof duly convicted according to law, in any part of the United Kingdom, shall be adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be sentenced to be transported beyond the sea, or to receive such other punishment as may by law be inflicted on persons guilty of misdemeanors, and as the court before which such offenders may be tried and convicted shall adjudge."

Sect. 2. "That if any such officer, collector or receiver so entrusted with the receipt, custody or management of any part of the public revenues, shall knowingly furnish false statements or returns of the sums of money collected by him or entrusted to his care, or of the balances of money in his hands or under his control, such officer, collector or receiver so offending, and being thereof convicted, shall be adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be adjudged to suffer the punishment of fine and imprisonment, at the discretion of the court, and be rendered for ever incapable of holding or enjoying any office under the crown."

The Annual Mutiny Act usually enacts, that any person who shall knowingly, wilfully, and designedly, make any false representation of any particular contained in the oaths marked (A.) and (B.), and certificates marked (C.) and (D.), (a) in the schedule to this act respectively contained and annexed, (oaths and certificates after enlistment,) before the justice of the peace or magistrate, at the time of his attestation, for the purposes of obtaining, and shall obtain, any enlisting money, or any bounty for entering into his Majesty's service, or any other money, shall be deemed guilty of obtaining money under false pretences, if in England, within the true intent and meaning of the stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29; and the production of such certificate and proof of the handwriting of the justice of the peace giving such certificate, shall be sufficient evidence of such party having represented the several particulars contained in the oath sworn by him and specified in the certificate of the justice at the time of his being attested; and that proof by oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, that the person so prosecuted hath freely and voluntarily declared or acknowledged, that, at the time of his enlistment, he belonged to the militia, or to any regiment in his Majesty's service, or to his Majesty's navy or marines, shall be deemed and taken as evidence of the fact so by him declared or acknowledged, without production of any roll or other document to prove the same.

(a) See forms, post, Military Law, Vol. III.
III. Indictment for.

Form of.—As to the venue in general, see post, Inquisition, Vol. III. p. 330 to 333. The venue should be laid in the county where the money was obtained, and not where the false pretences were used. R. v. Burdett, 4 Barn. & Ald. 179.

Several defendants may be included in the same indictment, if they were all jointly concerned in the false pretence used; see 3 T. R. 98. So several charges may be included in the same indictment. Id.

It is necessary to set forth the false pretences employed by the defendant as they will appear at the trial. R. v. Mason, 2 T. R. 581; 1 Campb. 495; R. v. Munor, 1 Scoc. Ca. 201; 2 Stra. 1127.

In R. v. Mason, 2 T. R. 581, the defendant was indicted for obtaining money by false pretences; and on his trial at the sessions at Worcester he was convicted, and received sentence of transportation for seven years. The defendant brought a writ of error, and assigned for error that it did not appear by the indictment what the particular and specific false pretences were, by which he obtained the money. Buller, J. The question is not a new one: I remember a case when I was at the bar, and I argued it on the analogy to the case in Strange for obtaining a note by false tokens, which entirely governs this. That was a case on the stat. 33 Hen. VIII. c. 1, which makes it an offence to obtain money or goods by false tokens. The stat. 30 Geo. II. c. 24, only enlarges the description of the offence in the statute of Hen. VIII. Both statutes are made in pari materia; and whatever has been determined in the construction of one of them is a sound rule of construction for the other. The judgment was arrested in the case in Strange; because the indictment did not specify the false tokens; then, by the same reason, an indictment on stat. 30 Geo. II. c. 24, which speaks of false pretences, must state what the false pretences are, otherwise the indictment is bad; there is no distinction between the two cases, the same objection which held in the one must also prevail in the other. I am of opinion that the objection is fatal. Grose, J., of the same opinion; observing, that this is a charge for a precise crime, and therefore it must be alleged. Judgment reversed, and the defendant ordered to be set at liberty.

The false pretences must be proved as laid; for here it was alleged that the defendant said he had paid a sum of money into the Bank of England, and it was proved in evidence that he merely alleged "the money has been paid into the bank," the variance was held fatal; 1 Campb. 494. But a basket is sufficiently described in the proceedings, under the general term "parcel;" 1 Campb. 212. And it does not seem necessary to describe the false pretences with greater minuteness than that with which they were presented to the mind of the party injured at the time the imposition was practised upon him; 3 T. R. 102. On an indictment for delivering in payment of a horse certain promissory notes, which the prisoner knew to be not good nor of any value, the notes purported to be of a country bank, which was supposed to have failed; it was held, that at all events it was necessary to prove that the notes were bad and of no value. R. v. Flint, R. & R. C. C. 460. See R. v. Spencer, 3 Car. & P. 420.

If the indictment charge the defendant with having attempted to obtain money by means of a paper writing purporting to be an order for money, and the instrument cannot be considered as stated in the indictment to be such an order, it is bad. R. v. Cartwright R. & R. C. C. 106.

It is not necessary to prove the whole of the pretence charged; proof of part of the pretence, and that the money was obtained by that part will suffice. R. v. Hill, R. & R. C. C. 190.

It is necessary to aver that the defendant did knowingly and designedly pretend, &c. and it is sufficient to aver that the defendant did knowingly and designedly obtain the goods by means of the false pretences. R. v. Howorth, 3 Stark. C. N. P. 26. See also R. v. Hill, supra.

The intent to cheat should be stated in every material part of the indictment; and an indictment for presenting a forged order to W. L. treasurer, Cheat.

The property obtained.

Owner of.

Negativing truth of pretences.

&c. pretending it was genuine, and obtaining from W. L. under it, 41. 10s. 6d. after charging that the prisoner, with intent to cheat, &c. the treasurer presented the order, and that he knowingly, &c. pretended it was a genuine order, proceeded; "and so the jurors, &c. say, that the prisoner, on, &c. did obtain the said sum of, &c." but the intent to cheat and defraud W. L. was not stated in this part of the indictment, nor was the obtaining charged to have been effected knowingly and designedly, the indictment was held bad. R. v. Rushworth, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 396; R. & R. C. C. 317, S. C.

The property which the defendant obtained should be stated accurately. See post, Indictment, Vol. III. p. 348.

The statement as to who was the owner of the property should be according to the fact, or a variance would be fatal. See post, Indictment, Vol. III. p. 348.

An indictment for a fraud at common law, charging the false pretence to have been made to one person, and the deceit to have been practised on a different person, was held bad. R. v. Lara, 2 Leach, 647; 2 East's P. C. 819, 824; 6 T. R. 565. S. C.

The indictment must negative by special averment the truth of the pretences. It is not enough to charge that the defendant falsely pretended, &c. (setting forth the pretences) by means of which said false pretences he obtained the money, &c. therefore for want of such averment in the indictment, the Court of King's Bench reversed the judgment. R. v. Perrott, 2 M. & S. 379.

IV. Forms.

Warrant on 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 53, to apprehend an offender for a cheat.

County of WHEREAS complaint hath been made unto me one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, upon the oath of A. I. of to wit, that on the day of A. O. did knowingly, unwillingly, and designedly, by false pretences then and there made by him, that is to say, by [here state shortly the false pretences,] obtain certain goods and chattels [or monies, or valuable securities,] to wit, &c. of the property, goods, and chattels of the said A. I. of and from the said A. I. with intent then and there to cheat and defraud the said A. I. of the same, contrary to the statute in that case made and provided. These are, therefore, in his Majesty's name, to command you, upon sight hereof, forthwith to apprehend and bring the said A. O. before me, to answer the said complaint, and further to be dealt with according to law. Given under my hand and seal this day of A. D. 18

Commitment under 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 29, s. 53, for obtaining goods by false pretences.

[Commencement as usual, ante, p. 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. knowingly, unwillingly, and designedly, by certain false pretences, then and there made by him, that is to say, [here state shortly the false pretences,] did then and there obtain from the said C. D. certain goods and chattels [or monies, or valuable securities,] of the said C. D. with intent then and there to cheat and defraud the said C. D. of the same, against the form of the statute in that case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual, as ante, p. 8, to the end.]

Indictment at common law for selling by false weights and measures.

—— THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C. D. late of, &c. on, &c. and from thence until the taking this inquisition, did use and exercise the trade and business of a shopkeeper, and during that time did deal in the buying and selling by weight of divers goods, wares, and merchandizes, to wit, at, &c. aforesaid; and that the said C. D. being a person of wicked and depraved mind, and contriving and fraudulently intending to cheat and defraud the subject of our said Lord the king, whilst he used and exercised his said trade and business, to wit, on the said, &c. and on divers other days and times between that and the day of taking this inquisition, at, &c. aforesaid, did knowingly, unwillingly, wilfully, and publicly keep in a certain shop there, wherein the said C. D. did do as aforesaid carry on his said trade, a certain false pair of scales for the weighing of goods, wares, and merchandizes, by him sold and dispensed of in the way of his said trade; which said scales were then and there, by artful and deceitful ways and mean, so made and constructed as to cause the goods, wares, and merchandizes weighed therein and sold thereby, to appear of greater weight than the real and true weight by one-eighth part of such apparent weight; and that the said C. D. on, &c. aforesaid, at, &c. aforesaid, (he the said C. D. on and there knowing the said scales to be false as aforesaid,) did knowingly, willingly, and fraudulently sell and utter to one A. B. a subject of our said Lord the King, certain goods in the way of his said trade, to wit, a large quantity of [butter] weighed in and by the said false scales, as and for two pounds of weight of [butter] whereas in truth and in fact the weight of the said [butter] so sold as aforesaid was short and deficient of the said weight of two pounds by one-sixth part of the said weight of two pounds, to wit, at, &c. aforesaid, to the great damage of the said A. B. to the evil example of all others, and against the peace of our Lord the King his crown and dignity.

(No. 4.)

--- THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that L. P. late of, &c. being an evil disposed person, and not minding to get his living by truth and honest labour, according to the laws of this realm, but compassing and devising how he might unlawfully obtain and get into his hands and possession the monies of the honest liege subjects of our said Lord the King, for the maintenance of his unthrifty living, on, &c. at, &c. aforesaid, falsely and deceitfully did pretend and affirm to one T. T. that, his, the said L. P.'s name, was H. H. and that he was the son of H. H. of N. in the county of S. (assuming J. H. of N. in the county of S. clerk,) and that the said L. P. a certain false and counterfeit letter, in the name of him the said J. H. as a true letter of the proper handwriting of him the said J. H. falsely, fraudulently, and deceitfully, to the said T. T. then and there did deliver, (he the said J. H. of N. in the county of S. clerk, then and long before being the special friend and intimate acquaintance of him the said T. T.,) by which said false and counterfeit letter it was mentioned that the said J. H. desired the said T. T. to supply the bearer thereof, Mr. J. H. with the sum above written, and to place it to his account, (meaning the account of him the said J. H.) and that the said T. T. then and there believing the said false and counterfeit letter to be of the proper handwriting of him the said J. H. did then and there pay and deliver to the said L. P. sixty pieces of gold coin of the proper coin of this kingdom called guineas, of the value of sixty-three pounds of lawful money of Great Britain, whereas in truth and in fact, the said J. H. never did write or send, or cause to be written or sent, any such letter to the said T. T. desiring the said T. T. to supply the said H. H. with any sum of money whatever, and so the jurors, &c. do say, that the said L. P. on the said, &c. at the said, &c. by colour of the said counterfeit letter, and by the said false pretences, unlawfully, falsely, fraudulently, and deceitfully, did obtain and get into his hands and possession, of and from the said T. T. the said sum of sixty-three pounds of lawful money of Great Britain, of the monies of him the said T. T. and the said L. P. the said T. T. of his money aforesaid then and there fraudulently and deceitfully did deceive and defraud, to the great damage and deceit of the said T. T. to the evil example, &c. against the peace, &c. and also against the form, &c.

(No. 5.)

--- THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that J. O. late of, &c. being an evil disposed person, and a common cheat, and contriving and intending unlawfully, fraudulently and deceitfully to cheat and defraud one J. P. of, &c. [woollen draper] of his goods, wares, and merchandizes, [or monies, or securities, &c. see ante, 602.] on, &c. with force and arms, at, &c. aforesaid, unlawfully, knowingly, and designedly, did falsely pretend to the said J. P. that [he the said J. O. then was the servant of one G. G. of [tailor], the said G. G. then and long before being well known to the said J. P. and a customer of the said J. P. in his said business and way of trade] and that he the said J. O. was then sent by the said C. C. to the said J. P. for five yards of certain superfine woollen cloth,] by which said false pretences the said J. O. did then and there, to wit, on, &c. at, &c. aforesaid, unlawfully, knowingly, and designedly, obtain from the said J. P. [five yards of superfine woollen cloth] of the value of [four pounds, fifteen shillings] of the goods, wares, and merchandises of the said J. P. with intent then and there to cheat and defraud him the said J. P. of the same, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided;

(a) See this form, Cro. C. C. 7th ed. 307.
(b) This form may be readily adapted to other cases: see various other forms of Indictments, 8 Chit. C. L. 1006, &c.
Cheats. [IV.

whereas in truth and in fact, the said J. O. was not then the servant of the said C. C., and whereas he the said J. O. was not then or ever hath been sent by the said C. C. to the said J. P. for the said cloth, or for any cloth whatsoever,] to the great damage and deception of the said J. P. to the evil example of all others, against the peace of our said Lord the King, and also against the form of the statute in such case made and provided.

Cheese. See ante, Butter and Cheese, p. 547.

Children. (a)

I. Stealing of, 608.

[9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 21.]

II. Carnally abusing, 609.

(1.) A Girl under Ten Years of Age, 609.

(2.) A Girl between Ten and Twelve Years of Age, 609.

[9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 17.]

III. Concealing the Birth of, 610 to 613.

[9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 14.]

---

I. Child Stealing.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 21, it is enacted, "that if any person shall maliciously, either by force or fraud, lead or take away, or decoy or entice away, or detain any child under the age of ten years, with intent to deprive the parent or parents, or any other person having the lawful care or charge of such child, of the possession of such child, or with intent to steal any article upon or about the person of such child, to whomsoever such article may belong; or if any person shall, with any such intent as aforesaid, receive or harbour any such child, knowing the same to have been, by force or fraud, led, taken, decoyed, enticed away, or detained, as hereinbefore mentioned; every such offender and every person counselling, aiding, or abetting, such offender, shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable to be transported beyond the seas for the term of seven years, or to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, for any term not exceeding two years, and, if a male, to be once, twice, or thrice, publicly or privately whipped (if the court shall so think fit), in addition to such imprisonment: provided always, that no person who shall have claimed to be the father of an illegitimate child, or to have any right to the possession of such child, shall be liable to be prosecuted by virtue thereof, on account of his getting possession of such child, or taking such child out of the possession of the mother, or any other person having the lawful charge thereof.

(a) As to the abduction of, see title, Abduction, ante, p. 6; as to abortion, see title, Abortion, ante, p. 9; as to the support of bastard children, see title, Bastards, ante, p. 346; as to the support of poor children, see post, Poor, Vol. IV.; as to their being witnesses, see post, Evidence, Vol. II. p. 63, Infant, Vol. III.; as to right to defend parent, see title, Assault, ante, p. 270; as to their liability for crimes, and other points as to, see post, Infants, Vol. III.
I.] Children.—(Stealing, carnally abusing.)

See the general clauses, affecting this and all the provisions of this act, post, Malicious Injuries to Persons, Vol. III.

This act repeals the stat. 54 Geo. III. c. 101.

The word detain is introduced in this act, which was not in the former one.

(No. 1.)

[Commencement as usual, as ante, p. 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. a certain child, under the age of ten years, to wit, of the age of seven years, named E. F. the son, or daughter] of one J. F. then and there feloniously and maliciously, by force and fraud, did lead and take away, [or destroy and entice away, or detain, as the case may be,] with intent to deprive the said J. F. of the possession of the said child: [or with intent certain articles, to wit, &c. of the value of £ , upon and about the person of the said E. F. the goods and chattels of the said J. F. then and there feloniously to steal, take, and carry away:] [or with intent then and there to deprive one A. B. of the possession of the said E. F., the said A. B. then and there having the lawful care and charge of the said E. F. according to the facts] : against the form of the statute in that case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual to the end.]

(No. 2.)

THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C. D. late of, &c. on, &c. with force and arms, at, &c. a certain child under the age of ten years, to wit, of the age of seven years, named E. F. the son [or daughter] of one J. F. then and there feloniously and maliciously, by force and fraud, did lead and take away, with intent then and there to deprive the said J. F. of the possession of the said child: [or with intent then and there to deprive one A. B. of the possession of the said E. F.,] the said A. B. then and there having the lawful care and charge of the said E. F. [or with intent certain articles, to wit, &c. of the value of £ , upon and about the person of the said E. F. of the goods and chattels of the said J. F. then and there feloniously to steal, take, and carry away: according to the facts;] and if any doubt, add more counts accordingly,] against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our Lord the King his crown and dignity.

And the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do further present, that the said C. D. afterwards, to wit, on, &c. aforesaid, with force and arms, at, &c. aforesaid, a certain other child under the age of ten years, to wit, of the age of seven years, named E. F. the son [or daughter] of the said J. F. then and there feloniously, maliciously, and by fraud did destroy and entice away, with intent, &c. [as in the first count to the end.] [Add another count merely stating the detention.]

II. Carnally abusing Children.

(1.) Carnal Knowledge of Girls under Ten Years of Age.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 17, it is enacted, "that if any person shall unlawfully and carnally know and abuse any girl under the age of ten years, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall suffer death as a felon."

See the general clauses affecting the whole of this act, post, Malicious Injuries to Persons, Vol. III.

This act repeals the stat. 18 Eliz. c. 7.

By the 18th section of the statute, the law as to the proof of the offence is materially changed; it will be found, post, Rapes, Vol. V. p. 259.

(2.) Carnal Knowledge of Girls between Ten and Twelve Years of Age.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 17, it is enacted, "that if any person shall unlawfully and carnally know and abuse any girl being above the age of ten years and under the age of twelve years, every such offender shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall be liable to be imprisoned."

Carnally abusing a girl between ten and twelve years.

Penalitv for.

Vol. I.

2 R Children.

Carnally abusing, &c.

soned, with or without hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, for such term as the court shall award.”

See the general clauses, affecting this and all the provisions of this act, post, Malicious Injuries to Persons, Vol. III.

This act repeals c. 13 of the Statute of Westminster, (3 Edw. I.) By the 18th section of the act, the law as to the proof of this offence is materially changed, and will be found, post, Habe, Vol. V. p. 259.

As to the attempt to assault children, see ante, Attempts, &c. p. 292. Under these acts the consent or resistance of the child is immaterial.

As to the admissibility of children as witnesses, see post, Evidence, Vol. II. p. 63.

The indictment should conclude “contrary to the form of the statute.” East’s F. C. 448. The word “ravished” should not be inserted. Id.

Commitment on 9 Geo. 4, c. 31,
s. 17, for carnally abusing a girl under ten years.

[Commencement as usual, ante, p. 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. feloniously did assault one C. D., a girl under the age of ten years, to wit, of the age of [nine] years, and her the said C. D. then and there feloniously did unlawfully and carnally know and abuse, against the form of the statute in that case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual to the end.]

(No. 1.)

The like of a girl between ten and twelve years.

Same as preceding form, omitting “feloniously,” and stating the girl as “a girl above the age of ten years, and under the age of twelve years, to wit, of the age of [ten] years.”

(No. 2.)

Indictment on 9 Geo. 4, c. 31,
s. 17, for carnally abusing a girl under ten years.

—— THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C. D. late of, &c. on, &c. at, &c. with force and arms, in and upon one E. F. a girl under the age of ten years, to wit, of the age of [nine] years, in the peace of our Lord the King then and there being, feloniously did make an assault, and her the said E. F. then and there feloniously did unlawfully and carnally know and abuse, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity.

(No. 3.)

The like of a girl between ten and twelve years.

—— THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C. D. late of, &c. on, &c. at, &c. with force and arms, in and upon one E. F. a girl above the age of ten years and under the age of twelve years, to wit, of the age of [eleven] years, in the peace of God and our Lord the King then and there being, did unlawfully make an assault, and her the said E. F. then and there did unlawfully and carnally know and abuse, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity.

(No. 4.)

III. Concealment of Birth of.

The murder of bastard children by the mother was considered as a crime so difficult to be proved, that the stat. 21 Jac. c. 17, was passed, which made the concealment of the death of a bastard child an undeniable evidence of murder in the mother, except she could prove by one witness at least that it was actually born dead.

But this law, which was accounted to savour strongly of severity, and always construed most favourably for the unfortunate object of accusation, was repealed, together with an Irish act upon the same subject, by stat. 43 Geo. III. c. 58, s. 3, (called Lord Ellenborough’s Act.) 4 Bla. Com. 198; 1 Russ. 424.

This last act, except as to its repeal of the former, is repealed by the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, and by the 14th section of which act it is enacted, “that if any woman shall be delivered of a child, and shall, by secretly burying or Concealment of birth of.

otherwise disposing of the dead body of the said child, endeavour to conceal the body thereof, every such offender shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, and being convicted thereof shall be liable to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, for any term not exceeding two years; and it shall not be necessary to prove whether the child died before, at, or after its birth: provided always, that if any woman tried for the murder of her child shall be acquitted thereof, it shall be lawful for the jury, by whose verdict she shall be acquitted, to find, in case it shall so appear in evidence, that she was delivered of a child, and that she did, by secret burying or otherwise disposing of the dead body of such child, endeavour to conceal the birth thereof, and thereupon the court may pass such sentence as if she had been convicted upon an indictment for the concealment of the birth.”

See the general clauses, post, Malicious Injuries to Persons, Vol. III.

This provision is in effect nearly the same as that of the 43 Geo. III. c. 58, s. 3, except that the woman may now be indicted for the concealment as a specific misdemeanour, whereas under the 43 Geo. III. she could be only found guilty of this offence after a trial on an indictment or inquisition for murder; and also, that by this act, hard labour may be imposed. Also by this new act, the offence is extended to the concealment of the birth of any child, whether a bastard or not.

A woman may now be convicted of concealing the birth of her dead bastard child, on an indictment for that specific misdemeanour, as well as after a trial for murder, on being acquitted of the capital charge; and it should also be observed, that if the coroner’s jury find that the birth of the child was concealed, this will neither put the party upon her trial, nor warrant the coroner in committing her; and this being only a misdemeanour, it seems that there is no law that justifies her detention till a magistrate’s warrant can be taken out. Car. C. L. 242, 3; see R. v. Maynard, R. & R. C. C. 240; R. v. Cole, 3 Campb. 371.

The stat. 43 Geo. III. c. 58, s. 3 & 4, was held to extend to all cases of concealment of the birth, whether the child be born alive or otherwise, and although the birth was probably known to an accomplice. R. v. Cormall, Russ. & R. C. C. R. 336. The same law would apply to this new act.

In the case of R. v. Mary Southern, 1 Burn’s J. 24th ed. 335, the prisoner was indicted for the wilful murder of her female bastard child. It appeared in evidence, that in the course of the night she was delivered of the child, which at four o’clock in the morning she took and threw into the privy. It also appeared that she had provided a cap and some trifling articles of childbed-linen. No marks of violence appeared on the body of the child; and the surgeon, who examined the prisoner soon after her delivery, added, that from the state of the after-birth, and from the appearance of the child, he was of opinion that even if the child had been born alive, it could only have lived for a very short period. It was contended for the prisoner, that the statute of 43 Geo. III. c. 58, did not apply to the case of a still-born bastard child; and that from the construction which had been put upon the former stat. of 21 James I. c. 27, (the defects of which it was the object of the stat. 43 Geo. III. c. 58, to remedy, and within the provisions of which the present case would not fall,) that even if it did not sufficiently appear that the child was born dead, the circumstances of the prisoner having made provision for the birth would take the case out of the statute. But Bayley, J. said, he should rule that the stat. 43 Geo. III. c. 58, extended to all cases, whether it was proved that the child was still-born, or left the matter in doubt; and that he was of opinion in this case there was sufficient evidence to go to the jury of a concealment of the birth. His lordship added, that if the prisoner had avowed her pregnancy while she was in that state, or had, to the knowledge of any other persons, made preparation for her confinement, these circumstances would undoubtedly have been evidence to have satisfied a jury that the putting away the child was not for the purpose of concealing the birth, but that they would only have been matters of evidence, and would not have withdrawn the question of concealment from the consideration of the jury. The jury found the prisoner guilty of the con-
CHILDREN.

Children.

CONCEALMENT OF BIRTH OF.

of concealment, and she was sentenced to be imprisoned two months in the house of correction.

In the case of Anne Bayley, tried for child murder at Stafford, 1828, Cor. C. L. 245, Vaughan, B. laid down, that on all inquests held on the bodies of dead bastard children, it was the bounden duty of the coroner to tell the jury, in all cases where there was not the most clear and decisive proof that the child was born alive, that they ought never to think of returning a verdict of wilful murder against the mother.

If any person, even an accomplice, were present at the birth; R. v. Peat, 1 East's P. C. 229; or if the mother called for help, or had previously confessed her pregnancy; Id. 228; these circumstances would probably negative the concealment. So if the woman made provision for the birth of her child, this also might be deemed a circumstance indicative of her intention not to conceal it. Id. (a).

As to the offence of abortion, see ante, Abortion, p. 9.

As to the murder of bastards, see post, Homicides, Vol. III.

(No. 1.)

[Commencement as usual, as ante, p. 8. (No. 1.)] On, &c. at, &c. in the said county, being then and there delivered of a certain child, did, by secretly burying the same [or otherwise, according to the fact,] unlawfully endeavour to conceal the birth thereof, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and you the said keepers, &c. [as usual to the end].

(No. 2.)

THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that A. B. late of, &c. on, &c. at, &c. being then and there pregnant with child, was then and there delivered of the said child alive, and which said child then and there instantly died, and that the said A. B. being so delivered of the said child as aforesaid did then and there unlawfully endeavour to conceal the birth of the same by then and there secretly burying [or other-

(a) The following useful observations upon the subject of infanticide are collected in Mr. J. Jervis's work on Coroner, 127, 8.

The first question which naturally presents itself is, whether the child was born alive. As a test of this, it was formerly usual to immerse the lungs in water; it being supposed that if they floated, the child must have expired. But this test is now quite exploded, for it is obvious, that if the child make but one gasp and instantly dies, the lungs will swim in water as readily as if the child had breathed longer, and it is not uncommon for an infant to breathe as soon as its mouth is protruded from its mother, although it may die before its body is born. Hunt. 17. Air may also be passed into the lungs by inflation or be generated by purgation, and both will produce the same effect.

This question is, however, less difficult in cases of immature birth. Under the fifth month no foetus can be born alive; from the fifth to the seventh it may come into the world alive, but cannot maintain existence; but at the seventh it may be reared. As the period of gestation may be pretty accurately ascertained from the appearance of the foetus in these cases, the doubt is easily resolved. See For. Med. 312; Prac. Mid. 112; 3 Par. 100.

The next question is, the cause of the death. Now the child may die in the womb,—during the labour by pressure—or by strangulation from the umbilical cord. Elem. of Mid. 180. In which latter cases the body presents appearances which to a common observer would seem to be the marks of a violent death. Upon this subject Dr. Hunter says,—"When a child's head or face is swollen, and is very red or black, the vulva, because hunged people look so; or conclude it was strangled, nothing is more common in natural births."—p. 13.

But the child, though safely delivered, may still die without any criminal act of the mother. Children may be born so weak, that if left to themselves, after breathing or sobbing they would die; or even a strong child may be suffocated by being left upon its face either in the pool made by the natural discharges or upon wet clothes.—Hunt. 18. These and a variety of other causes may contribute to the death of new-born infants, particularly where the mother is delivered in secret by herself, and being exhausted, frequently faints and becomes insensible.
Concealment of Birth of.

wise disposing of, as the case may be] the dead body of the said [male] child, against the form of the statute in that case made and provided, and against the peace of our Lord the King his crown and dignity.

And the jurors aforesaid, on their oath aforesaid, do further present, that the said A. B. on, &c. aforesaid, at, &c. aforesaid, being then and there pregnant with a child, was then and there delivered of the said last-mentioned child, which said last-mentioned child was, at the time the said A. B. was so delivered of him as last aforesaid, dead, to wit, at, &c. aforesaid: and the said A. B. being so delivered of the said last-mentioned child as aforesaid, did then and there unlawfully endeavour to conceal the birth of the same, that is to say, by secretly burying [according to the fact] the dead body of the said last-mentioned child, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity.

Chimney Sweeps. See Apprentices, ante, p. 225.

Church.

I. General Matters relating thereto, 614.

II. The Churchyard, 615.

III. Seats and Pews, 616.

[58 Geo. III. c. 45; 59 Geo. III. c. 134; 3 Geo. IV. c. 72.]

V. Repairs of Church, 622.

(1.) Who to Repair, 622.

(2.) Who may compel Repairs, 623.

VI. Church Rates, 624 to 635.

(1.) Who may Make, and Steps preliminary to, 624.

(2.) Manner and Time of laying the Assessments, 625.

(3.) Form of it, 628.

(4.) Mode of levying it, 628.

(5.) Appeal against it, 631.

(6.) Church Rates under Acts for Building Additional Churches, 631.

[17 Geo. II. c. 37; 53 Geo. III. c. 127; 54 Geo. III. c. 170; 58 Geo. III. c. 45; 58 Geo. III. c. 69; 59 Geo. III. c. 134; 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 17.]

VII. Profanation of and Offences relative to Churches, 635, 636.

(1.) Arresting Clergymen performing, &c. Service, 635.

[9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 23.]

(2.) Holding Plays, Fairs, in Churches, &c. 635.

[13 Edw. I. st. 2, c. 6.]

(3.) Brawling, &c. in, 635.

[5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 4; 27 Geo. III. c. 44.]

(4.) Striking, &c. 636.

(5.) Stealing from, &c. 637.

(6.) Other Offences, 637.
THE ancient Saxon word is cyrce, the Danish kirke, the Belgic kerke, the Cimbric kirkia or kerk; probably from the Greek word ἱερόν, belonging to the Lord, or τοῦ καταν, the Lord’s House; so that we have lost the ancient pronunciation of the word (except in the northern parts of England and Scotland) by softening the letters c or ch, as we have done in many cases; which letters the ancient Greeks and Romans always pronounced hard, as the letter k.

Chancel (cancellus) seemeth properly to be so called, a cancellis, from the lattice work partition betwixt the quire and the body of the church, so framed as to separate the one from the other but not to intercept the sight. 1 Burn’s E. L. 342. (a)

Ile is said to proceed from the French word aile (ala), a wing, for that the Norman churches were built in the form of a cross, with a nave and two wings. Id. See post, 616, &c. as to seats in.

Although the church and churchyard be the parson’s and be consecrated, yet a man may prescribe to have a way through either. 2 Roll’s Abr. 295.

No one can make a private door into the churchyard without the consent of the minister, whose freehold the churchyard is, and a faculty also from the bishop for the same. 1 Burn’s E. L. 349.

The soil and freehold of the church and churchyard belongs solely to the parson or incumbent for public purposes, and he alone has the right of making any disposition of or bringing any action for an injury with respect thereto. See Bac. Abr. Churchwardens, B. The fee simple of the glebe is in abeyance.

1 Post. 344. Such freehold is in him for public purposes and not for his own emolument. Per Bayley, J. Bryan v. Whistler, 8 B. & C. 293.

If the walls, windows, or doors, or any part of the freehold of the church or churchyards be injured by any person, the incumbent of the rectory, or his tenant if they be let, may have his action for the damages. Wels. c. 39. As to the goods in the church, see post, Churchwardens, p. 640, &c.

No person can erect a church without the leave and consent of the bishop. Gibs. 189.

The civil law takes no notice of churches or chapels till they are consecrated by the bishop. 3 Inst. 203, 4; Gibs. 190; and see Stellaard v. Fredger, 2 Phil. Rep. 292. And as to the consecration and dedication of churches, &c. see 1 Burn’s E. L. 323 to 342, by Tyrwhit.

By stat. 12 C. II. c. 3, in cities and towns corporate, the bishop (with the consent of the mayor, aldermen, and justices of the peace, and of the patron) may unite two churches or chapels; and make order, with the like consent, that the parson present by turns, having regard to the value of the livings united; and the incumbents thereof shall be graduates.

Sect. 2. Notwithstanding any such union be made by virtue hereof, each of the parishes so united shall continue distinct as to all rates, taxes, parochial rates, charges, and duties, and all other privileges, &c. whatever, other than such as are before specified; and churchwardens shall be elected for each parish, as they were before such union made.

Clauses are commonly inserted in the several acts of parliament for making provision for the rectors of new churches, which clauses give certain powers to justices of the peace in relation to the assessments to be made for that purpose. And in the case of borrowing money for rebuilding clergyman's

(a) A grant of part of the chancel of a church by a lay impropriator to his heirs and assigns is not valid in law, and therefore such grantee, or those claiming under him, cannot support trespass for pulling down his or their pews there erected. See Clifford v. Wickl, 1 B. & A. 498. The parson alone can confer a complete title in the body of the church, but Lord Coke says, "that for the body of the church the ordinary is to place and dispose; in the chancel the freehold is in the parson, and is parcel of his glebe."

Brown. & Godb. R. 45. Custom may vest this power in the churchwardens. Post, 616; 1 Burn’s E. L. by Tyrwhitt, 342, n.
houses, by the 17 Geo. III. c. 53, s. 1, (called Mr. Gilbert's act, explained and amended by stat. 21 Geo. III. c. 66,) the estimates are to be sworn to before a justice of the peace or master in chancery; and see stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 89.

The stats. 58 Geo. III. c. 45; 59 Geo. III. c. 134, amended by stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 103; relate to the building and promoting the building of additional churches in populous parishes. See also the stats. 43 Geo. III. c. 108; 51 Geo. III. c. 115; 55 Geo. III. c. 147; 56 Geo. III. c. 141; and 1 Geo. IV. c. 6, relating to parsonage-houses, churchyards, and glebe lands.

But these enactments more immediately belonging to the ecclesiastical law, and not relating in any way to the office and duties of a justice of peace or parish officer, it has not been considered expedient to insert them in this work. See Burn's E. L. tit. Churches.

II. Churchyard.

A churchyard is a place belonging to the church, and where dead bodies are buried.

It is the common burial place for all parishioners. Comp. Incumb. 381.

The parishioners are bound to repair the fence of the churchyard at their own charge. Lind. 253; 2 Inst. 489.

And Lord Coke says, "that the parishioners ought to repair the inclosure of the churchyard, because the bodies of the more common sort are buried there, and for the preservation of the burials of those that were, or should have been while they lived, the temples of the Holy Ghost." 2 Inst. 489.

And if the churchyard be not decently inclosed the church (which is God's house) cannot decently be kept, and therefore this the parishioners ought to do by custom known and approved; and the composure thereof belonged to the ecclesiastical court. 2 Inst. 489.

By prescription the vicar may be liable to repair the fence. In R. v. Reynell, Clerk, 6 East, 315, a vicar was indicted for a misdemeanour, in not repairing the fence of a churchyard, which he had been immemorially bound to repair, by means whereof cattle broke in and injured the tombstones, church porch, &c. to the nuisance of the parishioners. Accordingly, after verdict for defendant, the Court of King's Bench refused to grant a rule nisi for a new trial, on the ground of the verdict being against evidence: leaving the prosecutors to indict again for any continuing want of repair.

If the owners of lands adjoining to the churchyard have used time out of mind to repair so much of the fence thereof as adjoineth to their ground, such custom is a good custom, and the churchwardens may have an action against them at the common law for the same. 2 Roll. Abr. 287; Gis. 194.

By Canons 85, the churchwardens or questmen shall take care that the churchyards be well and sufficiently repaired, fenced, and maintained with walls, rails, or pales, as have been in each place accustomed, at their charge unto whom by law the same appertaineth.

If trees in the churchyard be cut down, or the grass thereon eaten by a stranger, the incumbent may bring his action; Bro. Abr. Trespass, 210; and so may his lessee if the churchyard be let; 2 Roll. Abr. 337; the soil and freehold being in the incumbent, ante, 614.

As to burials in churchyards, see Burn's E. L. title, Burial; post, Rom. 367, Vol. III. p. 258.

The 58 Geo. III. c. 141, enables ecclesiastical corporate bodies under certain circumstances to alienate lands for enlarging cemeteries or churchyards.

By the 39 Geo. III. c. 134, s. 38, all parishes or extra-parochial places required by the commissioners shall furnish lands for enlarging existing or making additional churchyards or burial grounds, as the commissioners shall deem necessary; and the commissioners shall give notice to the churchwardens, to be left at their abodes, of the intention to enlarge the existing or Church.

III. Seats and Pews in.

By the general law and of common right all the pews in a parish church are the common property of the parish, they are for the use in common of the parishioners, who are all entitled to be seated orderly and conveniently without payment, so as best to provide for the accommodation of all.

 Fuller v. Lane, 2 Addams, 425; Walter v. Sumner, 1 Hagg. Rep. 317; Wats. c. 39; Pettman v. Bridger, Phill. 323.

Nonparishioners have no such rights: and directly an occupier of a pew ceases to be a parishioner, his right to the pew, however founded and how valid soever during his continuance in the parish, at once ceases and determines. Fuller v. Lane, 2 Addams, 425; Byerley v. Windsus, 5 B. & C. 19; 7 D. & R. 564, S. C.

By the 43 Geo. III. c. 108, s. 5, in every parochial church or chapel hereafter erected, ample provision shall be made for decent and suitable accommodation of all persons soever entitled to resort thither whose circumstances may render them unable to pay for the same; and see further the provisions in the acts for building new churches, post, 618, as to free seats, &c.

The seats cannot be sold nor let without a special act of parliament. Wyllie v. Mott, 1 Hagg. Rep. 29.

But though parishioners have this right, they are not at liberty to choose and take what seats they like, the distribution of seats among them rests in the ordinary, and which authority he in general exercises by the churchwardens. See Wats. c. 39; Pettman v. Bridger, Phill. 316, 323; Groves v. Rector of Hornsey, 1 Hagg. 394.

This authority must be exercised justly and discreetly by the churchwardens, or they may be corrected by the ordinary. Wyllie v. Mott, 1 Hagg. Rep. 33.

They should place the parishioners according to their rank and station. Phill. 323.

By custom the churchwardens may have the ordering of the seats, as in London. Wats. c. 39; 1 Salk. 167; Gibbs. 198.

When it belongs to a particular person.

The parson or rector improper is entitled to the chief seat in the chancel. Noy. 153; Johns. 264.

In some places where the parson repairs the church the vicar by prescription claims a right of a seat for his family. Johns. 242, 243.

It is a groundless notion with propriators that they have the same right in the great chancel that a nobleman hath in a lesser. 1 Burn’s E. L. 864.

Where a parishioner has a pew allotted to him he cannot on his ceasing to be a parishioner let the pew with, and thus annex it to his house; but it reverts to the disposal of the ordinary. See Wyllie v. Mott, 1 Hagg. Rep. 34; post, 617.

Right to by faculty or prescription.

A pew, seat, or priority in a seat, in the body of the church, may be appropriated and belong to a house in the parish, by faculty, or by prescription, which presupposes a faculty. See Roll. Abr. 288; Gibs. 221; Wyllie v. Mott, 1 Hagg. Rep. 39.

A prescriptive right thereto will be created if it hath been used and also repaired time out of mind by the inhabitants of the house. Gibs. 221; 2 Roll. Abr. 288; 1 T. R. 428.

No one can claim a seat in a church by prescription as appendant or belonging to land; but it must be laid as belonging to a house, in respect to the inhabitancy thereof. 1 Wood's Inst. b. 1, c. 7.

Nor can he claim such a seat by length of possession only, without claiming it as appurtenant to a messuage. Stocks v. Booth, 1 T. R. 428.

Nor can he claim it unless it be annexed to a house in the parish; and no action will lie at common law for disturbance in a seat unless it be so annexed. Mainwaring v. Giles, 5 B. & A. 358.

Nor can an extra-parochial person claim a pew in the body of the church. Semple, Byerley v. Winstan, 5 B. & C. 1; 7 D. & R. 584, S. C. ante, 616; and at all events such persons cannot claim it without the strongest proof of a prescriptive title; and therefore if they sue in the Ecclesiastical Court to be quieted in the possession of such seats, the Court of King's Bench will grant a prohibition. Id. If the seat were in the aisle it would be different, and he might have a prescriptive right there. Lewis v. Witts, 1 Hagg. 294; Gibs. 198, 362.

Nor can a seat be granted to a person and his heirs absolutely; for the seat doth not belong to the person, but to the inhabitant. Gibs. 221; Poph. 140; T. Raym. 246.

But if a faculty be annexed to a messuage, it may be transferred with the message to another person. Stocks v. Booth, 1 T. R. 431.

No gift of a pew is good without a faculty. Tattersall v. Knight, 1 Phil. R. 237.

Persons having pews appurtenant to their houses cannot let them to non-resident persons, and thus by contract defeat the general right of the parish. Walter v. Sumner, 1 Hagg. Rep. 317, 319; and Wyllie v. Mott, 1 Hagg. Rep. 34; ante, 616.

Possession for thirty-six years of a pew claimed as appurtenant to a messuage in the parish, has been held to be presumptive evidence of a prescriptive right in a case where the church had been rebuilt about forty years before. Rogers v. Brooks, 1 T. R. 431.

Where it appeared that the seat itself had been made thirty-five years ago for the accommodation of the plaintiff, and to put an end to a dispute between two families, this proof was held to rebut the presumption which would otherwise arise from so long a possession. Griffith v. Mathews, 5 T. R. 296; and see Walter v. Sumner, 1 Hagg. Rep. 322.

An old entry in a vestry book, signed by the churchwardens, stating that a pew had been repaired by A. in consideration of his using it, is evidence for a person claiming the pew under A. Price v. Littlewood, 3 Camp. 288.

Trespass will not lie by an individual for entering a pew because he has not exclusive possession; 1 T. R. 430; 2 Roll. Rep. 139; but an action on the case lies for the disturbance of his right. Noy, 78; 1 Sid. 86.

In all cases of a faculty and prescriptions for seats the matter is solely determinable at the common law; in other cases the Ecclesiastical Court has exclusive jurisdiction.

But for a disturbance of a seat a party may sue in the Spiritual Court, and the defendant, if he will, may admit the prescription to be tried there. Jacob v. Dallow, 2 Salk. 551; 2 Id. Raym. 755, S. C.; 1 B. & A. 498.

In a suit in the Ecclesiastical Court for perturbation of a seat, if it appear that the churchwardens have acted properly in displacing the plaintiff, the court will dismiss them; but will not proceed to confirm the possession of the person seated by them, as it does not form part of the question before the court, and may be injurious to the parish by taking the pew more out of the power of the churchwardens. Wyllie v. Mott, 1 Hagg. Rep. 41.

The Ecclesiastical Court will admonish a wrong-doer not to disturb a per-Church.

Generally the seats in churches are to be built and repaired, as the church is to be, at the general charge of the parishioners, unless any particular person be chargeable to do the same by faculty or prescription. Degge, p. 1, c. 12.

If any persons of their own heads shall presume to build any seat in the church without license of the ordinary, or consent of the minister and churchwardens, or in any inconvenient place, or too high, it may be pulled down by order of the bishop, or his archdeacon, or by the churchwardens, by the consent of the person.

Though more pews and galleries be necessary, churchwardens cannot erect them of their own head, the ordinary must be consulted. But if the incumbent, churchwardens, and parishioners unanimously agree that more pews are necessary, and that they shall be fixed in such a place, there is no necessity for consulting the ordinary. Johns. 163; 1 Salve. 167; 1 Burn's E. L. 360; and see Tattersall v. Knight, 1 Phil. Rep. 232.

Therefore if any one presume to cut or pull down any seat annexed to the church, the person may sue in trespass against the wrongdoer, though be formerly set it up, if he do it without the parson's consent or order from the ordinary; but if the seat be set loose, he that built it may remove it at his pleasure. Degge, p. 1, c. 13; 1 Burn's E. L. 364, 365.

If any seats annexed to a church be pulled down, the property of the materials is in the parson, and he may make use of them if they were placed in the church by any one of his own head without legal authority; but for the seats erected by parishioners by good authority, it seemeth that the property in the materials, upon removal, is in the parishioners. Degge, P. C. c. 12; 1 Burn's E. L. 364.

The acts 58 Geo. III. c. 45, 59 Geo. III. c. 134, and 3 Geo. IV. c. 72, relating to the building and promoting the building of additional churches in populous parishes, have several provisions relating to the pews of such churches, which will be found for the most part collected in the subjoined notes. (a)

Seats for minister, &c.

(a) Before consecration of any church or chapel under the act, a seat or pew sufficient to hold six persons at least shall be set apart in the body or ground floor of the church or chapel, near the pulpit, for the use of the minister and his family; and other seats, not among the free seats, for not less than four persons, for the minister's servants; and that the pews, sitting, or benches, in every such church or chapel to be marked with the words "free seats," amounting to not less than one-fifth of the whole sitting in every such church or chapel, which shall be built wholly or in part out of any rates, or with money raised on the credit of any rates, shall be appropriated for the use of the poor persons resorting thereto for ever, upon which pews or sitting no rent shall be charged. 58 Geo. III. c. 45, s. 75.

Free seats.

All subscribers, being parishioners, to any church or chapel built under this act, shall have choice of pews at the rates fixed by the commissioners, in the order of their amount of subscription, and of the same amount in the order of their subscription. Sect. 76.

Choice of pews.

Church or chapel wardens of any additional church or chapel shall not let or sell any pew or seats except to parishioners, during their continuing inhabitants of the parsonage; and every sale of any pew or seat shall be subject to the reserved rent fixed under said act or this act, and shall be by private contract, and not by public auction. 59 Geo. III. c. 134, s. 32.

Letting out, &c. of pews to parishioners only.

Commissioners may discharge any subscribers towards building any church or chapel, wholly or in part, from payment of pew rents for a limited time or for life, in proportion to their subscriptions, as commissioners shall see fit; and they may allow any subscriber, if he remove from the parish, to assign the remainder of his term to any other parishioner inhabiting the parish. Sect. 33.

Subscribers to building to be free from pew rents, &c. when.

It shall be lawful for the commissioners to transfer any rights to pews with Assignment of pews.

IV. Goods and Ornaments of and Monuments in a Church.

With respect to what goods and ornaments should be provided in a church, see 1 Burn's E. L. 368; and as to the power and duty of churchwardens in providing and taking care of them, see post, Churchwardens; as to whom they belong to, see post, Churchwardens, p. 640.

the consent of the owners thereof, in any church or chapel belonging to any person residing in any division of a parish or place in which a new church or chapel shall have been built, acquired or appropriated under said acts, to the church or chapel of the division in which such person shall reside, for enabling the commissioners to make free seats in the church or chapel from which such rights shall be transferred; and the persons from whom pews shall be so taken, and to whom other pews shall be assigned by the commissioners in any other church or chapel, shall have the same rights to the pews so assigned as they had in their former pews, or such right or title as shall be directed in such assignment without faculty or other process; and every such assignment shall be registered in the registry of the diocese, and a duplicate deposited in the chest of the church or chapel in which such pews shall be assigned, but no greater right shall be given to any pew by such transfer than belonged to the owner or occupier of the pews in respect whereof such transfer shall be made. 3 Geo. IV. c. 73, s. 28.

In case any lessee of any pew or seat for a longer term than one year, shall cease to be an inhabitant of the parish, place, division, or district, or shall not attend the church or chapel for one year, his lease shall determine at the end of the current year. Sect. 24.

Commissioners may make orders as to the amount of rents for pews or seats; and the produce thereof shall form a fund, out of which provisions shall be made for the minister and clerk. 58 Geo. III. c. 45, s. 63.

Pews or seats in every church or chapel built under the act, (except those set down as free seats,) to be charged with the yearly rents set opposite the figures or numbers marked upon them in a list or schedule, to be made and signed by the commissioners, and annexed to the deed of consecration; such rents to be paid by the occupiers of the pews or seats to the persons appointed by the churchwardens, by two payments, on Monday after 26th December, and on 24th June, in the vestry-room, between nine in the morning, and four in the afternoon. Sect. 77.

Churchwardens, with consent in writing of the incumbent, patron, and bishop, may alter the pew rents; and a new list or schedule of rents, and the pews or seats on which they are charged, shall be signed by the churchwardens, incumbent, patron, and bishop, and deposited with the deed of consecration. Sect. 78.

If the rent of any seat or pew shall be unpaid for three months, and notice in writing demanding payment thereof shall have been given to the owner or occupier, the churchwardens may either enter upon and hold such seat or pew, or let the same to any other person till the rent in arrear and all costs shall be paid; or otherwise to sell the same pews or seats by auction to the best bidder, and out of the money thence arising to pay the rent in arrear, with the costs, rendering the overplus to the owner, or the churchwardens may recover the rent in arrear by action for use and occupation against the owners or occupiers. Sect. 79.

The 73rd section points out how churchwardens may sue for and recover pew rents.

Commissioners, if they deem it expedient, may from time to time direct the rents of pews in any church or chapel built or acquired under said act or this act to be invested to the credit of the church or chapel, and received by the church or chapel wardens, who shall pay the stipend to the minister and clerk: provided, that the parish shall not be answerable to such minister or clerk for any greater sum in each year than the rent of the pews actually let during the preceding year; and any surplus of the pew rents after paying such stipend and other expenses, shall (except as mentioned in sect. 27,) be invested in government securities in the names of trustees to be appointed by the bishop, and accumulated as a fund; first for building or purchasing a house, with consent of the bishop, for the residence of the spiritual person serving the church or chapel; secondly, for augmenting his stipend, reducing the pew rents or increasing the accommodation in such church or chapel, in manner directed by the bishop. 59 Geo. III. c. 134, s. 26.
Church.

They generally belong to the parishioners, and not the incumbent; and if they be taken away or broken, the churchwardens may bring an action. Wats. c. 39.

By the laws of England the goods belonging to a church may be alienated by the churchwardens, with the consent of the parish. Wats. c. 39.

A person may give or dedicate goods to God's service in such a church, and deliver them into the custody of the churchwardens, and thereby the property is immediately changed. Degge, pt. 1, c. 12.

And if a person erect a pew in a church, or hang up a bell in the steeple, they thereby become church goods, though they are not expressly given to the church, and he may not afterwards remove them; if he does, the churchwardens may sue him. 1 Burn's E. L. 377; 2 Salk. 547.

The parish cannot, generally speaking, without their consent, be charged with the expense of erecting or repairing an organ, or adding new ornaments to the church. As to the power of select vestries in this respect, see post, Pest. Vol. IV.; Vestries, Vol. V.

In Butterworth and Barker v. Walker and Waterhouse, 3 Burr. 1689, it seems to have been the opinion of the Court of King's Bench that the consent of the parish is not necessary to the ordinary's ordering an organ (provided by subscription) to be erected in a church; and in this case a prohibition was denied.

In the case of The Churchwardens of St. John's, Margate, v. The Parishioners, Vicar, &c. of the same, 1 Hagg. 198, Lord Stowell declared that the law respecting church ornaments is now generally understood and settled. It was there said that the consent of the parishioners is not indispensably necessary, unless to charge the parish with any expense for the support of Provided, that the surplus of such pew rents, after paying the stipend and expenses mentioned in sect. 26, shall, if commissioners think it expedient, be applied towards payment of any money borrowed at interest by annuity or otherwise, for building any church or chapel, or for purchasing for it any site, and defraying all expenses relative thereto, and in repairing such church or chapel; and the residue of such pew rents, if any, shall be applied as directed in sect. 26, or in aid of the church rate, if the commissioners shall so think fit; and the church or chapel wardens, with consent of the commissioners, may borrow at interest by annuity or otherwise any money for building such church or chapel, or purchasing such site or defraying the expenses relative thereto, upon the credit of such pew rents, and by writing under their hand may charge such pew rent, subject to such stipend and expense aforesaid, with payment of money with interest, or with annuity, such church or chapel wardens shall think fit. Sect. 27.

Church and chapel wardens of any church or chapel built or provided under said act and this act, are authorised and required when directed by the bishop, with consent of the patron and incumbent, and where pew rents have been assigned to the parish with consent of the vestry, to make such alterations in any such pew rents as shall be directed or approved of with such consent. Sect. 31.

Pew rents shall be payable in advance, i.e. one year's rent shall be paid on the admission to the pew or seat, if given at Lady Day or Michaelmas, or if at any intermediate period then the proportion of the half-year to Lady Day or Michaelmas, and a half-year's rent above such proportion; and thereafter half-yearly payments shall be made in advance, commencing at Lady Day or Michaelmas following the taking; and every such pew and seat shall be forfeited and become vacant by discontinuing any such payment in advance for two following half years. Sect. 32.

In every case in which pew rents shall be fixed under the provisions of said acts, notice shall be given for six successive weeks at the end of each year of all the pew vacant, or which shall become vacant at the commencement of the next year, by writing affixed on the doors of the church or chapel and vestry-room, and all pews not taken at the rents fixed within fourteen days after the commencement of the ensuing year, shall be let to any inhabitant of any adjoining parish or place in the churches or chapels of which there shall not be sufficient accommodation for the inhabitants thereof, at the rent fixed upon such pews, for any term not exceeding the end of the year, when such pews shall be again let in manner aforesaid, and so from year to year. 3 Geo. IV. c. 72, s. 24.
the ornament after it has been put up. But if there be no charge incurred, the approbation of the majority of the parishioners is not necessary, nor the disapprobation binding on the ordinary. He then decreed a faculty for accepting and erecting an organ offered to the church of St. John's, Marygate, without a clause against future expenses being charged to the parish, which was rich and populous. In cathedrals, organs may be deemed necessary, and the ordinary may compel their erection by the dean and chapter. In parish churches it is otherwise, and it might be proper to discourage them in small or poor parishes.

If any superstitious pictures or images are in a window of a church or aisle, it is not lawful for any to break them without license of the ordinary; and in Prickett's case, Wray, C. J., bound the offender to the good behaviour. Cro. Jac. 366.

Monuments]—It is lawful to build or erect tombs, sepulchres, or monuments for the deceased in church, chancel, common chapel, or churchyard, provided it be done in a convenient manner; 3 Inst. 102; and by license of the bishop, or consent of the parson and churchwardens. Degge, pt. 1, c. 12.

Monuments may be set up in the aisles, belonging to particular persons, without such license or consent. Watt, c. 39.

But then, as in all other cases, they must be set up in a convenient and proper manner, so as not to obstruct divine service in any way. See 3 Inst. 202.

The ordinary must be allowed the proper judge of that conveniency; and if a monument be erected in an inconvenient or improper manner, he may decree and compel a removal, without any danger of an action at law. See Gib. 453, 454.

It seems that even the rector cannot grant a vault in the church, but only leave to bury there in each particular instance. Bryan v. Whistler, 8 B. & Crets. 288.

A custom for the churchwardens of a parish to set up monuments, &c. in a church without consent of rector or ordinary, is illegal. Becwhth v. Harding, 1 B. & A. 508.

There is not at common law a right to erect even a flat gravestone, for mere protection of the grave, in a churchyard, without legal authority of the ordinary, except a custom that the churchwardens shall give leave for that purpose to be shown. See 5 Bardin v. Calcutt, 1 Hagg. Rep. 14—20.

Monuments once erected may be repaired; for this is of public consequence, when their importance in tracing family descents, &c. is considered. It may be proper to apply to the churchwardens, as the agent of the ordinary, for leave to do so, but they are bound to grant it as far as their authority extends, and if they do not, they will be liable to the censure of the Ecclesiastical Court. If parties are not at liberty to repair, the object of obtaining liberty to erect would be defeated: it is rather the duty of churchwardens to encourage parishioners to provide that monuments may be put in repair, than to obstruct others in doing it; for decency and propriety require that they should not remain in a state of ruin and decay. Id.

The defacing of monuments is punishable by the common law. Year Defacing, &c. Book, 9 Edw. IV. 14, Lady Wiche's case: and so it was agreed by the whole court, M. 10 J., in the Common Pleas, between Corwen and Pym, 1 Burn's E. L. 379; and for the defacing thereof, they that build or erect the same may sue at law during their lives, (as the Lady Wiche had in the case of the 9 Edw. IV.); and after their deceases, the heirs of the deceased may bring the action. See Cro. Jac. 367.

Gravestones, winding-sheets, coats of arms, pennons, or other ensigns of honor, hanged up, laid or placed in memory of the dead, the property remains in the executors, and they may have actions against such as break, deface, or carry them away. 3 Inst. 110; Co. Litt. 18 b.
V. Repairs of Church.

(1.) Who to Repair.

Who to repair.

Bishops.

Formerly the bishops had the whole tithes of the diocese, a fourth part of which in every parish was to be applied to the repairs of the church, but upon a release of this interest to the rectors, they were consequently acquitted of the repairs of the churches. Degge, pt. 1, c. 12.

And by the canon law the repair of the church belongeth to him who receiveth this fourth part; that is, to the rector, and not to the parishioners. 1 Salk. 164.

But custom (that is the common law) transferreth the burden of reparation, at least of the nave of the church, upon the parishioners, and likewise sometimes of the chancel, as particularly in the city of London in many churches there, and this custom the parishioners may be compelled to observe where such custom is. Lindw. 53.

It seems, however, if a church fall down, the parishioners are not bound to repair it. Read's Church Service; 1 Vent. 367.

Who to repair chancel.

But generally the parson is bound to repair the chancel; not because the freehold is in him, for so is the freehold of the church, but by the custom of England, which hath allotted the repairs of the chancel to the parson, and the repairs of the church to the parishioners.

By custom, however, the parishioners or the owner of an estate may be liable to repair the chancel. Gibs. 199.

Where there is both rector and vicar in the same church, and no custom or order to the contrary, they shall contribute in proportion to their benefice. Lindw. 253.

And as rectors or spiritual persons, so also impropriators are bound of common right to repair the church. Gibs. 199; 3 KeSt. 829.

And an impropriator of a rectory or parsonage, though bound to repair the chancel, is also bound to contribute to the reparations of the church, in case he hath lands in the parish which are not parcel of the rectory. Davie's case, Gibs. 197, 221-3.

Generally, however, the repairing of the chancel is a discharge from contributing to the repairs of the church. Gibs. 199, 200.

Founder of church when exempt.

It is said that the patron of a church, as in right of the founder, may prescribe that, in respect of the foundation, he and his tenants have been freed from the charge of repairing the church. Degge, pt. 1, c. 12.

If there be a chapel of ease within a parish, and some part of the parish have used time out of mind, alone, without others of the parishioners, to repair the chapel of ease, and there to hear service and to marry, and all other things, but only they bury at the mother church; yet they shall not be discharged of the reparation of the mother church, but ought to contribute thereto, for the chapel was ordained only for their ease. 2 Roll's Abr. 289, l. 50; Hob. 66; 3 Mod. 284.

So, in the like case, if the inhabitants who have used to repair the chapel prescribe that they have time out of mind used to repair the chapel, and by reason thereof have been discharged of the reparation of the mother church; yet this shall not discharge them of the reparation of the mother church, for that is not any direct prescription to be discharged thereof, but is by reason thereof a prescription for the reparation of the chapel. 2 Roll's Abr. 290.

If the chapel be three miles distant from the mother church, and the inhabitants who have used to come to the chapel have used always to repair the chapel, and there marry and bury, and have never within sixty years been charged to the repair of the mother church; yet this is not any cause to have a prohibition, but they ought to show in the spiritual court their exemption, if they have any, upon the endowment. 2 Roll's Abr. 290, l. 10; sed vid. 1 Salk. 165.
Repairs of.

But if the inhabitants of a chapelry prescribe to be discharged time out of mind of the reparation of the mother church, a prohibition lieth upon this surmise. 2 Roll's Abr. 290, l. 22; Hobart, 67; Brown v. Palfray, 2 Lевинс. 102.

If there be a parish church and chapel of ease within the same parish, and the chapel of ease hath time out of mind had all spiritual rights except sequestration, and this hath been used to be done at the parish church, and therefore they who have used to go to the chapel of ease have used time out of mind to repair a part of the wall of the churchyard of the parish church, and in consideration thereof, and because that they who are of the chapel of ease have used time out of mind to repair the chapel of ease at their own costs, they have been time out of mind discharged of the reparation of the parish church; this is a good prescription; and therefore if they be sued in the spiritual court to repair the parish church a prohibition lieth. 2 Roll's Abr. 290, l. 30. See 1 Burn's E. L. 353-4.

If two churches be united, the repairs of the several churches shall be made as they were before the union. Degge, pt. 1, c. 12; ante, 614.

In Jeffery's case, 5 Rep. 67, it was solemnly adjudged that the rates for the repair of the church shall be laid upon every occupier of lands in the parish, although such occupier live in another parish; and such person may come to the vestries of the parishioners, and vote in making a rate; but he shall not be charged towards the ornaments of the church, as for bells, repair of seats, bread and wine, clerk's wages, visitation charges, and the like, by reason of such lands; for that the personal estates of the inhabitants are chargeable with every thing that doth not relate to the fabric of the church, or repairs of the fences of the churchyard, or such other things as concern the freehold. And see Paget v. Crumpton, Cro. El. 657, 659; 2 Roll. 289, l. 20; Lindo. 235.

No man shall be charged to repair of the church in respect of land which he has in another parish. 5 Rep. 67; 2 Roll, 289, l. 30.

Nor in respect of a lighthouse. Rebow v. Bickerton, Bunbury, 81.

Where lands are in farm, not the lessor, but the tenant shall be rated and pays. Gibbs, 221.

The hall of a company being rated to the repairs of a church, the spiritual court in case of nonpayment may proceed against the master and wardens of such company. T. Jones, 187.

If a petty chapman take a standing, for rent to be paid by him, in the waste of the manor within the market, for two or three hours every market day, to sell his commodities, the market being holden there one day every week, but he inhabiteth in another parish; he may not be rated to the repairation of the church for this standing. 2 Roll. Abr. 289.

(2.) Who may compel Repairs.

By Canon 86, every dean, dean and chapter, archdeacon, and others, which have authority to hold ecclesiastical visitations by composition, law, or prescription, shall survey the churches of his or their jurisdiction once in every three years, in his own person, or cause the same to be done.

And by the said Canon they were required from time to time to certify the high commissioners for causes ecclesiastical every year, of such defects in any the said churches, as he or they should find to remain unrepaired, and the surnames of the parties faulty therein. Upon which certificate the high commissioners were desired by the said canon ex officio meo, to send for such parties and compel them to obey the just and lawful decrees of the ecclesiastical ordinances making such certificates.

But by the 16 Car. a. 11, the high commission court was abolished; so that the cognizance thereof now resteth solely upon the ecclesiastical judge, who has undoubtedly cognizance of neglect of repair of the church, churchyard, &c. 3 Bla. Com. 92; 5 Rep. 66.
Church.

By Canon 85, the churchwardens or questmen shall take care and provide that the churches be well and sufficiently repaired, and so from time to time kept and maintained, that the windows be well glazed, and that the floors be kept paved, plain, and even.

If the churchwardens erect or add any thing new in the church, as a new gallery where there was none before, they must have the consent of the major part of the parishioners, and also a license from the ordinary. 1 Mod. 237; Groves and another v. Rector, &c. of Hornsey, 1 Hagg. Rep. 188.

But as to the common repairs of the fabric, or ornaments of the church, where nothing new is added or done, it doth not appear that any consent of the major part of the parishioners is necessary; for to this the churchwardens are bound by their office, and they are punishable if they do it not. 1 Burn's E. L. It should seem, however, that the churchwardens cannot so repair without the consent of the major part of the parishioners, unless after notice given they refuse to meet or give their consent.

If the major part of the parishioners of a parish where there are four bells, agree that there shall be made a fifth bell, and this is made accordingly, and they make a rate for paying for the same; this shall bind the lesser part of the parishioners, although they agree not to it; for otherwise any obstinate person may hinder any thing intended to be done for the ornament of the church. 2 Roll. Abr. 291.

And although churchwardens are not generally charged with the repairs of the chancel, yet they are charged with the supervisal thereof, to see that it be not permitted to dilapidate and fall into decay; and when any such dilapidations shall happen, if no care be taken to repair the same, they are to make presentment thereof at the next visitation. 1 Burn's E. L. 387.

The cognizance of the repairs of the church and churchyard belong to the spiritual court; 3 Bla. Com. 92; 4 Rep. 66; and the parishioners may be compelled by that court to repair the body of the church, and they might be excommunicated until it is repaired, except those who are willing to contribute. Read's Church Service.

The cognizance of the repairs of the church and churchyard belonging to the spiritual court, the Court of King's Bench will not grant a mandamus to churchwardens to make a church rate. R. v. Churchwardens of St. Peter, Thetford, 5 T. R. 364.

But it lies to the churchwardens to assemble a meeting to inquire whether it be fit to make a rate. R. v. Churchwardens, &c. St. Margaret's, Westminster, 4 M. & S. 250; and see the 53 Geo. III. c. 127, post.

VI. Church Rates.

(1.) Who may make, and steps preliminary to making.

If a church be so much out of repair that it is necessary to pull it down, or if it be so small that it needs to be enlarged, the major part of the parishioners, having first obtained the consent of the ordinary to do what is needful, and meeting upon due notice, may make a rate for new building or enlarging as there shall be occasion. 2 Mod. 222; Gibs. 197.

And the same would equally apply to rates for the repairs or finding of ornaments and goods of the church, except it should seem that the consent of the ordinary is unnecessary.

And the proper method of proceeding in such cases seemeth to be thus: namely, that the churchwardens first of all take care that public notice be given in the church for a general vestry of the whole parish for that purpose; which notice ought to be attested and carefully preserved, as being the foundation of all the subsequent proceedings.

At the time and place of meeting the minister and churchwardens ought to attend; and when the parishioners are assembled, the minister is proper
VI. (1.)

Church Rates.

To preside; and be or one of the churchwardens, or such person as shall be appointed by them, ought to enter the orders of the vestry, and then have them read and signed; and agreeable thereunto, before making a rate for the repair of the church, a petition to the ordinary for a faculty (setting forth the particulars) should be drawn up and signed by the minister, churchwardens, and parishioners present and approving thereof. Whereupon the ordinary will issue a monition to cite all persons concerned, to show cause why a faculty should not be granted, upon the return of which citation, if no cause or not sufficient cause be shown, the ordinary will proceed to grant a faculty as is desired, and as to him shall seem good. 1 Burn's E. L. 357, 358.

The churchwardens have no power to make any rate themselves exclusive of the parishioners, their duty being only to summon the parishioners who are to meet for that purpose, and when they are assembled, a rate made by the majority present shall bind the whole parish, although the churchwardens voted against it. Bac. Ab. Churchwardens, C. Wats. 389.

The churchwardens in summoning the parishioners need not do it from house to house, but a general public summons at the church is sufficient, and the major part of them that appear on such occasions will bind the whole parish. Vent. 367.

It does not seem absolutely essential that the notice should specify the purpose for which the meeting is to be held. See Clutton v. Cherry, 2 Phil. 375.

Stat. 58 Geo. III. c. 69, intituled, "An Act for the regulation of parish vestries," enacts, "that no vestry or meeting of the inhabitants in vestry of or for any parish shall be held until public notice shall have been given of such vestry, and of the place and hour of holding the same, and the special purpose thereof, three days at the least before the day to be appointed for holding such vestry, by the publication of such notice in the parish church or chapel on some Sunday during or immediately after divine service, and by affixing the same, fairly written or printed, on the principal door of such church or chapel." (a)

If the churchwardens give the parishioners due notice that they intend to meet for the purpose of making a rate, and the parishioners refuse to come, or being assembled refuse to make any rate, the churchwardens may make one without their concurrence, for so they are liable to be punished in the ecclesiastical court for not repairing the church, it would be unreasonable that they should suffer by the willfulness and obstinacy of others. Bac. Ab. Churchwardens, C.

If the major part of a parish at a vestry agree to make repairs, the others are bound, though it be to find ornaments, as new bells, &c. (2 Roll. 291, 1. 20.) but bells are not mere ornaments, for they are as necessary as the steeple itself. Woodward v. Makepeace, 1 Salk. Rep. 104.

By custom there may be select vestries of a certain number of persons elected yearly to make rates, and manage the concerns of the parish for that year: and such custom is a good custom. Read's Church Service; Gibs. 246; Str. 428. See post, Vestries, Vol. V.

After the churchwardens and parishioners have agreed as to what sum is fit for the repairs, they are to make an equal rate for collecting it.

(2.) Mode of laying Assessment.

An order and direction set down by Dr. King, Dr. Lewen, Dr. Lyneey, Dr. Hoane, Dr. Sweite, Dr. Steward, and others, doctors of the civil law, to the number of thirteen in all, assembled together in the common dining hall of Doctors' Commons in London, touching a course to be observed by the assessors in their taxation for the repairs of the church and walls of the Ornaments, &c.

Select vestry.

Rate to be made.

Mode of laying the assessment in general.

(a) See further post, Post, Vol. IV. Vestries, Vol. V.

Vol. I. 2 S churchyard of Wrotham, in Kent; and to be applied generally upon occasion of the like reparations to all places in England whatsoever:—

(1.) Every inhabitant dwelling within the parish is to be charged according to his ability, whether in land or living within the same parish, or for his goods there; that is to say, for the best of them but not for both.

(2.) Every farmer dwelling out of the parish, and having lands and living within the said parish, in his own occupation, is to be charged to the value of the same lands or living, or else to the value of the stock thereupon; even for the best, but not for both.

(3.) Every farmer dwelling out of the parish and having lands and living within the parish, in the occupation of any farmer or farmers, is not to be charged; but the farmer or farmers thereof are to be charged in particular, every one according to the value of the land which he occupieth, or according to the stock thereupon; even for the best, but not for both.

(4.) Every inhabitant and farmer occupying arable land within the parish, and feeding his cattle out of the parish, is to be charged for the arable lands within the parish, although his cattle be fed out of the parish.

(5.) Every farmer of any mill within the parish, is to be charged for that mill; and the owner thereof (if he be an inhabitant) is to be charged for his liability in the same parish besides the mill.

(6.) Every owner of lands, tenements, copyholds, or other hereditaments, inhabiting within the parish, is to be taxed according to his wealth in regard of a parishioner, although he occupy none of them himself; and his farmer or farmers also are to be taxed for occupying only.

(7.) The assessors are not to tax themselves, but to leave the taxation of them to the residue of the parish. God. Append. 10, 11.

The party to be assessed may be collected from the foregoing seven rules. Parties not liable to the repairs for which the rate is made, must not be assessed, and as to who such parties are, see ante, 622.

A rate for the reparation of the fabric of a church, and such things as concern the freehold thereof; is real, charging the land and not the person; but a rate for ornaments, seats, and bread and wine, &c. is personal upon the goods and not upon the land. Gibb. 196; 2 Roll's Abr. 291; see Degge, p. 1, c. 12.

Houses as well as lands are chargeable, and in some places houses only; as in cities and large towns where there are only houses and no lands to be charged. Hett. 130; 2 Latu. 1019.

If a parish plead a custom for it to be laid only for lands, and not for houses; or to be laid only for arable lands, and to be excused for their pastures; or to be laid only for their sheep-walks and not for the rest; the custom cannot be good, for by the law all lands and houses are to be equally rated; and their paying for some part can be no good cause for the discharge of the rest. Hett. 130; Latch. 203.

Persons living out of the parish and having lands within the parish, as we have already seen, should be rated for the same in respect of real charges but not of personal charges. Lindse. 255, ante, 623.

A taxation by the pound rate is the most equitable mode of assessing it, and not according to the quantity of land, &c. See Lindse. 255; Wood's Inst. b. 1, c. 7.

The property and parishioners should be equally rated. Hett. 130, and Latch. 203.

If a parish consists of several vills, and there is a custom to levy the rate in certain proportions, they must pursue it whether reasonable or not. Burton v. Wileday, Andrews, 32.

A custom in the parish to pay the church rate by divisions is good; and an allegation in an action for a false return to a mandamus, of a custom of payment by the chapelwardens of A. to the churchwardens of B. may be supported by evidence of a custom of payment to officers acting only for the township of B. not co-extensive with the parish of B. but who have always been described as the churchwardens of B., for being merely a name of description, it is sufficient, though it be not their legal name. Stead v. Heaton, 4 T. R. 669.
VI. (2.)

Church Rates.

A church rate cannot be made to reimburse the churchwardens monies that they have expended, or which they may hereafter expend, on the parish church, for they ought not nor are they bound to lay out money until they have collected it in hand. R. v. Chapelwardens of Haworth, &c. 12 East, 556. infra.

In Lancaster v. Freer, 2 Bingh. 361, the facts were, that twenty parishioners joined at a vestry in signing an order for the repairs of the church, and one of them, a churchwarden, paid the artificers, but the rate for reimbursing him was quashed, and the Court of Common Pleas decided that he could not sue the person who signed the order for contribution.

The regular way is for the churchwardens to raise the money before-hand, by a rate made in the regular form for the repairs of the church, in order that the money may be paid by the existing inhabitants at the time, on whom the burthen ought properly to fall. 12 East, 556.

R. v. Chapelwardens of the Township of Hayworth, in the parish of Bradford, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, 12 East, 556. Motion for a mandamus to these defendants, to make a rate upon the inhabitants of their township for levying 50l. being one-fifth part of a church rate charged upon the parish at large, for reimbursing the churchwardens of the town of Bradford such sums as they had expended, or might hereafter expend, on the parish church of Bradford, and to pay the said 50l. when raised to those churchwardens. The relators' affidavit stated that the parish of Bradford consisted of fifteen townships, of which Hayworth is one, and that there is an immemorial custom in the parish, that each of the townships should contribute to the church rates in certain proportions stated, of which the proportion of Haworth was one-fifth: that at a vestry held in the parish church on the 4th of April last, after regular notice, it was ordered that the churchwardens of Bradford should collect the rate in question of 250l. for reimbursing themselves such sums as they had expended, or might thereafter expend on the parish church of Bradford, and then stated a demand and refusal of the proportion of the rate payable by the defendants. In answer, it was objected, 1st. That any custom for fixing on a part of a parish a certain proportion of a church rate, which ought to be equally distributed on all the parishioners, was bad upon the face of it, as making that certain and invariable which, in its very nature, was variable and fluctuating, unequal and unjust. This question, it was said, was not decided in Stead v. Heaton, 4 T. R. 669, which turned on another point as to the evidence of the custom. Lord Ellenborough, C. J.—We shall not decide this question upon affidavits, but shall for this purpose assume the custom to be good; the point, however, did not pass without consideration in Stead v. Heaton. Secondly, that no rate could be made to reimburse churchwardens, for they were not bound, nor ought they to lay out money till they had collected it in hand, non constat, that it is to reimburse them what they have expended within the same year. And Dawson v. Wilksion, Andr. 11, and Cas. temp. Hardw. 381; and Tawney's case, 2 Ld. Raym. 1009, were cited as negativing the power of churchwardens to make a rate to reimburse themselves or former churchwardens. Lord Ellenborough, C. J.—The regular way is for the churchwardens to raise the money before hand, by a rate made in the regular form for the repairs of the church, in order that the money may be paid by the existing inhabitants at the time, on whom the burden ought properly to fall. It will, indeed, sometimes happen, that more may be required to be expended at the time than the actual sum collected will cover, but still it is admitted that the inconvenience has been gotten rid of in such cases by an evasion, for the rate has been made in the common form, and when the churchwardens have collected the money, they have repaid themselves what they had disbursed for the parish. But we cannot now grant the mandamus to make a rate in the common form, for the demand made upon the defendants was to make a rate in the form in which the rule is drawn up, to reimburse the churchwardens of Bradford for money which they had expended, as well as for what they might expend, and the refusal of the defendants to make such a rate applies to the form of the demand, and we cannot now qualify their refusal; at present it appears that the rate prayed for in this form would be bad, and therefore we cannot enforce it by mandamus.—Per Caes. Rule discharged.
Church. [VI. (2.)

A court of equity will not decree a church rate to be made to reimburse a former churchwarden monies laid out while in office, though in pursuance of an order of vestry. Lanc Zester v. Thompson and others, 5 Madd. 64.

Indeed if the churchwardens defer to make or collect their rate until they are out of their office, they are deprived of all legal authority of doing either; but they may present the persons in arrear at the Easter visitation when they go out of their office, and the judge will cause justice to be done therein, or their successors may prosecute for the same. 1 Bac. Abr. 376, tit. Churchwardens, et seq.

In strictness where a rate is required for the repairs of the fabric and another for the repairs of the ornaments of the church, two distinct rates should be made; by the practice, however, now in vogue only one rate is made for all purposes, which is certainly a more easy and convenient proceeding and may be sanctioned. Shaw’s P. L. 92.

(3.) Form of Assessment.

The form of the church-rate may be thus:

W.E., the churchwardens and other parishioners of the parish of in the county of , whose names are hereunto subscribed, do hereby this day of the year , at our vestry meeting for that purpose assembled, rate and tax all and every the inhabitants and parishioners of the parish aforesaid, hereunder mentioned, for and towards the repairs of the church of the said parish for this present year, the several sums following, viz.:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>£</th>
<th>s</th>
<th>d</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>A. B.</td>
<td>1 2 0</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>C. D.</td>
<td>0 3 0</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>E. F.</td>
<td>0 2 6</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

A. B. Churchwardens.
C. D. Churchwardens.
E. F. Parishioners.
G. H. Parishioners.
I. K. Parishioners.

(4.) Mode of Levyng Assessment.

If any of the parishioners refuse to pay their rates, being demanded by the churchwardens, they may be sued for and recovered in the ecclesiastical courts, and not elsewhere. Degge, p. 1, c. 12. For the cognizance of rates made for the reparation of churches and church-yards belongs to the spiritual courts. Gibb. 195; 5 Rep. 66; ante, 624.

If a suit be instituted in the ecclesiastical court for a church rate, and a custom pleaded of a certain sum or of something done in lieu of the rate, and that plea is admitted, they may proceed to try that custom in the same manner as a modus; but if the custom be denied, it will be a proper ground for a prohibition for defect of trial in the ecclesiastical court, for the trying of the custom is the province of the common law. 1 Atk. 289.

So if the bounds of the parish come into dispute in the ecclesiastical court, that is, if the party assessed aver that the land for which he is assessed lies in another parish and not in the parish where it is assessed; if the party be contentious, he may have a prohibition, and try it at common law. Degge, p. 1, c. 12.

By stat. 53 Geo. III. c. 127, s. 7, for the more easily and speedily recovering church rates or chapel rates of limited amount, it is enacted, that "if any one duly rated to a church rate or chapel rate, the validity whereof has not been questioned in any ecclesiastical court, shall refuse or neglect to pay the same sum at which he is so rated, it shall and may be lawful for any one justice of the peace of the same county, riding, city, liberty, or town corporate, where the church or chapel is situated, in respect whereof such rate shall have been made, upon the complaint (a) of any churchwarden or churchwardens, chapelwarden or chapelwardens, who ought to receive and collect the same, by warrant (b) under the hand and seal of such justice, to convene before any two or more such justices of the peace any person so refusing or neglecting to pay such rate, and to examine upon oath (which oath the said justices are hereby empowered to administer) into the merits of the said complaint, and by order (c) under their hands and seals to direct the payment of what is due and payable in respect to such rate, so as the sum ordered and directed to be paid as aforesaid do not exceed 10l., over and above the reasonable costs and charges, to be ascertained by such justices; and upon refusal or neglect of such party to pay according to such order, it shall and may be lawful for any one of such justices, by warrant (d) under his hand and seal, to levy the money thereby ordered to be paid, together with the amount of such costs and charges, by distress and sale of the goods of such offender, his executors or administrators, rendering only the surplus to him or her, the necessary charges of distraint being thereout first deducted and allowed by the said justices; [see Stat. 54 Geo. III. c. 170, s. 12, infra;] and any person finding him or herself aggrieved by any judgment given by two or more such justices, may appeal to the next general quarter sessions to be held for the county, riding, city, liberty, or town corporate wherein the church or chapel is situated, in respect whereof such rate shall have been made, and the justices of the peace there present, or the major part of them, shall proceed finally to hear and determine the matter, and to reverse the said judgment if they shall see cause; and if the justices then present, or the major part of them, shall find cause to affirm the judgment given by the first two or more justices, the same shall be decreed by order of sessions, with costs, against the appellant, to be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the said party appellant: provided always, that in case any such appeal be made as aforesaid, no warrant of distress shall be granted until after such appeal be determined: provided also, that nothing herein contained shall extend to alter or interfere with the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts to hear and determine causes touching the validity of any church rate or chapel rate, or from proceeding to enforce the payment of any such rate, if the same shall exceed the sum of 10l. from the party proceeded against provided likewise, that if the validity of such rate, or the liability of the person from whom it is demanded to pay the same, be disputed, and the party disputing the same give notice thereof to the justices, the justices shall forbear giving judgment thereupon, and the person or persons demanding the same may then proceed to the recovery of their demand, according to due course of law, as heretofore used and accustomed: provided likewise that nothing herein contained shall affect any regulations that may have been made by authority of parliament, respecting the church rates or chapel rates of any particular parishes or districts.

And by 54 Geo. III. c. 170, s. 12, the goods and chattels of any person neglecting to pay any sum legally assessed on him for any churches for seven days after demand made, may be distrained, not only within the district, parish, township, or hamlet, in which it is made, but also within any other district, parish, &c. within the same county, riding, division, or jurisdiction; and if sufficient distress cannot be found within such county, &c., then, on oath thereof made before any one or more justice or justices of the peace for any other county, &c. in which any of the goods or chattels of such person shall be found, (which oath such justice or justices shall administer and certify by indorsing his or their name or names on the warrant granted to make such distress, such goods, &c. shall be liable to such distress and sale in such other county, &c., and may under such warrant and certificate be distrained and sold, as if found within the district, parish, &c. in or for which the rate was due.

(a) See form, (No. 1), post. (b) See form, (No. 2), post. (c) See form, (No. 3), post. (d) See form, (No. 4), post.

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 17, the provisions of the 37 Geo. III. c. 93, regulating the costs of distresses for rent, &c., are extended to distresses for church rates, &c. By that act of Geo. IV. it is enacted, that "all the rules, regulations, clauses, provisions, penalties, matters, and things in the said act contained, shall extend and be construed to extend, and shall be applied and put in execution, so far as the same are applicable and capable of being put in execution, with respect to any distress or levy which shall be made for any land tax, assessed taxes, poor rates, church rates, tithes, highway rates, sewer rates, or any other rates, taxes, impositions, or assessments whatever, in all cases where the sum demanded and due for or in respect of such taxes, rates, tithes, assessments, or impositions shall not exceed the sum of £20, and in all cases where the whole of the several sums sought to be levied by distresses taken for different purposes at the same time shall not exceed the sum of £20; and that such costs and charges, and no other, shall be taken and payable as the costs and charges of the levy and disposition of such distresses; and that all such proceedings shall and may be had and taken against any and every person transgressing the regulations of the said act in the levying or distraining for any such taxes, rates, impositions, or assessments, and all such persons shall be liable to and shall incur such and the like penalties, as by the said act are directed, required, and imposed with respect to persons making any distress for rent contrary to the directions of the said act; and that in any order or judgment of any justices before whom any complaint shall be preferred in consequence of this act, such order shall be explained to be made upon a complaint for the breach of the said recited act as amended by this act; and that the said recited act and this act shall be taken and construed together as one act, to all intents and purposes whatsoever."

Before the passing of 53 Geo. III. c. 127, s. 7, considerable delay and expense were incurred in the recovery of church rates. That act, as we have seen ante, 628, provides a summary remedy, by application to justices of peace in cases of withholding church rates not exceeding 10L., where the party does not dispute the obligation to pay them, but does not invest justices with the power which belongs exclusively to the ecclesiastical court, viz. the power of deciding on the validity of the rate or the liability of the person to pay it. The justice cannot issue his warrant unless it be made affirmatively to appear before him that the amount does not exceed 10L., and that no question is made on the rate in the ecclesiastical court. If neither of these preliminary exceptions have place, the party may give notice to the two justices before whom he is summoned to appear, that he disputes the validity of the rate or his liability to pay it, though no proceeding is actually commenced in the ecclesiastical courts: and any expression by him, manifesting that he disputes the rate bonâ fide, will be a sufficient notice to make a cesser of the proceedings before the justices. R. v. The Chapelswardens of Milborne, 5 M. & S. 248.

In a late case where a constable, having a warrant of distress under 53 Geo. III. c. 127, s. 7, broke the outer door of and entered plaintiff's dwelling-house, it was held, that although he thereby exceeded his authority; yet as it was not shown that he acted with any other intention than that of executing the authority delegated to him by the warrant, no action could be maintained after the expiration of three calendar months after the fact committed. Theobald v. Crichmore, 1 B. & A. 227; and see s. 12 of the act.

Also a Quaker refusing to pay church rates may be sued, as other parishioners, in the ecclesiastical court; or he may be proceeded against before the justices of the peace, in the same manner as for his tithes.

And by stat. 53 Geo. III. c. 127, s. 6, reciting, that "whereas by stat. 7 & 8 Will. III. it is enacted, where any Quaker shall refuse to pay for or compound for his great or small tithes, or to pay any church rates, two or more of his Majesty's justices of the peace are authorised to hear and determine the
VI. (4.)

Church Rates.

same, not exceeding the value of 10l.; and whereas by a statute made and passed in the first year of King George the First the said act is extended to other objects; and whereas it is become expedient to enlarge the said sum; be it enacted, that, from and after the passing of this act, all the provisions of the said acts of King William and King George shall be deemed and taken to extend to any value not exceeding 50l.; provided always neverthless, that, from and after the passing of this act, one justice of the peace shall be competent to receive the original complaint, and to summon the parties to appear before two or more justices of the peace, as in the said act is set forth."

(5.) Appeal against Rate.

If any person find himself aggrieved by the inequality of the assessment, his appeal must be to the ecclesiastical judge. Degge, 172.

And in such case, if he will be relieved, he must show that he is illegally or unequally taxed in respect of the quantity of his land, as being rated for more than he has, or that the land which he hath is over-rated, or that the rate was needless, or that some lands in the parish are omitted in the rate.
1 Wood Inst. b. 1, c. 7.

When the amount of assessment does not exceed the sum of 10l. he has an appeal to the quarter sessions by stat. 53 Geo. III. c. 127, s. 7. See ante, 629.

Unless the rate be wholly a nullity and void, its legality cannot be disputed in an action for levying it under a distress authorised by a magistrate’s warrant.

By the 17 Geo. II. c. 37, where there shall be any dispute in what parish or place improved wastes and drained and improved marsh lands lie and ought to be rated, the occupiers of such lands or houses built thereon, tithes arising therefrom, mines therein, and saleable underwoods, shall be rated to this and all other parish rates within such parish or place as lies nearest to such lands; and if on application to the officers of such parish or place to have them rated as aforesaid any dispute shall arise, the justices of the peace at the next sessions after such application made, and after notice given to the officers of the several parishes and places adjoining to such lands, and to all others interested therein, may hear and determine the same on the appeal of any person interested, and may cause the same to be equally assessed, whose determination therein shall be final. But this shall not determine the boundaries of any parish or place other than for the purpose of rating such lands to the parochial rates as aforesaid.

(6.) Church Rates under Acts for Building Additional Churches.

All money expended in purchasing sites, and advanced by commissioners to any parish under the act, or paid by commissioners in cases of neglect to provide sites, and all sums expended or advanced under the act in carrying the purposes thereof into execution, shall be charged on the church rates, and the churchwardens are required and empowered to make sufficient rates for repaying such expenses and advances, within the periods or at the times specified by the commissioners. 58 Geo. III. c. 45, s. 56.

Where money shall have been expended in purchasing sites, or advanced by commissioners under the act for extra-parochial places in which no church rate shall be made, any justice on the requisition of the commissioners shall appoint two or more persons to make and levy rates for making all payments and repayments as may be required under the act, who shall have the same powers as churchwardens; and all such rates shall be deemed church rates, and all laws relative to church rates shall be applicable thereto. Id. s. 57.

Power is given to churchwardens in parishes with consent of the vestry, and persons appointed in extra-parochial places with consent of the majority of persons who would be entitled to vote in a vestry, with notice given in the same, to borrow money on credit of rates.
church and chapel therein or nearest thereto, to borrow money on the rates, and to raise by rates money sufficient to pay the interest and one twentieth of the principal, until the whole money borrowed shall be repaid. 58 Geo. III. c. 45, s. 58.

Power is given to churchwardens with consent of vestry and of the bishop and incumbent to borrow and raise on the rates money necessary for or towards defraying the expense of enlarging or extending the accommodation in any then existing church or chapel, and to make rates for payment of the interest, and providing a fund of not less than the interest for repayment of the principal, or repaying the principal in such other manner as shall be agreed on. Provided that one-half of the additional accommodation shall be allotted to uninclosed or free seats. Id. s. 59.

No application to build or enlarge any church or chapel, wholly or in part, by means of rates, shall be made unless the major part of the inhabitants and occupiers assessed to the poor, in vestry assembled, shall consent thereto, or where the parish shall be under the care of a select vestry or body, with the consent of four-fifths thereof, such consents to be certified to some justice by an overseer of the poor; nor unless two-thirds in value of the proprietors of lands within such parish, whether for estates of freehold or copyhold, or by virtue of leases for terms of not less than fifteen years absolute or determinable upon a life or lives, shall have consented thereto, such consents to be given by writing under the hands of all persons and corporations sole, and of the president or head member of corporations aggregate, and of the husbands, guardians, committees, trustees, attorneys, or agents of fames covert, minors, insane persons, and persons out of the kingdom, and of the major part of the trustees for any charitable or other purpose. Id. s. 60. See further the 59 Geo. III. c. 154, s. 24, infra.

Power is given to churchwardens of any parish or place in which any church or chapel shall be built, on such application as aforesaid, (s. 60,) to make rates for raising the sum or portion of the sum proposed to be defrayed by rates, or to borrow any such sums on the credit of such rates; and in every such case to make rates for payment of the interest of any monies advanced for building any church or chapel on credit of the rate, and for providing a fund of not less than the amount of the interest for repayment of the principal, or for repaying such principal in such manner as shall be agreed upon. Id. s. 61.

By 59 Geo. III. c. 134, s. 23, any church or chapel warden of any parish or division, or consolidated or district chapelry, in which rates shall be made under said act or this act, may recover such rates by all such ways and means as church rates may be recovered by, as fully as if they were hereby specially given: provided that church or chapel wardens appointed under said act or this act shall not in virtue of such office be deemed overseers of the poor.

Sect. 24. After reciting so much of sect. 60 of 58 Geo. III. c. 45, as requires the consent of two-thirds in value of the proprietors, enacts, that such recited provision shall be repealed; and that no application to build or enlarge any church or chapel wholly or in part shall be made, nor shall any church or chapel be built, rebuilt, or enlarged, or any purchase made of any new or additional burial ground, by means of rates on any parish where one-third in value, (to be ascertained by an average of the poor's rate for the preceding three years,) of the proprietors of tenements in such parish, whether for estates of freehold or copyhold, or for terms of years absolute, whereof fifteen years shall be unexpired or determinable on a life or lives, shall dissent therefrom; such dissent to be entered in the book containing the proceedings of the vestry, and to be signed, in case of any future vestry, within two months after the resolution, and in case of any such resolution already passed, within two months from passing this act, under the hands of such proprietors as aforesaid, and of the president, head or chief member of any corporations aggregate, and of the husbands, guardians, committees, trustees, attorneys, or agents of any fames covert, minors, persons insane or absent from the kingdom, and the major part of the trustees of any charitable institution, or of any part of them authorised to act in the trusts.
Church Rates.

By sect. 25, it shall be lawful for the inhabitants of any parish assembled at any vestry, or the major part of the inhabitants so assembled, of which notice shall have been given on two successive Sundays preceding, or for two-third parts of such of the persons exercising the powers of vestry as shall be assembled at any meeting of which notice shall have been given as notices for assembling such persons are given, to order and direct the making and raising of any rate not exceeding one shilling in the pound in any one year, or five shillings in the pound in the whole, upon the annual value of the property in the parish, for the purpose of building or enlarging any church or chapel, either wholly or in part, by means of rates, without any further or other or greater number of consents of any number of inhabitants, or proprietors, or occupiers, or other persons: provided that no larger rate than aforesaid shall be directed to be raised in relation to any application to build or enlarge any church or chapel, either wholly or in part, by means of rates, if any such proportion of dissent, as in sect. 24 is specified, are signified as there directed; and every such direction shall be imperative upon the church or chapel wardens, who shall forthwith make and raise the rate so ordered; and every such rate shall be made, raised, levied, and accounted for in like manner and with all such powers and under such penalties as are in law applicable to church rates.

When any parish shall be desirous of increasing the accommodation in the parish church, and it shall be expedient to take down the existing church and to rebuild it on the same or a more convenient site, it shall be lawful for the churchwardens, with the consent of the vestry, or persons possessing the powers of vestry, and of the ordinary patron, incumbent and lay proprietor, if any, to take down such existing church, and to rebuild it on same, or a new site; and the churchwardens may borrow on credit of the church rates, or any rates made under said act, or this act, money necessary for defraying all or any part of the expense of taking down and rebuilding such church, and to make rates for paying the interest of the money so borrowed and for providing a fund not less than the amount of the interest for repaying the principal, or for repaying such principal at such times and in such manner and proportions as shall be agreed upon by the lenders: provided that no church shall be so taken down and rebuilt by means of rates, if such proportions of dissent as in sect. 26 specified are signified in writing as thereby directed; and such church, when consecrated, shall be the parish church for celebrating divine offices and solemnizing marriages: provided that one half of the additional accommodation obtained by rebuilding such church shall be set apart for free and open sitting, and that persons enjoying pew or sitting in the church, held in virtue of any faculty or prescription, shall have pew or sitting as near as may be in the same situation, and of like dimensions, allotted to them in said new church, and that all tombs, monuments, and monumental inscriptions in the old church, shall be carefully preserved by the churchwardens, and shall be set up by them at the charge of the parish in the new church, as near as circumstances will admit, in the situations from whence they were removed in the old church. Id. s. 40.

The repairs of district churches or chapels shall be made by the districts to which they belong, by rates to be raised within the districts in like manner as repairs of churches by parishes, and such district shall be deemed a separate parish for that purpose; and the repairs of chapels not made district churches shall be made by the parish in or for which the churches shall be built. 58 Geo. III. c. 45, s. 70.

Districts shall be made subject to the repair of the original parish church for twenty years after the district church shall be consecrated, after which the parish church shall be repaired by the remainder of the parish, and each district afterwards make separate rates for such repairs, as if separate parishes. Id. s. 71.

It shall be lawful for the churchwardens of any parish, with the consent of the vestry, bishop, and incumbent, to borrow and raise on credit of the Manner of levying assessment.

Rate not exceeding 1s. in the pound in any one year, or 5s. in the whole, may be raised for building or enlarging a church or chapel without such proportion of consents of proprietors, &c. as is required by 58 Geo. 5, c. 45, s. 60.

Provided as to dissent in case of a larger rate.

Order to raise rate imperative.

Rates may be laid on any parish, for rebuilding or enlarging the church.

Money may be borrowed upon rates, &c.

No church taken down, &c. if dissent signified as herein mentioned.

Provided for free and open sitting, and for situation and dimensions of new pews, and for tombstones, &c.

Repairs of district churches to be made by rates upon the district.

District to remain liable for repairs of parish church for 20 years.

Churchwardens, with consent of vestry, &c. may church rates, or any rate made under said act or this act, money necessary for defraying the expense of repairing any churches or chapels, and where such money shall have been borrowed, to raise by rate a sum sufficient from time to time to pay the interest of the money so borrowed, and not less than ten per cent of the principal, out of the produce of such rates, until the whole money borrowed shall be repaid. 59 Geo. III. c. 134, s. 14.

All chapels acquired and appropriated, or built or enlarged and improved under said acts, or under any local acts wherein no provision is made relating thereto, in aid of the churches of the parishes or places in which they shall be situate, (whether or not any districts of such parishes shall have been assigned to such chapels for ecclesiastical purposes,) shall be repaired by the parishes or places at large to which such chapel shall belong, and rates shall be raised for that purpose in like manner as for the repair of the churches of such parishes or places, and all the laws in force for making and raising rates for the repair of churches shall be applied for making and raising rates for the repair of such chapels. 3 Geo. IV. c. 72, s. 20.

It shall be lawful for the commissioners, in any case in which any division of a parish previously divided under the acts should be again divided, and on which any church or chapel shall be built or acquired, and appropriated for the use of such new division, by any instrument under the seal of the commissioners, to declare that all liability to repair the church or chapel of the division from which such new division shall be made, shall cease from the period specified in such instrument; and after such period the new division shall be liable only to repair the church or chapel built therein, and to repair the church of the original parish for the then residue of the twenty years under 58 Geo. III. c. 45, s. 71, s. 21.

In every district parish, or division of a parish, or district chapelry, in which any church or chapel shall be built, acquired, or appropriated under said act, or this act, in which there shall not be a distinct vestry, a select vestry of so many persons as commissioners shall direct, shall be appointed by the commissioners, with the advice of the bishop, out of the substantial inhabitants, for the care and management of the church or chapel, and all matters relating thereto, and such select vestry shall annually elect the church or chapel warden on the part of the parish or chapel, and shall elect new members of such vestry as vacancies shall arise by death, resignation, or ceasing to inhabit the parish, and proper pew shall be provided for the use of the church or chapel wardens. 59 Geo. III. c. 134, s. 30.

Where any parish or place shall be divided into separate parishes for ecclesiastical purposes, or into separate districts or chapels, in which select vestries shall be appointed by the commissioners, all members of the select vestry of the original parish who shall reside in the district or division of the original church or chapel, shall continue to act as the vestry of such district or division in all matters relating to such church or chapel, and the repairs thereof, or to any other ecclesiastical matters or things, or in the distribution of any proportion of any bequest, gifts, or charities which may under this act be assigned to any such district or division: provided that no member of any select vestry shall, after such division, act in any manner relating to any church or chapel, or any other ecclesiastical matters or things, except such as relate to the division in which he shall reside; and if by reason of such division a sufficient number of such members of select vestry shall not remain resident in the division within which the original church or chapel shall be situate, according to the proportion fixed by the commissioners, (regard being had to the population of such division, and its relative population to that of the whole parish or place,) all such deficiencies shall be filled up as vacancies have before been filled up therein; provided that no person shall vote in supplying such deficiencies unless resident within the division for which the members are to be chosen; provided that the persons chosen shall not thereby be members of the vestry for any other purposes than such as relate to the division for which they shall be chosen, or for the distribution of any charitable gifts therein; provided that all the members of the select vestry of any such parish or place resident in any other divisions thereof shall be members of such vestries as shall be appointed under the acts for the divisions in which they shall reside. 3 Geo. IV. c. 72, s. 10.
VII. (3.) Profanation and Offences as to.

VII. Profanation of and Offences relative to Churches.

(1.) Arresting a Clergyman performing Divine Service, or in going or returning.

The stat. 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 23, enacts, "that if any person shall arrest any clergyman upon any civil process while he shall be performing divine service, or shall with the knowledge of such person be going to perform the same, or returning from the performance thereof, every such offender shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and being convicted thereof shall suffer such punishment by fine or imprisonment, or by both, as the court shall award."

See the general clauses affecting this and all the provisions of the act, post, Malignious Injuries to Persons, Vol. III.

This act repeals the stat. 50 Edw. III. c. 5, and the stat. 1 Rich. II. c. 15, Repeat. (which related to this offence.)

This provision is nearly a re-enactment of the stat. 1 Rich. II. c. 15; however, that did not extend to arrests of clergymen going or returning from performing service.

The act applies to week days as well as Sundays and holidays. Wats. c. 34.

The arrest, though it may be punished, is still good in law, unless on a Sunday, so that if a rescous be made, and thereby any person shall be killed, the killing is murder. Wats. c. 34.

As to what constitutes an arrest, see ante, Arrest, p. 256.

(1.) Holding Fairs, Plays, &c. in Churches.

Fairs used in former times to be kept in church-yards, and even in Fairs in churches, till the indecency and scandal was so great as to want a reformation; Burn's E. L. 340; and accordingly by 13 Edw. I. st. 2, c. 6, no fairs nor markets shall be kept in church-yards.

By canon 88, plays are not suffered in churches, chapels, or church-yards, Plays, &c. nor feasts, &c. or any other profane purposes, nor musters.

(3.) Brawling, &c. in Churches.

By stat. 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 4, s. 1, if any person shall by words only quarrel, chide, or brawl in any church or church-yard, the ordinary (on proof of two witnesses) may suspend every layman, being an offender, ab ingressu ecclesis, and every clergyman from the ministration of his office so long as he shall think meet. This act was not intended to abridge the ecclesiastical jurisdiction. Jackson v. Barrett, 1 Hagg. 15.

Proceedings under this act must be supported by two witnesses on the specific charge, or they will be dismissed. Hutchins v. Denziloe, Hagg. Rep. 191.

Provocation is no defence to a suit for brawling in a church at a vestry
As to the evidence, see Austen v. Degger, 3 Phil. 120.

By 27 Geo. III. c. 44, the suit for brawling or striking must be brought within eight calendar months.

The court will consider time and place in cases of chiding, quarrelling, and brawling; that may be "chiding" or "brawling" in the church, which would not be so in the vestry. The vestry is a place for parochial business, and the court would not interface further than might be necessary for the preservation of due order and decorum. Hagg. Rep. 184, 185.

Suspension of a parishioner ab ingressu ecclesie, prescribed by the above act, 5 & 6 Edw. VI. was limited to a month only under certain circumstances; Clinton v. Hatchard, 1 Add. Rep. 96; and in another case, Cannings v. Smokin, 2 Phil. Rep. 293, for brawling in a church, it was limited to three weeks, with notification in the church of such suspension in the latter case, and costs in both. In Cox v. Gooday, 2 Hagg. 138, a clergyman was suspended for a fortnight for words spoken during divine service by way of admonition of a passionate tenor, though expressed without any tone of passion.

And in North v. Dickson, 1 Hagg. Rep. 730, the defendant was suspended for a fortnight and condemned in costs.

This being a criminal proceeding, the office of the judge wrongly promoted, by mimiker of the judge in a copy of the articles for this offence, is fatal. Williams v. Bot, 1 Hagg. Rep. 1. And it seems the articles should be in his name as vicar general and official principal, for the vicarial jurisdiction of their offices seems in some degree concurrent. The omission, however, of the latter description is fatal. Thorpe v. Mansell, 1 Hagg. Rep. 4.

(4) Striking, &c. in Churches.

Beating clergymen in orders was punishable under the Articuli Cleri, 9 Edw. II. st. 1, c. 3, but so much of that act relating thereto is repealed by 9 Geo. IV. c. 31.

The 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 4, a. 3, so far as the same relates to striking, or drawing any weapon with intent to strike, in churches, &c. is repealed by the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, except so far as it is punishable under ecclesiastical censures.

The enactment of 5 & 6 Edw. VI. c. 4, a. 2, in force, is, "if any shall smite or lay any violent hands on another in any church or church-yard, he shall be deemed ipso facto excommunicate, and be excluded from the fellowship and company of Christ's congregation."

Lay any violent Hands]-But churchwardens, or perhaps private persons, who whip boys for playing in the church, or pull off the hats of those who obstinately refuse to take them off themselves, or gently lay their hands on those who disturb the performance of any part of divine service, and turn them out of the church, are not within the meaning of this statute. 1 Hawk. c. 63, a. 29.

A threatening posture is not a smiting within the act. Jenkins v. Barrett, 1 Hagg. Rep. 15.

Excommunicate.

Shall be deemed ipso facto Excommunicate]-And he shall not excuse himself by showing that the other assaulted him. 1 Hawk. c. 63, a. 28.

Ipsa Facto]-Nevertheless in this and other like cases, there ought either to be a precedent conviction at law, which must be transmitted to the bishop; or else the excommunication must be declared in the spiritual court upon a proper proof of the offence there; for it is implied in every penal law that no one shall incur the penalty thereof till he be found guilty upon a lawful trial. 1 Hanck. c. 63, s. 27.
Churchwardens, Nature of Office.

As to excommunication, vide stat. 53 Geo. III. c. 127, s. 1, 2, which abolishes excommunication in all cases except in definitive sentences, or interlocutory decrees having force of definitive sentences, and pronounced as spiritual censures for offences of ecclesiastical cognizance.

(5.) Stealing from and Breaking into Churches.

As to the offence of breaking into and stealing, &c. from churches, see Sacrileges, Vol. V.

(6.) Other Profanations and Offences.

As to not going to church, holding fairs, places of entertainment, travelling, taking and exercising ordinary callings, killing game, and serving process, &c. on a Sunday, see post, Lord's Day, Vol. III.

As to burning of churches, see, Burning, p. 537.

Churchwardens. (a)

I. Nature of Office, &c. 637.
II. Who exempt from Serving it, 638.
III. Who to Elect Churchwardens, 638.
IV. Time and Mode of Election, 639.
V. Interest and Power over things of the Church, and Contracts of, 640.
VI. The Duties of, in General, 641 to 644.
VII. Presentments by, 644.
VIII. Accounts of, 644.
IX. Punishment, &c. of, for Misdemeanour, &c. 645.
X. Indemnity and Protection of, 646.
XI. Sidesmen, Vestry Clerks, &c. 647.
XII. Forms, as to, 647.

I. Nature of Office, &c.

Churchwardens are the guardians or keepers of the church, and of the body of the parish. 1 Bla. Com. 394.

Their duties were originally confined to the care of the ecclesiastical property of the parish, over which they exercised discretionary power for specific purposes. 1 Hagg. 173.

They are to a certain degree the guardians of the moral character and public decency of their respective parishes. Griffiths v. Reed, 1 Hagg. Rep. 208.

In general the number of the churchwardens is two. 2 Stra. 1246.

Churchwardens, when sworn in, are so far incorporated by law as to sue and be sued in their corporate capacity. 3 Stra. 1246.

(a) See in general Steen's P. L. and Shaw's P. L.
WHO EXEMPT.

for the goods of the church, and to bring an action of trespass for them; and also to purchase goods for the use of the parish; but they are not a corporation in such sort as to purchase lands, or take by grant, except in London by custom. * Gibbs. Code, 241.*

II. WHO ARE EXEMPT FROM SERVING AS.

Peers, clergymen, and members of parliament.

All peers of the realm, by reason of their dignity; so all clergymen, by reason of their order; and also all parliament men, by reason of their privilege, are exempted from the office of churchwardens. Gibs. 215.

A counsellor or attorney ought not to be chosen churchwarden; and if he be, he may have a prohibition by reason of his attendance on the courts at Westminster. 2 Roll. Abr. 272.

Apothecaries and surgeons.

Apothecaries, who have served seven years, shall be exempted from the office of churchwarden. 6 & 7 Will. III. c. 4.

Freemen of the Corporation of Surgeons in London are exempted from being churchwardens. 18 Geo. II. c. 15.

Dissenting ministers.

Dissenting teachers or preachers in holy orders, or pretended holy orders, being duly qualified, are exempted from the office of churchwardens. 1 Will. III. sess. 1, c. 18; 52 Geo. III. c. 155, s. 9.

Other dissenters.

Other dissenters, scrupling to take upon them the office, may execute the same by a sufficient deputy, to be approved of in like manner as other churchwardens. 1 Will. III. sess. 1, c. 18.

Catholic ministers.

Every Roman Catholic minister on taking the oath, and conforming to the regulations therein specified, shall be exempted from the office of churchwarden. 31 Geo. III. c. 32, s. 3.

Persons having convicted a felon.

All persons who have prosecuted felons to conviction are exempted from the office of churchwardens in the parish where the offence was committed. (e) 10 & 11 Will. III. c. 23, s. 2.

Militia.

No serjeant, corporal, or drummer of the militia, nor any private man, from the time of his enrolment until his discharge, shall be liable to serve as a peace or parish officer. 42 Geo. III. c. 90, s. 174.

No person living out of the parish can be chosen churchwarden. Gibs. 215; 1 Hagg. 10.

But persons who are not personally resident in a parish, but are partners of a house of trade situate within it, are not exempted from serving the office. Stevenson v. Langston, 1 Hagg. Rep. 379; see 1 B. & Cres. 178, 123; 2 B. & Cres. 322.

III. WHO TO ELECT CHURCHWARDENS.

Who to elect.

Churchwardens are sometimes appointed by the minister, and sometimes by the parishioners, sometimes by both together, according as the custom of the place directs. 1 Bla. Com. 394; 2 Atk. 650; 2 Stra. 1246; 1 Venr. 167.

Where there is no such custom, the election must then be according to the directions of the canons of the church; and canons 89, 90, direct, that all churchwardens or questmen in every parish shall be chosen by the joint consent of the minister and the parishioners, if it may be; but if they cannot agree upon such choice, then the minister is to choose one and the parishioners another, and without such joint or several choice none shall take upon themselves to be churchwardens. Gibs. 241; 1 Stra. 145; 2 Stra. 1246; sed vide Bac. Abr. Churchwardens, A.

(e) The first assignee of the certificate of having convicted a felon, was entitled to the exemption by this act of Will. III., but that right is now taken away by 58 Geo. III. c. 70, s. 2.
Who to elect.

In some cases the lord of the manor prescribeth for the appointment of churchwardens. God. 153; 2 Inst. 653; 1 H. Bla. 28.

A curate is included under the word parson. Hubbard v. Penrice, 2 Stra. 1246.

If the parson or vicar, who has by custom a right to choose one churchwarden, be under sentence of deprivation, the right of choosing both churchwardens results to the parishioners. Carth. 118.

The parson cannot intermeddle in the choice of that churchwarden which it is the right of the parishioners by custom to elect. 2 Stra. 1045.

Nor can the archdeacon or any others who by virtue of their offices are to swear and admit churchwardens, control the election, such offices are purely ministerial. Bac. Abr. Churchwardens, A. The spiritual court cannot generally control or examine into the election. 1 Salk. 166; post, 540.

Although the parishioners neglect ever so long to choose churchwardens, yet the ordinary hath no power of appointing them. Stutter v. Preston, 1 Stra. 52.

By custom churchwardens may be chosen by a select vestry, or by a particular number of the parishioners. See Jones, 439; Cro. Car. 551; Hard. 378; 1 Mod. 181; post, Vestries, Vol. V.

By 58 Geo. III. c. 45, s. 73, one of the acts relating to building additional churches, two fit persons shall be appointed to act as churchwardens for every church or chapel built or appropriated under the act, at the usual period of appointing parish officers in every year, one by the incumbent and the other by the inhabitant householders in the district; and when elected, they shall appear and be admitted and sworn according to law, and shall receive the rents of the seats and pews, and pay the stipends or salaries to the minister and clerk, and shall do all acts requisite for the repairs, management, good order, and decency of behaviour in the church or chapel, and they shall continue in office till others be chosen: and on non-payment of the rents of seats and pews may enter upon and sell the same, or recover by action in the names of “the churchwardens of the church or chapel of,” [describing the same] without specifying their names, and no such action shall abate by their death or going out of office.

IV. Time and M ode of Election.

They are to be chosen every Easter week. Can. 90.

In the election of churchwardens by the parishioners, the majority of those who meet at the vestry, upon a written notice given for that purpose, will bind the parish. St. Saviour’s, Southwark case, Lane’s Rep. 21.

As to the mode of summoning, &c. the vestry, see further, ante, 625, and post, Vestries, Vol. V.

If there be a custom to conclude a poll for the election of churchwardens at a certain time, that being a reasonable time, the voters must tender their votes within it. R. v. Commissary of the Bishop of Winchester, 7 East, 573.

After the election of the churchwardens they are to take an oath to execute the office truly and faithfully; (see Gibs. 243; Ward, 364;) and they must not execute their office till they are sworn. Gibs. 243; Shaw’s P. L. 70. Steer’s P. L.

The oath as said to have been agreed on upon mutual consultation between the civilians and common lawyers, is as follows:

You shall swear truly and faithfully to execute the office of a churchwarden within your parish, and according to the best of your skill and knowledge present such things and persons as to your knowledge are presentable by the laws ecclesiastical of this realm: so help you God, and the contents of this book. Gibs. 243.

This oath is administered by the archdeacon or ordinary of the diocese, and if he refuse, a mandamus will lie to compel him. Cow. Dig. Mandamus, (A.); Bac. Abr. Churchwardens, (A.) Churchwardens.

No fee can be demanded for swearing the churchwardens or taking their presentments. 1 Salk. 330.

A churchwarden duly elected may be directed by the spiritual court to take the oath of office before the proper ordinary; (Cooper v. Allnutt, 3 Phill. Rep. 166;) and if he refuse to take his office and oath he may be excommuniﬁed for the refusal, and no prohibition will lie. Gitts. 216, 243, 961; 1 Mod. 194.

Duration of ofﬁce.
With respect to the time they are to continue in ofﬁce, by canon 89 they are not to continue longer than one year except they be chosen again, but by canon 188, the ofﬁce of churchwardens is to continue till the new churchwardens be sworn. Nolan’s P. L. 4th ed. 44.

In 2 Stra. 686, a mandamus to churchwardens to call a vestry to elect churchwardens was refused; but see 1 Stra. 52; 1 Not. P. L. ch. 2, part 2.

The courts of common law are the proper ones for deciding the validity of the custom of choosing churchwardens, like of all other customs of the realm, and not the spiritual courts. Cro. Car. 552; Bac. Abr. Churchwardens, (A.); 1 Salk. 160. So also the common law is to determine the legality of the votes given on the election. Burr. 1420. When two churchwardens are sworn in, the right is to settle in an action. Williams v. Vaughan, 1 Bla. Rep. 88.

The spiritual court, however, may become the means of trying the validity of the election by a return of “not elected,” “not duly elected,” or any other return that answers the writ and affords an opportunity of trying the right in an action for a false result. 1 Ld. Raym. 158; 1 Stra. 610; 2 Ld. Raym. 1379, 1405; 2 Salk. 433; Coupl. 413.

In a late case of R. v. Williams, 8 B. & Cres. 681, to a mandamus to admit A. B. into the ofﬁce of churchwarden, reciting that he had been duly elected, a return that A. B. was not duly elected was held good.

A quo warranto will not be granted, as the ofﬁce does not concern the rights or prerogatives of the crown. R. v. Denebury, 2 Stra. 1196; R. v. Shepherd, 4 T. R. 381.

V. Their Interest and Power over things of the Church; &c. and Contracts by.

The churchwardens, when chosen, are a corporation entrusted with the care and management of the goods belonging to the church, which they are to order for the best advantage of the parishioners; they are likewise enabled to take goods for the beneﬁt of the church, but cannot dispose of them without the consent of the parishioners. Bac. Abr. Churchwardens, (B.)

They have such a special property in the organ, bells, parish books, bible, chalice, surplice, &c. and other goods, belonging to the church, that for the taking away or for any damage done any of these, they may bring an action at law, laying the damage to them or the parishioners; (Wats. c. 29;) and therefore the parson cannot sue for them in the spiritual court. Bac. Abr. Churchwardens, (B.) So they may indict the offender. Id.

But churchwardens have nothing but to the use of the parish, and the corporation consists of both, and one only cannot release or give away the goods of the church; (Cro. Jac. 234; Tyn. 173;) nor can both churchwardens without the consent of the parishioners. 1 Roll’s Abr. 393; 1 Venm. 189.

It has been laid down as a general rule that an agreement by parish ofﬁcers in the course of their ofﬁcial duties, which is beneﬁcial to the parish, is binding on it and succeeding churchwardens. See 2 P. Wms. 366; 1 Powel on Contr. 114; 1 Com. Contr. 396.

It has been held, a party cannot recover against several overseers of a parish for money lent to one of them in his capacity of overseer, unless the rest have expressly promised repayment. 3 Stark. Rep. 65.
Interest and Power of, &c.

Churchwardens have no right to or interest in the freehold and inheritance of the church, which belongs solely to the parson or incumbent. Bac. Abr. Churchwardens, (B.)

Therefore they cannot grant a license for burying in the church; (Cro. Jac. 366;) though by custom they may have a fee for burying in the church itself. Vent. 274; 3 Keb. 504.

We have already seen what power and interest the churchwardens have with respect to the seats in the church, ante, p. 616, 617. If any of them be taken or injured, the churchwardens may sue. Bac. Abr. Churchwardens, (B.)

Churchwardens themselves or any others cannot take down arms in windows, or deface gravestones or monuments erected in the church or churchyard, and if they do, an action lies by the heirs or executors of the parties for whom they were erected. Roll's Abr. 625; and see ante, p. 621.

A custom for the churchwardens of a parish to set up monuments, &c. in a church without the consent of the rector or ordinary, is illegal. Beckwith v. Harding, 1 B. & A. 508.

Churchwardens cannot, in general, purchase land for the use of the church or parish, except in London by custom. Jones, 439; Gisb. 215; Mar. 22, 67. If land be given to the parish for the use of the church, it must not be to the churchwardens and their successors, but it should be to fees in trust to the use intended, which must from time to time be renewed as the trustees die away. Gisb. 215.

By the 59 Geo. III. c. 12, s. 9 to 17, various powers are given to churchwardens and overseers to purchase and sue for, &c. lands for the use of the poor, with the consent of the inhabitants. See post, YOUR, Vol. IV. 5 B. & Crez. 433; 2 D. & R. 708, S. C.

They cannot make a lease of lands given to fees for the use of the parishioners; (12 Hen. VII. 29 a; 13 Hen. VII. 10 a;) nor maintain trespass or other action for entry upon, or taking the profits of such land. 12 Hen. VII. 29 a.

Churchwardens of every parish in which any additional chapel shall be built or provided under the act without making any division thereof into separate parishes or district parishes, shall do all such things as churchwardens to be appointed under the act are authorised and required to do. 58 Geo. III. c. 45, s. 74.

We have already seen various instances in which the churchwardens may or may not sue, ante, p. 614, 616, 620, 640, &c. and post, 645.

They cannot bring actions as such after the expiration of their office; (Stra. 852; Bac. Abr. tit. Churchwardens;) but their successors must do it; (Wats. c. 39, (u);) and if any of the goods of the church be detained or not delivered by the predecessors, the successors may bring an action against him also, laying the damage to the parishioners; (Gisb. 216;) but if the action be commenced within the year, they may proceed in it after the year. Id. F. N. B. 91 k.; 2 P. Wms. 126.

When an obligation is made to churchwardens and their successors, and they die, their executors shall bring the action, and not their successors. Vin. Abr. Churchwardens, (D.)

The 58 Geo. III. c. 45, s. 73, relating to the building of additional churches, empowers churchwardens to sue for and recover pew rents.

VI. Duties of, in general.

We have already noticed several important duties of churchwardens relating to the repair of churches, the assessing and collecting of church rates, and the disposition of pews, &c.

By 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 1, every churchwarden is an overseer of the poor, though every overseer of the poor is not a churchwarden. The duties and liabilities of churchwardens as such overseers will be found fully considered, post, YOUR, Vol. IV.

Vol. I. 2 T
DUTIES OF, IN GENERAL.

Churchwardens.

The 55 Geo. III. c. 137, s 6, prohibits churchwardens, overseers, and persons having the management of the poor, from being concerned in contracts, &c. for the supplying of their own profit goods, &c. for the use of the poor or workhouse, &c. under the heavy penalty of 100l. unless a certificate of two justices be obtained, &c. See post, 3 ear, Vol. IV.

As to contracts by the churchwardens and overseers for lodging or employing of the poor, see 45 Geo. III. c. 54, s. 1, 2, post, 3 ear, Vol. IV.

By 9 Geo. III. c. 37, churchwardens for paying the poor otherwise than in lawful money are to forfeit to the poor not less than 10s. nor more than 20s. See post, 3 ear.

Churchwardens have the care of a benefice during its vacancy. Having first taken out a sequestration from the spiritual court, they are to manage all the profits and expenses of the benefice for him that shall next succeed; plough and sow his glebe; take in the crop; collect tithes; thrust out and sell corn; repair houses and fences; and the like. And they shall take care that during the vacancy the church shall be duly served by a curate approved by the bishop, whom they are to pay out of the profits of the benefice. And if the successor thinks himself aggrieved by them, he may appeal to the ecclesiastical judge. Per. L. 99; Com. Par. Off. 90.

The death or avoidance of the spiritual person who was the incumbent of the church of any parish or place, in which any separated parish or district church or chapel shall be consecrated, at the time of consecration shall be notified by the bishop under his hand and seal to the spiritual person then serving the church or chapel, and the churchwardens of the parish or place; and such notification shall be preserved with, and copies thereof entered in the books of registers of marriages, births, and burials, of the church of the parish or place, and in the books of registers to be provided for entering the publications of bans and solemnization of marriages, and the baptisms and burials in such chapels, and such entries shall be authenticated by the churchwardens, and shall be sufficient evidence of the period of commences ment of such service under this act of the publication of bans and solemnization of marriages and baptisms, and performance of burials, in any such chapel, or any cemetery thereof. 58 Geo. III. c. 45, s. 29.

They (or the constable) shall levy the penalties for persons exercising their worldly calling on the Lord's Day. 29 Car. II. c. 7.

They shall suffer no plays, feasts, banquets, suppers, church-ales, drinkings, temporal courts or leets, lay juries, musters, or any profane usage, to be kept in the church or churchyard. Can. 88.

And Sir William Scott, in the case of Cox v. Goodday, 2 Hagg. Rep. 141, said, “the duty of maintaining order and decorum in the church lies immediately upon the churchwardens, and if they are not present, or being present do not repress any indecency, they desert their proper duty.”

They shall see that the parishioners resort to church, and continue there orderly during divine service, and shall present the defaulters. Can. 90.

They shall not suffer any idle persons to abide either in the churchyard or church-porch during the time of divine service or preaching; but shall cause them to come in or to depart. Can. 19.

They shall levy the forfeiture of 12d. a Sunday, on the goods of persons not coming to church. 1 Eliz. c. 2. See Lord's Day, Vol. III.

They (or the constable) shall levy the penalty of 3s. 4d. for using unlawful pastimes on the Lord's Day. 1 Car. c. 1.

They shall, on pain of 20l. present at the sessions once a year the monthly absence from church of all recusants, and the names and ages of their children above nine years old, and the names of their servants. And if the party presented shall be indicted and convicted, the churchwardens shall have a reward of 40s., to be levied of the recusant's goods by warrant of the justices in sessions. 3 J. c. 4.

They shall keep excommunicated persons out of the church. Can. 85.

They are to see that the church ways be well kept and repaired. And the right to a church way may be claimed and maintained by a libel in the spiritual court. 2 Roll. Abr. 287.

They shall take care to have in the church a large Bible, book of Common Prayer, book of Homilies, a font of stone, a decent communion table, with proper coverings, the ten commandments set up at the east end, and other chosen sentences upon the walls, reading-desk, and pulpit, and chest for arms; all at the charge of the parish.

They ought to keep the keys of the belfry, and to take care that the bells be not rung without good cause, to be allowed by the minister and themselves.

Churchwardens or chapelwardens of every parish or chapelry are from time to time to furnish register books, adapted to the forms given by the act, at the expense of the parish or chapelry, whenever required by the rector, vicar, curate, or officiating minister to provide the same. And such books are to be of paper, unless required to be of parchment, by such churchwardens or chapelwardens respectively. Stat. 52 Geo. III. c. 146, s. 2. See the act in full, post, Parish Registers, Vol. V.

They are to provide and securely keep, at the expense of the parish or chapelry, a dry well-painted iron chest for the keeping such register books, either at the rector's, &c. house, or in the church. Sect. 5.

They are to make fair copies, if required so to do by the rector, &c. of all the entries in the register book annually, at the expiration of two months after the end of each year, and to attest the verification of the same by the rector, &c. Sect. 6.

They are to transmit such annual copies to the register of the diocese, by the post, on or before the 1st of June in every year. Sect. 7.

In case of neglect or refusal of the officiating minister to verify copies of the register books, they are to certify the default to the registrar of the diocese. Sect. 9. See these enactments in full, post, Parish Registers, Vol. V.

And such register, being carefully preserved, is good evidence; and the falsifying of it is punishable at the common law. Gibbs. 229. See Evidence, Vol. II. p. 37, 38.

They shall at the charge of the parish, with the advice and direction of the minister, provide bread and wine against the communion.

They (or the overseers) shall levy the penalty of 5l. for an incumbent not reading the common prayer once a month. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 4, s. 7.

They shall collect money on charity briefs, on pain of 20l. 4 Ann. c. 14.

They shall not suffer any strangers to preach but such as shall appear qualified on showing their license; and they shall see that such preachers register and subscribe their names in a book to be kept for that purpose, with the day when they preached, and the bishop's name who granted the license.

Persons who murder themselves, or die excommunicated, are denied Christian burial; and therefore the churchwardens are not to suffer them to be buried in the church or church-yard, without special license from the bishop; Degge, 183; but now a feo de se may be buried in the church-yard, though he is still denied Christian burial. See the 4 Geo. IV. c. 52, s. 2.

Persons denied Christian burial.

They shall levy the penalties for eating flesh on fish days. 5 Eliz. c. 5.

They shall receive the penalties for tippling and drunkenness. 4 J. I. c. 5; 21 J. I. c. 7. See ante, Airhouses, p. 100.

They shall receive the penalties for hawkingspirituous liquors. 9 Geo. II. c. 23. See Butchers and Bakers, Vol. II.

They (or the overseers) shall receive the penalties relating to butter and cheese. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 26. See ante, Butter and Cheese, p. 547.

They, together with the minister, are to sign certificates for the out-pensioners of Greenwich hospital, residing within their parish, with respect to the identity of their persons, in order to the receiving of their pensions. 3 Geo. III. c. 16.

They (or the overseers) shall pay to the high constables the general county rate out of their money collected for the poor. 12 Geo. II. c. 29.

They shall receive the penalty for servants carelessly firing houses. 6 Anne, c. 31. See ante, p. 542.

DUTIES OF, IN GENERAL.
Churchwardens.

They shall receive the penalties for chasing hares in the snow, and other game penalties. 1 J. c. 27. Post, Cases, Vol. II.

They shall join with the constable and surveyor of the highways in choosing and returning new surveyors. 13 Geo. III. c. 78. Post, Highways, Vol. III. p. 49.

They are to preserve and deliver over the population accounts to their successors; 1 Geo. IV. c. 94, s. 9; and as to their other accounts, see infra.

They are to make out lists of persons qualified to serve on juries, and to fix them on church doors, and keep them for inspection. 6 Geo. IV. c. 50, s. 8, 9. Post, Juries, Vol. III. p. 413.

There are numerous other instances in which churchwardens are appointed by statute to receive certain penalties, &c. and to act in other matters, but it is not necessary to state them here.

VII. Of Presentments by.

Presentments by.

Churchwardens by their oath are to present or certify to the bishop, or his officer, all things presentable by the ecclesiastical laws, which relate to the church, minister, and parishioners.

The articles delivered to them for their direction are for the most part founded on the book of canons made in the year 1603, and the rubrics of the Common Prayer.

There are also several things which they are bound to present by act of parliament; as tippling or drunkenness, by stat. 4 J. I. c. 5; recusants by stat. 3 J. I. c. 4. See ante, Aliq. p. 100.

They may present as often as they please, but shall not be obliged above once a year where it hath so been used, and not above twice any where; except it be at the bishop’s visitation. Can. 116, 117.

For the presentments of any church or chapel for one year the register shall have only 4d. Can. 116.

The minister may present where the churchwardens neglect. Can. 113. But such presentment ought to be upon oath. 2 Vest. 42.

VIII. Their Accounts.

Their accounts.

We have already seen in various parts of our considerations on matters relating to the church and churchwardens, what disbursements and receipts may be made and given by churchwardens.

At the end of the year, or within a month after at most, they shall before the minister and parishioners (at a vestry) give up a just account of such money as they have received, and also what they have particularly bestowed in reparations and otherwise for the use of the church; and shall deliver up to the parishioners the money and parish goods in their hands, to be delivered over by them to the next churchwardens by bill indented. Can. 89.

If the custom of the parish is for a certain number of persons to have the government thereof, and the account is given up to them, the custom is a good custom, and the account given to them a good account. Gibbs. 242.

Mr. Barlow says, that for disbursements of any sum not above 40£, their own oath is held sufficient proof; but for all sums above, receipts must be produced. But it may be more satisfactory if receipts be produced for all. Bart. 105.

The allowance of the account may be by entering it in the church book of accounts, and having it signed by those in the vestry who allow the accounts. Bart. 105.

In the case of Wainwright v. Bagshaw, 2 Str. 974, 1133, the churchwardens were cited into the court of Lichfield to account. They pleaded, that they had accounted at the vestry according to law. Which plea was rejected, and thereupon a prohibition was granted; for the ordinary is not to take the account, he can only give a judgment that they do account; and to what purpose should they be sent back to those who have taken their accounts already?

When they have faithfully accounted, and their account is allowed by the minister and major part of the parishioners present, it shall not afterwards be in the power of any to make them account again; unless some fraud in their accounts be afterwards discovered. 1 Wood’s Inst. b. 1, c. 7.

If their receipts fall short of their disbursements, the succeeding churchwardens may pay them the balance, and place it to their account. 1 Roll’s Abr. 121; Can. 89, 109, &c. And the Court of Chancery will, on application, make an order for the purpose. 2 Eq. Abr. 203; Prec. Ca. 43; but see 4 Vin. 529, 5vo.

In general, however, preceding churchwardens cannot be reimbursed a rate. Ante, 627; 5 Ves. 547; 5 Mad. 4; 8 Taunt. 201.

If they refuse, they may be presented at the next visitation by the new churchwardens; or any of the parish that are interested may, by process, call them to account before the ordinary; or the succeeding churchwardens may have a writ of account at common law. 1 Roll’s Abr. 121.

A churchwarden de facto may maintain an action against a former churchwarden, for money received by him for the use of the parish, though the validity of the election of the plaintiffs to the office be doubtful, and though they be not the immediate successors of the defendant; for the defendant, who was a wrong-doer in withholding the money, shall not be permitted to deny their right to bring the action, and churchwardens being a corporation for the purpose of taking care of the goods of the church, the right to sue for money withheld from the parish passed from one set to the other; it being perfectly immaterial, whether the immediate or any other successors of the defendant brought an action which was not founded in privity between them. Turner v. Barnes, 2 H. Bla. 559.

And in a late case, where in the parish of B. consisting of the township of B. and several hamlets, two churchwardens were appointed by the township and two by the rest of the parish, who made separate rates for their own divisions respectively: it was held, that the acting churchwardens for the township might maintain assumpsit against their predecessors for a balance remaining in their hands, without joining the other churchwardens as plaintiffs or defendants, and without proving that their appointment was strictly legal. Astle v. Thomas, 2 B. & C. 271; 3 D. & R. 492, S. C.

By 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 11, in all actions to be brought in the courts at Westminster or at the assizes for money mispent by churchwardens, the evidence of the parishioners, other than such as receive alms, shall be taken and admitted. See the act, post, 646.

In the case of Leman v. Goulty and another, 3 T. R. 3, it was determined, that although the spiritual court may compel the churchwardens to deliver in their accounts, they cannot decide on the propriety of the charges made therein: and when they had delivered in their accounts, they had done every thing which that court had the power of enforcing, and there was an end of their jurisdiction, it was functus officio; and if they take any steps afterwards, it is an excess of jurisdiction for which a prohibition will be granted even after sentence.

---

IX. Their Punishment for Misbehaviour, &c.

If churchwardens misbehave themselves, it seems the parishioners may remove them. 13 Co. 70; Com. Dig. Eglise, f. l.

For breach of duty they may be sued in the ecclesiastical court, as if they take the bells out of the church. 1 Sid. 281.

If they neglect their duty by wasting the goods of the church, the new churchwardens may call them to an account before the bishop, or bring their action at common law. Read’s Church Service.
Churchwardens.

By the 3 Wil. III. c. 11, s. 12, recting, whereas many churchwardens and overseers, and other persons entrusted to receive collections for the poor, and other public monies relating to the churches and parishes whereunto they belong, do often mispend the same, to the prejudice of such parishes, and of the poor and other inhabitants thereof; and the parishioners, who are the only persons sometimes who can make proof thereof, have not been allowed to be witnesses against them; it is enacted, that in all actions to be brought in any court at Westminster, or at the assizes for the recovery thereof, the evidence of the parishioners, other than such as receive alms, shall be taken and admitted.

But churchwardens are not answerable for indiscretion, but for deceit only, if they lay out more money than is needful. 1 Wood's Inst. b. 1, c. 7.

For their punishment for disobeying orders of justices when acting as overseers of the poor, or parish officers, see Penalty on Overseers for Neglect of their Duty, Inst., Vol. IV.

An indictment lies against them for extortion and corruption in their office. 1 Scat. 307; see post, Extortion, Vol. II.; @Misc, Vol. III.

As to embezzlement by, see post, Embezzling, Vol. III. p. 561, &c.

X. Their Indemnity and Protection of.

By statutes 7 Jac. I. c. 5; 21 Jac. I. c. 12, if any action be brought against any churchwardens, or persons called sworn men, executing the office of churchwardens, for any thing done by virtue of their office, they may plead the general issue, and give the special matter in evidence; and if a verdict is given for them, or the plaintiff shall be nonsuit, or discontinue, in every such case the judge before whom the said matter shall be tried shall allow to the defendant his double costs.

In order to entitle the defendant to double costs under this act, there must be a certificate of the judge who tried the cause, that the action was brought against the defendant for something done by him in the execution of his office. But the judge is bound to grant such certificate, and it may be signed at any time after the trial. Harper v. Carr, 7 T. R. 448; 2 B. & Cress. 621; 4 D. & J. 156, S. C.

In Kercheval's case, Cro. Car. 285, 286, an action was brought against the churchwardens for a presentment upon common fame of inchoendency. Upon not guilty it was found for the churchwardens, and moved that they might have double costs. But it was resolved, that this being merely ecclesiastical, it is not within this statute; for that the statute was never intended, but where they shall be vexed concerning temporal matters, which they shall do by virtue of their office, and not for presentments concerning matters of fame.

Where a churchwarden is sued for taking a distress for a poor rate under a warrant of magistrates, he is entitled to the protection given to magistrates and other officers by stat. 24 Geo. II. c. 44. Harper v. Carr, 7 T. R. 270; Nutting v. Jackson, Bull. N. P. 24.

And, therefore, if such an action be brought against him alone, without making the magistrates defendants also, he is entitled to a verdict on proving the warrant of the magistrates. Id.

But the statutes 7 Jac. I. c. 5, and 21 Jac. I. c. 12, s. 3, giving double costs to parish officers sued, &c. do not extend to actions against them for non-payment, such as the non-payment of money laid out for the support of one of their paupers by another parish into which he went, and for which an action of assumpsit was brought against them. Atkins v. Barnwell, 3 East's Rep. 92.

Nor are they entitled to double costs on judgment as in case of a nonsuit in an action brought against them for the price of goods sold and delivered to them for the use of the poor, &c. Blanchard v. Bramble, 3 M. & S. 131.

See further as to the construction of these kind of statutory provisons, post, Constable, Vol. I.
XI. Sidesmen and Vestry Clerk.

In larger parishes there are officers called sidesmen (anciently synodemen, otherwise called quaste men,) to assist the churchwardens in their inquiries and presentment of offenders. They shall be chosen yearly in Easter week by the minister and parishioners, if they can agree; if not, by the bishop. Can. 90.

The sidesman's oath, said to have been agreed on by the civilians and common lawyers, is this:

> You shall swear that you will be assistant to the churchwardens in the execution of their office, so far as by law you are bound. So help you God. Gib. 12.

It is usual for the vestry to appoint a clerk for the better management of the duty that devolves to them. But this is an office of merely a private nature. It depends altogether on the will of the inhabitants, who may elect a different clerk at each vestry. Neither is any salary annexed to the situation; if the fees are to be paid out of the poor rates, there is an end of all prescriptive right to it. As to any supposed agreement made by the parishioners that such should be an annual office, it cannot be obligatory longer than the parties choose to fulfil it; for it may be revoked at the next vestry. It is not, therefore, a fixed permanent office, for which a mandamus will lie. R. v. Churchwardens of Croydon, 5 T. R. 714.

---

(No. 1.)

BE it remembered, that on the day of in the year of our Lord to wit. at in the county of A. C., one of the churchwardens of the parish of in the said county, personally cometh before me J. P., one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, and on his oath (b) saith, that C. D. of, &c., in the said county, hath refused and neglected, and still doth refuse and neglect to pay to him, the said A. C. (such churchwarden as aforesaid,) or any person authorised to receive the same, the sum of being the sum to which the said C. D. is duly rated and assessed in the churchwardens' rate for church rates, and made the day of last, the validity of which said rate hath not been questioned in any ecclesiastical court, and which sum is now justly due from the said C. D. unto him the said A. C. as such churchwarden, &c., and that he ought to collect and receive the same, and the said A. C. prayeth justice in the premises, and that the said C. D. may be summoned to answer the premises.

Sworn before me, J. P. on, &c.

A. I.

---

(No. 2.)

To E. P., Constable of and to all Constables and others, his Majesty's Summon thereon.

WHEREAS information and complaint have been made before me, J. P., Esquire, one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, by A. C., one of the churchwardens of the parish of in the said county, that C. D. of, &c., hath refused and neglected, and still, &c., [proceed as in the complaint, to the asterisk, and then thus:] These are therefore to require you forthwith to summon the said C. D. to appear before me and such other justices of the peace for the said county as shall be then present at in the said county of on the day of at the hour of in the forenoon of the same day, to answer unto the said information and complaint, and to be further dealt with according to law; and be you then there to certify what you shall have done in the premises. Given under my hand and seal, at in the said county, the day of one thousand eight hundred and

J. P.

---

(No. 3.)

WHEREAS information and complaint have been made unto [me] J. P., Esquire, one of His Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, by A. C., one of the churchwardens of the parish of in the said county, that C. D.

(a) See the 53 Geo. III. c. 127, ante, 628, 629.
(b) The statute, however, does not seem to require the information to be upon oath, ante, 628.
(c) See a general form of summons of a witness, post, 861.
Churchwardens. [XI.

Warrant to levy. — To C. C. the Constable of and others whom this may concern.

WHEREAS information and complaint have been made unto J. P. Esquire, &c. [proceed as in the Order, supra, No. 3, to the asterisk, and then thus:] And whereas we the said justices, having duly considered the premises, and having also duly examined into the merits and truth of the said complaint upon oath, do find that there is justly due the aforesaid sum of (a) from the said C. D. to the said A. C. as such churchwarden as aforesaid, and do order and direct the aforesaid C. D. to pay, or cause to be paid, the same unto the said A. C. together with the further sum of for such costs and charges concerning the premises as upon the merits of the cause appear to us to be just and reasonable. Given under our hands and seals, at in the said county, the day of in the year one thousand eight hundred and (Clinque Ports. See ante, Admiralty Court, p. 45; post, Ships, Vol. V.

Circuit. See ante, Assizes, p. 286; post, Shire-Hall, Vol. V.

Clergymen. (c)

IT would not be within the object or compass of this work to notice all the laws particularly affecting clergymen, those only which concern the magistrate, parish officer, or crown lawyer, will be noticed; for the rest the reader

(a) It must not exceed £10, see ante, 629.
(b) The warrant may be made by one of the justices only.
(c) As to the clergy in general, see Burn’s Ecclesiastical Law, by Tyrwhitt, Com. Dig. tit. “Egsum.”
Clergymen. is referred to Burn's Ecclesiastical Law by Tyrwhitt, tit. Privileges and Restraints on the Clergy, Residence, Public Worship, &c. (a)

The 57 Geo. III. c. 99, consolidates and amends the laws relating to clergymen holding farms, and for enforcing residence on their benefices, and for the support of stipendiary curates in England. (b)

Clergymen are in general liable to all public charges imposed by act of parliament when they are not expressly excepted. See 1 Hawk. c. 76, s. 15.

By stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2, clergymen are liable to the poor rates for their glebe and tithe.

Mr. Hawkins says, clergymen are within the purview of the statutes relating to the repair of highways, in respect of their spiritual possessions, as much as any other person whatsoever in respect of any other possessions; for the words are general, and there is no kind of intimation therein that any particular persons shall be exempted more than others. 1 Hawk. c. 76, s. 15.

By the General Highway Act, indeed, they are expressly made liable in respect of their tithes, &c. 13 Geo. III. c. 76, s. 34, 35, 45, 46. See Highways, Vol. III. p. 30, 31.

The exemptions from the duty on horses imposed by stat. 43 Geo. III. c. 161, extend to any rector, vicar, or curate, actually doing duty in the church or chapel of which he is rector, vicar, or curate, not possessed of 60l. per annum, whether arising from ecclesiastical preferment or otherwise; and not keeping more than one horse, mare, or gelding, for the purpose of riding, which otherwise would be chargeable within the act; except such person who shall occasionally perform the duty without being the regular officiating minister. Case 7, Sched. F.

Every ecclesiastical person not possessed of 100l. annual income from preferment or otherwise, is exempted from duty on any horse used only to draw a two-wheel tax cart. See stats. 48 Geo. III. c. 55; 52 Geo. III. c. 93, Sched. E, No. 1.

It seems that clergymen are compellable to take parish apprentices, or at least are chargeable towards putting them out. 1 Bott, 606, pl. 841; 2 Nol. P. L. 346, 4th ed.

To the intent that clergymen may the better discharge their duty in celebration of divine service, and not be entangled with temporal business, if any of them be chosen to any temporal office, as bailiff, constable, &c. he may have his writ to be discharged. 1 Inst. 96.

Ecclesiastical persons have this privilege, that they ought not in person to serve in war. 2 Inst. 4.

Ecclesiastical persons are not bound to appear at the torn, or view of frankpledge. 52 Hen. III. c. 10; 9 Edw. II. c. 3. 2 Inst. 4.

Ecclesiastical persons are exempted from serving as jurors. 6 Geo. IV. c. 50, s. 2, post, Jurors, Vol. III. p. 406.

We have seen that by the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 23, it is a misdemeanour to arrest a clergymen on civil process while performing, or about to perform, or returning from performing, divine service, ante, 258.

The arrest, however, would be good if not made on a Sunday. Wats. c. 34.

(a) From a late important decision, from which much information on the subject may be collected, it appears that an incumbent of a living is bound to keep the parsonage house and chancel in good and substantial repair, restoring and rebuilding when necessary, according to the original form, without addition or modern improvement; but he is not bound to spend money to make those repairs appear the nature of ornament, such as painting, (unless that be necessary to preserve exposed timber from decay,) and whitewashing and papering; and in an action for dilapidations against the executors of a deceased rector by the successor, the damages are to be calculated upon this principle. Wise v. Metcalfe, 10 B. & C. 599.

(b) In a late case it was held that a demise by a parson of his benefice, made subsequent to the 57 Geo. III. c. 99, for securing an annuity, is void, it being in substance a charging of the benefice, within the meaning of the 13 Eliz. c. 20, which, as far as it relates to chargings of benefices, is now in force, having been revived by the 57 Geo. III. c. 99. Shaw v. Pritchard and others, 10 B. & C. 241.
Clergymen.

As to the privilege of clergymen in not answering confidential communications, see post, Obtravz. Vol. II. p. 68.

A person laying violent hands on a clergymen may, as we have seen, be punished in the ecclesiastical courts; ante, 285.

Beating clerks in orders was punishable under the articuli clerii, 9 Edw. II. st. 1, c. 3, but so much of that "as relates to laying violent hands on a clerk," is now repealed by the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31.

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 26, repeals so much of the 25 Edw. III. c. 6, (vulgo, st. 8,) as relates to clerks convicted of treasons or felonies, and to the arraignment of clerks; and by 6 Geo. IV. c. 25, s. 3, it is enacted, "that clerks in holy orders being convicted of felony, shall stand and be under the same pains and dangers for the same, and shall be used and ordered to all intents and purposes, as other persons not being in holy orders.

By the 15 Edw. III. st. 1, c. 6, clergymen shall not answer before his Majesty's justices for things done touching the jurisdiction of the church, and by 18 Edw. III. st. 3, c. 6, temporal justices shall not enquire of process awarded by the ecclesiastical jurisdiction, as on wills, &c.

By the 1 Hen. VII. c. 4, the incontinency of clergymen may be punished with imprisonment by the ordinary.

Clergy, Benefit of.

The benefit of clergy is now totally abolished by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 6, post, 652, some account of its origin and effect may, however, as well be noticed.

Anciently princes and states, converted to Christianity, in favour of the clergy, and for their encouragement in their offices and employments, and that they might not be so much entangled in suits, did grant to the clergy very bountiful privileges and exemptions; and particularly an exemption of their persons from criminal proceedings, in some capital cases, before secular judges, which was the true original of the benefit of clergy. 2 Hale, 322.

The clergy increasing in wealth, power, honour, number, and interest, afterwards set up for themselves, and that which they obtained by the favour of princes and states at first, they now began to claim as their right, and a right of the highest nature, namely by the law of God; and by their canons and constitutions endeavoured, and in some places obtained, vast extensions of these exemptions, both with regard to the persons concerned, to wit, not only to persons in holy orders, but also to all that had any kind of subordinate ministration relative to the church; and likewise in respect of the causes, exempting as far as they could all causes of clergymen, as well civil as criminal, from the jurisdiction of the secular power, and wholly subordinating them immediately and only to the ecclesiastical jurisdiction, which they supposed to be lodged first in the pope by divine right and investiture from Christ, and from the pope shed abroad into all subordinate and ecclesiastical jurisdiction. 2 Hale, 324.

And by this means they endeavoured, and in some kingdoms and for some ages obtained, that there was a double supreme power in every kingdom; the one ecclesiastical, absolute and independent upon any but the pope, over ecclesiastical men and causes; and the other secular, of the king or civil magistrate.

But this claim of exemption, although it obtained much in this kingdom, yet grew so burdensome that it was from time to time qualified and abridged by the civil power, sometimes by acts of parliament taking it away in some cases, sometimes by the interpretation and construction of the judges, and sometimes by the contrary usage of the kingdom; for ecclesiastical causes never bound in England farther than they were received, and so had not their authority from their own strength and obligation, but from the usages and customs of the kingdom that admitted them, and only so far forth as they were so admitted. 2 Hale, 325.
Clergy, Benefit of.

And therefore if they were indicted in cases criminal, but not capital, nor wherein they were to lose life or limb, there the privilege of clergy was not allowed; and therefore not in indictments of trespass or petit larceny. Id.

Also it was not allowed them in high treason.

But at the common law, in all cases of felony or petit treason, clergy was allowable, excepting two, lying in wait, and burning of houses, which were looked upon as hostile acts, and the authors of them therefore not entitled to the common privileges of subjects. 2 Hale, 330.

Who might demand it]—By a favourable interpretation of the statutes relating to the benefit of clergy, not only those actually admitted into some inferior order of the clergy, but also those who were never qualified to be admitted into orders, (which was formerly tried by putting them to read a verse,) were taken to have a right to this privilege as much as persons in holy orders. 2 Hawk. c. 33, s. 5.

But by the common law a woman could not have the benefit of clergy; but by the statute of 3 Will. III. c. 9, a woman convicted or outlawed for any felony for which a man might have his clergy, shall, upon praying the benefit of that statute, be subject only to such punishment as a man would be in the like case.

Lord Hale says, a person convicted of heresy, a Jew, or a Turk, should not have their clergy; but a person excommunicate should have his clergy. 2 Hale, 373.

But by stat. 5 Anne, c. 6, which abolished the ceremony of reading, the wall of partition (as Sir Michael Foster expresses it) between subject and subject under one and the same degree of guilt, was taken away; and from this period the measure of punishment was governed by the degrees of real guilt, and not by the function or abilities of the offender. Fort. 306.

And by the same statute, if he was convicted of murder, he should be marked, (unless he was a peer, 2 Hale, 376,) with an M on the brawn of the left thumb; and if for any other felony, with a T.

But he should not be ousted of his clergy, by the bare mark in his hand, or by a parol averment, without the record testifying it, or a transcript thereof, (according to the following statutes.) 2 Hale, 373.

In what cases it might be]—By stat. 25 Edw. III. st. 3, c. 4, all manner of clerks who were convicted before the secular judges for any treasons or felonies, touching other persons than the king himself, might have the privilege of the holy church.

Clergy was never allowed in this nation in case of high treason, nor was it allowed on indictments of petit larceny or trespass; but by the above recited act clergy was allowed in all treasons and felonies, except treason against the king; so that after this statute the benefit of clergy might be pleaded and allowed in all other treasons and felonies. Hale's Sum. 230; 2 Hale, 326.

Consequently wherever clergy was not allowable in any other cases, it was taken away by some subsequent act of parliament. Hale's Sum. 230.

Also where a new felony was made by an act of parliament, clergy was to be allowed, unless expressly taken away by such statute. Id.

And if it made a new felony, and took away clergy, not generally, but in such or such cases regularly in other cases, clergy was allowable. 2 Hale, 335.

But if the statute enacted generally that it should be felony without benefit of clergy, or that he should suffer as in case of felony, without benefit of clergy, that excluded it in all circumstances and to all intents. 2 Hale, 335.

And where an act took away clergy from the principal, and said nothing of the accessory, the accessories, as well before as after, might have their Clergy, Benefit of.

Benefit of clergy abolished. Now abolished]—By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 6, it is enacted, "that benefit of clergy with respect to persons convicted of felony shall be abolished; but that nothing herein contained shall prevent the joinder in any indictment of any counts which might have been joined before the passing of this act."

Repeal of acts. The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, repeals so much of the stat. 25 Edw. s. 3, c. 6, (salto st. 3,) as relates to clerks convicted of treasons or felonies, and to the arraignment of clerks; and also so much of the stat. 4 W. & M. c. 24, as explains the stat. 3 W. & M. c. 9; and the whole of the stat. 19 Geo. III. c. 74, except so much thereof as relates to the judge's lodgings: and the whole of the 4 Hen. VII. c. 13; 21 Hen. III. c. 11; 34 & 35 Hen. VIII. c. 14; 3 W. & M. c. 9; 6 Ann. c. 9.

The benefit of clergy had the same effect in restoring a party to his competency as a statute pardon; and the benefit of clergy being abolished, it was at least doubtful whether a person convicted of felony was a competent witness, although he had undergone the punishment.

But this is now remedied by the 9 Geo. IV. c. 32, s. 3, which, after reciting, "and whereas it is expedient to prevent all doubts respecting the civil rights of persons convicted of felonies not capital, who have undergone the punishment to which they were adjudged," enacts, "that where any offender hath been or shall be convicted of any felony not punishable with death, and hath endured or shall endure the punishment to which such offender hath been or shall be adjudged for the same, the punishment so endured hath and shall have the like effects and consequences as a pardon under the great seal as to the felony whereof the offender was so convicted: provided always, that nothing herein contained, nor the enduring of such punishment, shall prevent or mitigate any punishment to which the offender might otherwise be lawfully sentenced on a subsequent conviction for any other felony."

By the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 7, felonies without benefit of clergy, and sect. 8, felonies within benefit of clergy, are provided for under all circumstances consequent on the indictment. See the provisions, post, Felony, Vol. II.

Clerk of Assize. See ante, Assizes, p. 286.

As to the lien of, see R. v. Bury, 1 Leach, 201.

Clerk of the Peace.

Who shall appoint and who appointed.

Who shall appoint and who appointed.

[37 Hen. VIII. c. 1; 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 22; 1 Will. III. sess. 1, c. 21; 4 & 5 Will. III. c. 24; 10 & 11 Will. III. c. 23; 3 Geo. I. c. 16; 22 Geo. II. c. 46; 56 Geo. III. c. 50; 87 Geo. III. c. 91; 5 Geo. IV. c. 61; 1 Will. IV. c. 25.]

The custos rotulorum shall appoint an able and sufficient person, residing in the county or division, to execute the office of clerk of the peace, by himself or his sufficient deputy (to be allowed of by the said custos rotulorum, 37 Hen. VIII. c. 1); and to take and receive the fees, profits, and perquisites thereof, for so long time only as such clerk of the peace shall well demean himself in his said office; 1 Will. Ill. sess. 1, c. 21, s. 5; and in the late case of Harding v. Pollock, 6 Bing. 25, it was fully settled, on error from the Exchequer Chamber in Ireland, that the appointment to the office of clerk of the peace is in the custos rotulorum of each county. Beiley, J., dis.
Clerk of the Peace.

In cities or towns corporate there is usually an analogous officer who performs correspondent duties under some other title, as "town clerk," and who is generally appointed, not by the custos rotulorum, but by the body corporate of which he is an officer. Dick. Sess. by Tols. 52.

The office of the clerk of the peace continues "for so long time as he shall well demean himself therein," and therefore he has an estate of freehold for life in the office, on condition of behaving well, and therefore he cannot be dispossessed, except for misbehaviour, by a competent tribunal; nor does his estate determine by the death or removal of the custos. 4 Mod. 167, 173, 293.

He can be appointed for no other term than "for so long time as he shall well demean himself in his office," and therefore an appointment during pleasure is void, and the party so appointed not a clerk of the peace.

By sect. 6 of the 1 Will. Ill. sess. 1, c. 21, if he shall misdemean himself in his office, and a complaint and charge in writing of such misdemeanor shall be exhibited against him to the justices in sessions, the said justices may, on examination and due proof thereof, openly in the said sessions suspend or discharge him from the said office; and in such case, the custos rotulorum shall appoint another able and sufficient person, residing in the said county or division, to be clerk of the peace. And in case of refusal or neglect to make such appointment, before the next general quarter sessions, the justices in sessions may appoint one.

Extortion is one of the offences for which this power of the sessions may be put in force. Mod. Ca. 192.

The order of sessions removing a party so charged with misconduct need not set forth the evidence on which it is founded. R. v. Lloyd, 2 Stra. 996.

By sect. 8 of the 1 Will. Ill. sess. 1, c. 21, the custos rotulorum shall not sell the place of clerk of the peace, or take any bond or other assurance to receive any reward, fee, or profit, directly or indirectly, to him or to any other person for such appointment; on pain that such custos rotulorum selling, and such clerk of the peace buying, shall be disabled to hold their respective places, and shall each forfeit double the value of the thing given to him who shall sue.

By sect. 9, every clerk of the peace, before entering upon the execution of his office, shall, in open sessions, take the oath following:

I, A. B. do swear, that I have not nor will pay any sum or sums of money, or other reward whatsoever, nor given any bond or other assurance to pay any money, fee, or profit, directly or indirectly, to any person or persons whomsoever, for such nomination and appointment. So help me God.

He shall moreover take the oaths of allegiance, supremacy, and abjuration, and perform the same requisites as other persons who qualify for offices.

Duties of The clerk of the peace, by himself or his sufficient deputy, must be in constant attendance on the court of quarter sessions. He gives notice of its being holden or adjourned; issues its processes; records its proceedings; and does all the ministerial acts necessary to give effect to its decisions. Dick. Sess. 52, 53.

In the actual course of the sessions, it is the duty of the clerk of the peace to read the acts directed to be read in sessions; to call the jurors, and make known their defaults and excuses to the court; to call the parties under recognizance, whether to prosecute, plead, or give evidence; to present the bills to and receive them from the grand jury; to arraign prisoners; to receive and record verdicts; to administer all oaths; and make true entries of all proceedings. Dick. Sess. 53.

It is his duty, when prosecutors do not choose to seek professional assistance elsewhere, to draw the bills of indictment for felony at a fee of only 2s. each; and if an indictment so prepared be found defective, he is bound to provide another gratis, on pain of forfeiting 5l. to any one who will sue; 10 & 11 Will. III. c. 23, s. 7, 8. He has also been said to be amenable in the Court of King's Bench for gross errors in indictments framed by him, and brought before that court on certiorari; Lilly's Proc. Reg. 71; and though perhaps at the present day he would scarcely be held responsible for mere error, there is no doubt that if an indictment drawn by him were of immoderate and oppressive length it might be referred to the master, and the clerk of the peace might be ordered to pay the costs of such parts of it as should be found manifestly superfluous; 1 Doug. 193, 194; R. v. Barry, 1 Leach. 201. It seems, however, that the obligation to draw indictments at the statutable fee of 2s. is confined to cases of felony; and in case of misdemeanor, he may make reasonable charges to prosecutors requiring his assistance. Dick. Sess. 53.

By stat. 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 22, s. 7, he shall deliver to the sheriff, within twenty days after September 29th, yearly, a perfect estreat or schedule of all fines and other forfeitures in sessions.

By sect. 8, he shall also yearly, on or before the second Monday after the morow of All Souls, deliver into the Court of Exchequer (upon oath, stat.
4 & 5 Will. III. c. 24, s. 5,) a perfect duplicate certificae, and estreat thereof; and on pain of 50l., half to the King and half to him that shall sue.

By stat. 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 22, s. 9, if he shall spare, take off, discharge, or conceal any such fine or forfeiture, unless it be by rule of court, he shall forbear treble value, half to the King and half to him that shall sue; and shall also lose his office, and be for ever incapable to be employed in any office where the revenue is concerned. And moreover, by stat. 3 Geo. I.
c. 15, s. 12, he may be amerced for not returning his estreats, by the barons of the Exchequer.

The 1 Will. IV. c. 25, repeals the 55 Geo. III. c. 49, relative to the clerk of the peace, &c. making returns of persons committed, tried, and convicted, for criminal offences and misdemeanors.

As to the duties, &c. of clerks of the peace, under the Insolvent Act, see the act 7 Geo. IV. c. 37, s. 77, 78, &c. post, Insolvent, Vol. III. p. 388.
As to his duties in summoning, &c. juries, see post, Jurors, Vol. III. p.
412, &c.

As to the enrolment of rules of friendly societies and saving banks, see ante, Banks for Savings, p. 315, &c.; Friendly Societies, Vol. II.

By stat. 22 Geo. II. c. 46, s. 14, no clerk of the peace, or his deputy, shall act as solicitor, attorney, or agent, or sue out any process at any general or quarter sessions, where he shall execute the officer of clerk of the peace or deputy, on pain of 50l. to him who shall sue in twelve months, with treble costs.

The clerk of the peace is not bound to enter judgment, or the like, at the suit of any, without having the fee due for the same; but if the court order any thing without suit of another, to wit, ex officio, there he ought to enter the same, without having any fee for the entering thereof. Croup. 159.

The sessions cannot compel payment of his fees by summary process, or detain parties till they be paid, but he must seek his remedy by action. Pollard v. Gerrard, 1 Ld. Raym. 703.

By stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 50, s. 1, after reciting that "whereas it is expecdient, for the better government of gaols and bridewells in England, that all fees and gratuities payable at the same, for the entrance, commitment or discharge of any prisoner, should be abolished," it is enacted, "that from and after the first day of October next, all fees and gratuities paid or payable by any prisoner, on the entrance, commitment or discharge, to or from prison, shall absolutely cease, and the same are hereby abolished and determined."

Sect. 2. "And whereas in some places such fees and gratuities as aforesaid are payable to the gaoler or his servants, and are to him or them as a salary; be it enacted, that it may be lawful for the justices of the peace for any county, city or town, assembled in general or quarter sessions, to make such allowances to the aforesaid gaoler or servants, as may to them seem fit, in the way of salary or compensation, for the fees or gratuities, payable by prisoners, now abolished by this act."

Sect. 3. "That the said justices of the peace for any county, city or town, and any more persons assembled in general or quarter sessions, are hereby enjoined to make such allowances, to the aforesaid gaoler or servants, as is requisite by the said act."
may direct the said allowances to be paid out of any county rate, city rate or town rate, now by law authorised to be made and levied."

Sect. 4. "And whereas it is customary for clerks of the assize, clerks of the peace, clerks of the court or their deputies, or other officers in the courts of assize or session, to demand and take from persons indicted, divers sums in the way of fees; be it enacted, that every prisoner who now is or hereafter shall be charged with or indicted for any felony, or as an accessory thereto, or with or for any misdemeanor, before any court holding criminal jurisdiction within that part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland called England, against whom no bill of indictment shall be found by the grand jury, or who, on his, her or their trial shall be acquitted, or who shall be discharged by proclamation for want of prosecution, shall be immediately set at large, without payment of any fee or sum of money, for or in respect of his, her or their discharge, to any person or persons whatsoever; except only in such cases wherein the prisoner shall have been charged, and shall then stand charged with any process authorising the detention of such prisoner: provided always, that if it shall happen that any prisoner who shall so stand charged with any process authorising his detention as aforesaid, shall have been discharged in supposed obedience to this act, by reason that the sheriffs or other officers entitled to have detained him was at the time of such discharge ignorant that there was any such charge against him, it shall in such case be lawful for such sheriff or other officer, on receiving information of such charge, presently to retake the prisoner so discharged as aforesaid, and thereupon forthwith to detain him in custody upon such charge, in such manner as the said sheriff or other officer might have done if such prisoner had not been set at large; and that upon his being so retaken, the said prisoner shall be deemed for the purpose of that suit to have been in custody continually from the time when he so first stood charged as aforesaid."

Sect. 5. "That all such fees as have been usually paid or payable to the several clerks of assize and clerks of the peace, clerks of the court, or their deputies, in that part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland called England, in any of the cases aforesaid, shall absolutely cease, and the same are hereby abolished and determined; and from and after the passing of this act, no clerk of assize, clerk of the peace, clerk of the court, or their deputies, shall ask, demand, take or receive any sum or sums of money, from any of the said prisoners as fees, for or in respect of his, her or their discharge."

Sect. 6. "That in lieu and satisfaction of such lawful fees so abolished as aforesaid, the treasurers or other proper officers of the several counties in England, or of such districts, hundreds, ridings or divisions of a county as are not usually assessed to the county at large, and of such cities, towns corporate, cinque, ports, liberties, franchises and places, as do not pay to the rates of the several counties in which they are respectively situated, shall, on receiving a certificate signed by one or more judge or justice of the peace, before whom such prisoner shall have been discharged as aforesaid, (which certificate the judge or justice is hereby required to give,) pay out of the rates of such county, or of such district, hundred, riding or division, or out of the public stock of such city, town corporate, cinque port, liberty, franchise or place, such lawful sum as has been usually paid upon that occasion, for every prisoner discharged as aforesaid, to such clerk of assize, clerk of the peace, or clerk of the court, or their respective deputies; which several sums so paid in pursuance of this act shall be respectively allowed to the said treasurers and officers, by the justices before whom their accounts shall be passed."

Sect. 7. "That each and every clerk of the peace, or his or their deputy or deputies, and all and every officer who shall claim any fees or indemnification for the same, by virtue of any of the provisions hereinbefore contained for and in respect of any such prisoners, shall deliver at each and every session of the peace, or at some adjournment thereof, an account of all fees so due to him, or for which he shall claim any indemnification;
Clerk of the Peace.

which account shall be verified upon oath in court, before the chairman of such sessions."

Sect. 8. "That the clerks of assize shall, at each and every assize to be held, deliver in to the judge of the assize who shall sit for the trial of such prisoners, an account of such fees as shall be due to him for and in respect of such prisoners; which account shall be verified upon oath before such judge to whom such account shall be delivered."

Sect. 9. "That from and after the passing of this act, any clerk of assize, clerk of the peace, clerk of the court, or their deputies or other officers, exacting such fees, shall be rendered incapable of holding his or their offices, and be guilty of a misdemeanor."

By stat. 57 Geo. III. c. 91, s. 1, reciting that "whereas doubts have arisen touching the fees and allowances due and to be made to the clerks of the peace of the several counties and other divisions in England and Wales; for the removing of such doubts," it is enacted, "that from and after the first day of July next, it shall and may be lawful to and for the justices of the peace for the county of Kent, and for the county palatine of Lancaster, at their annual general sessions of the peace, and for the justices of the peace in every other county, riding, division, city, town, liberty or precinct, within England and Wales, at their respective general quarter sessions of the peace, to ascertain, make and settle a table of fees and allowances to be taken by the clerk of the peace for such county of Kent and such county palatine, and such other counties, ridings, divisions, cities, towns, liberties and precincts respectively; and such table of fees and allowances, when so made, shall be subject to the approbation of the justices of the peace at the then next succeeding general annual sessions of the peace for the county palatine of Lancaster, and for the county of Kent, and at the then next succeeding general quarter session of the peace for every other such county, riding, division, city, town, liberty or precinct as aforesaid, or at some adjournment of such sessions respectively; and such table of fees respectively, when so approved respectively, shall be laid before the judges of assize at the next assizes for such counties and places respectively, except the several places being counties in which assizes are not constantly or regularly held in every year, and in those cases before the justices at the next assizes for the adjoining county where assizes are constantly and regularly held, and to which prisoners are generally removed for trial from such places respectively, and also except the counties in Wales and the county palatine of Chester, and before the justices at the next great sessions for the several counties in Wales, and for the county palatine of Chester; and the said judges and justices respectively are hereby authorised to ratify and confirm such tables respectively, either as settled and approved as aforesaid, or with such alterations, additions and improvements, as to such judges and justices last mentioned shall appear to be just and reasonable; and it shall be lawful for the said justices of the peace, at their respective quarter or general sessions of the peace, from time to time in like manner to make other table of fees and allowances, instead of or in addition to the tables of fees and allowances before made, which shall and may be approved and afterwards ratified and confirmed in like manner; which fees and allowances contained in such tables respectively, when so made and approved, and afterwards ratified and confirmed as aforesaid, shall be the only fees and allowances which shall be taken by the clerks of the peace of the several counties and places for which such tables respectively shall be so made, approved, ratified and confirmed, from and after such ratification and confirmation thereof respectively; any thing in any act or acts of parliament, or any law, usage or custom to the contrary to anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 2. "That if at any time after any such table of fees and allowances shall have been so ratified and confirmed as aforesaid, any clerk of the peace, or any person or persons acting as such, shall, under pretence of any matter or thing done, transacted or performed, demand or receive any other or greater fee or allowance than the fee or allowance, fees or allowances, ascertained, ratified and confirmed as aforesaid, such clerk of the peace or other person shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of five pounds to any person who shall sue for the same by action of debt, bill, plaint or information, in any of his Majesty's courts of record at Westminster, wherein no essoin, privilege, protection, wager of law, or more than one imparlance shall be granted or allowed.

There is no doubt that if he wilfully take more than his due under colour of his office, he may be indicted at common law for extortion, or be removed from his office, on articles exhibited against him in the court of quarter sessions. Mod. Cas. 192; post, Extortion, Vol. II.

Sect. 3. "That every table of fees and allowances which shall be made, approved, ratified and confirmed from time to time as aforesaid, shall be deposited with the clerk of the peace for the county or place for which such table of fees shall have been so made, approved, ratified and confirmed as aforesaid; and a true and exact written or printed copy or copies thereof shall be placed and constantly kept in a conspicuous part of every room or place wherein any general or quarter sessions of the peace for such county or place shall be held; and if any clerk of the peace, or person acting as such, shall at any time neglect to cause every such copy to be so placed and constantly kept according to the provisions of this act, he shall forfeit and pay to any person who shall sue for the same, for every such offence, the sum of five pounds, to be recovered by action of debt, bill, plaint or information, in any of his Majesty's courts of record at Westminster, wherein no essoin, privilege, protection, wager of law, nor more than one imparlance shall be granted or allowed."

Sect. 4. "That all suits and actions which shall be brought or commenced by virtue of this act, shall be brought before the end of three calendar months after the offence committed, and not otherwise."

As to the transfer of balances in the hands of clerks of the peace, on account of lunatic asylum licenses, see 11 Geo. IV. c. 1; post, Lunatics, Vol. III.

Various duties of the clerk of the peace will be found under different titles of this work.

To all persons to whom these presents shall come, I [the Most Noble George Granville Leveson Gower, Marquis,] of the county of and custos rotulorum of the said county of send greeting.

WHEREAS the office of clerk of the peace for the county of is now void by the death of late clerk of the peace for the said county, Now know ye, that I the said [Marquis] of the county of custos rotulorum of the county aforesaid, do hereby nominate, elect, appoint, and assign W. K. an able and sufficient person, instructed and learned in the laws of England, and residing in the said county, to be clerk of the peace for the said county; to hold, execute, and enjoy the office of clerk of the peace for the county aforesaid, by himself or his sufficient deputy; and to take and receive the fees, profits, and perquisites thereof, so long as he shall well, justly, and honestly demean himself in his said office. In witness whereof I the said have hereunto set my hand and seal, the day of the year

Clerk of the Peace. See post, Fairs and Markets, Vol. II.

Clipping Money. See post, Coin, Vol. I.

Cloaths and Garments. See ante, Assault, p. 286.

Coals and Coal Mines.

Coaches and Carts. See Carriage, Vol. V.

---

II. Regulations as to Coals in General, 658.

1. By Act 30 Car. II. c. 8, 6 & 7 Will. IIII. c. 10, and 11 Geo. II. c. 15, for the admeasurement of keels, boats, waggons, wains, carts, and other carriages used for the carrying of coals in the ports of Newcastle, Sunderland, and the other members of the port of Newcastle; and by Act 15 Geo. III. c. 27, for extending the like regulations to the other ports of this kingdom: if after the admeasurement thereof by the commissioners appointed for that purpose, the marks shall be removed or altered, every person who had a hand in or was privy to the doing thereof, shall, on conviction upon the oath of one witness before one justice, forfeit 10s. by distress, half to the King and half to the discoverer; and for want of distress shall be committed to the common gaol for three months.

2. And by Act 31 Geo. III. c. 36, s. 1, as to all such keels, boats, wains, carts, and other carriages used as aforesaid, which have been duly admeasured and marked as aforesaid, and such marks afterwards on repairing thereof or otherwise have been removed or altered, it is enacted that the same shall be re-admeasured and marked in manner aforesaid before they are again used, under penalty of forfeiture thereof, together with the coals laden thereon.

3. And by sect. 4, if any person shall wilfully or designedly remove, deface, or destroy any such mark, he shall on conviction before one justice, on the oath of one witness, forfeit and pay not exceeding 5s. nor less than 40s.; and in default thereof shall be committed by such justice to the house of correction nearest to the place where the offence was committed for any time not exceeding one month nor less than seven days.

4. By Act 12 Anne. c. 17, s. 11, and 15 Geo. IIII. c. 27, s. 1, every coal bushel shall be round with a plain and even bottom, and be 19 inches from outside to outside, and shall contain one Winchester bushel and one quart of water, according to the standard for the Winchester bushel,
III. Coals, (London.)

Described by Stat. 13 & 14 Will. III. c. 5, s. 28, and all sea-coal and culm chargeable with any duties by the Winchester measure shall be charged, sold, measured, and paid by the seller containing 36 of such bushels heaped up, and no other, and so in proportion, under the like penalties as are by law prescribed in regard to the Winchester bushel. (a)

And by Stat. 17 Geo. II. c. 35, s. 1, three justices (one of the quorum) may set the prices of coals called sea-coals, brought by sea into any river, creek, or port, and sold by retail after landing in any place to which Stat. 16 & 17 Car. II. respecting the price of coals brought into the River Thames doth not extend, as they shall judge reasonable; allowing a competent profit to the retailer beyond the price paid by him to the importer and the ordinary charges; and if an ingrosser or retailer of such coals shall refuse to sell as aforesaid, then the said justices shall appoint such persons as they shall think fit to enter into any place where such coals are stored up, and in case of refusal take a constable to force entrance, and the said coals to sell at such rates, rendering the owner the money for which they were sold, necessary charges being deducted. And if any action be brought against the justice, constable, or other persons, for any thing done in pursuance of this act, he may plead the general issue; and if the verdict be found for him, he shall recover damages and treble costs.

Sect. 2. But no person interested in any wharf used for the receiving and uttering coals, or that trades in the sale of coals, shall act in setting the price of coals.

By Stat. 52 Geo. III. c. 9, which repeals Stat. 25 Geo. III. c. 54, so far as relates to England and Wales, and makes other provisions in lieu thereof, enacts, sect. 6, that all ships in the coal trade shall be measured, and the duties paid on the greatest quantity of coal, culm, or cinders, which it shall appear that any such ship or vessel is capable of containing.

II. Regulations as to Coals in and near London.

Concerning the weights, measures, and prices of coals, especially in and about London, and also concerning the duties thereupon, there are regulations made by above forty different acts of parliament, which, not being of general concern, are here omitted. It is deemed proper, however, to insert the following important statute, which is so frequently called into force.

The Stat. 47 Geo. III. c. lxxviii, intituled, "An Act for repealing the several acts for regulating the vend and delivery of coals within the cities of London and Westminster and liberties thereof, and in certain parts of the counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Kent, and Essex, and for making better provision for the same;" after reciting, that "whereas the several acts now in force and effect for regulating the vend and delivery of coals brought by sea into the port of London, within the cities of London and Westminster, and the liberties thereof, and within such parts of the counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Kent, and Essex, as are situate within the distance of twenty-five miles from the Royal Exchange in the city of London, have been found insufficient to prevent the commission of frauds and impositions in the vend and delivery of such coals: and whereas it would tend greatly to facilitate the execution of the purposes intended by the said acts if the same were repealed, and further and better provisions made for those purposes;" enacts, "that so much of an act made in the seventh year of the reign of his Majesty King Edward the Sixth, intituled, An Act for the assize of fuel, as directs, 'that all coals to be made and put to sale in the cities of London, Westminster, or in the suburbs of the same, after the last day of September next coming, shall keep the assize hereafter expressed, that is to wit, that every sack of coals contain four bushels of good and clean coals, upon pain that every marker and every

(a) See also Stat. 3 Geo. III. sess. 2, c. lxxvii. s. 109, post 703, and 5 Geo. IV. c. 79, s. 7, 8, title, Rights, 5th Vol. V.
Coals and Coal Mines.

them, shall be as good, valid, binding, and effectual for the several purposes of this act, as if the said recited acts made in the forty-third and forty-fourth years of the reign of his present Majesty had not been repealed, anything herein contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding.

Sect. 8. "That all and every bond and bonds, note and notes, and all and every other security and securities in writing, under the common seal of the mayor and commonalty and citizens of the city of London, which shall have been delivered under or in pursuance of the said recited acts made in the forty-third and forty-fourth years of the reign of his present Majesty, or either of them, to any person or persons to secure the payment of any sum or sums of money borrowed from and advanced or contracted to be advanced by any such person or persons to the said mayor, aldermen, and commons in common council assembled, shall be and continue in such and the like force and effect, and such several persons who shall have advanced or shall in pursuance of any such contract advance any such money, shall in respect of the sums so respectively advanced or to be advanced be and continue entitled to such annuities at such rates of interest as shall have in pursuance of such acts or either of them been made payable to any such obligee or obligees, as if such acts had not been repealed; and all such annuities respectively shall be and the same is and are hereby declared to be charged on all and every the duty or duties on coals, cinders, and culm, to be levied and collected by virtue of this act, and shall be and continue to be paid and payable out of all and every such duty or duties until redemption thereof by payment of such principal sum."

Sect. 9. "That the said mayor, aldermen, and commons shall give, or cause to be given, six calendar months' notice of their intention to pay off any such annuities which shall have been so granted under and by virtue of the said recited acts, made in the forty-third and forty-fourth years of the reign of his present Majesty, or either of them, to the person or persons to whom the same may respectively belong, at the end of which six calendar months, upon payment or tender of the respective sums for which any such annuity or annuities may have been granted, to or for the person or persons then entitled thereto, at the office of the chamberlain of the said city for the time being, in the Guildhall of the same city, the annuity and annuities payable to such person and persons respectively shall cease and determine, nevertheless the monies so tendered shall be paid to such person or persons upon his or their demand, and giving a discharge for the same."

Sect. 10. "That all such bonds as shall have been paid or given to secure the money to be paid for the purchase of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, purchased by virtue of the powers of the said recited acts, made in the forty-third and forty-fourth years of the reign of his present Majesty, or either of them, which belonged to any body politic, corporate, or collegiate, or to any fief or in trust, executor, administrator, husband, guardian, committee, or trustee, or for or on behalf of any infant, lunatic, idiot, feme covert, or other cesuquiue trust, or to any person whose lands, tenements, or hereditaments were limited in strict or other settlement, or to any person under any other disability or incapacity whatsoever, and which shall have been deposited in the Bank of England, in the name and with the priuity of the accountant general of the High Court of Chancery, shall remain in the said Bank of England until such bonds respectively shall be paid off by the said mayor, aldermen, and commons; and the said mayor, aldermen, and commons shall, and they are hereby required to pay off such bonds respectively, in such manner as if the money secured by such bonds respectively had been borrowed by the said mayor, aldermen, and commons, by virtue of the said recited act, made in the forty-third year of the reign of his present Majesty; and until such bonds respectively shall be paid off, the interest thereof respectively shall from time to time be paid by order of the said Court of Chancery to the person or persons who would for the time being have been entitled to the rents, issues, and profits of the lands, tenements, and hereditaments so purchased as aforesaid; and when and as soon as any such bond or bonds shall be paid off by the said mayor, aldermen, and commons, then and in such case the money arising therefrom shall, in case the same shall amount to the sum of two hundred pounds, with all convenient speed be paid into the Bank of England, in the name and with the privity of the accountant general of the High Court of Chancery, to be placed to his account there, ex parte the said mayor and commonalty and citizens of the city of London, to the intent that such money shall be applied under the direction and with the approbation of the said court, to be signified upon an order made upon a petition to be preferred in a summary way by the person or persons who would have been entitled to the rents and profits of the said lands, tenements, or hereditaments, in the purchase or redemption of the land tax, or discharge of any debt or debts, or such other incumbrances, or part thereof, as the said court shall authorize to be paid, affecting the same lands, tenements, or hereditaments, or affecting other lands, tenements, or hereditaments, standing settled therewith to the same or the like uses, intents, or purposes; or where such money shall not be so applied, then the same shall be laid out and invested, under the like direction and appointment of the said court, in the purchase of other lands, tenements, or hereditaments, which shall be conveyed and settled to, for, and upon such and the like uses, trusts, intents, and purposes, and in the manner as the lands, tenements, and hereditaments, which shall be so purchased, taken, or used as aforesaid, stood settled or limited, or of such of them as at the time of making such conveyance and settlement shall be existing, undetermined, and capable of taking effect; and in the mean time and until such purchase shall be made, the said money shall, by order of the Court of Chancery, upon application thereto, be invested by the said accountant general, in his name, in the purchase of three pounds per centum consolidated, or three pounds per centum reduced bank annuities; and in the mean time and until the said bank annuities shall be ordered by the said court to be sold for the purposes aforesaid, the dividends and annual produce of the said consolidated or reduced bank annuities shall from time to time be paid by order of the said court to the person or persons who would for the time being be entitled to the rents and profits of the said lands, tenements, and hereditaments so purchased, in case such purchase or settlement were made.”

Sect. 11. “That if the money which shall arise from paying off any such bond which shall have been so given and deposited for securing the payment of any purchase money for any lands, tenements or hereditaments belonging to any corporation, or to any person or persons under any disability or incapacity as aforesaid, shall be less than the sum of two hundred pounds, and shall exceed or be equal to the sum of twenty pounds, then and in all such cases the same shall, at the option of the person or persons for the time being entitled to the rents and profits of the lands, tenements, or hereditaments so purchased, taken, or used, or of his, her, or their guardian or guardians, committee or committees, in case of infancy or lunacy, to be signified in writing under their respective hands, be paid into the Bank, in the name and with the privity of the said accountant general of the High Court of Chancery, and be placed to his account as aforesaid, in order to be applied as hereinbefore directed, or otherwise the same shall be paid, at the like option, to two trustees, to be nominated by the person or persons making such option, and approved of by the said mayor for the time being, such nomination and approbation to be signified in writing under the hands of the nominating and approving parties, in order that such principal money and dividends arising therefrom may be applied in any manner hereinbefore directed, so far as the case be applicable, without obtaining or being required to obtain the direction and approbation of the Court of Chancery.”

Sect. 12. “That where such money, which shall arise from paying off any such bond which have been given to secure any such purchase money, shall be less than twenty pounds, then and in all such cases the same shall be applied to the use of the person or persons who would, for the time being, have been entitled to the rents and profits of the lands, tenements, and hereditaments so purchased, in such manner as the said mayor, aldermen, and commons shall think fit; or in case of infancy or lunacy, then such money... shall be paid to his, her, or their guardian or guardians, committee or committees, to and for the use and benefit of such person or persons so entitled respectively."

Sect. 13. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for the said Court of Chancery, upon a petition or petitions to be preferred to the said court in a summary way by the person or persons who shall be entitled to the principal money secured by such bonds respectively, his, her, or their guardian or guardians, committee or committees, to direct such bonds respectively to be delivered to such person or persons, guardian or guardians, committee or committees."

Sect. 14. "That in case any person or persons to whom any sum or sums of money shall have been awarded for the purchase of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments by virtue of the said recited act of the forty-third year of the reign of his present Majesty, shall have refused to accept the same, or shall not have been able to make a good title to the premises, to the satisfaction of the said mayor, aldermen, and commons, or in case such person or persons, to whom such sum or sums of money shall have been so awarded as aforesaid, could not be found, or if the person or persons entitled to such lands, tenements, or hereditaments were or was not known or discovered, and in case the said mayor, aldermen, and commons shall, in consequence thereof, and by virtue and in pursuance of such act of the forty-third year of his present Majesty, have ordered the said sum or sums of money so awarded as aforesaid to be paid into the Bank of England in the name and with the privyty of the accountant general of the Court of Chancery, to be placed to his account, to the credit of the parties interested in the said lands, tenements, and hereditaments (describing them), subject to the order, control, and disposition of the said Court of Chancery, then and in every such case the said Court of Chancery, on the application of any person or persons making claim to such sum or sums of money, or any part thereof, by motion or petition, shall be and is hereby empowered, in a summary way of proceeding or otherwise as to the same court shall seem meet, to order the same to be laid out and invested in the public funds, and to order distribution thereof, or payment of the dividends thereof, according to the respective estate or estates, title or interest of the person or persons making claim thereunto, and to make such other order in the premises as to the said court shall seem just and reasonable."

Sect. 15. "That where any question shall arise touching the title of any person to the purchase money secured by any such bond given and deposited in the Bank of England, or to the interest payable upon any such bond, or to any money paid into the said Bank of England in the name and with the privyty of the accountant general of the Court of Chancery, in pursuance of the said recited acts, made in the forty-third and forty-fourth years of the reign of his present Majesty, or either of them, for the purchase of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, or of any estate, right, or interest in any lands, tenements, or hereditaments purchased in pursuance of such acts, or either of them, or to any bank annuities to be purchased with any such money, or the dividends or interest of any such bank annuities, the person or persons who shall have been in possession of such lands, tenements, or hereditaments, at the time of such purchase, and all persons claiming under such person or persons, or under the possession of such person or persons, shall be deemed and taken to have been lawfully entitled to such lands, tenements, or hereditaments according to such possession, until the contrary shall be shown to the satisfaction of the said Court of Chancery; and the interest due upon any such bond, and also any such bond, or the principal sum due thereon, and the dividends or interest of any bank annuities to be purchased with any such money arising from the paying off of any such bond or otherwise, paid into the said bank, and also the capital of such bank annuities, shall be paid, applied, and disposed of accordingly, unless it shall be made to appear to the said court that such possession was a wrongful possession, and that some other person or persons was or were lawfully entitled to such lands, tenements, or hereditaments, or to some estate or interest therein."

Sect. 16. "That where, by reason of any disability or incapacity of the person or persons, or corporation, entitled to any lands, tenements, or hereditaments so purchased, the purchase money for the same, or the bond for such purchase money, shall have been required to be paid into or deposited in the Bank of England, in the name and with the privy of the accountant general of the Court of Chancery, and to be applied to the purchase of other lands, tenements, or hereditaments, to be settled to the like uses in pursuance of this act, it shall and may be lawful to and for the said Court of Chancery to order the expenses of all purchases made in pursuance of the said recited acts, made in the forty-third and forty-fourth years of the reign of his present Majesty respectively, or so much of such expenses as the said court shall deem reasonable, to be paid by the said mayor, aldermen, and commons, out of the monies received by virtue of the said recited acts, made in the forty-third and forty-fourth years of the reign of his present Majesty respectively, or to be received by virtue of this act, who shall from time to time pay such sums of money accordingly for such purposes as the said court shall direct.”

Sect. 17. “That all and every book or books, in which any entry or entries of any proceeding or proceedings shall have been made by any person or persons acting by and under the authority of the said recited acts, made in the forty-third and forty-fourth years of the reign of his present Majesty or either of them (such entry or entries being made in such book or books according to the directions of, and made evidence by, such two last-mentioned acts, or one of them) shall be and be deemed to be good and sufficient evidence of such proceedings in any court whatsoever, any thing herein contained to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding.”

Sect. 18. “That there shall be and continue to be at all times hereafter, at or upon the said Coal Exchange and hereditaments, a free, open and public market, for the sale of coals brought into the port of London.”

Sect. 19. “That such market shall be and continue to be holden on every Monday, Wednesday and Friday in the week, in each and every year, (Good Friday, Christmas Day and Fast Days by proclamation, only excepted) from twelve of the clock at noon until two of the clock in the afternoon in each and every day; and that it shall be lawful to and for the said mayor, aldermen and commons, to continue and retain the present clerk or clerks, and other officer or officers, to such market, with such salary or salaries for his or their trouble and attendance there, as to the said mayor, aldermen and commons, shall seem just and reasonable, and from time to time to remove or displace him or them, and to nominate and appoint other clerk or clerks, officer or officers, in his or their stead.”

Sect. 30. “That for the purpose of defraying the several charges and expenses for establishing and holding such market, and of the purchase of the said lands, buildings and hereditaments, called ‘The Coal Exchange,’ and such other lands, tenements and hereditaments, purchased in pursuance of the said recited acts, made in the forty-third and forty-fourth years of the reign of his present Majesty, and for erecting, maintaining and supporting convenient buildings thereon, and for defraying the salaries and allowances of the several clerks and other persons employed in the execution of this act, and for defraying the other charges and expenses of carrying the same into execution, it shall and may be lawful to and for the said mayor, aldermen and commons, to demand and take, or cause to be demanded and taken, of and from each and every master of a ship or vessel laden with coals, cinders or culm, or other person having the care or command thereof, arriving at her moorings within any part of the port of London at or to the westward of Gravesend, the sum of one penny per chaldron (or ton, in case the same shall be sold by weight) and no more, for every chaldron or ton of coals, cinders or culm, contained in such ship or other vessel; and such sum of one penny per chaldron or ton of all such coals, cinders and culm, shall and may be collected, levied, recovered, and paid in such and the like manner, and by, with and under such powers, authorities and previsions, as any other duty or duties, or imposition or impositions, on coals, now payable to the said mayor, aldermen and commons of the city of London, or to the said mayor and commonalty and citizen of the said city of London, is or are, or may be collected, levied, recovered and paid respectively, and such sum of one penny per chaldron or ton, when so paid for any such coals, shall be chargeable to the purchaser of the coals besides and in addition to the charges and expenses of the metage of such coals."

Sect. 21. "That the costs, charges and expenses incident to and incurred in obtaining and passing this act, shall be paid and discharged by and out of the money to be received by virtue of this act, and when and as soon as such costs, charges and expenses, and the costs, charges and expenses of purchasing the several buildings, lands, tenements and hereditaments for the said market, and of making any buildings, erections and other conveniences thereto, and the money borrowed or raised by virtue of the said recited acts, made in the forty-third and forty-fourth years of the reign of his present Majesty respectively, and the interest thereof, shall have been paid off and discharged, and the said duty of one penny per chaldron or ton of coals, cinders and culm shall be more than sufficient for maintaining, repairing and supporting the said market, and of the several buildings, erections and conveniences thereto, and for paying the said several annuities granted by virtue of such acts respectively, and the salaries and other payments and allowances to the clerk or clerks, and other officers and persons employed in the execution of this act, and for defraying the several other charges and expenses of carrying the same into execution, then and in every such case the said mayor, aldermen and commons shall, and they are hereby required to reduce such duty to such sum of money as shall be sufficient for such several purposes; and it shall and may be lawful to and for the said mayor, aldermen and commons, again to raise such duty to any sum not exceeding the sum granted by this act, when and so often as it shall be necessary for the purposes thereof; and such duty, when so reduced or again raised, shall be collected, levied and recovered in such and the same manner as the duty granted or continued by this act can or may be collected, levied and recovered."

Sect. 22. "That the said duty or duties on coals, cinders and culm, granted or continued and made payable by this act, shall be and the same is hereby charged and made chargeable with the annuities which shall be payable in respect of such sum or sums of money as have been borrowed and raised under or by virtue of the said recited acts, made in the forty-third and forty-fourth years of the reign of his present Majesty respectively, for the purposes of those acts respectively."

Sect. 23. "And whereas certain coals coming from Scotland and other places have been and are usually sold by weight, it is therefore enacted, that for the purpose of ascertaining the weight of such coals usually sold by weight, one hundred and twelve pounds avoirdupois weight shall be deemed and taken to be one hundred weight, and twenty hundred shall be deemed and taken to be one ton."

Sect. 24. "That each and every master of a ship or vessel laden with coals, or other person having the care and command thereof, shall, and he is hereby required, within twenty-four hours after his ship or other vessel shall have arrived at or to the westward of Blackwall, or at her moorings for delivery within any part of the said port of London at or to the westward of Gravesend, and not before, to deliver or cause to be delivered to the clerk of the said market, or other officer appointed to receive the same, at his office in the place appointed for holding such market, a true and perfect copy of the certificate or certificates directed to be given by every fitter or other person vending or delivering coals to each and every master of a ship or vessel on board of which such fitter, or other person vending or delivering coals, shall have loaded any coals, in pursuance of an act made in the ninth year of the reign of Queen Anne, intituled, 'An Act to dissolve the present and prevent the future combinations of coal owners, lightermen, masters of ships, and others, to advance the price of coals in prejudice of the navigation, trade and manufactures of this kingdom, and for the further encouragement of the coal trade;' and if such ship or vessel shall not come from any port or place where, by the said act, such certificate or certificates is or are required.
to be given, then and in such case each and every master of such ship or vessel, having the care or command thereof, shall deliver or cause to be delivered an account of the quantity, and name or names, or description or descriptions of the coals on board of such his ship or vessel, to the clerk or other officer of the said market; and in case it shall happen that such fitter's certificate or certificates shall at any time be accidentally lost, or in case any such ship or vessel shall have been originally loaded or entered outwards for exportation, and shall afterwards change her destination, and arrive or come to her moorings as aforesaid, without any such fitter's certificate or certificates having been obtained or provided, then and in either of such last-mentioned cases, each and every such master of such ship or vessel shall deliver or cause to be delivered a like account of the quantity, and name or names, or description or descriptions of the coals on board of such his ship or vessel, to such clerk or other officer of the said market, together with an affidavit to accompany such account, and to be sworn by such master before any of his Majesty's justices or justices of the peace for the county, city, town, or place, where the same shall be sworn (and which oath any such justice or justices are hereby authorized to administer) in which affidavit such master shall state and verify such circumstances either of the accidental loss of any such certificate, or of any such ship having been originally entered outwards, and having afterwards changed her destination, and arrived as aforesaid, without any such certificate having been obtained or provided (as the case may be); and such clerk or other officer is hereby required to receive and register such certificate or certificates, account or accounts, together with the affidavit or affidavits accompanying any such account or accounts as aforesaid, upon payment or tender of the sum herein directed to be demanded and taken by the said mayor, aldermen and commons, for every chaldron (or ton of coals, in case the same shall be sold by weight) contained in such ship or other vessel, in a proper book or books to be kept for that purpose; and if any such master of any such ship or other vessel, or other person having the care or command thereof as aforesaid, shall refuse or neglect to deliver, or cause to be delivered in manner aforesaid, within twenty-four hours after such ship or other vessel shall have arrived or come to her moorings as aforesaid, a true and perfect copy of such certificate or certificates, or such true account as aforesaid, where any such ship or other vessel shall not come from any port or place where, by the said act, such certificates are required to be given, or a like true account, together with such affidavit accompanying the same as aforesaid, in case either of any such accidental loss of any such certificate as aforesaid, or of any such change in the destination of any such ship or vessel originally loaded or entered for exportation without any such certificate having been obtained or provided as aforesaid; or if any such master of any such ship or vessel, or other person, having the care or command thereof, shall deliver or cause to be delivered any such copy of such certificate or certificates, or any such account or accounts, or any such affidavit or affidavits as aforesaid, before such ship or other vessel shall have arrived or come to her moorings as aforesaid, shall be knownly and wilfully deliver in any false or inaccurate account of the quantity, or name or names, description or descriptions of the coals in such ship or other vessel, every such master or other person, having the care or command of such vessel, so offending, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of fifty pounds; and if any such clerk or other officer shall refuse or neglect to receive and register any such copy or copies of such certificate or certificates, or any such account or accounts, or any such affidavit or affidavits accompanying any such account or accounts as aforesaid, upon payment or tender of such sum as aforesaid, or shall make any such registry, knowing that such ship or other vessel had not arrived or come to her moorings as aforesaid, then, and in every such case, every such clerk so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding twenty pounds."

Sect. 25. "That the clerk of such market shall, and he is hereby required, previous to the opening of the market next after the receipt of the copy of such certificate or certificates, or of any such account or accounts as aforesaid, to register the same."

---

Penalty for false accounts or entries.

Accounts fixed up in market.
said, to fix up in some conspicuous part or parts within the said market a true and perfect copy thereof, in fair and legible characters, and with the words 'For Sale' expressed therein; and in case any copy or copies of such certificates or accounts as aforesaid shall be received by such clerk during the hours of holding such market, and before one hour previous to the close thereof, then in such case such clerk shall, and he is hereby required to fix up in manner aforesaid a true and perfect copy thereof, in fair and legible characters, and with the words 'For Sale' expressed thereon; and if such clerk shall refuse or neglect to fix up such copy or copies in manner aforesaid, or within the time aforesaid, such clerk so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding twenty pounds.'

Sect. 26. "That if any owner or master of any ship, or other vessel, laden with coals to be unloaded in any part of the said port of London, at or to the westward of Gravesend aforesaid, or other person or persons whosoever, shall sell or dispose of any coals contained in any such ship or other vessel, or shall agree or contract for the sale of any such coals contained in any such ship or other vessel, before such copy or copies of such certificate or certificates, or such account or accounts as aforesaid, shall have been fixed up in such market in manner aforesaid, or if the said coals shall be sold in any other place or places than in the said market, or on any other days, or within any other hours than those appointed for holding the same, then and in every such case, every such sale, purchase, contract, or agreement for sale or purchase, shall be, and the same is and are hereby declared to be null and void, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, and the several person or persons so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of one hundred pounds.'

Sect. 27. "That when any ship or vessel, laden with coals, shall have arrived at or to the westward of Blackwall, or at her moorings for delivery, within any part of the said port of London, at or to the westward of Gravesend, which ship or vessel shall have been loaded or freighted for or on the account of government, who shall have purchased the whole of the cargo of coals contained in any such ship or vessel, at the port where such ship or vessel shall have been so loaded or freighted, then and in every such case, if the master or other person having the care or command of such ship or vessel, shall within twenty-four hours after such ship or vessel shall have arrived or come to her moorings as aforesaid, deliver or cause to be delivered to the clerk or other officer of the said market, a true copy of the fitter's certificate of the coals contained in such ship or vessel, or in case it shall happen that such fitter's certificate or certificates shall have been accidentally lost, or in case such ship or vessel shall not come from any port or place where by the said reprinted act, made in the ninth year of the reign of Queen Anne, such certificate or certificates is or are required to be given, the master or other person having the care or command of such ship or vessel shall, within the time aforesaid, deliver or cause to be delivered an account of the quantity and name or names, or description or descriptions of the coals on board of such ship or vessel, to such clerk or other officer of the said market; and to every such certificate and account an affidavit shall be annexed and delivered therewith, which affidavit shall have been sworn by such master, or by such other person having the care or command of such ship or vessel, before any one or more of his Majesty's justices acting for the counties of Middlesex or Surrey, or city of London, (and which oath any such justice is hereby authorised to administer), and in such affidavit such master, or other person having the care or command of such ship or vessel; shall verify such copy of such fitter's certificate or certificates, account or accounts as aforesaid, and shall also set forth and verify such circumstances of such ship or vessel having been so loaded or freighted as aforesaid, and also such circumstances of any accidental loss which may have happened of any such certificate or certificates, it shall and may be lawful to unload and deliver such ship or vessel, for or on account of government, without the copy of the said certificate or certificates, account or accounts, being fixed up in the said market, or the said coals being in any manner exposed, or subject to be exposed, or put up for sale in the said market, and no person or persons whatsoever shall (provided such master or other person having the care or command of any such ship or vessel, shall have delivered such certificate or certificates, account or accounts, and have made such affidavit, and delivered the same in manner aforesaid) be subject or liable to any penalty or penalties whatsoever for or in respect of such copy of such certificate or certificates, account or accounts, not being fixed up in the said market, or for or in respect of the coals contained in any such ship or vessel not being exposed or put up for sale, or sold in such market, or be subject or liable to any other penalty or penalties whatsoever for or in respect of the coals contained in any such ship or vessel being unloaded or delivered in manner aforesaid, any thing herein contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding.

Sect. 29. "And whereas it would tend greatly to the opening of the said market for the sale of coals, and to the preventing of monopolies, if certain parts of two several acts, made in the third and eleventh years of the reign of King George the Second, were repealed; be it therefore enacted, that so much of the act, made in the third year of the reign of King George the Second, intitled 'An Act for the better regulation of the coal trade,' as directs, 'that all bargains or contracts for coals between buyer and seller, at the market of Billingsgate, or other place of sale within the bills of mortality, shall, by the crimp or factor who had the disposal of such coals, be fairly entered, with the conditions thereof, in the pocket or other book of such crimp or factor, subscribed by the seller and the buyer, and witnessed by the said crimp or factor, of which bargain or contract the said crimp or factor shall at the same time deliver, gravis, a copy by him attested to the seller and buyer respectively; and the said entries so made, and subscribed, and the said copies so given and attested, shall be admitted as evidence on trials in any court of law whatsoever; and if any crimp or factor shall neglect or refuse to enter such bargain or contract, and to subscribe and attest the same, or shall refuse to give copies thereof as aforesaid, he shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of 50l.;' and so much thereof as directs, 'that all lightermen, and other buyers of or contractors for coals, on board of any ship or vessel in the port of London, shall, at the time of the delivery of such coals, either pay for the same in ready money, or for such part thereof as shall not be so paid for, shall give their respective promissory note or notes of their hands for payment thereof, expressing therein the words 'value received in coals,' payable at such day or days, time or times, as shall for the purpose be agreed upon between such lighterman, or other buyer of or contractor for coals, and the master or owner of such ship or vessel, or his agent or factor on his behalf; and that all such notes, in case of non-payment at the respective days and times therein mentioned, shall and may be protested or noted in such manner as inland bills of exchange may now be, and in default of such protesting or noting by any indorse, and notice thereof given by such indorree to the respective indorser or indorsors, within twenty days after such failure of payment, such respective indorser or indorsors, to whom such notice shall not be given, shall not be chargeable with or liable to answer or pay such sum of money as shall be mentioned to be payable in or by such note or notes, or any part thereof; and so much thereof as directs, 'that all such lightermen, or other buyers of or contractors for coals, who shall refuse to give their note or notes for coals to them respectively delivered, and shall refuse to insert the said words 'value received in coals,' and every such master who shall take any such note from any dealer in coals, in which note the words 'value received in coals' are not expressly inserted, such lightermen, buyers of or contractors for coals, and masters, shall, for every such refusal, or acceptance, respectively forfeit and pay the sum of 100l.' shall be, and the same is and are hereby repealed and declared to be null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever: and so much of an act made in the eleventh year of the reign of King George the Second, intituled, 'An Act to empower the court of Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the city of London to set the price upon all coals, commonly called sea coals, imported into the port of London from Newcastle, and the ports adjacent thereto, for the space of one year; and to oblige, for the term therein mentioned, fitters and others vending and loading ships with sea coals at Newcastle, and the ports adjacent therunto, to deliver such coals to any masters of ships applying for the same; and for further obliging buyers and sellers of sea coals at Billingsgate, or other place of sale within the bills of mortality, to sign their contracts for coals, and for the admeasurement of all carriages whatsoever used in loading ships with coals in the port of Newcastle, and members therunto belonging, as directs, that if any buyer or seller of coals at Billingsgate, or other places of sale within the bills of mortality, being therunto required, shall refuse or neglect to sign the contracts in such manner as by the said recited act is directed, that then and in such case every such buyer and seller respectively, so refusing or neglecting, shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 50l. one moiety thereof to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, and the other moiety to such person or persons as shall sue for the same in any of his Majesty's courts of record at Westminster, within the space of six months after such offence committed; and so much thereof as directs, that every master of a ship carrying coals as aforesaid, shall, after every respective voyage made by him, produce to his own owner or owners (where required) a copy of such contract, or of all contracts, signed by the crimp or factor in whose book the said contract is or shall be entered as aforesaid, and in case of refusal, such master so refusing shall forfeit and pay the sum of 50l. to be recovered and disposed of as aforesaid, shall be, and the same is and are hereby repealed, and declared to be null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever."

Sect. 29. "That all bargains or contracts for coals between buyer or buyers and seller or sellers shall, by the crimp, factor, or other person having the disposal of such coals (in case any such crimp, factor, or other person, shall be employed for the disposal of such coals) be fairly entered, with the conditions thereof, and price of such coals, in a book to be kept by such crimp, or factor, or other person as aforesaid, subscribed by such buyer or buyers, and by the said crimp or factor, or other person as aforesaid, not merely with the initials of their names, but with their names written at full length, of which bargain or contract such crimp or factor, or other person as aforesaid, shall at the same time deliver gratis a copy by him attested to the seller or sellers and buyer or buyers respectively (in case, but not otherwise, of such buyer or buyers or seller or sellers respectively demanding such copy) and a true and perfect copy of such bargain or contract, and the price of such coals, shall be delivered by such crimp or factor to the clerk of the said market, within one hour after the close of the market on that day; and every such copy shall be by such clerk entered in a book or books to be kept for that purpose; and every such book shall be open for the perusal or inspection of any person or persons whomsoever, on demand, at any time or times during the hours such market shall be open; and if any such buyer or buyers shall subscribe his or their name or names to any such bargain or contract in such factor's book, otherwise than in manner aforesaid, or if any crimp or factor, or other person, having the disposal of such coals as aforesaid, shall neglect or refuse to enter such bargain or contract, or the price of such coals, fairly, accurately, and honestly, without fraud or covin, or to subscribe the same, or shall neglect or refuse to give copies thereof in manner or within the time aforesaid, or if any such clerk shall refuse or neglect to enter such contract or bargain, or the price of such coals as aforesaid, in such book or books in manner aforesaid, or shall not permit the perusal or inspection thereof to any person or persons whomsoever, during such hours as aforesaid, then and in such case, every such person or persons so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of 100l.; and in case any person or persons shall sell his, or her, or their coals, which it shall and may be lawful to and for such person or persons to do, without the intervention of such crimp, factor, or other person as aforesaid, then and in such case every such sale, bargain, or contract for the purchase of coals, with the conditions thereof, and the price of such coals, shall be fairly written on paper, and shall be signed by the seller or sellers, and buyer or buyers, with their respective names written at full length, and such paper, when so
Coals, (London.)
signed, or a true and perfect copy thereof, shall be delivered by such seller or sellers to the clerk of such market within one hour after the close of the market on that day, and such clerk shall, and he is hereby required to enter such paper, or such copy thereof, in a book or books to be kept for such purpose, which book or books shall be open for the inspection and perusal of any person or persons whomsoever, on demand, at any time or times during such hours as such market shall be open; and if any such buyer or seller shall sign or subscribe his or their name or names to any such bargain or contract otherwise than in manner aforesaid, or if any such seller or sellers shall refuse or neglect to enter such bargain or contract with such clerk, in manner or within the time aforesaid, or if any such clerk shall refuse or neglect to enter any such bargain or contract in such book or books in manner aforesaid, or shall not permit the inspection and perusal thereof to any person or persons whomsoever on demand, during such hours as aforesaid, every such person so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 100l. nor less than 20l. and if any buyer or buyers, or other person on his, her, or their behalf, shall demand, take, or receive any abatement, deduction, or allowance (by whatever name or by whatever means such abatement, deduction, or allowance shall be called or made) from the price so delivered to or entered with the clerk of such market, or shall practise or make use of any art, covin, or device, so as to obtain any such abatement, deduction, or allowance from the price so delivered to and entered with the clerk of such market, or if any ship owner, crimp, factor, vender or seller of coals, or any person on his, her, or their behalf, shall give, grant, or allow any abatement, deduction, or allowance from the price so delivered to and entered with the clerk of such market by whatever name or by whatever means such abatement, deduction, or allowance shall be called or made, so that the full price so delivered to and entered with the clerk of such market shall not be received for such coals by such vender or seller, then and in every such case, every such buyer, ship owner, crimp, factor, vender, seller, and other persons so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 100l. nor less than 20l. provided always, that the commission to any crimp, or factor, or other person having the disposal of coals, and the usual discount and scorage allowed to buyers, shall not be or be deemed to be any such abatement, deduction, or allowance from such price as aforesaid.

Sect. 30. "That when any person shall on his own account, or on the account of himself and any copartner or copartners, buy, or enter into any bargain or contract for the purchase of coals in the said market, or shall enter into any agreement respecting the terms in which any cargo of coals sold in shares in the said market is to be delivered, then if such person so buying, contracting, or agreeing, shall, at some time previous to such buying, contracting, or agreeing, have delivered to the clerk of the said market a paper, containing (in case of such buyer being a copartner with any other person or persons) as well the usual firm or signature of such buyer and his copartner or copartners, as also the true Christian and surnames, and places of abode, at full length, of himself and of such his copartner or copartners, or containing (in case of such buyer not being a copartner with any other person or persons) the usual signature of such buyer, and also his true Christian name or names, and surname, and place of abode, at full length, then and in any such case, any such person so buying, contracting, or agreeing, and having previously delivered such paper, shall be at liberty, if he thinks fit, to sign and subscribe, with such his own usual signature, or in such usual firm, or or with such usual signature of himself and his said copartner or copartners, (as the case may be), any bargain or contract made in the said market for the purchase of any coals, or any such agreement as is hereinafter required respecting the terms in which any cargo sold in shares in the said market is to be delivered; (instead of being in such case obliged to subscribe such bargain, contract, or agreement with his own name, or with the name of himself and his copartner or copartners at full length); and in like manner, if any factor, who shall sell or enter into any bargain or contract for the sale of coals in the said market, or shall sign his name as witness to any such agreement respecting the terms of delivery of any cargo sold in shares, shall previously to such selling, or contracting, or signing, or attesting such agreement, have delivered to the clerk of the said market a paper, containing (in case of such factor being a copartner with any other person or persons) as well the usual firm or signature of such factor and his copartner or copartners, as also the true Christian and surnames or places of abode in full length of himself and of such his copartner or copartners, or containing (in case of such factor not being a copartner with any other person or persons) the usual signature of such factor, and also his true Christian name or names, and surnames, and place of abode, at full length; then and in any such case, any such factor so selling, or contracting, or signing, or attesting any such agreement, and having previously delivered such paper, shall be at liberty, if he thinks fit, to sign or subscribe with such his own usual signature, or in such usual firm, or with such usual signature of himself and his said copartner or copartners, (as the case may be,) any bargain or contract made in the said market for the sale of any coal, or any such agreement as is hereinafter required respecting the terms in which any cargo sold in shares in the said market is to be delivered instead of being in such case obliged to sign or subscribe such bargain, or contract, or agreement with his own name, or with the names of himself and his copartner or copartners at full length; and if any person shall receive a paper or authority, in writing, from and as the clerk or agent of any other person or persons, to buy or enter into bargains or contracts on the behalf of such other person or persons for the purchase of coals in the said market, and to enter into agreements on the behalf of such other person or persons respecting the terms of delivery of any cargo which shall be sold in shares in the said market, and if such clerk, agent, or person, shall, previously to his buying on the behalf of such other person or persons, deliver in to the clerk of the said market such paper or authority, in writing, and which paper or authority, in writing, shall be signed and subscribed with the Christian and surnames, and places of abode, at full length, of each and every person or persons whom such authority shall be given, and also with the usual firm or signature of any copartner on whose behalf any such authority shall be given, or with the usual signature of any person, not being a copartner, on whose behalf any such authority may be given, (as the case may be,) and shall also contain the name and place of abode, at full length, of the person who shall be so authorised thereby; then and in every such case it shall and may be lawful to and for any such clerk, agent, or person who shall have been so authorised, and who shall have previously delivered in to the clerk of the said market such paper or authority, in writing, to such effect, and so signed and subscribed as aforesaid, to enter into and sign or subscribe on the behalf and in the name or names of such other person or persons who shall have given such authority as aforesaid, any bargain or contract for the purchase of any coals in the said market, or any such agreement as is hereinafter required, in case of any cargo being sold in shares in the said market; and such clerk, agent, or person so authorised, and who shall have previously delivered such paper as aforesaid, shall be at liberty, if he thinks fit, to sign or subscribe any such bargain, contract, or agreement as aforesaid with the usual signature or firm of the person or persons on whose behalf he shall so buy or enter into such bargain, contract, or agreement, without being obliged to sign the name or names of such person or persons at full length, any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding; and the clerk of the said market shall, and he is hereby required to enter every such paper in a book or books to be kept for such purpose, which book or books shall be open for the inspection or perusal of any person or persons whomsoever, on demand, during such hours as the said market shall be open; and if any such buyer or factor shall deliver to the said clerk of such market any false or imperfect paper or account of the firm or signature, or of the Christian and surname or names, or place or places of abode, of himself, or of himself and his copartner or copartners, (as the case may be,) or if any such clerk, agent, or other person as aforesaid, shall deliver to the said clerk of the said market any false or imperfect paper, or any other than such paper or authority in writing, to such effect, and so signed and subscribed as aforesaid, every such person so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 20l.; and if any such clerk of the said market shall refuse or neglect to enter, or copy, or cause to be entered or copied any such paper in such book or books in manner aforesaid, or shall not permit the inspection or perusal thereof to any person or persons whomsoever, on demand, during such hours as aforesaid, such clerk so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 20l.’’

Sect. 31. ‘‘That after the cargo of any ship or other vessel shall have been entered with the clerk of the said market in manner aforesaid, the coals contained in such cargo shall be and be deemed to be upon sale during the times for holding the said market as hereinbefore mentioned; and if the factor, agent, or other person having power or authority of selling the said cargo of coals, or of any part or parts thereof, shall give any undue preference in the sale thereof, or refuse or decline to sell the same, or any part or parts thereof, to any person or persons whomsoever, who shall be desirous of purchasing not less than twenty-one chaldrons thereof, (payment for such coals being then and there tendered with sufficient security for the payment of demurrage, in case of detention in the delivery,) such factor or agent, or other person so offending, shall forfeit and pay, for every such offence, the sum of 100l.’’

Sect. 32. ‘‘That all entries made by the clerk of such market in such book or books, in pursuance of the directions of this act, shall be evidence in all cases, suits, and actions, touching or concerning any thing done in pursuance of this act.’’

Sect. 33. ‘‘That if any vender or venders of or dealer or dealers in coals, shall knowingly sell one sort of coals for and as a sort which they really are not, within the said port of London, or within the respective cities of London or Westminster, or the respective liberties thereof, or within such part or parts of the respective counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Kent, and Essex, as is or are situate within the distance of twenty-five miles from the Royal Exchange aforesaid, every such vender or venders of, or dealer or dealers in coals, shall forfeit and pay, for every such offence, the sum of 20l. per chaldron so sold; and such vender or venders of, or dealer or dealers in coals, shall not be subject or liable to any penalty imposed by the said recited act, made in the ninth year of the reign of her Majesty Queen Anne, intituled, ‘‘An Act to dissolve the present, and prevent the future combination of coal owners, lightermen, masters of ships, and others, to advance the price of coals, in prejudice of the navigation, trade, and manufactures of this kingdom, and for the further encouragement of the coal trade,’’ or by the said recited act, made in the third year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Second, intituled, ‘‘An Act for the better regulation of the coal trade,’’ on every person who shall knowingly sell one sort of coals for and as a sort which they really are not: provided always, that no vender or venders of, or dealer or dealers in coals, shall be subject to such penalty for or in respect of any number of chaldrons exceeding twenty-five chaldrons, for the same offence.’’

Sect. 34. ‘‘And whereas great inconvenience has arisen from the appointment of a meter to a ship or other vessel for the delivery of her cargo of coals before the same was ready for delivery, be it therefore further enacted, that no meter shall be appointed to any ship or other vessel, for the delivery of her cargo of coals, until after the account of the sale of such cargo of coals shall have been entered with the clerk of the market, or until the conclusion of the market, in which the account of the sale of these score chaldrons at the

(a) As to whether to sue in the superior courts or to proceed before a justice for the penalty, see post, 717, n.

The offence of selling coals of a different description than those contracted for, on the 3 Geo. II. c. 26, s. 4, is complete where the coals are delivered and not where they are contracted for. Butterfield v. Windle, 4 East, 393.
Coals and Coal Mines.

least of the coals contained in such ship or other vessel shall have been so entered with the clerk of the said market, in manner herein directed."

Sect. 35. "That when any ship or vessel laden with coals shall have arrived within any part of the said port of London, at or to the westward of Gravesend, and such ship or vessel shall, after she shall have arrived as aforesaid, happen to be or become so damaged or injured as to render it prudent or necessary to remove without delay the coals contained in such ship or vessel out of such ship or vessel, then and in such case nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend so as to hinder or prevent the immediate unloading and removing the coals with which any such ship or vessel shall be laden, from out of such ship or vessel into any lighters or barges, or other craft, without waiting for the appointment or arrival of any ship meter, and without any person or persons being subject or liable to any penalty or penalties whatsoever for or in respect of such removal of any such coals."

Sect. 36. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for any meter employed to admeasure or deliver, or to superintend the admeasurement or delivery of any coals from any such ship or vessel as aforesaid, to appoint, from time to time, one of the fellowship porters to be such meter's man, or to assist such meter in the admeasurement or delivery of such coals, and from time to time to dismiss such person so appointed at his pleasure, and to appoint any other fellowship porter to be such meter's man in the room of the person so dismissed; and no person so appointed by any meter to be such meter's man, or to assist such meter in the delivery of the coals from any such ship or vessel, shall be entitled to any pay or wages or allowance for any detention, or to any other benefit under this act, except such person shall be one of the persons called fellowship porters; and that every such person so to be appointed meter's man, or assistant to any such meter, shall (provided he be a fellowship porter, but not otherwise) have and be entitled to receive and be paid by the undertaker of any such ship or vessel, or by the master or owner (where no undertaker shall be employed) the same wages or sum of 3s. for every twenty chaldrons of coals admeasured and delivered, and shall have and be entitled to receive and be paid by the master or owner of any such ship or vessel, the same sum or allowance per day for detention money, and shall also have and be entitled to receive and be paid all such other emoluments as shall or ought to be paid, awarded, or allowed to any coalheaver or whiffer employed together with such meter's man in the delivery of any such ship or vessel; and that such undertaker shall have and be entitled to charge and receive, and be paid and allowed the same profit or allowance and emolument upon and in respect of such meter's man, as shall or ought to be paid or allowed to such undertaker upon or for any coalheaver or whiffer paid and employed by such undertaker together with such meter's man."

Sect. 37. "That if any meter, meter's man, coalheaver, or whiffer, shall, by reason of the delivery of a less quantity of coals than at the rate of forty-two chaldrons a day, from the appointment of such meter to deliver such ship or vessel, be detained on board any ship or vessel by reason of the whole of the coals not being delivered thereout, over or beyond such number of days as the whole of the cargo thereof would have been delivered in, supposing such coals had been delivered at the rate of forty-two chaldrons a day, then and in such case the master or owner of every such ship or other vessel, shall pay to every such meter, meter's man, coal whiffer, or whiffer, such sum or sums of money, not exceeding 7s. per day, as or by way of detention money for every day that such ship or vessel shall have been detained beyond such number of days as aforesaid, as any one or more of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the city of London, or counties of Middlesex, Essex, Kent, or Surrey, according to the jurisdiction, shall award, on the application of such meter, meter's man, coalheaver, or whiffer, over and above all costs and expenses of such application, provided that it shall appear to such justice or justices, that such detention did not arise from the default of the meter, or meter's man, coal whiffer, or coalheaver respectively; and every such application to any such justice or justices shall be made by such meter, meter's man, coal heaver, or whizzer, within three days next after the day on which the delivery of the whole of the cargo of such ship or vessel shall have been completed; and if the sum or sums of money which shall, upon any such application, be awarded by such justice or justices to be paid as detention money, for or on account of any such detention and costs by any such shipmaster or owner, to any such meter, meter's man, coalheaver, or whizzer, shall not be immediately paid accordingly, such sum or sums shall be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such shipmaster or owner, by warrant under the hand and seal of such justice or justices, and the overplus of the money, if any, raised by such distress and sale, (deducting the money so awarded and ordered to be paid, and the costs and charges of making such distress and sale,) shall be rendered to the owner of the goods and chattels so distressed; and for want of distress, and in case the money so awarded and ordered to be paid shall not be immediately paid, it shall and may be lawful to and for such justice or justices to commit such master or owner to the common gaol or house of correction for the city or place for which such justice shall sit, there to remain without bail or mainprize for any term not exceeding six calendar months, unless such sum or sums, and all reasonable costs attending the recovery thereof, shall be sooner paid; and every such award, order, and proceeding of any such justice or justices shall be final, binding, and conclusive; and that no such proceedings shall be quashed or vacated for want of form only, or be removed by certiorari, or any other writ or process whatsoever, into any of his Majesty's courts of record at Westminster or elsewhere."

Sect. 38. "That when any sum or sums of money shall be directed by any such justice or justices of the peace to be paid by any shipmaster or owner to any such meter, meter's man, coalheaver, or whizzer, as and by way of detention money for any detention which shall have been occasioned by, or have arisen from the conduct of any coal buyer or buyers, or his, her, or their agent or agents, or for any costs attending the application for any such detention money, and such sum or sums of money shall have been paid accordingly, then and in every such case, such coal buyer or buyers shall repay, or cause to be repaid to such shipmaster or owner, such sum or sums as such shipmaster or owner shall, in consequence of any such direction, have paid unto any such meter, meter's man, coalheaver, or whizzer, for any detention so occasioned by such coal buyer or buyers, or his, her, or their agent or agents, and for any such costs; and in case of any neglect or refusal in such coal buyer or buyers, his, her, or their agent or agents, to make such repayment, it shall and may be lawful to and for any one or more of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the city of London, or counties of Middlesex, Essex, Kent, or Surrey, according to the jurisdiction, on the application of such shipmaster or owner, to order such coal buyer to repay to such shipmaster or owner any such sum or sums, or any part or parts thereof, which shall have been paid by such shipmaster or owner to such meter, meter's man, coalheavers, or whizzers, in pursuance of the direction of such justice or justices, for any such detention and costs, provided such detention shall appear to such justice or justices to have been occasioned by, or to have arisen from the default of such coal buyer or buyers, or his, her, or their agent or agents; and every such application to any such justice or justices shall be made by such shipmaster or owner within ten days next after any such detention money and costs shall have been awarded and paid by such shipmaster or owner; and if the sum or sums of money which shall, upon any such application, be ordered by such justice or justices to be repaid to such shipmaster or owner by such coal buyer or coal buyers, shall not be immediately repaid accordingly, such sum or sums shall be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such coal buyer or buyers, by warrant under the hand and seal of such justice or justices, and the overplus of the money (if any) raised by such distress and sale, (deducting the money so ordered to be repaid, and the costs and charges of making such distress and sale,) shall be rendered to the owner of the goods and chattels so distressed; and for want of distress, and in case the money so ordered to be repaid shall not be accordingly immediately repaid, it shall and
Coals and Coal Mines.

Coal buyer not liable to detention money unless meter attended at his request.

Sect. 39. "That no coal buyer or buyers shall be subject or liable to the payment of any sum or sums of money whatsoever as detention money, for or in respect of the detention of any such meter, meter's man, coalheaver or coalheavers, on the day on which a meter shall be appointed to any such ship or vessel, unless such meter, meter's man, coalheaver or coalheavers respectively, shall be requested by such coal buyer or buyers, or his or their agents, to attend, and shall actually attend in consequence of such request on board such ship or vessel during that day; any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 40. "That if any such coal buyer or buyers, who shall be dissatisfied with or feel himself or themselves aggrieved by any such last mentioned order of any such justice or justices for the repayment of any such sum or sums to such ship owner or master, or if any such ship owner or master shall be dissatisfied with or feel himself aggrieved by the determination of any such justice or justices, who shall on any such last mentioned application think proper to decline making any order for any such repayment, it shall and may be lawful to and for any such coal buyer or buyers, or master or owner respectively, to appeal to the justices of the peace assembled at the next general quarter sessions or general sessions to be holden for the county, city, or place, where such order for repayment shall be made, or refused to be made, on giving immediate notice of such appeal, and finding sufficient security to the satisfaction of such justice or justices (making or declining to make such order) for prosecuting the said appeal with effect, and for abiding the determination of the court therein; and such justices in such general quarter sessions or general sessions shall hear and determine the matter of such appeal, and may either confirm or annul the said order or determination, or may make such other order or determination in the matter of such appeal, and award such costs to either party as to them the said justices shall seem just and reasonable; and the decision of the said justices therein shall be final, binding, and conclusive; and no such proceedings shall be quashed or vacated for want of form only, or be removed by certiorari, or any other writ or process whatsoever, into any of his Majesty's courts of record at Westminster or elsewhere, any law or statute to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 41. "That no action, suit, or other proceeding whatsoever, shall be commenced or prosecuted by any such ship owner or master against any such coal buyer or buyers, in any of his Majesty's courts of record at Westminster, or in any other court or courts of law or equity, for the recovery of, or otherwise respecting any sum or sums of money which shall have been paid by any such ship owner or master respectively, for any such detention or costs as aforesaid."

Sect. 42. "That no person whatsoever shall carry on, or exercise or follow the trade, business, or employ of a coal undertaker, or of providing coalheavers or whippers for unloading coals from any ship or vessel within the said port of London, unless he or she shall have previously obtained a license to carry on such business from the court of lord mayor and aldermen of the city of London, which court is hereby authorised to grant such license to such person or persons as shall, at the time of soliciting the same, produce before such court a recommendation, signed by two of his majesty's justices of the peace, acting as such, for the city, county, town, or place in which such person or persons reside; and every person so licensed shall pay for his or her license the sum of 20s. and no more; and every such license shall be granted for, and remain in force for the term of one year, to be computed from the day of the date thereof, and no longer; and the Christian and surnames, and the place of abode of every person so licensed, shall, within twenty-four hours after the granting such respective licenses, be correctly entered in a book to be kept for that purpose at the mansion house of the city of London; and such book shall at all suitable times be open for inspection, gratis, of any person or persons whatsoever applying to inspect the same; and all and every person or persons who shall carry on, exercise, or follow the said trade of a coal undertaker, without having obtained such license, and procured the same to be entered as aforesaid, or who shall carry on, exercise, or follow such trade for any longer or other term than shall be expressed in any such license so obtained, and procured to be entered as aforesaid, shall, for every coalheaver or whippers so provided by him or her, forfeit and pay the sum of 10l., and the whole of such penalty shall go to the informer."

43. "That if complaint shall be made to the said lord mayor, or to the sitting alderman or aldermen for the time being of the said city of London, of or relating to the conduct of any such licensed coal undertaker in his or her said trade or business, the said mayor or sitting alderman or aldermen, shall and may cause him or her to be brought before him or them, and if upon hearing the said complaint, it shall appear to the said mayor or sitting alderman or aldermen, that the said coal undertaker shall have acted corruptly or improperly, or have offended in any manner against the provisions or true intent and meaning of this act, then and in such case it shall and may be lawful to and for the said mayor, or sitting alderman or aldermen, to suspend such coal undertaker from carrying on his or her trade or business of undertaker, until the holding or sitting of the then next court of the said lord mayor and aldermen; and if upon such complaint being brought and heard before the said court of lord mayor and aldermen, at such their then next sitting, it shall appear to the said court that such coal undertaker shall have acted corruptly or improperly, or have offended in manner aforesaid, then and in such case it shall and may be lawful to and for the said court of lord mayor and aldermen to cause the name of such coal undertaker to be erased from the said book of licensed coal undertakers; and if any such undertaker shall, either during such time for which he or she shall be so suspended, or after the time of such erasure of his or her name being so made from such book, carry on, exercise, or follow the said trade of a coal undertaker, every such person so offending shall, for every coalheaver provided by him or her either during the interval of such suspension, or subsequently to such erasure, forfeit and pay the sum of 100l., and the whole of such penalty shall go to the informer."

Sect. 44. "That if any coal undertaker, or other person providing any coalheaver or coaleavers for the purpose of unloading coals from any ship or other vessel within the said port of London, shall provide any such coalheaver or coaleavers, without having first taken before the lord mayor, or one of the aldermen of the city of London, the oath following (which they are hereby empowered to administer); that is to say:

I, A. B. do swear, that I will well and truly exercise the business or employ of a coal undertaker or provider of coaleavers, and so long as I shall continue to exercise that business, I will in all things conform myself to the directions of an act of parliament, made in the forty-seventh year of the reign of King George the Third, intituled, "An Act for repealing the several acts for regulating the send and delivery of coals within the cities of London and Westminster, and liberties thereof, and in certain parts of the counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Kent, and Essex, and for making better provision for the same."

every such coal undertaker, or other person as aforesaid, shall, for every such coaleaver so provided by him, her, or them, forfeit and pay the sum of 10l., and the whole of such penalty shall go to the informer."

Sect. 45. "That if any licensed victualler, alehousekeeper, or innkeeper, concerned or interested, directly or indirectly, either in his or her own name, or in the name or names of any other person or persons whatsoever, or by way of partnership or agreement, to receive any part of the profits of such trade or trades, shall, directly or indirectly, exercise the business or employ of a coal undertaker, or of providing any coalheaver or coaleavers, or any shovels, baskets, or other implements for unloading any coals from any ship or other vessel within the said port of London, every such victualler, alehousekeeper, or innkeeper shall, for every such coalheaver, shovel, basket, or other implement provided by him or her, forfeit and pay the sum of 10L, and the whole of such penalty shall go to the informer."

Sect. 46. "That the master, or owner or owners of every ship or vessel from which any coals shall be unloaded or delivered within the said port of London shall, and he and they is and are hereby required to provide and find, at his and their own expense, all such shovels, baskets, and other implements, as shall be requisite and proper for the unloading or delivery of the coals from any such ship or vessel; and no such shovel, basket, or other implement, shall be let out for hire by or to any person or persons whomsoever, save and except by a licensed coal undertaker or undertakers, to any such shipmaster or owner, masters or owners, his or their agent or agents, who shall employ such coal undertaker or undertakers; and if any person or persons whomsoever, not being a coal undertaker or undertakers duly licensed as aforesaid, shall let out to hire any shovel or shovels, basket or baskets, or other implement or implements, for the unloading of any such ship or vessel, to any person or persons whomsoever, or if any licensed coal undertaker shall let out to hire any shovel or shovels, basket or baskets, or other implement or implements, for the unloading or delivery of any such ship or vessel to any person or persons whomsoever, save and except to the master or owner of any such ship, or to his agent or agents, every such person so offending shall, for every such shovel, basket, or other implement so let out, forfeit and pay the sum of 10L."

Sect. 47. "That every coal undertaker shall receive and have from the master, or owner or owners of any ship or vessel in the port of London, for every chaldron of coals delivered by the coalheavers by him or her provided for that purpose, the sum of 1d., in full compensation for his or her trouble; and that the several coalheavers and meter's men shall be entitled to and receive from the undertaker, or from the master when no undertaker is employed, for every twenty chaldrons of coals by them delivered, the sum of 3s. each, in full for their respective wages or pay."

Sect. 48. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for the said court of lord mayor and aldermen of the city of London from time to time to increase the several sums payable to the coal undertakers, and also the wages or hire payable for labour to the ship coal meters, meter's men, and coalheavers respectively, and from time to time to reduce the same, when it shall appear reasonable and equitable to them so to do; and if any such shipmaster or owner, or his agent or agents, or any other person or persons whomsoever, shall pay or cause to be paid to any such coal undertaker, or if any such master, owner, undertaker, or any other person or persons whomsoever, shall pay or cause to be paid to any such coalheaver, ship coal meter, or meter's man, any greater or less sum, or at or after any greater or less rate than is hereby or may be hereafter so settled or appointed by the said court of lord mayor and aldermen, to be paid or payable to such undertakers, meters, meter's men, or coalheavers respectively, every such master, undertaker, or other person so offending, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of 104."

Sect. 49. "That the hire and wages of coalheavers or whippers, and meter's men, shall be really and bond fide paid by the masters or owners of ships, or their agents, to the undertaker, when any undertaker shall be employed; and such undertaker shall pay and divide, or cause to be paid and divided, such hire and wages so received by him for that purpose, among the said meter's men and coalheavers or whippers; and when no undertaker shall be employed, then such masters or owners respectively shall pay or cause to be paid all such hire or wages, really and bond fide, unto or amongst such meter's men and coalheavers respectively; and if any such master or owner shall pay, or if any such undertaker shall pay or cause to be paid to any such coalheaver or meter's man, such wages or pay, or any part thereof, by way of barter or exchange, in any coals, goods, wares, merchandise, meat, drink, lodging, or
II.]

Coals, (London.)

679

LONDON.

\[27 Geo. 3. c. lxxviii.\]

Coalheavers not to be paid at alehouse, &c.

Undertakers may advance to coalheavers one half of wages earned.

Undertakers to pay coalheavers within a limited time after ship's delivery.

materials for wearing apparel, or with any other matter or thing whatsoever, other than current money, or shall make any deduction or abatement from or out of such wages or pay, under pretence of furnishing baskets, shovels, or other implements used in the unloading of coals, or for or under any other pretence whatsoever, every such person so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of 10s., and the whole of such penalty shall go to the informer.”

Sect. 50. “That the undertaker shall pay or cause to be paid the hire and wages of the coalheaver or coalheavers employed by him, unto and amongst all such coalheavers, at his accounting-house, or other convenient place for that purpose; and where no undertaker is employed, the shipmaster or owner shall himself pay and divide the same equally amongst the coalheavers on board the ship or vessel in which they shall have been employed; and if any such master or owner where no undertaker is employed shall pay, or if any such undertaker shall pay or cause to be paid to any such coalheaver any such hire or wages, or any part thereof, at any alehouse, victualling house, or inn, or in any other description of place than as aforesaid, every such person so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of 20l.”

Sect. 51. “That the person or persons who shall be employed as the undertaker or undertakers for the delivery or unloading of coals from any ship or vessel within the said port of London, shall, and such coal undertaker or undertakers is and are hereby directed and required from time to time, during the time of the delivery of such ship or vessel, to advance to all or any of the respective coalheavers or whippers employed by such undertaker or undertakers in the delivery of such ship or vessel, who shall request the same, one half of the wages already earned by and then due to any of such respective coalheavers or whippers for work done in or towards the delivery of such ship or vessel previous to the making of any such request: provided such coalheavers or whippers respectively shall attend to receive the same between the hours of five and seven of the clock in the evening.”

Sect. 52. “That all and every such coal undertaker and undertakers shall, and be or they is and are hereby directed and required, after the delivery of the cargo of coals out of any such ship or vessel shall be completed, and at or before seven of the clock in the evening of the day on which such delivery shall be finished, in case such delivery shall be completed before five of the clock in the evening, or at or before seven of the clock of the evening of the next day after the completion of such delivery, to pay or cause to be paid to all and every of the respective coalheavers or whippers employed in the delivery of such ship or vessel, who shall apply in reasonable time, and attend to receive the same, the whole of the money or wages due or remaining due to each of such coalheavers and whippers respectively so applying and attending to receive the same, for working in the delivery of such ship or vessel; but whenever the day next after the day on which the delivery of any such ship or vessel shall be finished, shall happen to be a Sunday, Good Friday, Christmas Day, or a fast day by proclamation, then and in such case the whole of such respective wages so due or remaining due shall be paid by such coal undertaker or coal undertakers to all and every such respective coalheavers or whippers who shall apply in reasonable time and attend to receive the same, at or before nine of the clock of the day on which such delivery shall be completed, whether such delivery shall be finished at or before five of the clock in the evening on such day or not; and if any such coal undertaker or undertakers shall not, at or before such time or respective times as hereinbefore specified, pay or cause to be paid to any such coalheaver or whpper, who shall apply in a reasonable time and attend to receive the same, the whole of such money or wages due or remaining due to such coalheaver or whpper as aforesaid, every such coal undertaker so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 20l.”

Sect. 53. “That nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend so as to hinder or prevent any such coal undertaker or undertakers from deducting any money which shall be so advanced by him, her, or them, during the time of the delivery of any ship or vessel, to any such coalseaver or whipper, or respective coalseavers or whippers, in part of his or their respective wages, when such undertaker or undertakers shall finally settle with and pay off any such coalseaver or whipper, or coalseavers or whippers respectively, after the delivery of such ship or vessel shall have been completed.

54. "That if any undertaker or basket-man, or any publican to whose house coalseavers may resort, or any person or persons on his, her, or their behalf, shall give or grant, or promise to give or grant, any money, or other gift or reward, to any master or masters, owner or owners, of any ship or vessel laden with coals in the port of London, for any permission or privilege to procure coalseavers, or for the said master or masters, owner or owners, to employ any particular coal undertaker, or gang or gangs of coalseavers, for the unloading any such ship or vessel, or if any such master or masters, owner or owners, shall take or receive any such money, or other gift or reward, for any such purpose, from such undertaker, basket-man, publican, or other person or persons, on his, her, or their behalf, every such master, owner, undertaker, basket-man, publican, or other person, so offending, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of £100."

The master and every meter superintending the admeasurement or delivery of any coals from any ship or other vessel into any lighter, barge, or other craft, shall, and be and they are hereby required to give and deliver to the lighterman or other person having the care or management of the lighter, barge, or other craft into which the coals from such ship or other vessel shall be admeasured or delivered, before such lighter, barge, or other craft shall quit such ship or other vessel, a certificate or certificates of the quantity of coals admeasured or delivered, into such lighter, barge, or other craft; and each and every certificate shall be numbered, beginning with number one for the first certificate delivered, and so on in an arithmetical progression ascending, whereof the common excess or difference shall be always one, until the whole cargo of coals contained in such ship or other vessel shall be delivered; and every such certificate shall be witnessed by the master or mate of such ship or other vessel, and shall be made in the following form:

(a)

Number [here insert the number of the certificate.]

I, A. B. do hereby certify, that I have delivered from on board the [here insert the name of the ship or other vessel, and also the master's christian and surname] master, from [here insert the name of the port where the coals were put on board] of [here insert the name by which the coals are known] coals [here insert the number of chaldrons] chaldrons, in the room, [or. rooms if more than one.] number [here specify the number of the room, reckoning from the head to the stern] of the lighter [or. barge, or other craft] called the [here insert the name of the lighter, barge, or other craft] number [here insert the number of the lighter, barge, or other craft, and the name of the lighterman] lighterman, on account of [here insert the name of the buyer of the coals, or the person for whose use such coals are delivered, as shall be required.]

A. B. meter

Witness, C. D. master [or. mate.]

Port of London [here insert the day of the month, and the month and year in which such coals were delivered.]

And in case such coals shall be sold by weight, the word tons shall be inserted in such certificate or certificates, in lieu of the word chaldrons; and in the making out such certificate or certificates, no figure shall be made use of, but each and every word shall be legibly written at length (save and except the date of the year, which may be written in figures); and every such lighterman, or other person having the care or management of such lighter, barge, c. lxxviii. to produce the ship meter's certificate as required by this 65th section.

Reeve v. Starrey, 4 Car. & P. 17.
or other craft, shall, upon the delivery of such certificate, pay to the meter or other person superintending the delivery of such coals, the sum of 3d. for each and every such certificate; and if any meter or other person superintending the admeasurement or delivery of such coals, shall refuse or neglect to give or deliver such certificate, signed with his own name, and in his own handwriting, and drawn in manner aforesaid, to the person or persons having the care or management of such lighter, barge, or other craft, or shall wilfully give or deliver the same with a wrong or false number of the certificate inserted therein, or with a wrong or false name of the ship or other vessel, or of the master, or of the port where the coals were put on board such ship or other vessel, or of the name or names, sort or sorts of the coals, or with a wrong or false account of the quantity of coals admeasured or delivered into any room of such lighter, barge, or other craft, inserted therein, or with a wrong or false name or names of the lighterman, or of the buyer or other person for whose use such coals are delivered, or with a wrong or false month or date thereof, or of the year, or without the signature of such master or mate thereto, or make use of any fraud, covin, or device, by which the same shall be wrong or false; or if any such master or mate shall refuse or neglect to sign any such certificate when true and accurate, or shall sign any such certificate, knowing the whole or any part or parts thereof to be wrong or false, or if any such lighterman or other person having the care or management of such lighter, barge, or other craft, shall not wait a reasonable time after the coals shall have been so admeasured or delivered for the purpose of receiving such certificate or certificates, or shall refuse or neglect to receive the same, or shall, on the delivery of every such certificate, refuse or neglect to pay the meter or other person superintending the admeasurement or delivery of such coals the aforesaid sum of 3d. for each and every such certificate, then and in every such case every meter or other person superintending the admeasurement or delivery of such coals so offending, and every such master or mate so offending, and each and every such lighterman or other person having the care or management of such lighter, barge, or other craft, so offending, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 10l."

Sect. 56. "That each and every lighterman, or other person having the care or management of any lighter, barge, or other craft laden with coals, in the said port of London, shall, and he is hereby required to deliver gratis, before any part of the said coals shall be taken out of any such lighter, barge, or other craft, to the holder or holders of the wharf or other landing place where such coals are intended to be delivered, or to his, her, or their servant, the certificate of the quantity of coals measured or weighed into such lighter, barge, or other craft, and herein directed to be given to such lighterman or other person by the meter admeasuring or weighing the coals from any ship or other vessel in the said port of London, into such lighter, barge, or other craft, for the inspection of all those persons who may be interested in the purchase or delivery of such coals; and if any such lighterman or other person having the care or management of any such lighter, barge, or other craft, to whom any such certificate shall have been delivered by such ship meter, shall refuse or neglect to deliver the same in manner aforesaid to such wharfinger or holder of such wharf, or other landing place, such lighterman or other person so offending shall, for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 20l.; or if any holder or holders of a wharf or other landing place, wharfinger or wharfingers, to whom such certificate shall have been delivered, shall refuse or neglect to permit any person concerned in the purchase or delivery of such coals at all reasonable times to inspect such certificate, every such holder or holders of a wharf or other landing place, wharfinger or wharfingers, so offending, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 20l.; or if any such lighterman, holder of the wharf, or other person, shall wilfully erase, deface, alter, or destroy such certificate, or be aiding or assisting therein, or permit or suffer the same to be done, every such person so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 20l."
Sect. 57. "That each and every such meter admeasuring or weighing, or attending the admeasurement or weighing of any coals from any ship or other vessel within the said port of London, into any lighter, barge, or other craft, or on any quay or landing place, shall keep a book or books, and shall enter therein the name of the ship or other vessel, and the several quantities of coals delivered by him or them, from such ship or other vessel, together with the day of the month and year on which such several quantities shall have been delivered, and the name and number or numbers marked or described on the lighter or lighters, barge or barges, or other craft, and the several quantities of coals delivered into each room or division of such respective lighter, barge, or craft, or the name of the quay or landing place into or upon which such coals have been delivered; and such entry or entries shall, when all the coals contained in such ship or other vessel shall have been delivered, be signed by such meter or meters, and witnessed by the master or other person having the care or charge of such ship or other vessel; and such meter or meters shall, and he and they is and are hereby required to deliver, or cause to be delivered, gratis, a copy of the respective entries from such book or books to the clerk of the said market, with the factor or factors’ name or names inscribed thereon, within twenty-four hours after the unloading thereof of coals; and every such clerk is hereby required to receive and preserve all such copies of the entries contained in such book or books; and if any such meter shall make a false entry or entries in such book or books of the name of such ship or other vessel, or of the quantity of coals delivered thereon, or of the day, or month, or year, or of the name or names, or number or numbers of the lighter or lighters, barge or barges, or other craft, or of the several quantities of coals delivered into each room or division of each respective lighter, barge, or other craft, or of the name of any quay or landing place into or upon which the coals from such ship or other vessel shall have been delivered, or shall not deliver or cause to be delivered such copies of the entries contained in such book or books to such clerk within the time aforesaid, or if the master or other person having the care or charge of such ship or other vessel shall refuse or neglect to witness such entry or entries, when true and correct, or shall knowingly witness any such false entry or entries, or if any such clerk shall refuse or neglect to receive and preserve such entry or entries, book or books, or shall refuse or not permit the inspection or perusal thereof to any person or persons whatsoever on demand, at any time or times during such days and hours as such market shall be kept open, every such person so offending, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 20l.”

Sect. 58. "That if any ship owner or owners, master or masters, mate or mates, coal undertaker or undertakers, buyer or buyers of coals, or his or their agents, or any coalheaver or whippers, or any other person or persons whatsoever, shall, directly or indirectly, in any manner prevent or attempt to prevent any meter, who shall be engaged in the admeasurement or delivery, or in superintending the admeasurement or delivery of any coals from any ship or vessel within the said port of London, from having the vest or other measure filled according to the directions of such meter employed in the admeasurement or delivery of such coal from or on board such ship or vessel, every such person or persons so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 20l.”

Sect 59. "That the stage or spout, by which any coals shall be shot from any such ship or vessel within the port of London, into any lighter, barge, or other craft, shall be provided by the master or owner of such ship or vessel, and that every such stage or spout used for such purpose, and so to be provided as aforesaid, shall be of not less than the respective dimensions following, that is to say, five feet six inches wide at the top, four feet six inches wide at the bottom, and ten inches high at the sides, and of a proper length, as the case may require; and if any such master or owner shall neglect to provide for his ship or vessel such stage or spout, of such respective dimensions as aforesaid, or shall not use or cause to be used such stage or spout when it shall be necessary or proper to use such stage or spout for the shooting or delivering of any coals from any such ship or vessel into any lighter, barge, or other Craft, within the said port of London, then and in every such case every such master or owner so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding the sum of 10l."

Sect. 60. "That when the whole of the cargo of coals contained in any such ship or vessel shall be purchased by and sold in shares to different buyers in the said market, or their clerks or agents who shall have been lawfully authorised as aforesaid, and who shall have previously delivered in such authority in writing to the clerk of the said market as aforesaid, on the behalf of any such buyers respectively, then and in such case such buyers or their clerks or agents so authorised, and who shall have delivered in such paper to the clerk of the said market as aforesaid, shall and he and they is and are hereby respectively required within one hour after the close of the market on the day when such purchase shall be made, to sign an agreement specifying the turns in which each of such different buyers is to receive his particular share of such cargo, and which agreement shall also be attested and subscribed with the name of the factor or factors, or seller or sellers of such coals as the witness or witnesses thereto, and such factor or factors, seller or sellers of such coals shall deliver in or cause to be delivered in at the sea coal meter's office such agreement when so signed and subscribed, at or before three of the clock in the afternoon of the day on which such cargo shall be purchased; and the principal clerk for the time being of such office shall deliver or cause to be delivered such agreement to the ship meter who shall be appointed to measure or superintend the admeasurement and delivery of such cargo, and such meter shall immediately upon his arrival on board such ship or vessel deliver such agreement to the master or mate of such ship or vessel; and each of such respective buyers shall be entitled to have and shall have the several quantities of coals purchased by or on the behalf of such buyers respectively, delivered to them out of such ship or vessel in and according to the turns expressed in such agreement so delivered to such master or mate; and when and as soon as the delivery of such cargo from on board such ship or vessel shall be completed, such master or mate shall and he is hereby required immediately to re-deliver or cause to be re-delivered such agreement to such meter, and such meter shall and he is hereby required within twenty-four hours after such re-delivery of the same to him, to deliver or cause to be delivered such agreement to the clerk of the said market, at the office of the said market, and such clerk of the said market shall and he is hereby required to file every such agreement on a file or file to be kept for that purpose, which file shall be open for the search or inspection of any person or persons on demand during such hours as the said market shall be opened; and if any such person or persons so buying any such share on his own account or the account of himself and his co-partner or copartners, or as the clerk or agent on the behalf of any other person or persons as aforesaid, shall refuse or neglect to sign such agreement as aforesaid, or if any such factor or other seller shall refuse or neglect to subscribe the same as aforesaid, or shall not deliver or cause to be delivered any such agreement which shall have been so signed into the said sea coal meter's office, at or before three of the clock in the afternoon of the day on which such cargo shall be purchased, or if such principal clerk of such office shall refuse or neglect to deliver or cause to be delivered such agreement so left at such office to such meter so appointed to such ship or vessel, or if such meter shall refuse or neglect to deliver immediately upon his arrival on board such ship or vessel such agreement so received by him to such master or mate of such ship or vessel, or if any such master or mate to whom such agreement shall have been delivered shall refuse to permit any person or persons applying for that purpose at any time before the whole of the cargo shall have been delivered to inspect such agreement, which shall have been so signed and delivered to such master or mate, or if any such master or mate or any other person or persons whatsoever, shall in any manner obstruct or attempt to obstruct the admeasurement or delivery of such cargo in or according to such turns, or if any such master or mate to whom any such agreement shall have been delivered shall not immediately after the delivery of such cargo from on board such ship or vessel shall be completed, re-deliver or cause to be re-delivered such agreement to such meter, or if such meter to whom any such agreement shall have been so re-delivered shall not within twenty-four hours after the re-delivery thereof to him deliver or cause to be delivered such agreement to the said clerk of the said market, at his office in the said market, or if such clerk of the said market shall refuse or neglect to file or cause to be filed any such agreement on such file or files in manner aforesaid, or shall not permit any person or persons whomsoever, on demand, to search for and inspect any such agreement during such hours as aforesaid, every such buyer, clerk, agent, factor, or seller, master or mate, meter, or other person so offending, shall forfeit and pay for every such offence any sum not exceeding the sum of 20L; and if any lighterman or other person having or pretending to have, or assuming the care or management of any lighter, barge, or other craft, shall without the consent and permission of the buyer or buyers, or his or their agent whose turn it is to load according to the aforesaid agreement, load or direct or suffer to be loaded any such lighter, barge, or other craft, with any quantity whatever of coals from any such ship or vessel out of or in violation of the turn or order of working or delivery which shall have been agreed upon by and amongst the different buyers of the cargo of such ship or vessel, or their respective agents as aforesaid, every such lighterman or other person so having or assuming the management of such lighter, barge, or other craft, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding the sum of 20L.”

Sect. 61. “That it shall and may be lawful to and for any lighterman or lightermen to enter into copartnership with any woodmongers or wood-mongers or other person or persons whomsoever in the trade or business of a coal dealer or coal dealers, and to carry on as copartner or copartners with such person or persons such trade or business of a coal dealer or dealers, and to keep, use, and employ, as such copartners, their own lighters, barges, or other craft, in and for the carrying of coals to and from any such ship or other vessel in the River Thames, and to and from any wharf, dock, creek, or other places whatsoever, on or near the said River Thames, without being subject to any penalty or penalties for any such joint trading together, any act, statute, bye law or ordinance whatsoever to the contrary thereof in any wise notwithstanding: provided nevertheless, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend so as to authorize or empower any lighterman or lightermen to be or become jointly interested with any woodmonger or woodmongers, or other person or persons whomsoever, (not being a lighterman or lightermen,) in the trade or business of carrying in lighters for hire any sort or description of goods whatsoever, other than and except only such coals as may be lightered by them in their said trade of coal dealers.”

Sect. 62. “And whereas it would tend greatly to the prevention of fraud, if certain particular quantities of coals only were permitted to be loaded into barges, lighters, or other craft, from ships and other vessels discharging their cargoes of coals in the said River Thames, be it therefore further enacted, that if any meter delivering coals shall load or permit or suffer to be loaded from any such ship or other vessel in the River Thames into any lighter, barge, or other craft, a less quantity than five chaldrons and one vat or twenty-one vats, or any quantity between five chaldrons and one vat or twenty-one vats, and ten chaldrons and two vats or forty-two vats, or any quantity between ten chaldrons and two vats or forty-two vats, and fifteen chaldrons and three vats or sixty-three vats, or any quantity between fifteen chaldrons and three vats or sixty-three vats, and between twenty-one chaldrons or eighty-four vats or otherwise, so that there shall be a less quantity than five chaldrons and one vat or twenty-one vats, or than some multiple of five chaldrons and one vat or twenty-one vats, or in any such lighter, barge, or other craft, or in any room or rooms, division or divisions thereof, save and except for the clearance of such ship or other vessel when the cargo is reduced to a less quantity than five chaldrons and one vat or twenty-one vats, or if any lighterman or other person having the care or management of such lighter, barge, or other craft, shall without the permission or consent of such meter take away his or their lighter, barge, or other craft from any such ship or other vessel, so as to prevent the same from being loaded with the quantity herein directed, then and in every such case every such meter so offending, and every such lighterman or other person so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 20l."

Sect. 63. "That nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to prevent the shooting or delivery of coals in bulk from any such ship or vessel into any partitioned or divided lighter, barge, or other craft, in case the lighterman or other person having the care or management of such lighter, barge, or craft, shall desire to have his coals so loaded in bulk; provided nevertheless, that the quantity of coals so to be loaded or delivered in bulk shall always consist of five chaldrons and one vat or twenty-one vats, or some multiple of five chaldrons and one vat or twenty-one vats, so that there shall not be any quantity less than five chaldrons and one vat or twenty-one vats, or than some multiple of five chaldrons and one vat or twenty-one vats, in any such lighter, barge or other craft so loaded in bulk, save and except for the clearance of such ship or vessel when the cargo is reduced to a less quantity than five chaldrons and one vat or twenty-one vats."

Sect. 64. "That if any meter or other person shall shoot or deliver, or shall permit, suffer, or cause to be shot or delivered from any ship or other vessel in the port of London, any coals into any open or undivided lighter, barge, or other craft, or into any room or division of any divided lighter, barge, or other craft, containing any coals obtained or received from any other ship or vessel, or from any other lighter, barge, or craft, or from any other place whatsoever, save and except from the ship or other vessel from which such meter or other person shall be shooting or delivering coals, or shall be in anywise aiding or assisting therein, then and in every such case every such meter and every such other person shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 20l."

Sect. 65. "That nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend so as to prevent or hinder the shooting and delivery of coals into any empty room or rooms of any lighter, barge, or other craft, or into the vacant or unloaded end or part of any open or undivided lighter, barge, or other craft."

Sect. 66. "That as often as it shall happen that any lighter, barge, or craft, or any room of any divided lighter, barge, or other craft, which may have been loaded by the room, shall by reason of its having been loaded with the clearance of any such ship or vessel, contain any quantity less than five chaldrons and one vat or twenty-one vats, or any quantity which shall not be some multiple of five chaldrons and one vat or twenty-one vats, then and in such case nothing hereinbefore contained shall extend or be construed to extend to prevent the shooting or delivery from any other or different ship or vessel into such lighter, barge, or craft, or room of any such lighter, barge, or craft, so containing such deficient clearance of such former ship any quantity of coals, provided that such additional coals be of the same kind or description of coal as those which may have been cleared out of such first ship, and provided the certificate or certificates of the meter or meters from the ship from whence such lighter, barge, or other craft shall have been in part loaded, be previously produced to the meter on board the ship from which such lighter, barge, or other craft shall be so filled up, and provided likewise that such lighter, barge, or other craft, or such room when so filled up, shall contain either five chaldrons and one vat or twenty-one vats of coals, or some multiple of five chaldrons and one vat or twenty-one vats."

Sect. 67. "That if any ship meter shall give a certificate for the delivery of any parcel or quantity of coals from any ship or other vessel within the said port of London, without having duly and truly measured the same, or superintended the admasurement of the whole of such coals by the vat, such meter so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 20l."
Sect. 68. "That if any ship owner or owners, master or masters, buyer or buyers of coals, or any vender or venders of or dealer or dealers in coals, or any person or persons on his, her, or their behalf, shall give or grant or promise to give or grant any money or any coals, or any other gift or reward to any ship meter or meters employed in the admeasurement of coals from or out of any ship or vessel laden with coals within the said port of London, for or on account of such meter or meters having measured or being about to measure any coals from any such ship or vessel for such buyer or buyers, vender or venders, dealer or dealers, or if any such ship meter or meters shall take or receive any such money, coals, or other gift or reward from any such owner or owners, master or masters, buyer or buyers, vender or venders, dealer or dealers, or other person or persons on his, her, or their behalf, then and in such case every such owner, master, buyer, vender, dealer, meter, and other person so offending, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of 100l.: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend to subject or render liable to the said penalty of 100l. any ship owner or ship owners, master or masters, buyer or buyers of coals, or vender or venders of or dealer or dealers in coals, or any person on his, her, or their behalf, for giving or granting or promising to give or grant any of the several sums of money specified in the schedule in this act contained, and for the several purposes therein mentioned; but such several sums in such schedule specified shall be paid and payable by the several persons therein mentioned to such ship meter or meters, any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 69. "That in case any purchaser or purchasers, vender or venders of coals, or his, her, or their servant or servants, or any person or persons acting by or under the authority of such purchaser or purchasers, vender or venders, respectively, shall be dissatisfaction with the measure of any coals admeasured from any ship or other vessel, and shall within one hour after the delivery of such coals into the lighter, barge, or other craft belonging to or sent by the purchaser or purchasers thereof, and before such lighter, barge, or other craft, shall have left the ship or other vessel from whence such coals shall have been delivered, signify to the meter on board such ship or other vessel, his, her, or their desire, to have the same remeasured, then and in every such case it shall and may be lawful to and for the purchaser or purchasers, vender or venders, of such coals, his, her, or their servant or servants, or any person or persons acting by or under the authority of such purchaser or purchasers, or vender or venders, to leave, or cause a notice to be left, in writing, at the sea coal meter's office, desiring that such coals may be remeasured, and specifying the lighter, barge, or other craft, containing such coals so required to be remeasured, and where such lighter, barge, or other craft, is then lying, and on the receipt of such notice, two deputy meters from such office shall forthwith attend to remeasure such coals, and shall accordingly forthwith remeasure such coals by the vat, in the presence of the ship meter who shall have so measured such coals into such lighter, barge, or other craft, and in the presence of the vender or venders, or purchaser or purchasers of such coals, his, her, or their servant or servants respectively, or other person or persons acting by or under the authority of such vender or venders respectively, in case they or any of them shall attend to see the same remeasured; and in case the clerk at such sea coal meter's office shall neglect or refuse to send such two deputy meters, or in case such two deputy meters shall neglect or refuse to attend within six hours after such notice in writing left as aforesaid, or to remeasure such coals in manner aforesaid, provided the aforesaid lighter, barge, or other craft, be not taken away or removed from the ship or vessel from which such lighter, barge, or other craft, was loaded, then and in every such case such clerk, and every such deputy coal meter so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 5l.; and for such remeasurement the person or persons so requiring such coals to be remeasured shall pay the coal meters attending such remeasurement and after the rate of sixpence for every chaldron of coals so remeasured; and the vat for remeasuring such coals
Coals, (London.)

shall be placed and affixed for the purpose of being used for such re-measurement at the costs and charges of the person or persons so desiring such re-measurement; and in case the coals so re-measured shall either not amount to or exceed the quantity mentioned in the certificate of the ship meter, as required by this act, the coal meter who shall have measured the coals from the ship or other vessel into such lighter, barge, or other craft, shall, in case such deficiency or excess shall exceed four bushels, and not exceed seven buahels in any five chaldrons and one vat so re-measured, forfeit and pay for every five chaldrons and one vat so deficient or exceeding, the sum of 3l. and also the expenses of the placing and affixing such vat, and all other expenses attending such re-measurement; and in case such deficiency or excess shall exceed seven bushels, and not exceed ten bushels in any five chaldrons and one vat so re-measured, then and in such case such meter shall, for every such five chaldrons and one vat so deficient or exceeding, forfeit and pay the sum of 5l. and also such expenses of fixing the said vat, and such other expenses attending such re-admeasurement; and in case such deficiency or excess shall amount to more than ten bushels in any five chaldrons and one vat so re-measured, then and in such case such meter shall, for every such bushel in such five chaldrons and one vat so deficient or exceeding, forfeit and pay the sum of 20s. and also such expenses attending the re-admeasurement; such expenses to be settled and determined by the justice or justices before whom the said respective penalties may be recovered, and to be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender or offenders, by warrant under the hand and seal of such justice or justices, rendering, the overplus (if any) after deducting all such expenses attending such re-admeasurement, and the costs and charges of such distress and sale, to the owner or owners of such goods and chattels: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to subject or make liable any such meter to any of the said penalties for having given less measure than the quantity mentioned in the said certificate, unless and except only where the coals which shall be so found deficient upon re-measurement shall have been so re-measured by the desire of the purchaser or purchasers of such coals, or his or their agent or agents; nor to subject or make liable any such meter to any of the said penalties for having given greater measure than the quantity expressed in such certificate, unless and except only where the coals which shall be so found upon re-measurement to exceed the quantity mentioned in such certificate shall have been so re-measured by the desire of the vendor or vendors of such coals, or his or their agent or agents.

Sect. 70. "That when upon any such re-admeasurement taking place, any such meter shall, for the first time, incur and become subject to pay any such penalty for any such offence, in having admeasured from any such ship or vessel into any lighter, barge, or other craft, either a greater or less quantity of coals than the quantity mentioned in the said certificate, then and in such case such meter so for the first time offending and incurring such penalty, shall not be permitted to act or serve again in the capacity or office of meter, unless or until he shall have duly paid such penalty so incurred by him for such his first offence, upon payment whereof he shall be permitted to continue in, or shall be restored to, his situation in the sea coal meter's office; and in case any such meter shall a second time incur and become subject to pay any such penalty for any such offence, in having admeasured from any ship or vessel into any lighter, barge, or other craft, a greater or less quantity of coals than the quantity expressed in the said certificate, then and in such case every such meter so for the second time offending and incurring such penalty, shall be suspended and incapable of acting or serving as a meter for any time not exceeding one calendar month, at the pleasure of the principal meters; but nevertheless at the end of the period for which he shall be so suspended, such meter shall be restored to his situation in the sea coal meter's office, and be permitted again to act therein, provided he shall have duly paid such penalty so incurred by him for such his second offence; and in case any such meter shall for the third time incur and become subject to pay any such penalty for any such offence, in having admeasured from any such ship or vessel into any lighter, barge, or other craft, a greater or less quantity of coals than the quantity mentioned in the said certificate, then and in such case such meter so for the third time offending and incurring such penalty, shall be absolutely incapacitated or otherwise suspended for any length of time from acting in such office or capacity of meter, at the pleasure of the principal meters.”

Sect. 71. “That when any such coals shall be so remeasured by the desire of the vender or venders of such coals, or his or their agent or agents, and upon such remeasurement taking place, the meter who shall have measured such coals shall be found not to have incurred any penalty in respect of the measure of such coals, then and in every such case such vender or venders, or his or their agent or agents, shall have desired such remeasurement on the behalf of such vender or venders, shall, and he and they is and are hereby required to pay, or cause to be paid, to the owner or owners of the lighter, barge, or other craft, in which such coals shall have been so remeasured, such sum or sums of money, not exceeding 2s. 6d. per hour, as and by way of a compensation for the time during which such lighter, barge, or craft, shall have been detained in consequence of such remeasurement, as any one or more of his Majesty’s justices of the peace of the city of London, or counties of Middlesex, Essex, Kent, or Surrey, according to the jurisdiction, shall award, on the application of such owner or owners of such lighter, barge, or other craft, over and above all costs and expenses of any such application; and every such application to any such justice or justices shall be made by such owner or owners of such lighter, barge, or other craft, within three days next after the day on which such remeasurement shall take place, and if the sum or sums of money which shall, upon any such application, be awarded by such justice or justices to be paid by any such vender or venders, or his or their said agent or agents, to any such owner or owners, by way of such compensation for such detention of his or their lighter, barge, or other craft, shall not be immediately paid accordingly, then and in every such case, such respective sum or sums of money shall and may be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such vender or venders, or of his or their said agent or agents, by warrant or warrants under the hand and seal of such justice or justices, and the overplus of the money (if any) raised by any such distress and sale, after deducting the money so awarded and ordered to be paid, and the costs and charges of making any such distress and sale, shall be rendered to the owner or owners of the goods and chattels so detained; and for want of distress, and in case the money so awarded and ordered to be paid to any such owner or owners of any such lighter, barge, or other craft, shall not be immediately paid, it shall and may be lawful to and for such justice or justices to commit such vender or venders, or his or their said agent or agents, to the common gaol or house of correction for the city or place for which such justice or justices shall act, there to remain without bail or mainprize for any term not exceeding three calendar months, unless such sum or sums, and all reasonable costs attending the recovery thereof, shall be sooner paid, and every such award, order, and proceeding of any such justice or justices shall be final, binding, and conclusive, and no such proceeding shall be quashed or vacated for want of form only, or be removed by certiorari, or other writ or process whatsoever, into any of his Majesty’s courts of record at Westminster or elsewhere.”

Sect. 72. “And whereas by the said several acts made for more effectually preventing the frauds and abuses committed in the admeasurement of coals within the city and liberty of Westminster, and that part of the duchy of Lancaster adjoining thereto, and the several parishes of Saint Giles in the Fields, Saint Mary-le-Bone, and such part of the parish of Saint Andrew, Holborn, as lies in the county of Middlesex, which acts were further continued, with divers alterations and amendments, by the said recited act, made in the forty-second year of the reign of his present Majesty, until the 24th day of June, 1817, and from thence to the end of the then next session of parliament, his Majesty, his heirs and successors, were empowered to nominate and appoint two persons, by the name of 'The principal land coal meters for the city and liberty of Westminster,' and in case of the death or removal of the persons so nominated or appointed to appoint others in their room or stead; and such nomination and appointment have from time to time been made accordingly; be it therefore enacted, that John Baker, of Northumberland Street, Westminster, Gentleman, and Alexander Tulloch, of Saint Alban's Street, Westminster, Gentleman, the two persons last so nominated and appointed by his present Majesty, and now holding and exercising, by virtue of such or some of such acts, the office of principal land coal meters for the city of Westminster, shall remain and continue such principal land coal meters, for the purpose of admeasuring coals within the city and liberty of Westminster, and for that part of the duchy of Lancaster adjoining thereto, and for the several parishes of Saint Giles in the Fields, Saint Mary-le-Bone, and for such part of the parish of Saint Andrew, Holborn, as lies in the county of Middlesex, and for other purposes in this act mentioned (save and except he or they shall die or be removed from such office or offices by his Majesty, his heirs and successors, which removal his Majesty, his heirs and successors, is and are hereby empowered to make,) until the 24th day of June, 1817, and from thence to the end of the then next session of parliament, when the same, or any other person or persons may be nominated and appointed by his Majesty, his heirs and successors, as principal land coal meter or land coal meters."

Sect. 73. "And whereas by an act made in the seventh year of the reign of his present Majesty, intituled, 'An Act to prevent frauds and abuses in the admeasurement of coals sold by wharf measure, within the city of London, and the liberties thereof, and between Tower Dock and Limehouse Hole, in the county of Middlesex;' which act was continued with divers alterations and amendments by the said recited act, made in the thirty-eighth year of the reign of his present Majesty, until the 1st day of June, 1812, and from thence to the end of the then next session of parliament, certain persons have been from time to time nominated and appointed as the principal meters or managers of the office called by the name of 'The land coal meter's office for the city of London, and between the Tower of London and Limehouse Hole, in the county of Middlesex;' be it therefore enacted, that William Anderson, of Gracechurch Street, London, John Hawkins, of Hackney, in the county of Middlesex, and John Ratray, of Islington, in the same county, shall be and remain and continue, and they are hereby appointed the principal meters or managers of the land coal meter's office for the city of London, and between the Tower of London and Limehouse Hole, in the county of Middlesex, for the purpose of admeasuring coals sold by wharf measure within the city of London, and the liberties thereof, and between Tower Dock and Limehouse Hole, in the county of Middlesex, and also for other purposes in this act mentioned, for and during their joint lives, (save and except he or they shall happen to be dismissed from such office or offices,) and upon the death or dismissal of any one of them, the said William Anderson, John Hawkins, and John Ratray, the number of principal meters or managers of the said land coal meter's office for the city of London, and between Tower Dock and Limehouse Hole, in the county of Middlesex, shall be reduced to two; and that in all future times, from and after such death or dismissal of any one of them, the said William Anderson, John Hawkins, and John Ratray, the number of principal meters or managers for the said city of London and the liberties thereof, and between Tower Dock and Limehouse Hole, shall be and continue to be not more nor less than two; and upon and from and after such death or dismissal of any one of them, the said William Anderson, John Hawkins, and John Ratray, the two others, or survivors of them, the said William Anderson, John Hawkins, and John Ratray, shall respectively remain and continue the two principal meters or managers for the said city of London, and between the Tower of London and Limehouse Hole, in the county of Middlesex, until he or they shall die, or happen to be dismissed from such office; and when or in case either of such two others, or survivors of them, the said William Anderson,
John Hawkins, and John Ratray, shall die, or happen to be dismissed from such office, and so from time to time and at all times thereafter, when and often as any principal meter for the said city of London, and between the Tower of London and Limehouse Hole, in the said county of Middlesex, shall die, or be dismissed or suspended from such office, or shall become incapable of acting in the execution of such office, or the time for which such principle meter or manager shall be nominated and appointed to such office shall expire, then and in every such case, it shall and may be lawful to and for the said lord mayor, aldermen, and commons, in common council assembled, to nominate and appoint any other person a principal land coal meter or manager, in the room or stead of every such principal land coal meter who shall die, be so dismissed or suspended, or be incapable of acting in the execution of his office, or whose time limited for the execution of such his office shall expire.

Sect. 74. "And whereas by the said recited act, made in the forty-sixth year of the reign of his present Majesty, intituled, 'An Act for more effectually preventing of frauds and abuses in the admeasurement and delivery of coals, within the several parishes lying between the parishes of Egham and Rotherhithe, both inclusive, in the county of Surrey, Joseph Burnett, of the parish of Streatham, in the said county of Surrey, Gentleman, and Francis Bigg, of the parish of Saint Mary, Newington, in the said county of Surry, Gentleman, were nominated 'principal land coal meters for executing the provisions of the said act, for and during the term of twenty-one years next ensuing from the commencement of the said act;' be it therefore enacted, that the said Joseph Burnett and Francis Bigg, or the survivor of them, so appointed by virtue of the said act as such principal land coal meters, or meter, shall remain and continue such principal land coal meters or meter for the admeasurement of coals sold by wharf measure within the several parishes of Egham, Thorpe, Chertsey, Weybridge, Walton-on-Thames, West Molesey, Thames Ditton, Kingston, Richmond, Mortlake, Barnes, Croydon, Mitcham, Putney, Wandsworth, Battersea, Lambeth, Christchurch, Newington, Saint George in the Borough of Southwark, Saint Saviour's, Saint Olave, Saint Thomas, Saint John, Saint Mary Magdalen, Bermosey, and Saint Mary, Rotherhithe, all in the said county of Surry, and for other purposes in this act mentioned, (save and except he or they shall be suspended or removed from such office or offices), until the 16th day of June, which will be in the year of our Lord 1827, and from thence to the end of the next session of parliament."

Sect. 75. "That when and as or in case any principal land coal meter or principal land coal meters for the city and liberties of Westminster, and for that part of the duchy of Lancaster adjoining thereto, and for the several parishes of Saint Giles in the Fields, Saint Mary-le-Bone, and for such part of the parish of Saint Andrew, Holborn, as lies in the county of Middlesex, shall die, or be incapable of acting in the execution of his or their office or offices, or shall be removed therefrom as aforesaid, or the time limited for the execution of such office or offices shall expire, it shall and may be lawful to and for his Majesty, his heirs and successors, to nominate or appoint any other person as a principal land coal meter, in the room or stead of every such principal land coal meter who shall die, be so dismissed, removed, or be incapable of acting in the execution of his office, or whose time limited for the execution of his office shall expire, and so, toties quoties, as often as any such case shall happen."

Sect. 76. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for the justices of the peace for the county of Middlesex, or city and liberty of Westminster, in general or quarter sessions assembled, and they are hereby authorised and required to inquire into, and hear and determine any complaint of fraud or misbehaviour of the principal land coal meter or principal land coal meters for the time being, for the city and liberty of Westminster and that part of the duchy of Lancaster adjoining thereto, and for the said several parishes of Saint Giles in the Fields, Saint Mary-le-Bone, and for such part of the parish of Saint Andrew, Holborn, as lies in the county of Middlesex, or any or either of such principal land coal meters, in the same manner as they are by law authorised to inquire into, hear and determine misdemeanors; and if any such principal land coal meter shall be found guilty of any fraud, neglect or misbehaviour, he shall forfeit and pay for the use of his Majesty, his heirs and successors, such fine as such court before whom such complaint shall be made shall think fit, not exceeding 20L, together with such costs as the court shall think proper to award and direct.

Sect. 77. "That each and every labouring coal meter, deputy, agent, or servant of the several and respective principal land coal meters for the city and liberty of Westminster and for that part of the duchy of Lancaster adjoining thereto, and for the several parishes of Saint Giles in the Fields, Saint Mary-le-Bone, and for such part of the parish of Saint Andrew, Holborn, as lies in the county of Middlesex, shall, be, and he and they is and are hereby declared to be subject to the power, jurisdiction and control of the said justices of the peace for the said county of Middlesex, or for the city and liberty of Westminster, in general or quarter session assembled, and shall and may be dismissed and suspended by the said court from the execution and emoluments of his or their office or offices, upon complaint and proof of any fraud, default or neglect, or other misbehaviour in the management or execution thereof, all which complaints may be heard and determined in a summary way."

Sect. 78. "That each and every manager or principal land coal meter for the city of London and liberties thereof, and between the Tower of London and Limehouse Hole, in the county of Middlesex, and each and every labouring land coal meter within such district shall, and he and they is and are declared to be subject to the power, jurisdiction and control of the lord mayor and aldermen of the said city of London, and shall and may be dismissed and suspended by the said court from the execution and salaries or wages of their said respective offices, upon complaint and proof of any fraud, neglect, default, or other misbehaviour in the management or execution thereof; all which complaints shall and may be heard and determined by the said court in a summary way."

Sect. 79. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for the lord mayor, aldermen and commons of the said city of London, in common council assembled, to nominate and appoint any number of persons, not less than forty-five, to be the labouring land coal meters for the said city of London and the liberties thereof, and between Tower Dock and Limehouse Hole, in the county of Middlesex; and that when and as any such labouring land coal meter for such district or limits shall die, or shall be incapable of serving in such office, or shall be dismissed or suspended therefrom, then and in every such case it shall and may be lawful to and for the said lord mayor, aldermen and commons of the said city of London, in common council assembled, to nominate and appoint any other person as a labouring land coal meter in the room and stead of every such labouring land coal meter who shall die, be so dismissed or suspended, or be incapable of acting in the execution of his office, and so toties quoties, as often as any such case shall happen."

Sect. 80. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for the principal land coal meters or meter for the city of London and liberties thereof, and between the Tower of London and Limehouse Hole, in the county of Middlesex, to suspend from their office any labouring land coal meter or meters, serving in such district, who shall appear to such principal meter to have conducted himself or themselves corruptly or improperly in the execution of his or their office; but nevertheless such principal land coal meter or meters shall, and he and they is and are hereby required, within seven days after any such suspension taking place, to report the cause of such suspension to the lord mayor of the city of London, or to the court of lord mayor and aldermen of the city of London; and it shall and may be lawful to and for the said lord mayor or the said court, upon such complaint being brought and heard before the said lord mayor or the said court, either to order any such labouring meter so suspended to be discharged, or to order him to be reinstated in his office and restored to the salary or wages thereof.” Sect. 81. “That the said Joseph Burnett and Francis Bigg, and each and every principal land coal meter for the time being, for the several parishes lying between the parishes of Egham and Saint Mary, Rotherhithe, both inclusive, in the said county of Surry, and each and every his and their depeties, labouring meters, or servants, acting under them in the admmeasurement of coals, or in the execution of any other duties required by this act, shall be, and they each and every of them is and are hereby declared to be subject to the power, jurisdiction and control of any general courts of quarter sessions to be holden within the said county of Surry, and shall and may be dismissed and suspended by the said courts from the execution and enmoneties of their said respective offices, on complaint and proof of any fraud, default, neglect, or other misbehaviour in the management or execution thereof; all which complaints shall and may be heard and determined by the said courts in a summary way.”

2 Y 2
Sect. 82. “That in case of the death of either of them the said Joseph Burnett and Francis Bigg before the expiration of the said term or time for which they have been and are nominated and appointed as aforesaid, the said office shall be managed by the survivor of them (unless previously dismissed or suspended in manner aforesaid) during the remainder of the said term; and that then, upon and from and after the expiration of such term, or in case both the said Joseph Burnett and Francis Bigg shall die, or be dismissed or suspended, before the expiration of the said term, then, upon and from and after such death, dismissal or suspension of both of them, the said Joseph Burnett and Francis Bigg, and also from time to time and at all times thereafter, when and as often as any principal land coal meter for the said several parishes lying between the parishes of Egham and Saint Mary, Rotherhithe, both inclusive, in the said county of Surry, shall die, or shall be incapable of acting in the execution of his office, or shall be dismissed or suspended therefrom as aforesaid, or the time limited for the execution of such office shall expire, then upon the happening of any such vacancy it shall and may be lawful to and for such churchwardens as hereinafter mentioned, or the major part of them, in manner hereinafter directed, to elect, nominate and appoint any other person to be and act as principal land coal meter in the room or stead of every such principal land coal meter who shall die, be so dismissed, suspended, or be incapable of acting in the execution of his office, or whose time limited for the execution of his office shall expire, and so toties quoties, as often as any such case shall happen; and every such person so to be nominated and appointed principal meter for such limits in the said county of Surry, in the room or stead of any such other principal meter, shall be elected, nominated and appointed by such persons, and in manner and form following; that is to say, the churchwardens of the said several and respective parishes lying between the parishes of Egham and Saint Mary, Rotherhithe, both inclusive, in the said county of Surry, shall, by notice in writing, specifying the occasion, and signed by one of the depeties in the land coal meter’s office for such several parishes within the said county of Surry, and left at the dwellinghouse or usual place of abode of each such churchwarden, as soon as the same can be done after any such vacancy shall happen, be summoned to meet and assemble at the said land coal meter’s office, at twelve o’clock at noon, on a day to be mentioned in the said notice, not exceeding seven days from the date thereof, at which meeting some person shall be chosen and appointed to succeed to the office of principal land coal meter for the limits aforesaid, and such person as shall at the hour of two of the clock of that day be elected by the majority of persons, being churchwardens of the said parishes, as shall be then and there assembled, shall be and is hereby declared to be principal land coal meter for putting this act in execution within such several parishes in the said county of Surry; and every such person so to be elected, nominated or appointed as aforesaid, shall be, remain and continue principal meter for the said several parishes, within the said county of Surry, for and during the term of twenty-one years next ensuing from and after the time of such his election, nomination and appointment, unless he shall be sooner dismissed or suspended, or be incapable of acting in the execution of his office.

Sect. 83. "That whenever the term or time for which any principal land c coal meter for any of such several and respective districts shall have been appointed shall expire, then and in such case nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, so as to hinder or prevent any such principal land coal meter, whose term or time limited for the execution of his office shall so expire, from being re-nominated, re-appointed, or re-elected to his office of principal meter."

Sect. 84. "That if any principal land coal meter, or principal land coal meters, shall refuse or neglect to open and keep open, or cause to be opened and kept open, his or their respective offices or offices every day (Sundays, Good Fridays, Christmas Days, and fast days by proclamation only excepted) in every year from the 25th day of March to the 25th day of September, from the hour of five in the morning until the hour of nine in the evening, or from the 25th day of September to the 25th day of March in every year, from the hour of six in the morning to the hour of six in the evening, every such principal land coal meter shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 20l."

Sect. 85. "That no person shall be capable of acting as a principal land c coal meter in the execution of this act, until he shall have taken and subscribed, before two or more of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county of Middlesex, or city and liberty of Westminster, or for the city of London, or for the said county of Surry (as the case may be) within their respective jurisdictions, an oath (which oath such respective justices are hereby authorised and required to administer) in the following words:

"I, A. B., do swear that I will honestly, truly, faithfully, and impartially accounting to the best of my skill and judgment, execute the office of principal land coal meter for the city and liberty of Westminster and for that part of the duchy of Lancaster adjoining thereto, and for the several parishes of Saint Giles in the Fields, Saint Mary-le-Bone, and for such part of the parish of Saint Andrew, Holborn, as lies in the county of Middlesex, [or, for the city of London, and for all the wharfs situate between the Tower of London and Limehouse Hole, in the county of Middlesex, or, for the several wharfs situate within the several parishes lying between the parishes of Egham and Saint Mary, Rotherhithe, both inclusive, in the county of Surry, as the case may be.] So help me God."

Sect. 86. "That the said principal land coal meters for the time being, for the city and liberty of Westminster and for that part of the duchy of Lancaster adjoining thereto, and for the several parishes of Saint Giles in the Fields, Saint Mary-le-Bone, and for such part of the parish of Saint Andrew, Holborn, as lies in the county of Middlesex, and the said principal land coal meters for the time being for the said several parishes lying between the parishes of Egham and Rotherhithe, both inclusive, in the county of Surry, shall, and the said several and respective principal land coal meters are hereby respectively directed and required, from time to time and at all times, to nominate, appoint and employ, within their said respective districts, a sufficient number of labouring land coal meters for the purpose of admeasuring coals, and for executing such other duties within their said respective districts as are by this act required to be done by land coal meters."

Sect. 87. "That no person shall be capable of acting as a labouring land c coal meter in the execution of this act until he shall have taken and subscribed before any one or more of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county of Middlesex, or for the city and liberty of Westminster, or for the city of London, or for the said county of Surry, as the case may be, within their respective jurisdictions, an oath (which oath such respective justices are hereby authorised and required to administer) in the words following:

"I, A. B., do swear, that I will honestly, truly, faithfully, and impartially, to the best of my skill and judgment, execute the office of one of the labouring land coal Coals and Coal Mines.

Labouring coal meters to attend at their stations.

Notice to be given.

Penalty for non-attendance.

Principal meters for Westminster to pay not less than 20s. per week to labouring meters.

meters for the city and liberty of Westminster and for that part of the duchy of Lancaster adjoining thereto, and for the several parishes of Saint Giles in the Fields, Saint Mary-le-Bone, and for such part of Saint Andrew, Holborn, as lies in the county of Middlesex, or, for the city of London, and for all the wharf's situate between the Tower of London and Limehouse Hole, in the county of Middlesex, or, for the several wharf's situate in the several parishes lying between the parishes of Egham and Saint Mary, Rotherhithe, both inclusively, in the county of Surry, as the case may be; and that I will truly and impartially inspect and measure, or see measured or loaded, all such coals between buyer and seller, and execute such other duties as are by law required to be done by a labouring land coal meter, without favour or hatred.

So help me God."

"And the said justice or justices respectively, who shall administer such oaths, is and are hereby required to certify the same to the next general quarter sessions of the peace to be holden for the said city of London, or for the county of Middlesex, or for the city and liberty of Westminster, or for the said city of London, or for the said county of Surry (as the case may be) after the taking of such oaths or affirmation respectively, there to remain on record." Sect. 88. "That in order to prevent confederacy, the stations for the several and respective labouring land coal meters shall, once at least in every month, be changed by such several and respective principal land coal meters, and the said several labouring land coal meters shall, and they and he is and are hereby required to attend at the several wharfs, warehouses, and other places, within their respective districts, at which he or they shall be stationed by the said respective principal land coal meters, each and every day (Sundays, Good Friday, Christmas day, and fast days by proclamation only excepted) in each and every year, from the 25th day of March to the 29th day of September, from the hour of five in the morning until nine in the evening, and from the 29th day of September to the 25th day of March from the hour of six in the morning until six in the evening; and if upon notice being given to any such labouring coal meter or meters so stationed, or notice being left in writing at his or their office or offices, or place or places of abode, to attend at any wharf, warehouse, or other place to be named in such notice, within the limits of his or their station or stations, in order to measure or see measured any coals, or to execute any other duty required by this act to be done by a land coal meter at any such wharf, warehouse, or other place; or if notice requiring the attendance of a labouring coal meter or meters at a wharf, warehouse, or other place, to be named in such notice, for the purpose of measuring or to see measured any coals, or to execute any other duty required of labouring meters by this act, shall be given at the office of one of the said respective principal land coal meters nearest to such wharf, warehouse, or other place, and such labouring coal meter or meters shall not attend pursuant to such notice within the space of two hours from giving the same, and do his duty according to the true intent and meaning of this act, then and in every such case such labouring coal meter and the principal land coal meter at whose office such notice was given as aforesaid, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of 5s."

Sect. 89. "That the principal land coal meter or meters for the time being for the city and liberty of Westminster, and that part of the duchy of Lancaster adjoining thereto, and the several parishes of Saint Giles in the Fields, Saint Mary-le-bone, and such part of the parish of Saint Andrew, Holborn, as lies in the county of Middlesex, shall and such principal land coal meters or meter for the time being for such district are and is hereby directed and required to pay or cause to be paid not less than 20s. per week to each and every of the labouring land coal meters who shall, at any time hereafter, serve in the employ and within the district of such principal land coal meters or meter as and for the weekly wages of each and every of such labouring coal meters, for and during the time that each and every of such labouring meters shall hereafter so serve in the employ and within the district of the said principal land meters; and if any such principal meter or meters shall refuse to pay or cause to be paid to any such labouring meter, demanding the sai d the said county of Surry, for and during the term of twenty-one years next ensuing from and after the time of such his election, nomination and appointment, unless he shall be sooner dismissed or suspended, or be incapable of acting in the execution of his office."

Sect. 83. "That whenever the term or time for which any principal land coal meter or any of such several and respective districts shall have been appointed shall expire, then and in such case nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, so as to hinder or prevent any such principal land coal meter, whose term or time limited for the execution of his office shall so expire, from being re-nominated, re-appointed, or re-elected to his office of principal meter."

Sect. 84. "That if any principal land coal meter, or principal land coal meters, shall refuse or neglect to open and keep open, or cause to be opened and kept open, his or their respective office or offices every day (Sundays, Good Fridays, Christmas Days, and fast days by proclamation only excepted) in every year from the 25th day of March to the 29th day of September, from the hour of five in the morning until the hour of nine in the evening, or from the 29th day of September to the 25th day of March in every year, from the hour of six in the morning to the hour of six in the evening, every such principal land coal meter shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 20s."

Sect. 85. "That no person shall be capable of acting as a principal land coal meter in the execution of this act, until he shall have taken and subscribed, before two or more of his Majesty’s justices of the peace for the said county of Middlesex, or city and liberty of Westminster, or for the city of London, or for the said county of Surry (as the case may be) within their respective jurisdictions, an oath (which oath such respective justices are hereby authorised and required to administer) in the following words:

"I, A. B. do swear that I will honestly, truly, faithfully, and impartially according to the best of my skill and judgment, execute the office of principal land coal meter for the city and liberty of Westminster and for that part of the duchy of Lancaster adjoining thereto, and for the several parishes of Saint Giles in the Fields, Saint Mary-le-Bone, and for such part of the parish of Saint Andrew, Holborn, as lies in the county of Middlesex, or, for the city of London, and for all the wharfs situate between the Tower of London and Limehouse Hole, in the county of Middlesex, or, for the several wharfs situate within the several parishes lying between the parishes of Egham and Saint Mary, Rotherhithe, both inclusive, in the county of Surry, as the case may be."

So help me God."

Sect. 86. "That the said principal land coal meters for the time being, for the city and liberty of Westminster and for that part of the duchy of Lancaster adjoining thereto, and for the several parishes of Saint Giles in the Fields, Saint Mary-le-Bone, and for such part of the parish of Saint Andrew, Holborn, as lies in the county of Middlesex, and the said principal land coal meters for the time being for the said several parishes lying between the parishes of Egham and Rotherhithe, both inclusive, in the county of Surry, shall, and the said several and respective principal land coal meters are hereby respectively directed and required, from time to time and at all times, to nominate, appoint and employ, within their said respective districts, a sufficient number of labouring land coal meters for the purpose of administering coals, and for executing such other duties within their said respective districts as are by this act required to be done by land coal meters."

Sect. 87. "That no person shall be capable of acting as a labouring land coal meter in the execution of this act until he shall have taken and subscribed before any one or more of his Majesty’s justices of the peace for the said county of Middlesex, or for the city and liberty of Westminster, or for the city of London, or for the said county of Surry, as the case may be, within their respective jurisdictions, an oath (which oath such respective justices are hereby authorised and required to administer) in the following words:

"I, A. B. do swear that I will honestly, truly, faithfully, and impartially, to the best of my skill and judgment, execute the office of one of the labouring land coal meters to take an oath."
and for which the same shall be sold, and such meter is hereby authorised and required to demand of the wharfinger or other person with whom the ship certificate of any such coals shall be left, at any wharf or place for the sale of any such coals, such ship certificate, for the purpose of pursuing and inspecting the same; and such meter shall, and he is hereby required to countersign such ticket or tickets, if such meter shall be satisfied that such coals are of the sort they are described to, be in such ticket or tickets, but shall not countersign the same without being so satisfied, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding; and such meter shall, and he is hereby also authorised and required when the whole quantity of coals contained in any lighter, barge or other craft, shall have been delivered thereon, to write or indorse on the back of the certificate of such coals the word 'delivered;' and if any such wharfinger or other person shall refuse or neglect to produce and deliver to any such meter such ship certificate or demand, then and in every such case every such wharfinger or other person so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 5l. and if any such meter shall countersign any such ticket or tickets, without having first inspected such coals, and also such ship certificate, and without having reasonable ground to be satisfied that such coals are of the sort described in such vender's ticket, or if any such meter shall not, immediately after the whole of the coals contained in any such lighter, barge, or other craft shall have been delivered thereon, demand or call for such certificate of such coals, or shall not immediately on such certificate being produced, indorse the same in manner aforesaid, then and in every such case every such meter so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 5l."

Sect. 93. "That all coals sold as and for pool measure, and to be sent in any cart, waggon, or carriage, from any wharf or place within any of the respective limits of any of the said respective offices, shall be loaded in sacks, in the presence of one of the labouring land coal meters of the district, which labouring meter is hereby authorised and required to watch and inspect the filling or loading of the sacks wherein such coals shall be loaded, and it shall and may be lawful to and for such meter to measure the dimensions of all or any of such sacks, used in any such loading, before such sacks shall be filled or loaded; and such meter shall and he is hereby authorised and required, when any room or rooms of coals, in any lighter, barge, or other craft, are or is to be sold and sent from any such wharf or other place, as and for pool measure by any land carriage, to see that the coals so loaded and sent are in fact taken out of the particular room or rooms so sold, and likewise that the whole of the coals contained in any such particular room or rooms so sold, are in fact entirely emptied out of such room or rooms, and loaded and sent away to the purchaser or purchasers of the coals contained in such room or rooms; and in case such meter shall find any sack or sacks used for the loading of any such coals is or are of less dimensions than required by this act, or in case it shall appear to such meter, according to the best of such meter's judgment, that any sack or sacks used in loading any such coals do or doth not contain, when loaded, each the quantity of three bushes of coals, or in case such meter shall observe that any such coals sold as the coals of any particular room or rooms shall not in fact be taken out of such particular room or rooms so sold or to be sold, or that the whole of the coals contained in such particular room or rooms shall not be entirely emptied out of the same, then and in every such case it shall and may be lawful to and for such meter to refuse to countersign the ticket or tickets by this act directed to be delivered by or on the behalf of all and every vender and vendes of such coals to the purchaser or purchasers thereof; and if any wharfinger, coal porter, or other person or persons shall in any manner obstruct, hinder or prevent such meter in or from the performance of any such duty or duties so required of such meter by this act, then and in every such case every such person so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 5l."

Sect. 94. "That all and every vender or vendors of, or dealer or dealers in, any coals sold and sent as and for pool measure from any ship, vessel, same, the sum of 30s. at least, at the end of each and every week of the time during which such labouring meter shall serve in his or their employ within such district, as and for the weekly wages of such labouring meter, then and in every such case every such principal land coal meter so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 20l."

Sect. 90. "That the principal land meters or meter for the time being for the said several parishes lying between the parishes of Egham and Rotherhithe, both inclusive, in the county of Surry, shall, and such principal meters or meter for the time being for such district are and is hereby directed and required to pay or cause to be paid not less than 20s. per week to each and every of the labouring coal meters, who shall at any time hereafter serve under such principal meters or meter at any station, or place or places, within any of such parts of the limits or district of such principal meters or meter as lie between Nine Elms and Dock Head, both inclusive, as and for the weekly wages of each and every of such respective labouring coal meters, for and during the time that each and every of such labouring coal meter shall hereafter so serve in the employ of such principal meters or meter, on any station, or place or places, within any of such parts of the limits or district of such principal meters or meter, as lie between Nine Elms and Dock Head aforesaid, both inclusive; and if any such principal meter or meters for such district shall refuse to pay or cause to be paid to any such labouring meter demanding the same, the sum of 20s. at least, at the end of each and every week of the time during which such labouring meter shall serve in his or their employ within any such parts of such district as lie between Nine Elms and Dock Head aforesaid, both inclusive, as and for the weekly wages of such labouring meter, then and in every such case every such principal meter so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding 20l. provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be taken to extend so as in any manner to fix or limit the wages to be paid by such principal meters or meter to any labouring meter in their employ, who shall serve or be stationed within such parts of their district as are situate either below Dock Head or above Nine Elms aforesaid, in the said county of Surry."

Sect. 91. "That if the said principal land coal meters, or any of them, or any of the persons to be employed under them respectively, shall at any time or times hereafter, during his or their respective continuance in their office or employment aforesaid, be directly or indirectly interested or concerned in the sale of any coals whatsoever, otherwise than in the discharge of their said respective offices, such principal land coal meters so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of 100l. and such deputy coal meter and labouring coal meter respectively shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of 50l. and being thereof respectively convicted before the said court of Lord Mayor and Aldermen, or before either of the said courts of quarter sessions for the said county of Middlesex or Surry (according to the jurisdiction aforesaid) shall be dismissed from his or their said respective office or employment, and be for ever disabled from holding or executing the same, or any other under this act."

Sect. 92. "That all coals whatsoever sold and to be sent in any cart, waggon, or other land carriage, from any wharf, warehouse, or other place or places within the limits or districts of any of the said respective land coal meters, and also all coals whatsoever sold, and to be sent by gang labour from or over any wharf or other place where any land meter shall be stationed, situate within any of such respective limits or districts, shall, previously to such coals being so sent away, be carefully inspected and examined by one of the principal or labouring land coal meters within their respective limits or districts, in order that such principal or labouring land coal meter may see and be satisfied that such coals (in case of such coals being sent away in any cart, waggon, or other carriage) are of the sort or description mentioned in the ticket or tickets by this act directed to be delivered by or on the behalf of all and every vender and vendees of such coals to the purchaser or purchasers thereof, or may see and be satisfied that such coals (in case of such coals being to be delivered by gang labour) are of the sort or description as Coal meters not to be interested in the sale of coals.

Land coal meter may demand sight of ship certificate.
occupiers, is and are hereby required and directed to pay to the principal meter or meters for the time being of the land coal meter's office, within the limits of which any such wharf, warehouse, or other place shall be situate, at and after the rate of 1s. for every 5 chaldrons and one vat so bought and sent to the purchaser or purchasers thereof, as and for a compensation for the trouble of inspecting or superintending the loading and sending away such coals; and such money shall be repaid by the purchaser or purchasers of such coals to the vender or venders thereof."

Sect. 96. "That nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend so as to hinder or prevent any purchaser or purchasers of any coals sold as and for pool measure, from sending such coals to the premises of such purchaser or purchasers, or to any landing place which such purchaser or purchasers shall appoint (provided such landing place or premises be not a coal wharf or place where any meter shall by virtue of this act be stationed,) or from having such coals unloaded and delivered at such premises or landing place, either by gang labour, or in any other manner, except in or by means of any cart, waggon, or other land carriage, without the presence, intervention, or inspection of any land meter; and without being subject or liable to the payment of any sum or sums of money whatsoever to any land meter, for or in respect of such coal; but in case such coal shall require the care or attendance of a land meter, then he, she, or they shall have and be entitled to such attendance, upon sending notice of such his, her, or their desire to the land meter's office, within the limits of which such premises or landing place, where such coals may be so carried, shall be situate, and in such case such purchaser or purchasers shall pay and be charged for the attendance of such meter, at and after the aforesaid rate of one shilling for every five chaldrons and one vat of such coals."

Sect. 97. "That if any purchaser of any coals sold and sent to such purchaser by any lighter, barge, or other craft, from any place within the limits of any of the offices of the said respective land meters, shall think or suspect that the full and lawful measure of any such coals has not been sent, and shall before the lighterman or other person having the care or management of such lighter, barge, or other craft shall have delivered up to the purchaser, or to his, her, or their servant, such lighter, barge, or other craft, and quitted the charge thereof, and before bulk shall be broken of such coals, signify his or her desire to have such coals remeasured, then and in every such case the lighterman or other person sent with the lighter, barge, or craft, in which the said coals shall be brought, shall either continue at the landing place or premises of the purchaser of the said coals, with the said lighter, barge, or other craft, until such coals are remeasured, or shall leave such lighter, barge, or other craft properly fastened and made secure at such landing place or premises, or as near thereto as can be, and permit the same so to remain there until such coals are remeasured, under the penalty of ten pounds on the owner and proprietor, and forty shillings on the lighterman or other person sent with such lighter, barge, or other craft, and the said purchaser shall immediately send or cause to be sent to the vender of the said coals, or to his or her wharf, notice in writing that the said coals are going to be remeasured, and also send notice in writing thereof to any one of the offices of the said respective land coal meters aforesaid, and thereupon a principal meter, or one of the labouring meters, (not being the meter under whose inspection any such coals may have been originally loaded,) shall, within two hours next after such notice in writing left at the office of any such land coal meter, attend from such office where such notice shall be so left, to remeasure the said coals, and shall accordingly remeasure the same with the bushel measure, in presence of the vender and purchaser of the said coals, or their agents or servants, if any of them shall attend for the purpose of seeing such coals remeasured; and in case it shall appear upon the remeasurement of such coals by such principal or labouring coal meter as shall attend for the purpose of remeasuring such coals, that such coals do not amount to the quantity for which they were sold, then and in such case if such coals shall have been sold as and for pool measure, the vender of such lighter, barge, or other craft, or from any wharf, warehouse, or other place within the respective limits or districts of the said principal land coal meters respectively, and to be delivered to the purchaser or purchasers thereof, in any cart, waggon, or other carriage, shall, and he, she, and they is and are hereby required to deliver or cause to be delivered a ticket to the purchaser or purchasers of such coals, or his, her, or their servant or servants, before any part of the coals contained in such cart, waggon, or other carriage, shall be shot or delivered therefrom; and every such ticket or paper shall be in the words and form following; (that is to say),
II.

Coals, (London.)

"Mr. A. B. [here insert the name of the purchaser.]

"Take notice that you are to receive herewith [here insert the number] sacks of [here insert the name of the] coals, [here insert the number] sacks of [here insert the name of the] coals. For inspecting the loading and quality of which coals you are, on the receipt of this ticket, in conformity to an act of parliament made in the forty-seventh year of the reign of King George the Third, to pay the undersigned E. F. [here insert the name of the vender] the sum of [here insert the amount of the compensation directed by this act to be given to such principal meter or meters for the inspection of such coals, calculating the same as by this act directed], being at and after the rate of 1s. for every one childpns and one net sold to and to be received by you herewith; and by the same act this ticket is directed to be delivered to you before any of the coals are shot out of the cart or waggon; and that a bushel measure is in such cart or waggon, by which the carman is directed to measure, gratis, under the penalty of 10L the coals contained in any one sack which the purchaser or his servant or servants may require, which sack is to contain three bushels heaped up in the form of a cone, the height of such cone to be at least six inches, and the outside of the measure to be in the base of such cone; and that in case you be not satisfied with the coals now sent, you are entitled by the same act to have the same remeasured by the bushel measure, provided you immediately and before any more of the coals than one sack shall be shot or delivered from the cart, waggon, or carriage, in which the same are brought, send notice in writing of your desire to have the same remeasured, to any of the land coal meters offices, and also to the vender or venders of such coals. E. F. [here insert the name of the vender.] C. D. [here insert the name of the meter, and the office and place where the office is situated.]

Dated [here insert the day of the month and the month and year when such ticket was signed]."

"And in case any such vender or venders of, or dealer or dealers in coals, shall not deliver or cause to be delivered such ticket as aforesaid, and so counter-signed by a meter as aforesaid, to the purchaser or purchasers of such coals, or to his, her, or their servant or servants, before any part of such coals shall be shot or delivered from such cart, waggon, or other carriage laden with any such coals as aforesaid, then and in every such case every such vender or venders shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 10L; and in case the carman, driver of, or other person attending such cart, waggon, or other carriage, laden with any such coals as aforesaid, to whom such ticket shall have been given by or by the directions of the vender, in order to be delivered to the purchaser, shall (having so first received the same from the vender, or any person by the order of the vender) refuse or neglect to deliver such ticket to the purchaser or purchasers of such coals, or to his, her, or their servant or servants, before any part of such coals shall be shot or delivered from such cart, waggon, or other carriage, every such carman, driver, or other person aforesaid so offending, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 10L."

Sect. 95. "That the vender or venders of, or dealer or dealers in, any coals sold as and for pool measure, and sent in any cart, waggon, or other land carriage, from any wharf, warehouse, or other place within the respective limits or districts of the said respective land coal meters, or any coals sold as and for pool measure, and delivered by gang labour from or over any wharf or other place where any land meter shall be stationed, situate within any of such respective limits or districts, or the occupier or occupiers of any such wharf, warehouse, or other place, from or over which any such coals shall be so sent, shall, and such vender or venders, dealer or dealers, or occupier or
Coals and Coal Mines.

occupiers, is and are hereby required and directed to pay to the principal meter or meters for the time being of the land coal meter's office, within the limits of which any such wharf, warehouse, or other place shall be situated, at and after the rate of 1s. for every five chaldrons and one vat so bought and sent to the purchaser or purchasers thereof, as and for a compensation for the trouble of inspecting or superintending the loading and sending away such coals; and such money shall be repaid by the purchaser or purchasers of such coals to the vender or vendors thereof."

Sect. 96. "That nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend so as to hinder or prevent any purchaser or purchasers of any coals sold as and for pool measure, from sending such coals to the premises of such purchaser or purchasers, or to any landing place which such purchaser or purchasers shall appoint (provided such landing place or premises be not a coal wharf or place where any meter shall by virtue of this act be stationed,) or from having such coals unloaded and delivered at such premises or landing place, either by gang labour, or in any other manner, except in or by means of any cart, waggon, or other land carriage, without the presence, intervention, or inspection of any land meter; and without being subject or liable to the payment of any sum or sums of money whatsoever to any land meter, for or in respect of such coals; but in case such purchaser or purchasers shall require the care or attendance of a land meter, then he, she, or they shall have and be entitled to such attendance, upon sending notice of such his, her, or their desire to the land meter's office, within the limits of which such premises or landing place, where such coals may be so carried, shall be situate, and in such case such purchaser or purchasers shall pay and be charged for the attendance of such meter, and after the aforesaid rate of one shilling for every five chaldrons and one vat of such coals."

Sect. 97. "That if any purchaser of any coals sold and sent to such purchaser by any lighter, barge, or other craft, from any place within the limits of any of the offices of the said respective land meters, shall think or suspect that the full and lawful measure of any such coals has not been sent, and shall before the lighterman or other person having the care or management of such lighter, barge, or other craft shall have delivered up to the purchaser, or to his, her, or their servant, such lighter, barge, or other craft, and quitted the charge thereof, and before bulk shall be broken of such coals, signify his or her desire to have such coals remeasured, then and in every such case the lighterman or other person sent with the lighter, barge, or craft, in which the said coals shall be brought, shall either continue at the landing place or premises of the purchaser of the said coals, with the said lighter, barge, or other craft, until such coals are remeasured, or shall leave such lighter, barge, or other craft properly fastened and made secure at such landing place or premises, or as near thereto as can be, and permit the same so to remain there until such coals are remeasured, under the penalty of ten pounds on the owner and proprietor, and forty shillings on the lighterman or other person sent with such lighter, barge, or other craft, and the said purchaser shall immediately send or cause to be sent to the vender of the said coals, or to his or her wharf, notice in writing that the said coals are going to be remeasured, and also send notice in writing thereof to any one of the offices of the said respective land coal meters aforesaid, and thereupon a principal meter, or one of the labouring meters, (not being the meter under whose inspection any such coals may have been originally loaded,) shall, within two hours next after such notice in writing left at the office of any such land coal meter, attend from such office where such notice shall be so left, to remeasure the said coals, and shall accordingly remeasure the same with the bushel measure, in presence of the vender and purchaser of the said coals, or their agents or servants, if any of them shall attend for the purpose of seeing such coals remeasured; and in case it shall appear upon the remeasurement of such coals by such principal or labouring coal meter as shall attend for the purpose of remeasuring such coals, that such coals do not amount to the quantity for which they were sold, then and in such case if such coals shall have been sold as and for pool measure, the vender of such
Coals, (London.)

Sect. 98. "That the principal land coal meter or labouring coal meter so remeasuring shall be paid the sum of sixpence for every chaldron of coals so remeasured by him, and so in proportion for any greater or less quantity than a chaldron, and if upon any such remeasurement, the whole of the coals so remeasured shall be found less than the quantity for which the whole of such coals shall be sold, then and in such case the vender or venders of such coals shall, in case such deficiency shall amount to or exceed one bushel, pay the expenses of such re-admeasurement, but if such deficiency shall not amount to one bushel, then and in such case such expenses shall be paid and borne by the purchaser or purchasers of such coals."

Sect. 99. "That nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to require any coals sold as and for pool measure to be measured by the bushel measure previous to such coals being loaded and sent away in any cart, waggons, or other land carriage, from the vender's wharf or other place of sale, save and except in the desire of the purchaser of any such coals."

Sect. 100. "That all coals sold or loaded to be sold as and for wharf measure, in quantities exceeding eight bushels at or from any place or places within the limits of any of the said respective offices, shall be measured in the presence of one of the said labouring coal meters, (belonging to the office within the limits or district of which the place of sale of such coals shall be situate,) by the bushel measure heaped up as by this act is directed; and the said labouring coal meters shall and may, and he and they is and are hereby authorised and required to fill up any bushel or bushels of any such coals as shall appear to him or them deficient or wanting in measure out of the stock of coals of the person or persons so vending or contracting for the sale of the said coals, or so loading any such coals for sale."

Sect. 101. "That if any such labouring coal meter shall wittingly or willingly suffer any coals exceeding eight bushels, which shall be sold or loaded to be sold as and for wharf measure, to be sent from any wharf, warehouse, or other place within the limits or district of his office without such coals being measured in the manner herein directed, and shall not give information thereof to the principal land coal meters or coal meter under whom such labouring coal meter shall serve, within two days next after such coals shall have been measured, then and in every such case such labouring coal meter shall for ever thenceforth be rendered incapable of acting as a labouring coal meter, and forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding ten pounds."

Sect. 102. "That the sum of sixpence for every chaldron of coals which shall be sold and delivered as and for wharf measure, at any wharf, warehouse, or place within the limits or district of any of the offices of the said respective land coal meters, and so in proportion for any greater or less quantity than a chaldron, shall be paid by the occupier or occupiers of the wharf, warehouse, or place from which such coals are taken, or by the seller or vender of such coals, to the principal land coal meters or coal meter for the time being, of the office within the limits or district of which the wharf, warehouse, or other place of sale of such coals shall be situate, and thereupon such principal land coal meters or coal meter shall, and they and he is and are hereby required to deliver or cause to be delivered to every seller of such coals, or the carrier who shall cart, lead, drive, or carry away the same, a Coals and Coal Mines.

Dealers and carriers of coals shall use for carriage of coals within the limits aforesaid, and no others; and all makers of coal sacks shall make them of the aforesaid dimensions at the least; and that every dealer in and carrier of coals, who shall, from and after the first day of August, one thousand seven hundred and thirty, make use of any other sack or sacks for carriage of coals within the limits aforesaid, shall for every such sack he or they shall so make use of, forfeit and pay the sum of twenty shillings; and so much thereof as directs, ‘that from and after the first day of August, one thousand seven hundred and thirty, all dealers in and sellers of coals by the chaldron or lesser quantity, within the cities of London and Westminster, or within ten miles round the same, shall constantly keep and use, at their respective wharfs, warehouses, and other places for the sale of their coals, a lawful bushel, such as is described in and by an act made in the twelfth year of the reign of her late Majesty Queen Anne, intituled, ‘An Act for the speedy and effectual preserving the navigation of the river of Thames, by stopping the breach in the levels of Havering and Dagenham in the county of Essex, and for ascertaining the coal measure,’ with which bushel all such dealers in and sellers of coals shall justly measure, or cause all the coals they shall so sell by the chaldron or lesser quantity to be measured, and shall put three bushels of coals, so justly measured, into each sack before described, which said sacks they shall use, and no other, for the carriage of such coals to the buyers thereof; and that all such dealers in and sellers of coals within the said limits, who, from and after the first day of August, one thousand seven hundred and thirty, shall not constantly keep and use such a bushel and such sacks as hereinbefore described, and no other, or shall not so fill their coal sacks from such bushels, or shall otherwise offend against the true intent and meaning of this act, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of fifty pounds; and if any servant or servants of such dealer or dealers in coals shall, from and after the first day of August, one thousand seven hundred and thirty, fill such coals into sacks without first duly measuring the same by such bushel, such servant or servants shall for every such offence be committed to the house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding thirty days, nor less than fourteen days; and so much thereof as directs, ‘that all persons dealing in coals, and using coal bushels and smaller measures, shall, before they presume to use the same, have them fitted for work and use with iron or copper, and after they are so fitted shall carry them to the Guildhall, London, or to the Exchequer Office at Westminster, to be sealed or stamped by the proper officer there, with a steel instrument, on the uppermost iron or copper hoop and strap, which measures shall be by them respectively kept without any alteration, and so used at their respective places of sale of their coals, which places of sale are hereby declared to be the respective wharfs, warehouses, docks, sheds, cellars, or other repositories for the coals of such persons as are dealers therein; and that all persons dealing in coals, who shall, from and after the first day of August, one thousand seven hundred and thirty, ailer and make less any such bushel or other measure, or any of the sacks before mentioned, after the same have been sealed or marked as aforesaid, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of fifty pounds,’ shall be, and the same is and are hereby repealed and declared to be null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever.”

Sect. 107. “That no sack shall be made use of in the delivery of coals from any ship, vessel, lighter, barge, or other craft, or from any wharf, warehouse, or other place, within the said port of London, or within the said respective cities of London and Westminster, or the respective liberties thereof, or within such part or parts of the said respective counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Kent, and Essex, as is or are situate within the distance of twenty-five miles from the Royal Exchange, except such sack shall be made of linen, and shall have been first sealed and marked with white paint in oil, at Guildhall, London, or at the Exchequer Office, Westminster, by the proper officer there, and shall at the time of making use of such sack measure the inside thereof at least four feet and two inches in length by two feet and one and above the sixpence per chaldron herein allowed to be demanded and taken for the metage charges for coals measured by the bushel, or over and above the one shilling for every five chaldrons and one vat of coals sold by the pool measure for the inspection thereof, or over and above the sixpence for every ton of coals sold by weight; or if any such principal or labouring coal meter shall wilfully permit or suffer to be made false measure of any coal, or shall deliver a meter’s ticket for any quantity of coals, the whole of which he shall not have been measured, or shall countersign any vender’s ticket for any coals, without having inspected such coals, or without seeing and taking care that the whole of the coals contained, sold in, and to be delivered out of any particular room or rooms of any lighter, barge, or other craft, shall have been first completely emptied out of, and loaded from such particular room or rooms so sold, then and in every such case every such coal so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding ten pounds, and be rendered incapable of ever serving thereafter in the office of a coal meter.”

Sect. 105. “That if any quantity whatsoever of coals, exceeding eight bushels, sold or to be sold as and for wharf measure, shall be sent or driven in any cart, waggon, or other carriage, from any wharf, warehouse, or place, situate within the limits or district of any of the said respective officers, without having been measured by such bushel measure as is herein-after-directed, or without such meter’s ticket as aforesaid, so signed and countersigned as aforesaid, having been first obtained, or if such ticket as aforesaid shall not be delivered to the purchaser or purchasers of any such coals, before any part of such coals are shot or delivered upon the premises of such purchaser or purchasers, then and in every such case the vender or venders of such coals shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding ten pounds.”

Sect. 106. “And whereas it is expedient for the purposes of this act, that certain other parts of the said act, made in the third year of his late Majesty’s reign, should be also repealed, by reason that other directions and penalties are provided by this act, in respect of the masters mentioned in such parts of the said act so made in the third year of his late Majesty’s reign, be it therefore further enacted, that so much of the said act made in the third year of the reign of King George the Second, intituled, ‘An Act for the regulation of the coal trade,’ as (after reciting that by ancient custom in the port of London, one chaldron of coals is allowed into every score brought on board ship, and so in proportion for a greater or lesser quantity, which is called ingrain; notwithstanding which, many persons dealing in coals do load the same from on board ship bare measure, without the aforesaid ingrain, to the great injury of the consumer,) directs, 4 that all lightermen and other persons dealing in coals who shall, from and after the twenty-fourth day of June, one thousand seven hundred and thirty, sell to any person or persons any parcel or quantity of coals, as and for pool measure, videlicet, such measure as is usually given and allowed in the pool or river Thames, including the aforessaid ingrain, and shall not, justly and without fraud, deliver to such person or persons, buyers or consumers thereof, the full quantity of coals so sold and accordingly measured from on board ship to such lighterman or other dealer in coals, by the meter, together with the ingrain thereof, such lighterman or other dealer in coals shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of one hundred pounds;’ and so much thereof as directs, 4 that from and after the first day of August, one thousand seven hundred and thirty, all coals which shall be landed at any wharf, dock, or other landing place on the river Thames, or any creek or branch adjacent or near thereto, and which shall be carried to any place or places within the cities or suburbs of London or Westminster, or the bills of mortality, in any cart, carry, waggon, or other carriage of any denomination whatsoever, shall be carried to the respective buyers thereof in linen sacks, sealed and marked with white paint in oil, at Guildhall, London, or at the Exchequer Office, at Westminster, by the proper officer there, which sacks shall be full four feet and two inches in length, and six and twenty inches in breadth, after they shall be made; which sacks all Coals and Coal Mines.

dealers and carriers of coals shall use for carriage of coals within the limits aforesaid, and no others; and all makers of coal sacks shall make them of the aforesaid dimensions at the least; and that every dealer in and carrier of coals, who shall, from and after the first day of August, one thousand seven hundred and thirty, make use of any other sack or sacks for carriage of coals within the limits aforesaid, shall for every such sack be or they shall so make use of, forfeit and pay the sum of twenty shillings; and so much thereof as directs, 'that from and after the first day of August, one thousand seven hundred and thirty, all dealers in and sellers of coals by the chaldron or lesser quantity, within the cities of London and Westminster, or within ten miles round the same, shall constantly keep and use, at their respective wharfs, warehouses, and other places for the sale of their coals, a lawful bushel, such as is described in and by an act made in the twelfth year of the reign of her late Majesty Queen Anne, intituled, 'An Act for the speedy and effectual preserving the navigation of the river of Thames, by stopping the breach in the levels of Havering and Dagenham in the county of Essex, and for ascertaining the coal measure,' with which bushel all such dealers in and sellers of coals shall justly measure, or cause all the coals they shall so sell by the chaldron or lesser quantity to be measured, and shall put three bushels of coals, so justly measured, into each sack before described, which said sacks they shall use, and no other, for the carriage of such coals to the buyers thereof; and that all such dealers in and sellers of coals within the said limits, who, from and after the first day of August, one thousand seven hundred and thirty, shall not constantly keep and use such a bushel and such sacks as hereinafore described, and no other, or shall not so fill their coal sacks from such bushels, or shall otherwise offend against the true intent and meaning of this act, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of fifty pounds; and if any servant or servants of such dealer or dealers in coals shall, from and after the first day of August, one thousand seven hundred and thirty, fill such coals into sacks without first duly measuring the same by such bushel, such servant or servants shall for every such offence be committed to the house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding thirty days, nor less than fourteen days; and so much thereof as directs, 'that all persons dealing in coals, and using coal bushels and smaller measures, shall, before they presume to use the same, have them fitted for work and use with iron or copper, and after they are so fitted shall carry them to the Guildhall, London, or to the Exchequer Office at Westminster, to be sealed or stamped by the proper officer there, with a steel instrument, on the uppermost iron or copper hoop and strap, which measures shall be by them respectively kept without any alteration, and so used at their respective places of sale of their coals, which places of sale are hereby declared to be the respective wharfs, warehouses, docks, sheds, cellars, or other repositories for the coals of such persons as are dealers therein; and that all persons dealing in coals, who shall, from and after the first day of August, one thousand seven hundred and thirty, alter and make less any such bushel or other measure, or any of the sacks before mentioned, after the same have been sealed or marked as aforesaid, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of fifty pounds,' shall be, and the same is and are hereby repealed and declared to be null and void to all intents and purposes whatsoever.'

Sect. 107. "That no sack shall be made use of in the delivery of coals from any ship, vessel, lighter, barge, or other craft, or from any wharf, warehouse, or other place, within the said port of London, or within the said respective cities of London and Westminster, or the respective liberties thereof, or within such part or parts of the said respective counties of Middlesex, Surry, Kent, and Essex, as is or are situate within the distance of twenty-five miles from the Royal Exchange, except such sack shall be made of linen, and shall have been first sealed and marked with white paint in oil, at Guildhall, London, or at the Exchequer Office, Westminster, by the proper officer there, and shall at the time of making use of such sack measure the inside thereof at least four feet and two inches in length by two feet and one inch in breadth; and no sack shall be sealed or marked which shall not, at the time of the marking or sealing thereof, measure in the inside thereof four feet and four inches in length, and two feet and two inches in breadth; and if any vender or venders of, or dealer or dealers in, or carrier or carriers of coals, shall use or cause to be used any sack or sacks for delivering or carrying coals within the several and respective cities, liberties, and parts aforesaid, not sealed or marked as aforesaid, or of less length at the time of using the same than four feet and two inches at the least in the inside thereof, or of less breadth than two feet and one inch at the least in the inside thereof, then and in every such case every such vender of or dealer in, or carrier of coals, shall for every such sack so unmarked or deficient in length or breadth, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding forty shillings, nor less than twenty shillings; and the justice or justices before whom such conviction shall take place, shall cause every such sack found unmarked, or deficient either in length or breadth, to be destroyed: provided always, that the coals to be delivered by gang labour, may be conveyed without the use of such sacks; any thing herein contained to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

Sect. 108. "That if any labouring coal meter shall use, or knowingly permit or suffer any sack or sacks to be made use of for the measuring or carrying of coals, of less dimensions than the dimensions directed by this act, at any place or places within the limits of the office to which such meter shall belong, then and in every such case such labouring coal meter shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding five pounds."

Sect. 109. "That no bushel shall be kept or made use of, for or in the admeasurement of any coals sold within the said port of London, or within the said respective cities of London and Westminster, or the respective liberties thereof, or within such part or parts of the said respective counties of Middlesex, Surry, Kent, and Essex, as is or are situate within the distance of twenty-five miles from the Royal Exchange aforesaid, which shall not be such bushel as is described in and by an act made in the twelfth year of the reign of her late Majesty Queen Anne, intitled, 'An Act for the speedy and effectual preserving of the navigation of the river of Thames, by stopping the breach in the levels of Havering and Dagenham, in the county of Essex, and for ascertaining the coal measure,' and which shall not have been first stamped or marked by the proper officer at the Exchequer Office at Westminster, or at the Guildhall, London, previously to the same being so kept or used; and that every such bushel, previously to being so stamped or marked, shall be fitted for work and use with iron or copper hoops, and shall be so stamped or marked with a steel instrument on the uppermost iron or copper hoop; and that every such bushel shall be kept without any alteration or diminution; and that in making use of such bushel, all coals shall be duly heaped up in such bushel in the form of a cone, such cone to be of the height of at least six inches, and the outside of the bushel to be the extremity of the base of such cone; and that each and every chaldron of coals shall consist of thirty-six of such bushels so heaped, and so in proportion for any lesser quantity; and if any dealer or dealers in, or vender or venders of coals, within such limits as aforesaid, shall keep or make use of, or cause to be kept or made use of, any bushel in the admeasurement of any coals other than such bushel as aforesaid, and so stamp as aforesaid, or shall in anywise decrease or diminish any such bushel stamped as aforesaid, or shall permit his, her, or their servant or servants, or any person or persons whomssoever so to do, then and in every such case such dealer or dealers in, or vender or venders of coals, so offending, shall forfeit and pay for every such offence any sum not exceeding the sum of twenty pounds; and if any such servant or servants, or other person or persons acting by or under the authority of any dealer or dealers, or vender or venders, shall make use of, in admeasuring of any coals, any bushel other than such bushel as aforesaid, stamped as aforesaid, or if any such servant or servants, or any other person or persons whatsoever, shall in any manner decrease or diminish any such bushel stamp as aforesaid, then and in every such case such servant or servants, or such other person or persons respectively, for every such offence, shall be committed to the house of correction by any one or more justice or justices of the peace for the city, county, town, or place where such offence shall be committed, there to be kept to hard labour, for any time not exceeding three calendar months."

(p) The offence is complete in the county where the coals were put into the sack. Butterfield v. Windle, 4 East, 335.

(And see 5 Geo. IV. c. 74, s. 7, 8; and Clauses, &c. Vol. V.)

Sect. 110. "That all measures less than such bushel measure as aforesaid, which shall be used by any person or persons dealing in coals, within the said port of London, or within the said respective cities of London and Westminster, or the respective liberties thereof, or within such parts or parts of the respective counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Kent, and Essex, as is or are situate within the distance of twenty-five miles from the Royal Exchange aforesaid, shall be fitted for work and use with iron or copper, and shall previously to being used in the admeasurement of coals, be sealed or stampet at the Exchequer Office at Westminster, or at the Guildhall, London, by the proper officer, with a steel instrument, on the uppermost iron or copper hoop; and that all such measures so sealed or stampet shall be kept without any alteration, and so used by such dealers in or venders of coals, as shall sell any less quantity or quantities of coals than a bushel of coals; and if such person or persons shall diminish or make less any such less measure than the bushel, or shall make use of any means or device so as to prevent any such measure from holding or containing as much as it would otherwise hold or contain in case such means or device had not been practised, or shall use or cause to be used any such measure in the admeasurement of coals, not so sealed or stampet as aforesaid, then and in every such case every such person so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding ten pounds."

Sect. 111. "That if any vender or venders of, or dealer or dealers in any coals sold as and for wharf measure, shall be dissatisfied with the measurement which shall have been made of any such coals at any wharf, warehouse, or other place of sale, by or under the inspection of the labouring land coal meter stationed or attending at such wharf, warehouse, or other place, then and in every such case it shall and may be lawful to and for such vender or venders of, or dealer or dealers in coals, before such coals are sent away from such wharf, warehouse, or other place of sale, to send or cause to be sent to the office of the principal land meter, within the limits or district of which such wharf, warehouse, or other place of sale may be situate, notice in writing, signifying the desire of such vender or venders, or dealer or dealers in coals, to have such coals remeasured, and then and in such case such principal meter, or one of the labouring meters, of or from such office where such notice shall be sent (not being the meter under whose inspection the said coals were originally measured) shall, within the space of two hours next after such notice in writing left at such office, attend to remeasure the said coals, and shall accordingly remeasure the same, sack by sack, by the bushel measure, in the presence of such vender or venders of, or dealer or dealers in such coals, or his, her, or their agent or servant, or agents or servants, and for such remeasurement such vender or venders of, or dealer or dealers in coals, shall pay or cause to be paid to such principal coal meter, who shall send such Labouring meter, the sum of sixpence for every chaldron of coals so remeasured; and in case it shall appear upon such remeasurement, that the coals so remeasured shall exceed the quantity for which the same were sold, then and in such case, if such excess shall be equal or amount to, or exceed two bushels in any chaldron so remeasured, the meter who first measured such coals shall for every bushel so exceeding such quantity as aforesaid, forfeit and pay the sum of forty shillings, together with all the expenses of such remeasurement."

Sect. 112. "That if any carman, or driver of any cart, waggon, or other carriage, laden with coals for sale, or to be delivered to the purchaser or purchasers thereof, by any vendor or vendors of, or dealer or dealers in, or carrier or carriers of coals from any ship, lighter, barge, or other craft, or from any wharf, warehouse, or other place within the said port of London, or within the said respective cities of London and Westminster, or the respective liberties thereof, or within such part or parts of the respective counties of Middlesex, Kent, Surry, and Essex, as is or are situate within the distance of twenty-five miles from the Royal Exchange aforesaid, shall not have placed on some conspicuous part of his cart, waggon or carriage, a perfect bushel measure, of the form, size, or dimensions, and so stamped or marked as hereinbefore directed (which measure shall be provided by the vendor or vendors, dealer or dealers in, or carrier or carriers of such coals,) then and in every such case, every such carman or driver of such cart, waggon, or other carriage, not having such bushel measure so placed therein or thereon, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding ten pounds, and the vendor or vendors of, or dealer or dealers in, or carrier or carriers of such coals, shall forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding twenty pounds: provided always, that coals which shall be carried or conveyed in bulk, or in any cart, waggon, or other carriage, belonging to the purchaser or purchasers of such coals, may be so carried or conveyed without the carman being obliged to carry a bushel measure therewith, or any person or persons being subject or liable to any penalty or penalties in respect thereof, any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.
Coals, (London.)

Sect. 113. "That the vendor or vendors of or dealer or dealers in coals, sold and sent as and for wharf measure from any ship, vessel, lighter, barge, or other craft, or from any wharf, warehouse, or other place within the said port of London, or within the said respective cities of London or Westminster, or the respective liberties thereof, or within such part or parts of the said respective counties of Middlesex, Surry, Kent, or Essex, as is or are situate within the distance of twenty-five miles from the Royal Exchange, and to be delivered to the purchaser or purchasers thereof, from any cart, waggon, or other carriage, shall and he and they is and are required to deliver or cause to be delivered a printed ticket or paper, and such carman, driver, or other person shall and is required to deliver or cause to be delivered the same ticket so received from such vendor to the purchaser or purchasers of such coals, or to his, her, or their servant or servants, before any part of the coals contained in such cart, waggon, or other carriage, shall be shot or delivered therefrom; and every such ticket or paper shall be in the words and form following:

"VENDOR'S TICKET.

"Mr. A. B. [here insert the name of the buyer.]

"TAKE notice, that you are to receive herewith [here insert the number] sacks of [here insert the name of the] coals [here insert the number] sacks of [here insert the name of the] coals; and that by an act made in the forty-seventh year of the reign of King George the Third, the carman is directed to deliver this ticket before he shoots any of the coals out of his cart or waggon; and that a bushel measure is in such cart or waggon, by which the carman is directed to measure, gratis, (under the penalty of 20l.) the coals contained in any one sack which the purchaser or his servant may require, which sack is to contain three bushels heaped up in the form of a cone, the outside of the measure being the extremity of the base thereof. C. D. [here insert the name of the vender.] E. F. [here insert the name of the labouring meter in case of the coals being sent from within either of the districts of the said respective offices.] Dated [here insert the day of the month and year when such ticket was signed]."

"And in case any such vendor or vendors shall not deliver or cause to be delivered such ticket as aforesaid, to the purchaser or purchasers of such coals, or to his, her, or their servant or servants, before any part of such coals shall be shot or delivered from such cart, waggon, or other carriage, every such vendor or venders shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding twenty pounds: provided always, in that case, that the said ticket shall be produced before the justice of the peace, or other officer of the said county, or the said city, for the recovery of the penalty aforesaid.

Vol. I.
ther, it shall appear to such meter as aforesaid that the coals thus remeasured do not amount to the quantity for which they were sold, then if such last-mentioned coals shall have been sold as and for wharf measure, the vender or venders of such coals shall forfeit and pay for every bushel of coals found deficient the sum of 5l., and also forfeit every chaldron of coals so found deficient or wanting in measure to and for the use of the poor of the parish where such coals shall be so remeasured, and the labouring meter under whose inspection the coals were first measured shall for every bushel so deficient forfeit and pay the sum of 20s., and the coal porters who shall have first measured such coals for the vender or venders thereof, shall for every bushel of coals so wanting forfeit and pay the sum of two shillings and sixpence; but if any such coals so remeasured in the manner last mentioned, and so found to amount to less than the quantity for which the same were sold, shall have been sold as and for pool measure, then the vender or venders of such coals shall in case such deficiency shall exceed four bushels and not exceed ten bushels in any five chaldrons and one vat so remeasured, forfeit and pay for every bushel of coals so found deficient in every such five chaldrons and one vat the sum of 40s.; and in case such deficiency shall exceed ten bushels in any five chaldrons and one vat so remeasured, then and in such case such vender or venders of such coals shall forfeit and pay for every such bushel so deficient in every such five chaldrons and one vat the sum of 5l.; provided nevertheless, that no such coals so sold and sent shall be remeasured, so as to ascertain the whole quantity of such coals taken together, after more than one sack of such coals shall have been shot or delivered from such cart, waggon, or other carriage, into or upon the premises of such purchaser or purchasers, any thing hereinbefore contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 118. "That if upon such remeasurement of any coals sold and sent as and for pool measure by any waggon, cart, or other land carriage, and which remeasurement shall have been made in such manner as to ascertain the whole quantity of such coals contained in all the sacks taken together, the coals so remeasured shall be found to be less or more than at the rate of three bushels for each sack, according to the number of sacks specified in the vender's ticket of such coals, then the meter who countersigned such vender's ticket of such coals shall in case such deficiency or excess shall exceed four bushels in any five chaldrons and one vat of such coals so remeasured, forfeit and pay for every such bushel so exceeding or so deficient in every such five chaldrons and one vat the sum of 20s."

Sect. 119. "That if upon any such remeasurement which shall be so made as to ascertain the whole quantity contained in all the sacks taken together, of any such coals sold and sent as and for wharf or pool measure, the whole of such coals so remeasured shall be found less than the quantity for which the whole of such coals shall be sold, then the vender or venders of such coals shall, in case such deficiency shall amount to one bushel, repay to the purchaser or purchasers of such coals the expenses of such remeasurement; but if such deficiency shall not amount to one bushel, then such expenses shall be paid and borne by the purchaser or purchasers of such coals; and if upon any such remeasurement which shall be made so as to ascertain the quantity contained in each and every of the particular sacks sent of any coals sold as and for wharf or pool measure, it shall be found that one-fourth part or more of the number of the sacks of such coals sold and sent to the purchaser or purchasers thereof do not contain the quantity of three bushels each respectively, then the vender or venders of such coals shall repay to the purchaser or purchasers of such coals the expenses of the remeasurement thereof; but if the number of such particular sacks so found deficient shall not amount to one-fourth part of the whole number of the sacks of such coals so sold and sent, then and in such case such expenses shall be paid and borne by the purchaser or purchasers of such coals."

Sect. 120. "That after any such notice as by this act directed shall have been given by or on the behalf of any purchaser or purchasers at any of the said respective land meter's offices, requiring the attendance of any meter from any such offices for the purpose of remeasuring any coals sold either for other person attending such cart, waggon, or other carriage, his, her, or their desire to have the coals contained in such cart, waggon, or other carriage, or any part of such coals remeasured, then and in every such case the carman or driver of such cart, waggon, or other carriage in which such coals shall be brought, shall and he is hereby required to continue and remain at the house, lodging, or other premises of the purchaser or purchasers of such coals with such coals, and the cart, waggon, or other carriage, until such coals are remeasured; and if any such carman or driver shall drive away or permit or suffer to be driven away such cart, waggon, or other carriage, before the coals contained therein shall be remeasured without the consent of the purchaser or purchasers thereof, or his, her, or their servant or servants, then and in every such case such carman or driver shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 10l."

Sect. 117. "That such purchaser or purchasers, or his, her, or their servant or servants, so desiring such coals contained in such cart, waggon, or other carriage, to be remeasured, shall and he, she, or they is and are hereby required to send or cause to be sent to the vender or venders of the said coals, or to his, her, or their wharf, warehouse, or place of abode, notice in writing that the said coals are to be remeasured, and such purchaser or purchasers, or his, her, or their servant or servants, shall and he, she, or they is and are hereby required forthwith to send notice in writing to any one of the offices of the said respective land coal meters of his, her, or their desire to have such coals remeasured, and thereupon a principal meter or one of the labouring meters (not being the meter under whose inspection the said coals were originally measured) shall within the space of two hours next after such notice in writing left at the office of any such principal coal meter aforesaid, attend from such office where such notice shall be so left at the house, lodging, or other premises of such purchaser or purchasers, as shall be expressed in such notice for the purpose of remeasuring the said coals, and shall accordingly remeasure the same in the presence of the vender or venders and purchaser or purchasers of the said coals, or of his, her, or their agent or servant, agents or servants, if they or any of them shall attend to see the same remeasured; and in case such vender or venders, or purchaser or purchasers, or his, her, or their agent or servant, agents or servants, shall not attend for the purpose of seeing such coals so remeasured, then such meter shall proceed in the remeasuring of such coals in his, her, or their absence; and such meter shall and he is hereby required, at the option of the purchaser or purchasers of such coals, to remeasure such coals either by the abstract sacks so as to ascertain the contents of each particular sack of such coals which shall contain in such cart, waggon, or other carriage, or else to remeasure such coals in such manner, and so as to ascertain the whole quantity of such coals contained in all the sacks taken together; and in case the purchaser or purchasers of such coals shall not either before or immediately upon the arrival of such meter signify or cause to be signified to such meter his or their option or desire as to which of the said two ways he or they would wish such remeasurement to be taken or made in, then and in every such case such meter shall proceed to remeasure such coals in such manner, and so as to ascertain the whole quantity of such coals contained in all the sacks taken together; and for such remeasurement such purchaser or purchasers shall pay or cause to be paid to the principal coal meter or coal meters, of or from the office to which notice shall have been sent as aforesaid, sixpence for every chaldron of coals so remeasured; and in case upon the remeasurement of any such coals which shall be so remeasured as to ascertain the contents of each particular sack thereof, it shall appear to the meter so remeasuring the same that any sack or sacks of such coals shall not contain three bushels, then and in every such case the vender or venders of such coals shall for every sack of coals that shall be so found deficient on such remeasurement forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 40s., and in case upon the remeasurement of any such coals as aforesaid, which shall be remeasured in such manner as to ascertain the whole quantity of such coals contained in all the sacks wherein the same shall have been sent taken toge-Coals and Coal Mines.

LONDON.

47 Geo. 3, c. lxviii.

Vender's ticket to be sent with coals sold by weight.

Mr. A. B. [here insert the name of the buyer.]

"TAKE notice, that you are to receive herewith [here insert the number] tons [here insert the name of the] coals: for inspecting which coals you are, in conformity to an act of parliament made in the forty-seventh year of the reign of King George the Third, to repay me, the undersigned [here insert the name of the seller] the sum of [here insert the amount of the inspection charge] being at or after the rate of sixpence for every ton of coals sold to, and to be received by you herewith.

(Signed) C. D. [here insert the name of the seller.]

(Countersigned) E. F. [here insert the name of the meter.]

"And in case any such vender or venders do not deliver or cause to be delivered such ticket as aforesaid, and so countersigned by a meter as aforesaid, to the purchaser or purchasers of such coals, or to his, her, or their servant or servants, before any part of such coals are unloaded, every such vender shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding twenty pounds; and in case the carman, driver of, or other person attending any such cart, waggon, or other carriage laden with any such coals, to whom any such ticket shall have been given, by or by the orders of the vender, in order to be delivered to the purchaser, shall (having so first received the same from the vender, or any person by the directions of the vender) refuse or neglect to deliver such ticket to the purchaser or purchasers of such coals, or to his, her, or their servant or servants, before any part of such coals shall be unloaded, such carman, driver, or other person so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding twenty pounds."

Sect. 124. "That all coals whatsoever sold within any of the said several and respective limits of this act, save and except only such coals as shall be sold by weight in manner aforesaid, shall be sold either by the chaldron, such chaldron to consist of thirty-six of such bushels so heaped up as aforesaid, or by the sack, each sack containing three such bushels so heaped up as aforesaid, or else by such bushel as aforesaid, or by the half bushel, peck, or half peck: provided such smaller measure shall be some aliquot part of such bushel measure; any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 125. "That all and every the principal meter and meters for the time being for the said city of London and the liberties thereof, and between Tower Dock and Limehouse Hole, in the county of Middlesex, shall, and each and every of such principal meter or meters for such district is and are respectively hereby directed and required to produce and deliver in, once or oftener in every month, before the lord mayor, aldermen, and commons of the said city of London, in common council assembled, or before such persons as the said mayor, aldermen, and commons shall for that purpose appoint, a full, true, and accurate account or accounts, in writing, verified by affidavit, of all and every the sum and sums of money which shall from time to time, by virtue of this act, be received by such principal meter or meters for such district, for any metage, inspection, or remeasurement of any coals which shall be measured, remeasured, or inspected by any such principal meter or meters, or by any labouring meter or meters within such district; and every such account so directed to be produced as aforesaid shall, previously to the production thereof, be verified upon oath by such principal meter or meters for wharf or pool measure, then and in every such case the principal meters or meter for the time being at any of such respective offices or office where such notice shall have been given or sent, is and are hereby authorised and required to send a labouring meter or meters from their respective offices or office for the purpose of making the remeasurement, and such respective labouring meters or labouring meter shall and are and is hereby authorised and required to remeasure any such coals which they shall be so sent to re-measure, whether the purchaser or purchasers of such coals shall or not be desirous of having such remeasurement proceeded in, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding; and if any such principal meters or meter, after having received any such notice as aforesaid, shall neglect or refuse within the space of two hours after the receipt of such notice to send a labouring meter or meters to the house, lodging, or other premises of such purchaser or purchasers accordingly, or if any labouring land coal meter or meters shall refuse or neglect to remeasure such coals, then and in every such case every such principal land coal meter or meters and labouring land coal meter or meters so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 5l.; and if any such purchaser or purchasers, or any other person or persons, shall prevent, obstruct, or interrupt, or attempt to prevent any such remeasurement being proceeded in and made by any such labouring land coal meter or meters so sent by any such principal land coal meter or meters in consequence of any such notice, then and in every such case every such purchaser or purchasers, or other person or persons so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 10l."
II.] Coals, (London.)

Sect. 121. "That when and as often as any cart, waggon, or other car-rriage shall be stopped or detained for the purpose, or under pretence of re-measuring the coals or any part laden thereon, the owner of every such cart, waggon, or other carriage shall be entitled to the sum of three shillings per hour for every hour the cart shall be so detained, and so in proportion for any fraction of an hour, over and above the usual cartage of such coals; which three shillings per hour shall be paid by the vender of the said coals, in case the same, or any part thereof, shall upon the remeasurement thereof, be found deficient in measure, or by the purchaser of such coals, in case the same shall not be remeasured, or shall upon such remeasurement be found to amount to the quantity for which such coals were sold."

Sect. 122. "That all coals which shall be sold by weight at any wharf, warehouse, or other place, within any of the respective limits or districts of any of the said respective offices of the said respective land coal meters, and to be sent in any cart, waggon, or other carriage, to the purchaser or purchasers thereof, shall be sold or weighed by the hundred weight, each hundred weight consisting of one hundred and twelve pounds avoirdupois weight, and twenty such hundred weight shall be and be deemed and taken to be one ton; and all such coals so to be sold shall be weighed and loaded at such wharf, warehouse, or other place of sale, in the presence of one of the labouring land meters, from the office, within the limits or district of which such wharf, warehouse, or other place of sale shall be situate, and such labouring meter is hereby authorised and required to superintend and inspect the weighing and loading of all such coals so sold by weight, in order that such meter may see and be satisfied that in every such loading the full weight of coals is actually given, which shall be expressed in the vender's ticket; and such meter may refuse to countersign the vender's ticket of any such coals, in case such meter shall not see that the full and proper weight shall be given according to the quantity which shall be expressed in such vender's ticket, but such meter shall and he is hereby required to countersign the same, in case the proper weight shall be given according to such quantity of coals expressed in such vender's ticket; and for such inspection of such coals so sold by weight, there shall be paid by the vender or venders thereof, or by the occupier or occupiers of the wharf, warehouse, or other place from whence such coals shall be sent, to the principal land coal meter or meters for the time being, within the limits or district of whose office such wharf, ware-

Carman to be paid 3s. per hour when stopped for having coals remeasured.

Regulation as to coals sold by weight.
house, or other place from which such coals sold by weight shall be sent may be situate, sixpence for every ton of coals so weighed under the meter's inspection, and so in proportion for any greater or less quantity than a ton, and such sum of money shall be repaid to such vendor or vendors by the purchaser or purchasers of such coals."

Sect. 123. "That the vendor or venders of, or dealer or dealers in such coals so sold by weight, within the limits or district of any of the officers of the said respective land meters, shall deliver or cause to be delivered to the purchaser or purchasers thereof, or to his, her, or their servant or servants, immediately on the arrival of the cart, waggon, or other carriage in which such coals shall be sent, and before any such coals shall be unloaded, a paper or ticket in the form following; that is to say,

"Mr. A. B. [here insert the name of the buyer.]

"Take notice, that you are to receive herewith [here insert the number] tons [here insert the name of the] coals: for inspecting which coals you are, in conformity to an act of parliament made in the forty-seventh year of the reign of King George the Third, to repay me, the undersigned [here insert the name of the seller] the sum of [here insert the amount of the inspection charge] being at and after the rate of sixpence for every ton of coals sold to, and to be received by you herewith.

[Signed] C. D. [here insert the name of the seller.]

(Countersigned) E. F. [here insert the name of the meter.]

"And in case any such vendor or venders do not deliver or cause to be delivered such ticket as aforesaid, and so countersigned by a meter as aforesaid, to the purchaser or purchasers of such coals, or to his, her, or their servant or servants, before any part of such coals are unloaded, every such vendor shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding twenty pounds; and in case the carman, driver of, or other person attending any such cart, waggon, or other carriage laden with any such coals, to whom any such ticket shall have been given, by or by the orders of the vendor, in order to be delivered to the purchaser, shall (having so first received the same from the vendor, or any person by the directions of the vendor) refuse or neglect to deliver such ticket to the purchaser or purchasers of such coals, or to his, her, or their servant or servants, before any part of such coals shall be unloaded, such carman, driver, or other person so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding twenty pounds."

Sect. 124. "That all coals whatsoever sold within any of the said several and respective limits of this act, save and except only such coals as shall be sold by weight in manner aforesaid, shall be sold either by the chaldron, such chaldron to consist of thirty-six of such bushels so heaped up as aforesaid, or by the sack, each sack containing three such bushels so heaped up as aforesaid, or else by such bushel as aforesaid, or by the half bushel, peck, or half peck: provided such smaller measure shall be some aliquot part of such bushel measure; any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 125. "That all and every the principal meter and meters for the time being for the said city of London and the liberties thereof, and between Tower Dock and Limehouse Hole, in the county of Middlesex, shall, and each and every of such principal meter or meters for such district is and are respectively hereby directed and required to produce and deliver in, once or oftener in every month, before the lord mayor, aldermen, and commons of the said city of London, in common council assembled, or before such persons as the said mayor, aldermen, and commons shall for that purpose appoint, a full, true, and accurate account or accounts, in writing, verified by affidavit, of all and every the sum and sums of money which shall from time to time, by virtue of this act, be received by such principal meter or meters for such district, for any metage, inspection, or remeasurement of any coals which shall be measured, remeasured, or inspected by any such principal meter or meters, or by any labouring meter or meters within such district; and every such account so directed to be produced as aforesaid shall, previously to the production thereof, be verified upon oath by such principal meter or meters for such district, before the said lord mayor, or any of the aldermen of the said city of London, and which oath any such magistrate is hereby authorized to administer; and every such principal meter or meters for such district shall, and he and they is and are hereby also directed and required, once or oftener in every month, to pay into the chamber of the said city of London all and every such sum and sums of money which shall be so from time to time, by virtue of this act, received by such principal meter or meters for any such metage, inspection, or remeasurement of any coals within such district, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding; and if any such principal meter for such district shall not, once or oftener in every month, produce and deliver in before such persons as aforesaid, such account so verified as aforesaid, or shall not, once or oftener in every month, pay into the chamber of the said city of London all and every such sum or sums of money as shall be so from time to time, by virtue of this act, received by such principal meter for any such metage, inspection, or remeasurement of any such coals as aforesaid, then and in every such case every such principal meter shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding twenty pounds."

Sect. 126. "That out of the monies which shall be so from time to time paid into the said chamber of the said city of London, by such respective principal meters for the said city of London and liberties thereof, and between Tower Dock and Limehouse Hole, in the county of Middlesex, it shall and may be lawful to and for the said lord mayor, aldermen, and commons of the said city of London in common council assembled, and the said mayor, aldermen, and commons, are hereby directed and required, from time to time, to pay or cause to be paid such yearly or other salary, or respective salaries, to each and every of such principal land coal meter or principal land coal meters, for the time being, for the said city of London and the liberties thereof, and between Tower Dock and Limehouse Hole, in the said county of Middlesex, as they the said mayor, aldermen, and commons, in common council assembled, shall from time to time think reasonable; and it shall and may also be lawful to and for the said mayor, aldermen, and commons, and the said mayor, aldermen, and commons, are hereby also directed and required, out of such monies which shall be so from time to time paid into the chamber of the said city, to pay or cause to be paid such weekly wages to each and every of the labouring land coal meters for the said city of London and the liberties thereof, and between Tower Dock and Limehouse Hole, in the said county of Middlesex, as the said mayor, aldermen, and commons, in common council assembled, shall from time to time think proper to appoint: provided nevertheless, that such weekly wages so to be appointed for such labouring land coal meters shall not at any time be less than twenty shillings per week for each and every of such labouring meters: and it shall and may also be lawful to and for the said mayor, aldermen, and commons, in common council assembled, and they are hereby also directed and required to pay, or cause to be paid out of such monies which shall be so from time to time paid into the chamber of the said city by such respective principal meters for such district, the costs, charges, and expenses of maintaining, supporting, and repairing the said land coal meter's office for the city of London, and between the Tower of London and Limehouse Hole, in the county of Middlesex; and such yearly or other salary, or respective salaries, as the said mayor, aldermen, and commons, in common council assembled, shall think reasonable to be paid to each and every of such clerk and clerks, as the said mayor, aldermen, and commons, in common council assembled, shall think proper or necessary to employ in such office, and the costs, charges, and expenses of coals, candles, and furniture for such land coal meter's office, and all such other house expenses, relating to such office, as to the said mayor, aldermen, and commons, in common council assembled, shall seem reasonable and proper: and in case and when and as the aforesaid monies, which shall be so from time to time paid into the chamber of the said city of London by such respective principal meters for such district, shall be more than sufficient for maintaining, repairing, and supporting the said land coal meter's office for the said city of London and the liberties thereof, and between the Tower before the mixing thereof, to a quantity not exceeding five chaldrons, whose measure, then and in every such case such vendor or dealer so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 2Zl."
Coals and Coal Mines.

Sect. 131. "That nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, as to hinder or prevent any such vendor or vendee of, or dealer or dealers in coals, within any of the several and respective limits of this act, from laying or storing up for sale in any warehouse or repository, or other convenient place, any quantities whatsoever of coals, of as many different sorts, names, or descriptions, as he, she, or they shall respectively think fit, provided such different sorts, names, or descriptions of coals be respectively laid and kept in such warehouse or other repository in separate and distinct parcels, and wholly unmixed, and provided no such coals be sold by any other than by weight, measure, or without the true name or names of every or any of such sorts of such coals as shall be sold and sent from any such warehouse or other repository being expressed in the vendor's ticket to be sent therewith to any purchaser or purveyor; and if any such vendor or vendee, or dealer or dealers in coals, shall sell or cause to be sold, by any other than by weight, measure, any coals out of any such warehouse or other repository, in which two or more different sorts of coals may be as stored or deposited, or shall not insert, or cause to be inserted, in the vendor's ticket to be sent with such coals, the true name or names of each and every sort of such coals as shall be sent from or out of any such warehouse, repository, or other place, to any purchaser or purveyor, then and in every such case, every such vendor or dealer so offending, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 50l."

Sect. 132. "That nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, so as to hinder or prevent any vendor or vendee, or dealer or dealers in coals, within the several and respective limits of this act, who shall keep any coal shed, shop, or warehouse, where coals shall be sold in quantities not greater than half a chaldron, and where no coals shall ever be sold in any quantities exceeding half a chaldron, from mixing or heaping up together, or causing to be mixed or heaped together, in such shed, shop, or warehouse, any quantity or quantities whatsoever of any and as many different sorts, names, or descriptions of coals, as he, she, or they shall respectively think fit, or from selling or causing to be sold such coals when so mixed: provided nevertheless, that such coals when so mixed shall be sold as and for and by the name of 'mixed coals,' and shall not be sold in any quantities exceeding half a chaldron, nor shall be sold at any other place than at the shop, shed, or warehouse, where the same shall have been so mixed."

Sect. 133. "That nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, so as to hinder or prevent any vendor or vendee, or dealer or dealers in coals, within the said several and respective limits of this act from selling or causing to be sold any mixed coals whatsoever, which shall have been mixed on or before the 1st day of September next, and nevertheless, that such coals shall be sold as and for and shall be described in the vendor's ticket to be sent therewith, as and for and by the name of 'warehouse coals.'"

Sect. 134. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for the court of lord mayor and aldermen of the city of London, from time to time, to make, ordain, and establish such orders, rules, and bye-laws, and from time to time to amend, alter, or repeal the same, or any of them, for the regulating, governing, and managing the said market, and all erections, buildings, works, matters, and things thereunto belonging, and also for the regulating of all officers to be employed in such market, and all other persons coming thereto, or transection any business therein, as to the said court of lord mayor and aldermen shall seem just and reasonable; and also from time to time, as occasion shall require, to repeal, amend, and alter such rules, orders, and bye-laws, and also to fix and appoint certain reasonable penalties or forfeitures for the non-observance or non-performance, or other breach of any such rules, order, or bye-law, not exceeding the sum of 5l. for any one offence; and all such penalties and forfeitures shall and may be recovered by such ways and the name of any or either of such three respective sorts of which such coals so sold shall be mixed or compounded.
Coals, (London.)

Sect. 129. "That when the coals laden on board any lighter or lighters, barge or barges, or other craft or crafts, lying at or near any wharf or wharfs, or other place or places, within the said port of London, shall be so reduced in quantity as that the whole of the coals contained in each and every one such lighter, barge, or craft, shall not exceed five chaldrons, wharf measure, it shall and may be lawful to and for any vender or vendors of, or dealer or dealers in coals, within the said port of London, or within the said respective cities of London and Westminster, or the respective liberties thereof, or within such part or parts of the respective counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Kent, and Essex, as is or are situate within the distance of twenty-five miles from the Royal Exchange aforesaid, to mix and lay up, or cause to be mixed and laid up, from time to time, in one heap or parcel, in any warehouse, repository, or other convenient place, all or any of such remaining parcels or clearings of coals, out of each and every or any of such lighter or lighters, barge or barges, or other craft or crafts; but no such remaining quantities of coals, when so mixed or heaped up together, or any part or parts thereof, shall, after the mixing thereof, be sold or sent to any purchaser or purchasers, unless such coals be sold by wharf measure, nor unless such coals be sold, and be described in the vender's ticket to accompany the same, as and for and by the name of 'coals of different sorts mixed,' and if any such vender or venders of, or dealer or dealers in coals, shall mix or lay up in any warehouse or other repository, any two or more remaining quantities or clearings of coals out of any such lighters, barges, or other craft, any or either of which remaining quantities or clearings shall exceed five chaldrons wharf measure; or if any such vender or venders of, or dealer or dealers in coals, shall sell or cause to be sold or sent to any purchaser or purchasers, any such remaining coals so mixed and cleared out of any such lighters, barges, or other craft, or any part or parts of such mixed remainders of coals, by, or as, or for any other measure than wharf measure, or without such coals so sold or sent being sold, and also described in the vender's ticket to accompany the same, as and for and by the name of 'coals of different sorts mixed,' then and in every such case every such vender or dealer so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 50s."

Sect. 130. "That no such vender or venders of, or dealer or dealers in coals, within the said port of London, or within the said respective cities of London and Westminster, or the respective liberties thereof, or within such part or parts of the respective counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Kent, and Essex, as is or are situate within the distance of twenty-five miles from the Royal Exchange aforesaid, shall mix or cause to be mixed for sale, or shall knowingly sell, or cause to be sold when mixed, any coals whatsoever of two or more different sorts, names, or descriptions, unless such coals of such two or more different sorts, names, or descriptions shall consist either wholly of Wall's End, Temple's Wall's End, Hebburn Main, Heaton Main, Biggs Main, South Hebburn, Willington, Killingworth, and Percy Main coals, or wholly of some two or more of such nine sorts of coals, or wholly of Blythe, Hartley, and Coupen Main coals aforesaid, or wholly of any two of such three sorts of coals, or otherwise wholly of coals which shall have been cleared out of any such lighters, barges, or other craft, whose respective loadings shall have been each reduced, before the mixing thereof, to a quantity not exceeding five chaldrons, wharf measure; and if any such vender or dealer shall mix or cause to be mixed for sale, or shall knowingly sell, or cause to be sold when mixed, any coals whatsoever of two or more different sorts, names, or descriptions, which coals, when so mixed, shall not consist either entirely of Wall's End, Temple's Wall's End, Hebburn Main, Heaton Main, Biggs Main, South Hebburn, Willington, Killingworth, and Percy Main coals, or entirely of some two or more of such nine sorts of coals, or entirely of Blythe, Hartley, and Coupen Main coals, or entirely of some two of such three sorts of coals, or entirely of coals that shall have been cleared out of any such lighters, barges, or other craft, whose respective loadings shall have been each reduced,
Coals and Coal Mines.

Securities to be entered in a book.

The chamberlain to keep the books provided under 43 & 44 Geo. 3.

Chamberlain to keep accounts of duty on coals, cinders, and culm.

City to lay accounts before parliament.

Chamberlain to keep account of the metage monies.
means as any other penalties or forfeitures may be recovered by virtue of this act: provided always, that no such rule, order, or bye-law, be repugnant to or inconsistent with the laws of that part of the United Kingdom called England, or contrary to the directions and provisions in this act contained."

Sect. 185. "That no such order, rule, or bye-law, shall be good, valid, or effectual, nor shall any such order, rule, or bye-law, be amended, altered, or repealed, save and except such order, rule, or bye-law, or any amendment, alteration, or repeal of any such order, rule, or bye-law, shall have been submitted to, and allowed and approved of, from time to time, by the lord high chancellor of Great Britain, the lord keeper or lords commissioners of the great seal, the lord chief justice and the rest of the justices of the Court of King's Bench, the lord chief justice and the rest of the justices of the Court of Common Pleas, and the lord chief baron and the rest of the barons of the Court of Exchequer for the time being, or any one or more of them, who are and is hereby empowered and required, on request from time to time to them or him made by or on behalf of the said court of lord mayor and aldermen, to peruse and examine all such orders, rules, or bye-laws, as shall from time to time be made, amended, altered, or repealed, by the said court of lord mayor and aldermen, in pursuance of this act, and laid before them or him the said lord high chancellor, lord keeper or lords commissioners of the great seal, the lord chief justice and the rest of the justices of the Court of King's Bench, the lord chief justice and the rest of the justices of the Court of Common Pleas, and the lord chief baron and the rest of the barons of the Court of Exchequer for the time being, or any one or more of them, and to alter and amend all such orders, rules, and bye-laws, or any of them, and to allow and approve of, or disallow and disapprove of the same, or any part thereof, or to allow and approve of, or to disallow or disapprove of the repeal of the whole or any part thereof, as to them or him shall from time to time seem proper and expedient, and for doing thereof no fee or reward shall be paid or taken."

Sect. 186. "That all such rules, orders, and bye-laws, so to be from time to time made, altered, amended, or repealed, by the said court of lord mayor and aldermen, shall be printed, and such rules, orders, and bye-laws, and the several alterations and amendments made therein, and the repeal thereof respectively, shall also be made public in such other manner as the said court of lord mayor and aldermen shall think proper, and shall from time to time order and direct."

Sect. 187. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for the said mayor, aldermen, and commons, in common council assembled, from time to time to appoint one or more committees or committees to manage and transact all or any of the matters or purposes, which they the said mayor, aldermen, and commons, in common council assembled, are hereby authorised and required to do, execute, or perform, which committees or committees so to be appointed shall have such or so much of the powers and authorities by this act given to the said mayor, aldermen, and commons, in common council assembled, shall think fit or proper to delegate to such committees or committees."

Sect. 188. "That if any person, being a member of any such committee, shall be directly or indirectly interested or concerned in any contract which shall be made or entered into by or on behalf of such committee, for or concerning any of the works to be performed or done in pursuance of this act, or for or concerning any materials to be used or employed therein, every such contract shall be void, and the person who, being a member of such committee, shall be so interested or concerned, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of 100l., to any person or persons who shall sue for the same."

Sect. 189. "That the committee or committees so to be appointed shall and may, and they are hereby authorised and empowered, from time to time, to employ any fit person or persons, whether free of the city or not, in or about any of the works, matters, or things, which they shall cause to be performed or done by virtue or in pursuance of this act, and to contract for the doing and performance of such works, matters, and things, or any of them, with Mayor, &c. to appoint committees.

Persons interested not eligible.

Non-freemen may be employed.
any person or persons, in such manner as the said committee or committees shall think fit; and that no person or persons who shall be so employed or contracted with, in, or about, or for any of the purposes of this act, nor any person or persons to be set to work by or under them, or any of them, shall, for any act done or to be done in or about the premises, be subject or liable to any action, indictment, or information, upon the statute made in the fifth year of her Majesty Queen Elizabeth, intituled, 'An Act containing divers orders for artificers, labourers, servants of husbandry, and apprentizes,' or be liable to be sued for any breach of the custom of London, or for any penalty inflicted by any bye-law of the said city."

Sect. 140. "That the chamberlain of the said city of London for the time being shall enter in a book or books kept for that purpose, all securities for monies borrowed, or annuities granted, in pursuance of the said acts of the forty-third and forty-fourth years of the reign of his present Majesty, or either of such acts, and all assignments and transfers thereof, expressing in words at length the names, surnames, additions, places of abode, and other descriptions of all such persons as shall from time to time be entitled to such securities, and the sums received upon such securities, and the days wherein the said annuities respectively shall be payable, of which no entry or entries have or hath been made in any book or books; and shall also keep or continue to keep and preserve all and every book or books in which any entry or entries relating to any such monies have been already made, in pursuance of the said acts of the forty-third and forty-fourth years of the reign of his present Majesty, or either of such acts respectively; and all and every person and persons entitled to or interested in such annuities shall, at all reasonable times in the day, have access, with free liberty to inspect all and every such books or book, without fee or reward."

Sect. 141. "That the chamberlain of the said city for the time being shall keep, or continue to keep and preserve, all and every book or books in which any monies which, by virtue of the said recited acts of the forty-third and forty-fourth years of the reign of his present Majesty, or either of such acts, shall have been raised or borrowed upon the credit of the duty of coals granted by such acts respectively, shall have been entered or set down, or wherein also any monies paid and disbursed out of the monies received, or the time when, the occasions for which, or the names of the persons to whom the same may have been so paid, shall have been entered and set down in pursuance of such acts or either of them."

Sect. 142. "That the chamberlain of the said city for the time being shall keep one or more book or books, in which all the monies to be received in respect of the aforesaid duty upon coals, cinders, and culm, by virtue of this act, shall from time to time be entered and set down; and wherein also all the monies to be paid and disbursed out of the monies already received by virtue of the said two last mentioned acts, or either of them, or to be received by virtue of this act, shall from time to time be entered and set down; and such entries shall specify the names when, the occasions for which, and the names of the persons to whom the same shall be so paid."

Sect. 143. "That the said mayor, aldermen, and commons shall, once in each and every year or oftener, if required, lay before both houses of parliatment an account of the produce of the said duty of 1d. per shaldrn or ton, hereby granted and made payable upon coal, cinders, and culm, and also of all receipts and disbursements received or paid for or on account of the said market, and also an account of the quantity of coals sold in each and every such market, and of the prices thereof."

Sect. 144. "That the chamberlain of the said city for the time being shall keep one or more book or books, in which all the monies to be received by virtue of this act, in respect of the metage, inspection, or remeasurement of any coals measured, inspected, or remeasured within the said city of London and the liberties thereof, between Tower Dock and Limehouse Hole, in the county of Middlesex, shall from time to time be entered and set down, wherein also all the monies to be paid and disbursed out of the monies so to be received shall from time to time be entered and set down; and such entries shall specify the times when, the occasions for which, the names of the persons to whom the same shall be paid."

Sect. 145. "That the said mayor, aldermen, and commons, shall, once in each and every year, or oftener if required, lay before both Houses of Parliament an account of monies to be received by virtue of this act in respect of the metage, inspection, or remeasurement of any coals within such last mentioned district, and also of all disbursements paid for or on account of the said land coal meter's office for such district."

Sect. 146. "That all fines, penalties, or forfeitures by this act, or by virtue of the powers and authorities thereof imposed, (the manner of levying and recovering whereof is not hereby otherwise directed), not exceeding 20l. shall be sued for within one calendar month after the offence or offences committed; and all such fines, penalties, and forfeitures, shall be levied and recovered before any justice or justices of the peace for the county, city, or place, where the offence shall be committed; and such justice or justices and are hereby empowered and required, upon information or complaint to him or them made, to grant a summons or warrant to bring before him or them such offender or offenders, at the time and place as shall be in such warrant specified; and if on the conviction of the offenders respectively, either on his, her, or their confession, or on the evidence of any one or more credible witness or witnesses upon oath, (which oath such justice or justices is and are hereby empowered to administer), such fine, penalty, or forfeiture, shall not be forthwith paid, the same shall be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender or offenders, by warrant under the hand and seal of such justice or justices, and the overplus of the money (if any) raised by such distress and sale, after deducting the fine, penalty, or forfeiture, and the costs and charges of making such distress and sale, shall be rendered to the owner of the goods and chattels so distrained; and for want of distress, or in case the fine, penalty, or forfeiture, shall not be forthwith paid, it shall and may be lawful to and for such justice or justices to commit every such offender to the common gaol or house of correction for the county, city, or place where the offence shall be committed, there to remain without bail or main-prize, for any time not exceeding six calendar months, unless such fine, penalty, or forfeiture, and all reasonable charges attending the recovery thereof, shall be sooner paid; and one moiety of all such fines, penalties, and forfeitures, when paid, shall go to the informer, and the other moiety shall go to his Majesty, his heirs and successors, or shall be applied in such manner, for carrying this act into execution, as the justice or justices before whom such conviction shall take place shall direct."

Sect. 147. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for any person or persons so convicted by any justice or justices of the peace as before-mentioned, of any offence or offences against this act, or against any rule, order, or by-law made in pursuance thereof, to appeal to the justices of the peace assembled at the next general quarter sessions or general sessions to be held for the county, city, or place, where such conviction shall be made, on giving immediate notice of such appeal, and finding sufficient security, to the satisfaction of such justice or justices for prosecuting the said appeal with effect, and abiding the determination of the court therein; and such justices, in such general quarter sessions or general sessions, shall hear and determine the matter of such appeal, and may either confirm or quash and annul the said conviction, and award such costs to either party as to them the said justices shall seem just and reasonable; and the decision of the said justices therein shall be final, binding, and conclusive; and no proceedings to be had or taken in pursuance of this act shall be quashed or vacated for want of form only, or be removed by certiorari, or any other writ or process whatsoever, into any of his Majesty’s courts of record at Westminster, or elsewhere; any law or statute to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding.”

(a) The penalty of 20l. per chaldron for every chaldron of coals of one sort sold as and for another sort, inflicted by this act, is a penalty exceeding 20l. and therefore recoverable in the superior courts under this section. Reeve v. Poole, 4 B. & C. 155; 1 C. & P. 622, S. C.; Thompson v. Poole, 6 D. & R. 29; alter for penalties under the 17th section. Id.

Sect. 148. “That it is lawful to and for any such justice or justices of the peace, before whom any such fines, penalties, or forfeitures shall be sued for, to summon before him or them any person or persons who shall, in or by the complaint or information made to him or them, appear to be a necessary witness as to the matters thereby charged, to appear before him or them at a time and place to be specified in the summons; and in case such person so summoned shall not appear according to such summons, then, upon due proof of the service of such summons in manner aforesaid, such person so summoned, and not appearing in compliance therewith, shall forfeit and pay the sum of 20l., to be levied and recovered in such manner, and by such ways and means, as is hereinafore directed as to other penalties; and it shall and may be lawful to and for such justice or justices to cause such person to be apprehended by warrant under the hand and seal or hands and seals of such justice or justices, and to be brought before him or them, and thereupon, whether such person shall appear upon summons as aforesaid, or shall be apprehended as aforesaid, such justice or justices shall and may proceed to examine him or her upon oath as to the matter of such complaint or information; and in case such person shall refuse to be sworn, or to answer, or to give evidence therein, then and in every such case it shall and may be lawful to and for such justice or justices, by warrant under his hand and seal, or their hands and seals, to commit such person so refusing to be sworn, or to answer, or to give evidence as aforesaid, to the common gaol or house of correction of the city, county, or place, in or for which such justice or justices shall then act, there to remain for any space of time not exceeding three calendar months.”

Sect. 149. “That if any person or persons, upon his, her, or their examination upon oath by any justice or justices of the peace acting in execution of this act, shall wilfully and corruptly give false evidence touching any matter or thing relating to this act, or if any person or persons shall take or make any false oath or affidavit with respect to any matter or thing relating to this act, every such person so offending, and being duly convicted thereof, shall be and is hereby declared to be subject and liable to such pains and penalties as, by any law in force and effect, persons guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury are subject and liable to.”

Sect. 150. “That all fines, penalties, or forfeitures, exceeding the sum of 20l., by this act imposed, for any offence or offences committed against this act, shall and may be recovered by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information, in any of his Majesty’s courts of record at Westminster, wherein no essai, protection, wager of law, or any more than one imparsance shall be allowed, by the person or persons who shall inform and sue for the same, within three calendar months after the offence or offences shall be committed; and one moiety of all such fines, penalties, or forfeitures, shall be to and for the use of our sovereign lord the King, his heirs and successors, and the other moiety thereof (together with double costs of suit) shall be to and for the use of the person or persons who shall inform or sue for the same.”

Sect. 151. “That when any distress shall be made for any sum or sums of money to be levied by virtue of this act, the distress itself shall not be deemed unlawful, nor shall the party or parties making the same be deemed a trespasser or trespassers on account of any defect or want of form in the summons, conviction, warrant of distress, or the proceedings relating thereto, nor shall the party or parties be deemed a trespasser or trespassers ab initio on account of any irregularity which shall be afterwards committed by the party or parties distraining; but the person or persons aggrieved by such irregularity shall and may recover full satisfaction for the special damage sustained in an action on the case.”

Sect. 152. “And for the more easy and speedy conviction of offenders against this act, be it further enacted, that every justice of the peace, before whom any person shall be convicted of any offence against this act, shall and may cause the conviction to be drawn up according to the following form; viz.
Coals, (London.)

"BE IT REMEMBERED, THAT ON THE __________ day of __________ in the year of our Lord __________ A. D. is convicted before me __________ of his Majesty's justices of the peace for [here specify the offence and the time and place when and where committed, as the case may be] contrary to an act of parliament made in the forty-seventh year of the reign of King George the Third, intituled [here insert the title of this act]. Given under my hand and seal the day and year first above written.

C. D."

Sect. 153. "That no plaintiff or plaintiffs shall recover in any action to be commenced against any person or persons for any thing done in pursuance of this act, unless notice in writing shall have been given to the defendant or defendants twenty-one days before such action, signed by the attorney for the plaintiff or plaintiffs, specifying the cause of such action; nor shall the plaintiff or plaintiffs recover in any such action if tender of sufficient amends hath been made to him, her, or them, or to his, her, or their attorney, by or on the behalf of the defendant or defendants before such action brought; and in case no such tender shall have been made, it shall and may be lawful to and for the defendant or defendants in any such action, at any time before issue joined, to pay into court such sum of money as he, she, or they shall think fit, whereupon such proceeding, order and judgment shall be made and given in and by such court, as in other actions where the defendant is allowed to pay money into court."

Sect. 154. "That no action or suit shall be commenced against any person or persons for any thing done in pursuance of this act after six calendar months next after the fact committed; and every such action or suit shall be brought and tried in the county or place where the cause of action shall arise; and if any such action or suit shall be brought before twenty-one days' notice shall have been given, or after a sufficient satisfaction made or tendered as aforesaid, or after the time limited for bringing the same as aforesaid, or shall be brought in any other county or place than as aforesaid, then the jury shall find for the defendant or defendants, and upon such verdict, or if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall be nonsued, or discontinued his, her, or their action or suit, after the defendant or defendants shall have appeared, or if upon demurrer judgment shall be given against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, then the defendant or defendants shall recover double costs, and have such remedy for recovering the same as any defendant hath for costs of suit in other cases by law."

Sect. 105. "That this act shall commence and take place from and after the 4th day of October, 1807."

Sect. 106. "That this act shall be deemed and taken to be a public act, and shall be judicially taken notice of as such by all judges, justices and others, without being specially pleaded."

"THE SCHEDULE TO WHICH THIS ACT REFERS.

Payments payable to the Deputy Sea Coal or Ship Meters, by Ship Owners, Coal Buyers or Dealers.

By the Ship Owner or Owners.

The sum of three shillings per twenty chaldrons for working at the vat, and so on in proportion for any greater or less quantity.

The sum of three shillings per day for every day that the meters shall be on board of any ship or vessel for the purpose of measuring coals thereout, in lieu of provisions and drink.

The sum of ten shillings and sixpence for travelling expenses, when employed in the admeasurement of coals in any ship or vessel below Greenwich, in the county of Kent.

The sum of one guinea, upon the delivery, for each and every ship or other Coals and Coal Mines. [III.

vessel, in the room of all allowances in coals, and all other gratuities, by or on the behalf of the ship owners.

By the Buyer or Buyers of, or Dealer or Dealers in, Coals.

For making out and delivering to him, her or them, or his, her, or their servant or servants, agent or agents, a general bill or account of the coals admeasured or delivered out of any ship or other vessel, on the account of any buyer or buyers, or dealer or dealers in coals, for each and every such bill or account, the several sums following; that is to say, the sum of three pence for any quantity of coals less than fifty chaldrons, specified therein; the sum of six pence for any quantity of coals specified therein equal to fifty and less than one hundred chaldrons; and the sum of nine pence for any quantity of coals specified therein equal to one hundred chaldrons and less than two hundred chaldrons; and for two hundred chaldrons and any greater quantity, the sum of one shilling.

III. Offences as to Coals and Coal Mines.

Firing coal mines. By the 7 and 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 5, it is enacted, "that if any person shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any mine of coal or cannel coal, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof, shall suffer death as a felon."

See the general clauses affecting all the provisions of this act, post, Malicious Injuries to Property, Vol. III.

This act is a re-enactment of the 10 Geo. II. c. 32, s. 6. The 10 Geo. II. is wholly repealed by the 7 and 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, except so much thereof as relates to wild fowl.

The other offences, as to drowning or obstructing mines, 7 and 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 6; destroying mining engines, &c. Id. s. 7; and injuries, by rioters, to mines, &c. Id. s. 8, affecting mines in general, will be found treated of under title Malicious Injuries to Property, post, Vol. III.

As to stealing from mines, see 7 and 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 37, post, Law, and Mines, Vol. III.

Independently of the offence at common law, by the 28 Geo. III. c. 53, s. 2, it is enacted, that any number of persons united in covenants or partnerships, or in any way whatsoever, consisting of more than five persons, for purchasing coals for sale or making regulations with respect to the manner of carrying on the said trade in coals, shall be deemed an unlawful combination to advance the price of coals, and every person concerned therein shall be liable to an indictment or information.

As to disputes between colliers, keelmen, pitmen, and miners, and their masters in general, see post, Servants, Vol. V.

By 39 and 40 Geo. III. c. 77, s. 3, reciting "whereas it often happens that colliers and miners, disregarding their agreements, wilfully and obstinately work coal and iron stone in a different manner to what they stipulated, or otherwise abandon the agreement they have entered into, to the great and lasting prejudice of their employers," it is enacted, "that if any person or persons making any bargain, or entering into any contract or agreement in writing, for raising or getting any coal, culm, iron stone, or iron ore, shall wilfully, and to the prejudice of the owner, raise, get, or work, or cause to be raised, got, or worked, any such coal, culm, iron stone, or iron ore, in a different manner to his or their stipulations in respect thereto, and contrary to the directions, and against the will of the owner, or his agent or agents having the care thereof, or shall desist or refuse to fulfil the engagements they have entered into, every person or persons so offending, and being thereof convicted, either by the confession of the party offending, or upon the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, before one or more of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the county wherein such offence shall have been committed, shall, for every such offence, on complaint of the owner or owners, or his or their agent or agents, and not otherwise,
III.]

Offences as to.

Forfeit and pay such sum of money, not exceeding 40s., as to such justice or justices shall seem meet, together with the charges previous to and attending such conviction, to be ascertained by such justice or justices who shall convict the offender or offenders; and upon non-payment thereof, such justice or justices shall commit the offender or offenders to the common gaol of the county or place where the offence shall be committed, without bail or main-prize, for any time not exceeding six months, or until the penalty and charges shall be paid; and upon such conviction, every such bargain, contract or agreement shall become void."

Sect. 4. "And whereas the owners and lessees of coal, iron stone or iron ore, contracting to get the same raised by weight, are often under the necessity of advancing money to the colliers and miners upon the measure thereof in hamps, at or near the colliery or mine work, before the same can be carried to be weighed, and great frauds are practised in the walling and stacking of such coal, iron stone and iron ore, by which the colliers and miners obtain money beyond what they earn or are able to repay, and miners often defraud each other by conveying away iron stone from one heap into another;" it is therefore enacted, "that if any person or persons shall wall or stack, or cause to be walled or stacked, any coal, iron stone, or iron ore, in any false or fraudulent manner, with an intent to deceive his or their employer or employers, or if any person or persons shall take and remove any iron stone or iron ore, with intent to defraud the person or persons who shall have raised the same, and shall be thereof convicted, either by the confession of the party offending, or upon the oath of one or more credible witnesses or witnesses, before any one or more justice or justices of the peace for the county wherein such offence shall have been committed, it shall and may be lawful for such justice or justices to commit any such person to the house of correction or common gaol for the same county, for any time not exceeding three months."

---

(No. 1.)

[Commencement as usual, as ante, p. 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously, did set fire to a certain mine of coal [or,annel coal] the property of A. B., there situate: against the form of the statute in that case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual], ante, p. 8, to the end.

---

(No. 2.)

— THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C. D., late of, &c. on, &c. with force and arms, at, &c. unlawfully, maliciously, and feloniously did set fire to a certain mine of coal [or,annel coa] the property of A. B., there situate; to the great damage of the said A. B., against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity.

---

Cock-Fighting, illegal. See Gaming, Vol. II.

Cocoa-Nuts. See Excise, Vol. II.

Coffee. See Exrse, Vol. II.
Coin. (a)

Coin, in French, signifies a corner, and from thence hath its name, because in ancient times money was square with corners, as it is in some countries to this day. 1 Inst. 207.

The word doth properly signify a wedge, as the Latin cuneus; and hath a verb belonging to it in the several languages; and is transliterated to lawful money; either from the form of a wedge, ingot, or lingot, (linguettar) in which bullion was transported from all antiquity, or else from the instrument, a wedge or chisel, with which in trade these lingots were occasionally cut to the weight required, as they are at this day in the East Indies with shears.

As the legislature has announced its intention to amend and consolidate the present laws relative to coining, it is not deemed worth while to treat largely on this extensive subject.

Herein of,

I. Counterfeiting Coin, 722.
II. Impairing Coin, 730.
III. Importing into the Kingdom Counterfeit or Light Money, 731.
IV. Exporting Counterfeit Money, 733.
V. Frauds relating to Bullion, and Counterfeiting Bullion, 733.
VI. Making, Mending, or having in Possession any Instruments for Coining, 734.
VII. Receiving, Uttering, or Tendering Counterfeit Coin of this Realm, 735.

VIII. Uttering or Tendering Foreign Counterfeit Coin, 743.
IX. Receiving or Paying for the Current Coin any more or less than its lawful value, 745.
X. Tokens, 746.
XI. Forms as to, 753.

I. Counterfeiting.

The descriptions of coin against the counterfeiting of which several enactments have been passed, are;—1st, The King’s Money, properly so called;—2d, Foreign Gold, Silver, or Copper Coin;—and, 3dly, The Copper Money of this Realm. These we will consider in the above order. We shall next proceed to enquire into what is a sufficient counterfeiting, and the evidence, &c. and, lastly, as to the searching for and securing base coin, &c.

(1.) The King’s Money.—The statute 25 Edw. III. st. 5, c. 2, declares it to be high treason "if a man counterfeit the King’s money." And as there are no accessories in treason, it follows that all who, by furnishing the necessary tools, or by any other means, aid or assist in the coining are guilty of the offence as much as he whose hand is employed. Kel. 33.

From Lord Hale’s researches on the subject of coin, it appears that the coin or money of this kingdom consists properly of gold or silver only, with a certain alloy, constituting what is called sterling, coined by the King’s authority; and to such money only does the above stat. 25 Edw. III. refer when it mentions “the King’s money” generally. And, therefore, it seems that where any statute names money generally, it must be taken to have the same meaning. 1 East’s P. C. 149.

(a) See in general as to this offence, 1 Russ. Cr. & Misc.; 2 Chit. C. L.
Counterfeiting.

The weight, alloy, impression, and denomination of money made in this kingdom are generally settled by indents between the King and the master of the mint; but the recent statute 56 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 4, has provided, with respect to the new silver coinage, that the bullion shall be coined into silver coins of a standard and fineness of eleven ounces two pennyweights of fine silver, and eighteen pennyweights of alloy in the pound troy, and in weight after the rate of sixty-six shillings to every pound troy, whether the same be coined in crowns, half-crowns, shillings or sixpences, or pieces of a lower denomination.

A proclamation has been sometimes made as a more solemn manner of giving coin currency. But this in general cases is certainly not necessary, and in prosecutions for coin need not be proved. Neither is it necessary in the same case to produce the indents, though it may be of use in case of any new coin, with a new impression, not yet familiar to the people, to produce either the indents or one of the officers of the mint cognizant of the fact, or the stamps used, or the like evidence. By the act 37 Geo. III. c. 126, s. 1, relating to the copper coinage, post, 726, the King's proclamation is made necessary, and therefore seems to be required in proof of any indictment upon that statute. But in general, whether the coin, upon a question of counterfeiting or impairing it, be the King's money or not is a mere question of fact, which may be found upon evidence of common usage or notoriety. 1 East's P. C. 149.

Any coin once legally made and issued by the King's authority continues to be the current coin of the kingdom until recalled, notwithstanding any change in the authority which constituted it.

The offence of high treason may also be committed under the stat. 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 26, s. 3, made perpetual by 7 Anne, c. 25, which enacts, "that if any person or persons (other than the persons employed in his Majesty's mint or mints, or such as shall have authority from the lords commissioners of the treasury, or lord high treasurer of England for the time being,) shall, after the said 15th day of May, mark on the edges any the current coin of this kingdom, or if any person or persons whatsoever shall mark on the edges of the diminished coin of this kingdom, or any counterfeit coin resembling the coin of this kingdom, with letters or graining, or other marks or figures like unto those on the edges of money coined in his Majesty's mint, every such offence shall be, and is hereby adjudged to be, high treason, and the offender and offenders therein, his and their counsellors, procurers, aiders, and abettors, being thereof convicted or attainted according to the order and course of the law of this realm, shall suffer death as in case of high treason."

By 7 Anne, c. 25, the prosecution under this act must be commenced in six months after the offence.

The penalty of high treason is also incurred by making shillings or sixpences to resemble guineas or half-guineas, and making halfpence or farthings to resemble shillings or sixpences. This is provided by stat. 15 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 1, which enacts, "that if any person whatsoever shall, after the 29th day of September, in the year of our Lord 1742, wash, gild, or colour any of the lawful silver coin called a shilling or a sixpence, or any counterfeit or false shilling or sixpence, or add to or alter the impression, or any part of the impression, of either side of such lawful or counterfeit shilling or sixpence, with intent to make such shilling resemble or look like, or pass for a piece of lawful gold coin called a guinea; or with intent to make such sixpence resemble or look like, or pass for a piece of lawful gold coin called a half-guinea; or shall file, or any wise alter, wash, or colour any of the brass monies called halfpennies or farthings, or add to or alter the impression, or any part of the impression, of either side of an halfpenny or farthing, with intent to make a halfpenny resemble or look like or pass for a lawful shilling, or with intent to make a farthing resemble or look like or pass for a lawful sixpence, the person and persons so offending in any of the matters aforesaid, their counsellors, aiders, abettors, and procurers, shall be, and is and are hereby adjudged to be, guilty of high treason."

3 A 2
Some verbal difference is observable in the wording of some of the statutes on the subject of the coin since the Revolution. The stat. 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 26, speaks of the gold and silver coin "of this kingdom," or "current within this kingdom." The stat. 15 Geo. II. c. 28, as we have seen, expresses by name "guineas and half-guineas," "shillings and sixpences," and is consequently confined to those identical coins. In another part it speaks of counterfeit money generally. The stat. 11 Geo. III. c. 40, as to the copper coin, and the stat. 37 Geo. III. c. 126, s. 2, as to gold and silver coin, describe each as the coin of "this realm," following the words of the more ancient statutes. No stress can be laid upon such verbal differences between statutes passed in pari materia, further than that the construction which the reason of the thing points out must be such as the words are capable of receiving without violence to their proper or accepted legal signification. 1 East's P. C. 157.

Acts which are only preparatory to, and committed in the progress of, actually counterfeiting the coin, are made high treason by s. 4 of 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 26, which enacts, "that if any person or persons whatsoever, after the said 15th day of May, shall colour, gild, or case over with gold or silver, or with any wash or materials producing the colour of gold or silver, any coin resembling any the current coin of this kingdom, or any round blanks of base metal, or of coarse gold or coarse silver, of a fit size and figure to be coined into counterfeit milled money, resembling any the gold or silver coin of this kingdom, or if any person or persons shall gild over any silver blanks of a fit size and figure to be coined into pieces resembling the current gold coin of this kingdom, all and every such person and persons so offending, their counsellors, procurers, aiders, and abettors, shall be, and is are hereby adjudged to be, guilty of high treason, and being convicted or attainted thereof, according to the order and course of the laws of this realm, shall suffer death as in case of high treason."

It may be observed, that on an indictment on this statute, it is incumbent on the prosecutor to show that the prosecution was commenced within three months; and that proof by parol that the prisoner was apprehended for treason respecting the coin within three months, will not be sufficient where the indictment is preferred after the three months, and the warrant to apprehend or commit is not produced. R. v. Phillips, R. & R. 369.

And in Willace's case, 1 East's P. C. 186, it was held, that the information and proceeding before a magistrate, and not the preferring the indictment, were the commencement of the prosecution.

By the stat. 56 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 17, it is enacted, "that all and every act or acts in force immediately before the passing of this act, respecting the coin of this realm, or the clipping, diminishing, or counterfeiting of the same, or respecting any other matters relating thereto, and all provisions, proceedings, penalties, forfeitures, and punishments therein contained or directed, not expressly repealed by this act, and not repugnant or contradictory to the enactments and provisions of this act, shall be and continue in full force and effect; and shall be applied and put in execution with respect to the silver coin to be coined in pursuance of the directions of this act, as fully and effectually, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, as if the same were repealed and re-enacted in this act."

The above statutes relate only to the gold and silver coin of the realm, usually called the King's money. The counterfeiting of foreign coin is also provided against by various statutes.

(2.) Foreign Coin. — The counterfeiting of such as is current here was not within stat. 25 Edw. III. but was made treason for the first time by the stat. 4 Hen. VII. c. 18. But that being repealed by the stat. 1 Mary, c. 1, the same provision was revived by stat. 1 Mary, st. 2, c. 6, s. 2, which enacts, "that if any person or persons hereafter falsely forge and counterfeit any such kind of coin of gold or silver, as is not the proper coin of this realm, and is or shall be current within this realm by the consent of the Queen, her heirs, or successors; or if any person or persons at any time hereafter do falsely forge or counterfeit the Queen's sign manual, privy signet, or privy seal; that then every such offence shall be deemed and adjudged high treason. And the offender therein, their counsellors, procurers, siders, and abettors, being convicted according to the laws of this realm of any of the said offences, shall be likewise deemed and adjudged traitors against the Queen, her heirs and successors, and the realm, and shall suffer and have such pains of death, forfeiture of lands, goods, and chattels, and also lose the privilege of all sanctuary, as in the case of high treason is used and ordained."
Counterfeiting.

Proclamation by the writ of proclamation under the great seal, or a remembrance thereof, is necessary to show the consent of the crown to the currency of coin under this statute; for the coin, being foreign, will otherwise be considered as only bullion. 1 East's P. C. 149.

By the stat. 14 Eliz. c. 3, "if any person or persons hereafter falsely forge or counterfeit any such kind of coin of gold or silver as is not the proper coin of this realm, nor permitted to be current within this realm, that then every such offence shall be deemed and adjudged misprision of high treason; and the offenders therein, their procurers, siders, and abettors, being convict according to the laws of this realm of such offences, shall be imprisoned, and forfeit such lands, goods, and chattels, as in cases of misprision of treason for concealment of high treason."

The foreign coin mentioned in these two statutes must be such as is for the most part of gold or silver. 1 Hale's P. C. 31.

The word siders is intended of siders in the fact, not siders of the persons as receivers and comforters. Id. 317.

At common law this offence was only punishable as a misdemeanor.

But the stat. 37 Geo. III. c. 126, has now provided another punishment for the offence of counterfeiting foreign gold or silver coin not current here. That statute reciting, whereas the practice of counterfeiting foreign gold and silver coin, and the bringing into this realm, and uttering within the same, false and counterfeit foreign gold and silver coin, and particularly pieces of gold coin commonly called louis d'or, and pieces of silver coin commonly called dollars, hath of late greatly increased, and it is expedient that provision should be made more effectually to prevent the same, enacts, by s. 2, "that if any person or persons shall, from and after the passing of this act, make, coin, or counterfeit any kind of coin, not the proper coin of this realm, nor permitted to be current within the same, resembling, or made with intent to resemble, or look like any gold or silver coin of any foreign prince, state, or country, or to pass such foreign coin, such person or persons offending therein shall be deemed and adjudged to be guilty of felony, and may be transported for any term of years not exceeding seven years."

By the words in this act "not permitted to be current within the realm," must be understood not permitted to be current by proclamation under the great seal. 1 East's P. C. 161.

The counterfeiting of foreign coin of copper, or of other metal of less value than silver, not current here, is made a misdemeanor by stat. 43 Geo. III. c. 139, s. 3, which enacts, that "if any person shall, within any part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, make, coin, or counterfeit, any kind of coin not the proper coin of this realm, nor ordered by his Majesty's proclamation to be deemed current money, but resembling or made with intent to resemble any copper coin or other coin made of any metal or mixed metals of less value than the silver coin of any foreign prince, state, or country, or to pass such foreign coin, such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and breach of the peace; and on conviction shall for the first offence be imprisoned not exceeding a year, and for the second offence shall be transported for seven years."

Sect. 4. No traverse to be allowed to a subsequent assizes or sessions, without cause shown to and allowed by the court.

Sect. 5 enacts, that certificates of former convictions shall be produced in cases where persons are tried for second offences.

And a penalty of not exceeding 40s. nor less than 10s. is inflicted by sect. 6 for every such piece of counterfeit foreign coin in possession of any person who shall have more than five pieces thereof in his custody without lawful excuse.

Sect. 7 provides that houses of suspected persons may be searched by warrant of one justice, and counterfeit coin seised, &c.

By sect. 8 proceedings not to be quashed for want of form or removed by certiorari.

(3.) Copper coin.—The legislative enactments as to counterfeiting the copper coin of this realm are now to be considered.

Lord Hale, speaking of copper halfpence and farthings, makes it a quære whether the counterfeiting of them be not treason within the statute of 25 Edw. III. but inclines to the negative. 1 Hale, 195, 211, 212.

And with this agrees the sense of the legislature in stat. 15 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 6, which reciting, that whereas the counterfeiting of the copper coin of this kingdom is only a misdemeanor, and the punishment often very small, therefore enacteth, that if any person shall coin or counterfeit brass or copper halfpence or farthings, he, his counsellors, aids, and abettors, shall suffer two years' imprisonment, and find sureties for their good behaviour for two years more.

And further, by stat. 11 Geo. III. c. 49, if any person shall make, coin, or counterfeit any of the copper monies of this realm, commonly called an halfpenny or a farthing; or shall buy, sell, take, receive, pay, or put off any counterfeit copper money, not melted down or cut in pieces, at or for a lower rate or value than by its denomination it doth import or was counterfeited for, he shall be guilty of felony [but within clergy]. And one justice, on complaint upon oath that there is just cause to suspect that any person hath been concerned in counterfeiting the copper monies of this realm, may by his warrant cause the dwellinghouse, room, workshop, outhouse, yard, garden, or other place belonging to such suspected person, to be searched for tools and implements for coined such copper monies; and if any such tools or implements shall at any time be found hid or concealed in any place so searched, or be found in the custody of any person whatsoever not then employed in the coinage of money in his Majesty's mint, nor having the same by some lawful authority, it shall be lawful for any person whatsoever discovering the same to seize such tools or implements, and carry the same forthwith to a justice, who shall cause the same to be secured and produced in evidence against any person who shall be prosecuted for any the offences aforesaid, in some court proper for the determination thereof; and after they shall have been produced in evidence, as well the same so produced as the other so seized and not produced in evidence, shall forthwith, by order of the court, or by order of a justice, if there shall be no trial, be defaced and destroyed, or otherwise disposed of as such court or justice shall direct.

It may now be a question whether, under this statute, it is not optional to prosecute either for a misdemeanor, as the offence is made by the stat. 15 Geo. II. or for a felony as it is made by that of the 11 Geo. III. since the provisions of both statutes are extended to the new copper coinage. And yet such an option, without varying circumstances, is unusual and incongruous with the general rule of law, that the misdemeanor is merged in the felony. 1 East's P.C. 162.

The punishment under this statute appears to be only a year's imprisonment (a); founded on the general stat. of 'the 18 Eliz. c. 7, s. 3, which provides that upon allowance of clergy, the offenders may be imprisoned for any time not exceeding a year. 1 East's P. C. 162; 1 Russ. 58.

And by stat. 37 Geo. III. c. 126, s. 1, so much of the above acts of 15 Geo. II. c. 28, and 11 Geo. III. c. 40, and all other acts concerning the copper monies commonly called an halfpenny and a farthing or any other copper money of this realm, shall extend to all copper money which shall be coined and issued by order of his Majesty and shall be ordered by his procla-

(a) Mr. Christian, in a note on Blackstone, Vol. IV. p. 100, states that this is a "remarkable error," but does not suggest any emendation.
Counterfeiting.

Counterfeiting shall extend to all such other copper money as aforesaid.

So that, upon an indictment for counterfeiting any other piece of copper money but a halfpenny or farthing, it seems necessary that the proclamation should be produced in evidence.

What is a Counterfeiting within the above provisions, &c. — It will be necessary now to inquire into the questions which have arisen as to what is a sufficient counterfeiting within these statutes: as to the degree of guilt attached to accomplices and receivers—and as to the nature of the evidence necessary to conviction.

There must be an actual counterfeiting either by the party himself or by those with whom he conspires; a mere attempt to counterfeit, such as preparing the materials or fashioning the metals, is not sufficient except in those particular instances which have been so declared by statute.

The monies charged to be counterfeited must resemble the true and lawful coin, but this resemblance is a matter of fact, of which the jury are to judge upon the evidence before them; the rule being, that the resemblance need not be perfect, but such as may in circulation ordinarily impose upon the world. Thus a counterfeiting with some little variation in the inscription, effigies or arms, done probably with intent to evade the law, is yet within it; and so is the counterfeiting in a different metal, if in appearance it be made to resemble the true coin. 1 Hawk. c. 17, a. 81; 1 Russ. 80; 1 Hale, 178, 184, 211, 215; 1 East’s P. C. 163.

It is clear that there will be a sufficient counterfeiting within the statutes, when the counterfeit money is made to resemble coin, the impression on which has been worn away by time.

In one case the shillings produced in evidence against the prisoner were quite smooth, without the smallest vestige of either head or tail, and without any resemblance of the shillings in circulation, except their colour, size, and shape; and the master of the mint proved that they were bad, but that they were very like those shillings the impression on which had been worn away by time, and might very probably be taken by persons having less skill than himself for good shillings. And the court were of opinion that a blank that is smoothed, and made like a piece of legal coin, the impression of which is worn out, and yet suffered to remain in circulation, is sufficiently counterfeited to the similitude of the current coin of this realm to bring the counterfeiters and coiners of such blanks within the statute; these blanks having some reasonable likeness to that coin which has been defaced by time, and yet passes in circulation. Wilson’s case, O. B. 1783, 1 Leach, 285.

And in the subsequent case of Patrick and John Welsh, Hertford Lent Assizes, 1785, 1 East’s P. C. 164; 1 Leach, 364; the point received the more solemn consideration of the twelve judges; the counsel for the prisoners having objected upon the fact of no impression of any sort or kind being discernible upon the shillings produced in evidence, that they were not counterfeited to the likeness and similitude of the good and legal coin of this realm. But the judges were of opinion, that it was a question of fact whether the counterfeit monies were of the likeness and similitude of the lawful current silver coin called a shilling. And the jury having so found it, the want of an impression was immaterial; because, from the impression being generally worn out or defaced, it was notorious that the currency of the genuine coin of that denomination was not thereby affected; the counterfeit, therefore, was perfect for circulation, and possibly might deceive the more readily from having no appearance of an impression; and in the deception the offence consists.

But in Varley’s case, where the impression of money was forged on an irregular piece of metal, not rounded, without finishing it, so as not to be in a state to pass current, the offence was held to be incomplete, although he had actually attempted to pass it in that condition. Varley’s case, 1771, 2 Blac. R. 632; 1 MS. Sum. 46.

And where the prisoners were convicted upon a count in the indictment, framed upon stat. 25 Edw. III. c. 2, and upon the evidence it appeared, that no one piece of the base metal found upon the prisoners was in such a state as to make it passable, the conviction was held to be wrong. R. v. Harris and Momin, 1 Leach, 135. The case was referred to the judges; but the grounds of their decision are not stated in the report. And query, if the case was not disposed of upon a defect in the indictment. Besides the count on the 25 Edw. III. c. 2, there was another count upon the 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 26, a. 4. 1 Russ. 60.

As to what shall amount to a colouring within the act 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 26, a. 4, ante, 724, the following case has been determined by the judges.

R. v. W. Case, Lancaster Spring Assizes, 1795, cor. Heath, J. 1 East's P. C. 165. William Case was found guilty, on an indictment for traitorously colouring, with materials producing the colour of silver, a piece of base coin resembling a shilling. The prisoner was taken in the very act of making counterfeit shillings in the ordinary way, by steeping round blanks composed of brass and silver in aquafortis. The round blanks were found, some steeped in aquafortis, and some already taken out of it. They had the appearance of lead, and by rubbing they would resemble silver coin, but as they were, none would pass current. The judges, except two, thought the conviction right. They considered that the offence was complete when the piece was coloured, for it was then coloured with materials which produce the colour of silver, and that it was not necessary that the piece so coloured should be current, for the colouring of blanks was an offence within the clause.

A case under the like circumstances had been before expressly decided by the unanimous opinion of the judges to come within the statute. But there the doubt was not, as in the last instance, upon the necessity of rubbing the blank after it was taken out of the wash, in order to give it the appearance of silver, but whether the legislature did not intend such a colouring only as is altogether produced by some outward application. But they all thought that this process of extracting the latent silver, by the power of the wash, from the body to the surface of the blank, was a colouring within the words of the act. They thought, besides, that it might be charged as a colouring with silver; for the effect of the aquafortis is to corrode the base metal, and leave the silver only on the superficies, and so the copper is coloured or cased with silver. R. v. Lavey and Parker, O. B. December, 1776, 1 East's P. C. 166; 1 Leach, 153.

If there be a counterfeiting in fraud of the King, the offence within the respective statutes is complete before any uttering or attempt to utter. 3 Inst. 61; 1 East's P. C. 165.

With respect to receivers of such as counterfeit money, considerable doubt has existed whether they are guilty of more than misprision of treason. See 1 East's P. C. 94.

Lord Hale says, that though the more probable opinion may be that such receivers are traitors, yet the more merciful opinion is against such a construction. According to the latter opinion, the case of John Conier, who was convicted upon an indictment for traitorously receiving and comforting J. F. knowing him to have traitorously counterfeited the coin, &c. was considered to be only misprision of treason, and he was at length pardoned. It is evident, however, from the statement of the reporter, that the case did not pass without doubt. And it must be admitted that the best modern authorities have adopted the stricter construction of the two; considering it as a necessary one resulting from the general rule of law, that whatever will make a man accessory before or after in felony, will make him a principal in treason; and that the stat. 26 Edw. III. having declared these offences to be high treason, the consequence follows of course.

With respect to the light in which accomplices or receivers are considered in those offences concerning the coin which amount only to felony, it is decided that they follow the general rule applicable to felony. See 1 East's P. C. 186.

The stat. 37 Geo. III. c. 126, does not mention procurers, who are named in the stat. 1 Mary, st. 2, c. 6, and 14 Eliz. c. 3; but the offence being made felony, attaches to it all the incidents of felony at common law, and, consequently, may have accessaries.
Counterfeiting.

But it is questioned whether they are liable to transportation, or to any other punishment than is authorised by the general act of the 18 Eliz. c. 7, s. 3, ante, 726.

The prisoners are entitled to a peremptory challenge of thirty-five. Foot. 239.

It is not necessary there should be two witnesses in cases of counterfeiting the coin, as it is in other high treasons; but persons may be convicted according to the course of the common law, by one witness only. Hale, 318, 328.

It is rarely the case that the counterfeiting can be proved directly by positive evidence; it is usually made out by circumstantial evidence, such as finding the necessary coining tools in the defendant's house, together with some pieces of the counterfeit money in a finished, some in an unfinished state; or such other circumstances as may fairly warrant the jury in presuming that the defendant either counterfeited, or caused to be counterfeited, or was present aiding and assisting in counterfeiting, the coin in question. Or if several conspire to counterfeit the King's coin, and one of them actually do so in pursuance of the conspiracy, it is treason in all, and they may be indicted for counterfeiting the King's coin generally. 1 Hale, 214.

Proof that a man occasionally visited coiners; that the rattling of money was occasionally heard with them; that he was seen counting something as if it was money when he left them; that on coming to the lodgings just after the apprehension, he endeavoured to escape, and was found to have bad money about him; is not sufficient evidence to implicate him as counselling, procuring, aiding, and abetting the coining. Two women were indicted for colouring a shilling and sixpence, and a man (Isaacs) as counselling them, &c. The evidence against him was, that he visited them once or twice a week; that the rattling of copper money was heard whilst he was with them; that once he was counting something just after he came out; that on going to the room just after the apprehension, he resisted being stopped, and jumped over a wall to escape; and that there were then found upon him a bad 3s. piece, five bad shillings, and five bad sixpences; but upon a case reserved, the judges thought the evidence too slight to convict him. R. v. Isaacs, Hill T. 1613; cor. Bayley, J.; 1 Russ. 62.

Searching for and securing base coin, &c.—Several special provisions have been made by the legislature for securing base coin and also the tools of the offenders, in order that they may be produced in evidence, and afterwards be disposed of in a proper manner.

By the 8 & 9 Wils. III. c. 26, s. 6, "if any puncheon, dye, stamp, edger, cutting-engine, press, flask, or other tool, instrument, or engine, used or designed for coining or counterfeiting gold or silver monies, or any part of such tool or engine, shall, at any time after the said 15th day of May, be hid or concealed in any place, or found in the house, custody, or possession of any person or persons whatsoever, not then employed in the coining of money in any of his Majesty's mints, nor having the same by any lawful authority, that then it shall and may be lawful to and for any person or persons whatsoever, discovering the same, to seize, and he and they are hereby required to seize the same, and to carry them forthwith to some justice of peace of the county, city, or place, where the same shall be so seized, and by him secured, to be produced in evidence against any person or persons who shall or may be prosecuted for any such offence, in some court of justice proper for the determination thereof, and after such time as they, or any of them, shall have been produced in evidence, as well the same so produced as the other so seized, and not made use of in evidence, and every of them, shall forthwith, by order of that court where such offender or offenders shall be tried, or by order and in the presence of such or some other justice of the peace, and in case there be no such trial, be totally defaced and destroyed; and if, after the said 15th day of May, any counterfeit or unlawfully diminished money..."
Counterfeiting, &c.

shall be produced in any court of justice, either in evidence against any person or persons for any offence relating to the counterfeiting or unlawfully diminishing of money or otherwise, that then, or immediately after evidence given, the judge or judges of such court shall cause such monies to be cut in pieces in open court, or in the presence of some justice of the peace, and then to be delivered to or for such person or persons to whom the same of right shall appertain.

And the 11 Geo. II. c. 4, s. 3, provides "that it shall and may be lawful to and for any one justice of the peace, on complaint made before him upon the oath of one credible person, that there is just cause to suspect that any one or more person or persons is or hath been concerned in counterfeiting the copper monies of this realm, by warrant under his hand, to cause the dwellinghouse, room, workshop, outhouse, yard, garden, or other place belonging to such suspected person or persons, to be searched for tools and implements for coining such copper monies; and if any such tools or implements shall at any time be found hid or concealed in any place so searched, or be found in the custody or possession of any person or persons whatsoever, not then employed in the coining of money in some of his Majesty’s mints, nor having the same by some lawful authority, that then it shall and may be lawful to and for any person or persons whatsoever discovering the same, to seize, and he and they are hereby authorised and required to seize the same, and carry them forthwith to some justice of the peace of the county, city, or place where the same shall be seized, who shall cause the same to be secured and produced in evidence against any person or persons who shall or may be prosecuted for any of the offences aforesaid, in some court of justice proper for the determination thereof; and after such time as they, or any of them, shall have been produced in evidence, as well the same so produced as the other so seized and not made use of in evidence, and every of them, shall forthwith, by order of that court where such offender or offenders shall be tried, or by order of such or some other justice of the peace, in case there be no such trial, be defaced and destroyed, or otherwise disposed of, as such court, or such justice, shall direct."

Searching for counterfeit foreign coin of copper or metal of less value than silver, and the tools or implements for coining the same, is authorized by the 43 Geo. III. c. 139, s. 7.

The stats. 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 21, s. 1; 13 Geo. III. c. 71, s. 1; and 56 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 7, have been passed for the suppression of base coin, or coin inferior in value, where there is no criminal charge imputed to the persons who may happen to tender it. See 1 Russ. 63.

II. Impairing Coin.

The offence of impairing the coin rests on the following statutes.

Impairing coin.
Melting down.

Impairing by means of melting down is provided against by stat. 17 Edw. IV. c. 1, which enacts that "no person shall melt down any money of gold or silver sufficient to run in payment, upon pain of forfeiture of the value:" and again, by stat. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 31, melting down any current silver money of the realm shall be punished with forfeiture of the same, and double the value; and if done by a freeman of a town, with disfranchisement; if by any other person, with six months' imprisonment.

And impairing by means of clipping, washing, rounding or filing, is provided against by stat. 5 Eliz. c. 11, s. 2, which enacts, "that from and after the first day of May next coming, clipping, washing, rounding, or filing, for wicked lucre or gain sake, of any of the proper monies or coins of this realm or the dominions thereof, or of the monies or coins of any other realm, allowed and suffered to be current within this realm or the dominions thereof, at this present, or that hereafter at any time shall be the lawful monies or coins of this realm, or of the dominions thereof, or of any other realm, and by proclamation allowed and suffered to be current here by the Queen's Majesty, her heirs and successors, shall be taken, deemed, and adjudged, by virtue of this act, to be treason; and the offenders therein, their counsellors, consenters, and aiders, shall, be, from and after the same first day of May, taken, deemed, and adjudged as offenders in treason, and being thereof lawfully convicted or attainted, according to the order and course of the laws of this realm, shall suffer pains of death, and lose and forfeit all his and their goods and chattels; and also shall lose and forfeit all his and their lands and tenements, during his and their natural life or lives only."
Impairing Coin.

There were, however, methods of falsifying, impairing, diminishing, and lightening, not comprehended within the above statute. An auxiliary statute, 18 Eliz. c. 1, was therefore passed, which enacts "that if any person or persons, of what estate, degree, or condition soever he or they be, shall, from and after the first day of April next coming, for wicked lucre or gain sake, by any art, ways or means whatsoever, impair, diminish, falsify, scale, or lighten the proper monies or coins of this realm, or any the dominions thereof, or the monies or coins of any other realms, allowed and suffered to be current at the time of the offence committed within this realm of England, or any the dominions of the same, by the proclamation of the Queen's Majesty, her heirs or successors, shall be taken, adjudged, and deemed to be treason; and the offenders therein, their counsellors, consenters and aiders, shall be likewise deemed and adjudged as offenders in treason, and being thereof lawfully convicted or attainted, according to the due order of the laws of this realm, shall suffer pains of death, and lose and forfeit all their goods and chattels to the Queen's Majesty, her heirs and successors, and shall also lose and forfeit to the Queen's Highness, her heirs and successors, all their lands, tenements and hereditaments, during his or their natural life or lives only."

It is clear that the impairing of Irish coin, though not current in England, is within the express words of this statute. 1 East's P. C. 174.

The silver coinage act, 66 Geo. III. c. 68, (s. 17,) provides, that all other acts relating to silver coin shall be extended to that act. See the provision, ante, 724.

"And for the better preventing the clipping, diminishing, or impairing the current coin of this kingdom," it is enacted, by the 6 & 7 Will. III. c. 17, s. 4, "that if any person whatsoever shall buy or sell, and knowingly have in his custody or possession, any clippings or filings of the current coin of this kingdom, he shall for every such offence forfeit the said clippings or filings, and also the sum of five hundred pounds, one moiety to his Majesty, and the other to the informer, to be recovered as aforesaid, and shall be also branded in the right cheek with a hot iron with the letter R, and until payment of the said five hundred pounds shall suffer imprisonment."

By sect. 8 of the same act, the very possession of bullion, under certain circumstances of suspicion, throws the onus upon the party indicted, of proving that it was neither coin nor clippings melted, under pain of imprisonment for six months.

By the stat. De Monetâ, &c. if money false or clipped be found in the hands of any that is suspicious, he may be imprisoned until he have found his warrant. 1 East's P. C. 174; 3 Inst. 18.

One witness is sufficient in clipping as well as counterfeiting the coin. Evidence.

This was agreed by all the judges, though it appears that the opinion and practice had once been otherwise in the case of clipping. 1 East's P. C. 129; 1 Russ. 65.

III. Importing Counterfeit Money.

By 25 Edw. III. s. 5, c. 2, it is treason if a man counterfeit the King's money; and if a man bring false money into this realm, counterfeit to the money of England, as the money called Lushburgh, or other like to the said money of England, knowing the money to be false, to merchandise and make payment in deceit of our said Lord the King and of his people.
The King may by his proclamation legitimate foreign coin, and make it current money of this kingdom, according to the value imposed by such proclamation. 1 Hale, 192.

Therefore both English money coined by the King's authority, and foreign coin made current by proclamation, are within the denomination of lawful money of England. 1 Inst. 207.

And by the stat. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 11, s. 2, it is enacted and established, "that if any person or persons shall bring from the parts of beyond the sea into this realm, or into any of the dominions of the same, any such false and counterfeit coin or money, being current within this realm, as is aforesaid, knowing the same coin or money to be false or counterfeit, to the intent to utter or make payment with the same within this realm, or any the dominions of the same, by merchandizing or otherwise; that all and every such person or persons so offending as aforesaid, their counsellors, procurers, aiders, and abettors in that behalf, shall be deemed and adjudged to be offenders in high treason, and shall suffer, after lawful conviction or attainer thereof, such pains of death, loss and forfeiture of lands, goods and chattels, as other offenders shall do in cases of high treason."

This must be brought from a foreign nation, and not from Ireland, or other place subject to the crown of England; because the counterfeiting there is punishable by the laws of our King as much as in England. 1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 67.

The money, the bringing in of which is prohibited by this statute, and by 25 Edw. III. s. 5, c. 2, must be brought from some foreign place, out of the King's dominions, into some place within the same. It may be observed also, that these acts are confined to the importer, and do not extend to a receiver at second hand; and such importer must also be averred and proved to have known that the money was counterfeit. 1 Russ. 66.

The better opinion seems to be, that it is not necessary that such false money be actually paid away, or merchandized with, for the words of the stat. 25 Edw. III. are to "merchandise or make payment, &c." which only import an intention to do so, and are fully satisfied whether the act intended be performed or not. 1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 89. But see 3 Inst. 18; 1 Hale, 229; 1 East's P. C. 175, 176; and 1 Russ. 66.

It is clear that bringing over money counterfeited according to the similitude of foreign coin, is treason within 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 11. 1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 89.

Foreign Coin not Current]—By the 37 Geo. III. c. 126, after reciting (ante, p. 725,) it is enacted, by sect. 3, "that if any person or persons shall bring into this realm any such false or counterfeit coin as aforesaid, resembling or made with intent to resemble or look like any gold or silver coin of any foreign prince, state or country, or to pass as such foreign coin, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, to the intent to utter the same within the realm, or within any dominions of the same, all and every such person or persons shall be deemed and adjudged to be guilty of felony, and may be transported for any term of years not exceeding seven years."

Accessories before are not mentioned in this statute; but these are incident to every felony. Yet quære, if they are liable to the punishment of transportation.

An importation with intent to utter is sufficient, without any actual uttering; which intent must be collected from circumstances. But though an actual uttering may be the best evidence of such intent, yet it seems safest that the indictment should follow the words of the statute. 1 East's P. C. 176.

Considerable quantities of old silver coin of the realm, or coin purporting to be such, below the standard of the mint in weight, were formerly imported to the public detriment at that time; in consequence of which, stat. 14 Geo. III. c. 42, prohibited the bringing into the kingdom any such coin, and provided that if any silver coin, being or purporting to be the coin of this realm, exceeding in amount the sum of 5l. should be found by any officer of his Majesty's customs on board any ship, &c. or in the custody of any person
IV. Exporting Counterfeit Money.

By stat. 38 Geo. III. c. 67, s. 1, it is enacted, "that all copper coin whatsoever, not being the legal copper coin of this kingdom, and all counterfeit gold or silver coin made to the similitude or resemblance, or intended to resemble any gold or silver coin, either of this kingdom or of any other country, which shall under any pretence, name, or description whatsoever, be exported or shipped, or laden or put on board any ship, vessel or boat, for the purpose of being exported from this kingdom to the said island of Martinique, or any of his Majesty's islands or colonies in the West Indies or America, shall be forfeited, and the same shall and may be seized, sued for, prosecuted, and recovered in such courts, and by such and the like ways, means and methods, and the produce thereof disposed of and applied in such and the like manner, and to such and the like uses and purposes, as any forfeiture by any law respecting the revenue of the customs, may now be seized, sued for, prosecuted or recovered, disposed of and applied, either in this kingdom or in any of his Majesty's islands in the West Indies respectively, as the case may happen to be."

And the second section enacts, "that every person who shall so export, or so ship, lay, or put on board any ship, vessel or boat, in order to be so exported, or shall cause or procure to be so exported, shipped, or put on board any ship, vessel or boat, or shall have in his or her custody, in order to be so exported, any such coin as aforesaid, shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of two hundred pounds, and double the value of such coin, to be recovered by bill, suit, action, or information, in any of his Majesty's courts of record at Westminster."

The judgment in all cases of treason, relating to the coin, is to be drawn on a hurdle to the place of execution, and there hanged by the neck till he be dead. 2 Hawk. c. 48, s. 5.

But it is generally provided by the several statutes, that this shall work no corruption of blood nor loss of dower. And see 54 Geo. III. c. 145, ante, p. 291.

V. Frauds relating to Bullion, and of Counterfeiting Bullion.

Bullion signifies properly either gold or silver in the mass; but is here intended to denote those metals in any state other than that of authenticated coin; comprising in this latter sense gold and silver wares and manufactures. Many statutes have been passed for the prevention of frauds with respect to such bullion, by creating offences, in making, working, putting to sale, exchanging, selling, or exporting any gold or silver manufactures of less fineness than the standards respectively fixed at the time by the several acts. See these statutes collected in 1 East's P. C. p. 188 to 194; and see 1 Russ. P. 69.

By stat. 6 & 7 Will. III. c. 17, s. 3, if any shall cast ingots or bars of silver, in imitation of Spanish bars or ingots, or stamp them in likeness of the Spanish stamp, he shall forfeit the same, and also 500l., half to the King and half to the informer.
Coin.

The statute of 6 & 7 Will. III. c. 17, enacts also, that "if any broker, not being a trading goldsmith or refiner of silver, shall buy or sell any bullion or molten silver, he shall suffer imprisonment for six months without bail," a regulation probably intended to prevent gambling and speculations, which might enhance the price of the precious metals. I East's P. C. 196.

Various statutes have been made, at different times, to prevent the melting down of gold and silver coin, and the exportation of it when melted; but these statutes are no longer in operation: for the 59 Geo. III. c. 49, reciting that the laws then in force against melting and exporting the gold and silver coin of the realm, had been found ineffectual, and that it was expedient that the traffic in gold and silver bullion should be unrestrained, enacts, "that it shall be lawful for any person or persons to export the gold or silver coin of the realm to parts beyond the seas, and to manufacture or export, or otherwise dispose of the gold or silver bullion produced thereby; and that no person who shall export or melt, &c. &c. shall be subject to any restriction, forfeiture, pain, penalty, incapacity, or disability whatever, for or in respect of such melting, &c. any thing in any act, &c. notwithstanding."

The act then expressly repeals various ancient enactments on the subject, but provides, that certain oaths shall be taken on the exportation of molten silver or bullion; which provision, however, being repealed by stat. 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 26, s. 4, there are now no restrictions whatever on melting and exporting the coin of the realm. The 14 Geo. II. c. 42, relating to the importation of light silver coin, is repealed by 6 Geo. IV. c. 105.

Counterfeiting Bullion—By stat. 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 26, s. 6, after reciting, that "whereas several mixtures of metals have been invented in imitation of gold and silver, and blanched copper is principally made use of in imitation of silver," it is enacted, "that if any person shall blanch copper for sale, or mix blanched copper with silver, or knowingly buy or sell or offer to sale blanched copper alone, or mixed with silver, or shall knowingly and fraudulently buy or sell or offer to sale any malleable composition or mixture of metal or minerals, which shall be heavier than silver, and look and touch and wear like standard gold, but be manifestly worse than standard, he shall be adjudged guilty of felony, and being thereof convicted or attainted shall suffer death." Sect. 9. Prosecution to be in three months.

This statute is made perpetual by 7 Ann. c. 25, s. 3.

VI. Making, Mending, or having in Possession any Instruments for Coining.

Stat. 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 26, s. 1, (made perpetual by stat. 7 Ann. c. 25,) enacts, that no smith, &c. or other person whatsoever (other than the persons employed in his Majesty's mints in the Tower of London or elsewhere, and for the use and service of the said mints only, or persons lawfully authorised by the lords commissioners of the treasury, or lord high treasurer of England for the time being,) shall knowingly make or mend, or begin or proceed to make or mend, or assist in the making or mending of any punchen, counterpunchen, matrix, stamp, die, pattern, or mould, of steel, iron, silver, or other metal or metals, or of spand, or fine founder's earth or sand, or of any other materials whatsoever, in or upon which there shall be or be made or impressed, or which will make or impress the figure, stamp, resemblance or similitude of both or either of the sides or flats of any gold or silver coin, current within this kingdom; nor shall knowingly make or mend, or begin or proceed to make or mend, or assist in the making or mending of any edger, or edging tool, instrument, or engine, not of common use in any trade, but contrived for making (a) of money round the edges with letters, grainings, or other marks or figures resembling those on the edges of money coined in his Majesty’s mint; nor any press for coinage, nor any cutting-engine, for cutting round blanks, by force of a screw, out of flatted bars of gold, silver, or other metal; nor shall knowingly buy or sell, hide or conceal, or without lawful authority or sufficient excuse for that purpose, knowingly have in his or their houses, custody, or possession, any such puncheon, counter-puncheon, matrix, stamp, die, edger, cutting-engine, or other tool or instrument before mentioned.
Possessing Coining Instruments.

And every such offender and offenders, their counsellors, procurers, aiders, and abettors, shall be guilty of high treason, and being thereof convicted or attainted, shall suffer death, &c.

Sect. 9. Prosecution to be in three months. But by stat. 1 Ann. st. 1, c. 9, s. 2, and 7 Ann. c. 25, s. 2, the prosecution for offences by making or mending, or beginning or proceeding to make or mend any coinage tool or instrument in the above said act prohibited, or by marking of money round the edges with letters or grainings, may be commenced at any time within six months.

Another offence is created by the second section of the same statute, which enacts, that "if any person shall, without lawful authority for that purpose, witlingly or knowingly convey or assist in conveying out of any of his Majesty's mints any puncheon, counter-puncheon, matrix, die, stamp, edger, cutting-engine, press, or other tool, engine, or instrument used for or about the coinage of monies there, or any useful part of such tools or instruments; such offenders, their counsellors, procurers, aiders, or abettors, as also all and every person and persons knowingly receiving, hiding, or concealing the same, shall be adjudged guilty of high treason, and being convicted or attainted thereof shall suffer death."

This act of Will. III. provides that no prosecution shall be made for any offence against that act, unless such prosecution be commenced within three months after such offence committed. See Willace's case, ante, 724.

In cases still within this provision it is incumbent on the prosecutor to show that the prosecution was commenced within three months. And see Phillips's case, ante, 724.

The statute 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 26, s. 1, describes many instruments of coinage; and the instrument which is the subject of the indictment, must be therein set out in such a manner as to bring it within some of the descriptions in the statute. See R. v. Leonard, 2 W. Bla. 807, 822; R. v. Bell, Fost. 430.

As to the tools or instruments which are to be considered within the statute, several points have arisen.

In Bell's case, (Fost. 430,) the prisoner was indicted for having in his custody a press for coinage without any lawful authority, &c. One of the questions raised was, whether a press for coinage was one of the tools or instruments within that clause of the act on which the indictment was founded, and a majority of the judges held that it was. See 1 Russ. 74, (note d.)

A mould for coinage is a tool or instrument within the stat. 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 26, s. 1, the unlawful custody of which is treason.

Thus in Lennard's case, the prisoner was indicted for high treason on 8 & 9 Will. III. for having in his custody and possession, without any lawful excuse, one mould made of lead, on which was made and impressed the figure, stamp, resemblance, and similitude of one of the sides or flats of a shilling, viz. the head side, &c. The prisoner being convicted, it was submitted to the judges, 1st. Whether the mould found in the prisoner's custody be comprised under the general words, "other tool or instrument before mentioned," so as to make the unlawful custody of it high treason? 2dly; If it be so comprised, whether it should not have been laid in the indictment to be a tool or instrument, in the words of the act? The judges were unanimously of opinion that the mould was a tool or instrument, mentioned in the former

(a) Quere, a misprint in the printed statute for marking. 1 East's P. C. 167. In the 8vo. ed. of the statutes, by Pickering, the word is marking.
part of the statute, and therefore included under the general words in the latter part; and that having been before expressly mentioned by name, it need not be averred in the indictment to be such tool or instrument. Teant

Dr. Lest Anisae, 1772, 1 East's P. C. 170.

Another point was afterwards raised in this case upon the form of the indictment. It appeared that the mould had only the resemblance of a shilling inverted; viz. the convex parts of the shilling being concave in the mould; and the head and letters reversed. And the court held this to be well enough laid in the indictment, as an instrument on which were "made and impressed the figure, stamp," &c.; but that it would have been better described as "a mould that would make and impress the similitude," &c. See 1 Russ. 74, and 1 East's P. C. 170.

The resemblance of the counterfeit to the genuine coin need not be exact. If the instrument impress a resemblance such as will impose on the world, that is sufficient. 1 East's P. C. 172.

The statute in that part which relates to instruments to mark the edges, is not confined to such instruments as were in use when that act was passed, it extends to newly invented instruments which will produce the same effect. Nor is it confined to such instruments as used by the hand unconnected with any engraved punch. Nor will produce the effect.

A collar of iron for graining the edges of money (although not properly an edger, nor such an instrument as was used when the act was passed,) has also been held to be within the statute; the several counts of the indictment charging the instrument to be an "edging-tool," "an instrument," and an "engine." R. v. Moore, 2 C. & P. 235; R. & M. C. C. 122.

In Ridgley's case the prisoner was indicted for feloniously and traitorously having in his possession one punchon of iron and steel, upon which was impressed and made the figure, resemblance, and similitude of the head side of a shilling without lawful authority, &c. He was charged in another count having such a punchon, which would make and impress the figure, &c. The punchon was found in the prisoner's lodging, with a quantity of bad money. This was fully proved; but the opinion of the judges was taken as to the point, whether the punchon in question was or was not a punchon within the meaning of the legislature. Upon the following evidence of the engraver of the mint, it appeared that the punchon was complete and ready for use, and that the manner of making it is this: a shilling is cut away to the outline of the head; that outline is fixed upon a piece of steel, which is filed or cut close to the outline, which makes the punchon. The punchon makes the die, which is the counter-punchon. That a punchon is complete without letters, but it may be made with letters upon it, though from the difficulty and inconvenience it is never so made at the mint; but after the die is struck the letters are engraved upon it. That a punchon alone without the counter-punchon will not make the figure. That to make an old shilling current, nothing else was necessary but such a punchon. That the punchon was hardened and ready for use; but it was impossible to say that the shillings found on the prisoner were made with it, the impression was so faint, though they had all the appearance of it. The judges (abst. De Grey, C. J.) were all of opinion that the prisoner's case came within the words of the stat. 8 & 9 Will. III. Serjeants' Inn, 23d Jan. 1779. 1 East's P. C. 171.

In John Bell's case, (Fast. 430, ante, 735,) it was decided, that a press for coinage, proper to be used for the coinage of guineas, shillings, and loaves, is within stat. 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 26. But that if it be in the person's possession for the purpose of coinage foreign coin only, that circumstance alone takes it out of the act. However, Lord C. J. Roden, and Lord Hardwicke, and Foster, J. doubted of this. See Dedon's Life of Sir M. Foster, p. 44.

It should be proved that the defendant had in his possession the die in question; and the die, when produced in evidence, must appear to be such as is capable of making an impression, so nearly resembling the current shillings,
VI.] Possessing Coining Instruments. as would be likely to impose upon persons using the ordinary caution in taking money. A puncheon, making an impression resembling the head side of the shillings coined in King William's reign, but without the letters round it, was nevertheless holden to be within the statute; for the shillings of that coinage were then in such a state, that the letters round the head were not discernible, and the puncheon was capable of making an impression resembling them in that state. R. v. Ridgeley, 1 Leach, 189, ante, 736.

But an instrument which can make part of the impression only, and which cannot possibly itself make either side of the counterfeit coin resemble the lawful current coin of the country, as, for instance, an instrument making an impression resembling the sceptre upon the half-guinea, is not within the act. R. v. Sutton, 2 Stru. 1073; Harde. 354.

Upon an indictment on this statute for having in the party's possession a die made of iron and steel, proof of a die made of either material will be sufficient. R. v. Phillips, R. & R. 369; R. v. Oxford, R. & R. 382. In the latter case it was agreed by all the judges, that in proceedings upon this stat.

An instrument making only part of the impression not within the act.

8 & 9 Will. III. c. 20, it is not necessary to prove that money was actually made with the instrument in question.

A collar of iron for grinding the edges of counterfeit money, is an instrument within this statute, although it is to be used in a coining press. R. v. Moore, 2 C. & P. 235. And evidence that the prisoner used this collar for grinding the edges of counterfeit half-crowns is admissible, although it proves the prisoner guilty of an act of coining, which is a higher species of treason. Id.

It is enacted by stat. 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 16, s. 5, that if any puncheon, die, stamp, edger, cutting-engine, press, flask, or other tool, instrument, or engine, used or designed for coining or counterfeiting gold or silver monies, or any part of such tool or engine, shall be hid or concealed in any place, or found in the house, custody, or possession of any person not employed in the coining of money in the mint, nor having the same by some lawful authority: any person whatsoever discovering the same shall seize the same, and carry them forthwith to some justice of the peace to be by him secured to be produced in evidence against any person who shall be prosecuted for any such offence. And after they have been produced in evidence, as well the same so produced as the other so seized and not produced, shall forthwith, by order of the court, (or by order and in the presence of a justice, if there be no such trial,) be totally defaced and destroyed.

The having tools for coining in possession, with intent to use them, has been held to be a misdemeanor at common law. R. v. Sutton, Cas. temp. Hardw. 370; 1 East's P. C. 172.

This is, however, a very questionable doctrine; and in evidence to support an indictment for the offence it will be necessary to prove that the defendant had in his possession the pieces of coin mentioned in the indictment, and that he knew them to be false and counterfeit, which can of course be only implied from circumstances or from the defendant's admission. Merely having counterfeit silver in the party's possession with intent to utter it as good, is no offence, for there is no criminal act done; R. v. Stewart, R. & R. 288; R. v. Heath, R. & R. 184; but procuring it with intent to utter it as good, is a misdemeanor; and having a large quantity of such coin is evidence that it was procured with such intent, unless there be circumstances to show that the defendant was the maker of it. R. v. Fuller, R. & R. 308.

The intent to utter, tender, pay, or put off the coin in question also can only be presumed from circumstances; it is a question entirely for the jury to determine, upon a consideration of all the facts and circumstances of the case. Arch. Crim. Pl. and Ec. 329.
VII. Receiving, uttering, or tendering Counterfeit Coin. (a)

These may amount to different degrees of offence according to the circumstances. If A. counterfeit the gold or silver coin current, and by agreement before such counterfeiting B. is to receive and vend the money, he is an aider and abettor to the act itself of counterfeiting, and consequently a principal traitor within the law. In the case of the copper coin, he would be an accessory before the fact to the felony within the stat. 11 Geo. III. c. 40. And if B. had done this afterwards for A.'s benefit, without any such agreement precedent to the counterfeiting, but yet knowing the fact; this seems to be the same as a receiving of the principal, because he maintains him. But if he had merely vended the money for his own benefit, knowing it to be false, in fraud of any person, he was only liable to be punished as for a cheat and misdemeanor before stat. 15 Geo. II. c. 28, hereafter mentioned. Yet if he then knew by whom it was counterfeited, it might be evidence of his concealment of the treason, and therefore a misprision of the same. 1 East P. C. 179.

If false or clipt money be found in a man's hands, if he be suspicious, he may be arrested till he have found his warrant. 3 Inst. 18; 1 Hawk. c. 17, s. 68; Hale's Sum. 21. The unlawful procuring of counterfeit coin with intent to circulate it, though no act of uttering be proved, is a misdemeanor at common law, and the possession of a large quantity of counterfeit coin, all newly finished, never having been in circulation, and of the same denomination, unaccounted for, is evidence of an unlawful procurement, with intent to circulate. R. v. Robinson and Fuller, 1 Russ. 47, 78.

The uttering and tendering in payment counterfeit copper money has been held not to be an indictable offence. This was laid down in Cwirten's case, where the prisoner was indicted (Oxford Sum. Ass. 1794, 1 East P. C. 182) for "unlawfully uttering and tendering in payment to J. H. ten counterfeit halfpence, knowing them to be counterfeit," and this was laid in the one count against the form of the statute, and in another generally. The defendant was convicted on the general count, it being admitted at the trial that there was no statute applicable to the fact. But upon reference to all the judges, (Hil. T. 1795,) they held the conviction wrong, it not being an indictable offence.

The legislature has provided against the receiving, uttering, or tendering in payment counterfeit money, by several statutes. Those which relate to the coin of the realm are the 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 26; 11 Geo. III. c. 40; and 15 Geo. II. c. 28. The stat. 37 Geo. III. c. 126, relates to foreign coin.

By stat. 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 26, s. 6, (made perpetual by 7 Ann. c. 23, s. 3,) "whoever shall take, receive, pay, or put off any counterfeit milled money, or any milled money whatsoever unlawfully diminished and not cut in pieces, at or for a lower rate or value than the same by its denomination did or shall import or was coined or counterfeited for, shall be guilty of felony." By

(a) The stat. 9 Geo. III. c. 37, s. 7, contains a provision, for the purpose of preventing the parish poor being paid in base or counterfeit coin, which enacts that if any churchwarden or overseer of any parish, township, or place, or other person authorised by them to make payments to or for the use of the poor within such parish, township, or place respectively, shall wilfully and knowingly make any such payments in any base or counterfeit money, or in any other than lawful money of Great Britain, one justice may, and he is hereby required, on complaint to summons the churchwarden, overseer, or other person charged, and in a summary way, upon his or their non-appearance or confession, or proof upon oath of one witness to adjudge the party so offending to forfeit for each offence a sum not less than 10s. nor more than 20s.; and to levy the same by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such offender, and to be applied to the use of any poor person or persons of the parish or place respectively as the justice shall appoint.
VII.]

Uttering Counterfeit Coin.

sect. 7 the corruption of blood is saved; and by sect. 9 the prosecution must be commenced within three months after the offence committed.

The putting off under these statutes means an actual passing or getting rid of the money, and not merely an attempt to do so; as by tendering it to another who returns it again, refusing to accept it; which is a distinct offence provided for by stat. 15 Geo. II. c. 28, after mentioned. See 1 East’s P. C. 179. In the case of Wooldridge, who was indicted on stat. 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 28. s. 6, for putting off counterfeit money to a Mrs. Levy, it appeared that he had carried a large quantity of such money to her house, which he had agreed to put off to her, and she to receive from him, at the rate of 20s. for every guinea; and having laid the shillings down on a table, she was proceeding to count them out at that rate, and had counted out part of the heap, when the officers entered the room and apprehended them before she could pay the prisoner for those she had selected. This was ruled not to be a completion of the offence charged and the prisoner was acquitted. 1 Leach, 251, O. B. Feb. 1784; 1 East’s P. C. 179.

The meaning of “milled money” in this statute, was considered in the case of Bunning (1 East’s P. C. 180.) Milled money is so called to distinguish it from hammered money, and all the money now current is milled, i. e. passed through a mill or press to make the plate, out of which it is cut, of a proper thickness, though by a vulgar error it is frequently supposed to mean the marking on the edges, which is properly termed graining.

In an indictment therefore for putting off milled money, it is unnecessary that the counterfeit money should appear to have been milled: for considering milled-money one word, (as if written with a hyphen,) and descriptive of the money now current, if the counterfeit resemble the money which, if genuine, would have been milled, it is enough. Bunning’s case, 1 East’s P. C. 180.

Mr. East says, he has been informed that there has been no hammered money since the time of Car. II. 1 East’s P. C. 180, (notis.)

It is necessary, in order to bring a case within this statute, that the money be vended at a lower value than the coin imports, and that it should be so stated in the indictment. And if the names of the persons to whom the money was put off can be ascertained, they ought to be mentioned, and laid severally in the indictment: but if they cannot be ascertained, the same rule will apply which prevails in the case of stealing the property of persons unknown. If the indictment be for putting off diminished money at a lower rate, it must be averred that it was unlawfully diminished. And it has been held, that an indictment upon this statute was bad, for omitting to state that the counterfeit money was “not cut in pieces,” as those words are a material part of the description of the offence. 1 Russ. 81.

By stat. 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 21, s. 1, any person to whom any silver money shall be tendered, any piece whereof shall be diminished otherwise than by reasonable wearing, or that by the stamp, impression, colour, or weight thereof, he shall suspect to be counterfeit, may cut, break, or deface such piece; and if any piece so cut, &c. shall appear to be a counterfeit, the person tendering the same shall bear the loss thereof; but if the same shall be of due weight and appear to be lawful money, the person that cut, &c. the same, shall receive the same at the rate it was coined for. And if any question arise whether the piece so cut be counterfeit, it shall be determined by the next justice of the peace, or chief magistrate in a corporation.

And by stat. 13 Geo. III. c. 71, s. 1, the same is enacted in the case of gold money so tendered.

And by stat. 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 26, s. 5, if any counterfeit or unlawfully diminished money shall be produced in any court of justice either in evidence or otherwise, the judge shall cause it to be cut in pieces in open court, or in the presence of a justice of the peace, and then to be delivered to or for the person to whom it belongs.

This statute mentioning “counterfeit money” generally, must, it seems, be confined to gold or silver coin, in the manner before described: but by stat. 11 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 2, “if any person shall buy, sell, take, receive, pay, or put off any counterfeit copper coin not melted down or cut in pieces, at or for a lower rate or value than the same by its denomination imports or was counterfeit for, he shall be adjudged guilty of felony." 1 East's P. C. 179.

The punishment under the above-mentioned statutes of Will. III. and Geo. III. was burning in the hand, and imprisonment not exceeding a year, and also under stat. 18 Eliz. c. 7, s. 3; but the punishment of burning in the hand is abolished by stat. 19 Geo. III. c. 74, s. 3, and in lieu thereof the offender is subjected to a moderate fine or whipping at the discretion of the court. R. v. West and others, O. B. Sept. 1780; 1 East's P. C. 181.

The 8 & 9 Will. III. as we have seen, relating only to the putting off counterfeit money at a lower rate or value than that imported by its denomination, did not provide against the uttering such money in the course of traffic: that offence was punishable only as a misdemeanor, until the frequency of its occurrence attracted the attention of the legislature, who thought it expedient to subject it to more severe punishment.

For this purpose the stat. 15 Geo. II. c. 28, was passed: by sect. 2 of which, after reciting, “whereas the uttering of false money, knowing it to be false, is a crime frequently committed all over the kingdom, and the offenders therein are not deterred by reason that it is only a misdemeanor, and the punishment very often but small, though there be great reason to believe that the common utterers of such false money are either themselves the coiners or in confederacy with the coiners thereof,” it is enacted, “that if any person whatsoever shall after the said 29th day of September utter or tender in payment any false or counterfeit money, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, to any person or persons, and shall be thereof convicted, such person so offending shall suffer six months' imprisonment, and find sureties for his or her good behaviour for six months more, to be computed from the end of the said first six months; and if the same person shall afterwards be convicted a second time of the like offence of uttering or tendering in payment any false or counterfeit money, knowing the same to be so, such person shall for such second offence suffer two years' imprisonment, and find sureties for his or her good behaviour for two years more, to be computed from the end of the said first two years; and if the same person shall afterwards offend a third time in uttering or tendering in payment any false or counterfeit money, knowing the same to be so, and shall be convicted of such third offence, he or she shall and is hereby adjudged to be guilty of felony without benefit of clergy.”

Sect. 3 enacts, “that if any person whatsoever shall after the said 29th day of September utter or tender in payment any false or counterfeit money, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, to any person or persons, and shall either the same day or within the space of ten days then next utter or tender in payment any more or other false or counterfeit money, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, to the same person or persons, or to any other person or persons, or shall at the time of such uttering or tendering have about him or her, in his or her custody, one or more piece or pieces of counterfeit money, besides what was so uttered or tendered, then such person so uttering or tendering the same shall be deemed and taken to be a common utterer of false money, and being thereof convicted shall suffer a year’s imprisonment, and shall find sureties for his or her good behaviour for two years more, to be computed from the end of the said year; and if any person having been once so convicted as a common utterer of false money, shall afterwards again utter or tender in payment any false or counterfeit money to any person or persons, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, then such person being thereof convicted shall for such second offence be and is hereby adjudged to be guilty of felony without benefit of clergy.”

Sect. 4 provides against corruption of blood and loss of dower.

By sect. 5, offenders shall be indicted, arraigned, tried, and convicted by such like evidence and in such manner as counterfeiters of the coin; with a proviso that the prosecution be commenced within six months next after the offence committed.
VII.]

Uttering Counterfeit Coin.

By sect. 8, any offender out of prison discovering two or more persons guilty of any of the said offences, so as they be thereof convicted, shall be pardoned.

This statute also mentioning counterfeit money generally, must be confined to the gold and silver coin of the realm. 1 Hale, 211; see Cirewan's case, ante, 738.

The words of the statute "utter or tender in payment" are in the disjunctive, and will therefore apply to an uttering of counterfeit money, though it be not tendered in payment, but passed by the common trick called ringing the changes, as in the following case:—The prosecutor having bargained with the prisoner, a Jew, who was selling fruit about the streets, to have five apricots for sixpence, gave him a good shilling to change. The prisoner put the shilling into his mouth as if to bite it in order to try its goodness; and returning a shilling to the prosecutor, told him it was a bad one. The prosecutor gave him another good shilling, which he also affected to bite, and then returned another shilling saying it was not a good one. The prosecutor gave him another good shilling, with which he practised this trick a third time, the shillings returned by him being in every instance bad. The court held that the words of the statute were sufficient to include this case; and that uttering and tendering in payment were two distinct and independent acts. Frank's case, 2 Leach, 64; 1 Russ. 82.

Some disputed points have arisen as to the form of the indictment on this statute. In Tandy's case the indictment charged the prisoner in the first count, with having on the 15th of December, 39 Geo. III. uttered to one G. S. a counterfeit half-crown, knowing it to be so; and in the second count with having on the said 15th of December, &c. uttered another counterfeit half-crown to the same person. The prisoner having been convicted on both counts, it was referred by Mr. Justice Heath to the judges to consider what judgment was proper to be passed on this record; in Hilary Term, 1799, the judges held, that this indictment was not sufficient to subject the prisoner to the larger penalty, as for uttering two pieces of counterfeit coin on the same day, there being no distinct averment of that fact: and it was thought advisable only to give judgment of imprisonment for six months singly, and not on each of the counts. 1 East's P. C. 182; 2 Leach, 833.

But where two utterings are charged in one count of the indictment on a certain day therein named, the day shall be held to be material, and the fact of an uttering twice on the same day to be sufficiently averred: as where the indictment charged that the prisoner on the 14th of February, &c. uttered base coin to W. C.; and that on the said 14th of February, &c. he uttered to J. L. other base coin, it was held sufficient to warrant the higher punishment of the third section of the statute, the utterings on the face of the indictment appearing to be on the same day. And the judges held at a conference upon this case, that though when the day is not material, the fact may be proved on a day different from the day laid, yet where the day is not indifferent, the precise time laid must be proved; and that in this case it must be taken that it was proved that the defendant uttered counterfeit coin at two different times of the same day. Martin's case, Derby Lent Assizes, 1801, 2 Leach, 923; 1 East's P. C. Addend. xviii; Bayley, J. 1 Russ. 82.

The defendant may be adjudged to suffer the punishment imposed by 15 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 3, although there be no averment in the indictment that the defendant was a common utterer of false money.

When Tandy's case was considered by the judges, it appears that some doubt was entertained whether a count charging two such utterings on the same day, should not, to bring an offender within the third clause, conclude with an averment that the offender was a common utterer of false money, as that clause declares him to be. But this doubt was shortly after solved in the case of James Smith, who was indicted for uttering false money knowingly, and having about him at the time of such uttering other false money. Upon conviction, judgment was respited to take the opinion of the judges, whether to bring the case within the third section the indictment should not have concluded with a distinct averment that the defendant was a common utterer.

Stat. 15 Geo. 2, applies to counterfeit money passed by the trick of ringing the changes. Charging two utterings on the same day, each in a different count, will not warrant a judgment on stat. 15 Geo. 2. c. 56, s. 2.
of false money; or whether there was not the necessary conclusion of law from the facts stated: and the judges, upon search of precedents for many years back, finding that judgment had been given for the greater punishment upon indictments drawn in this form, although some were to be found containing the averment in question, held such averment, though it would not hurt, was not necessary in order to warrant the greater punishment. Maidstone Summer Assizes, 1709, cor. Buller, J. 1 East's P. C. 183; 2 Leach, 638; R. & R. 5. The same judgment was given in the case of Benjamin Levi reserved at the time.

And similarly it was held not to be necessary in an indictment for a second offence against the statute, to state that the court before which the former trial was had, did adjudge the defendant to be a common utterer. The indictment charged that the defendant was before that time in due form of law tried and convicted at the Guildford quarter sessions, on a certain indictment against him for uttering false and counterfeit coin, knowing it to be such, having about him at the time in his custody and possession other false and counterfeit money; and that it was thereupon adjudged by the court that he should be Imprisoned for a year, and until he found sureties for his good behaviour for two years more: and then averred, that having been convicted as a common utterer of false money, he afterwards uttered false and counterfeit money. The objection taken in arrest of judgment, and which was reserved for the opinion of the judges, was this, that in stating the original record and judgment of the court of quarter sessions, (where the defendant had been previously convicted,) it is not stated that the court did adjudge the defendant to be a common utterer, but only that they considered and adjudged the prisoner to be imprisoned twelve months, and to find surety for his good conduct two years more. But the judges held, that it was not necessary that the court should adjudge the defendant to be a common utterer, though the statute says he shall be deemed and taken to be a common utterer, that being a conclusion of law; and it being sufficient for the court before which a defendant is convicted of an offence within the statute, to adjudge him to suffer the punishment inflicted by law for the offence. Michael's case, O. B. Feb. 1802, 1 East's P. C. Addend. vi.: 2 Leach, 938; R. v. Booth, R. & R. 7.

An indictment upon the second section of this act, 15 Geo. III. for the felony, and judgments for misdemeanors on the same statute, must set out the former convictions and judgments with a prout patet per recordum: and judgment for a misdemeanor cannot be given upon an indictment for felony bad for want of form of such an averment. R. v. Turner, R. & M. C. C. 47: see R. & R. C. C. 5, 7; and 1 Russ. 85.

By section 5 of the foregoing statute it is ordered that offenders shall be indicted, arraigned, tried, and convicted by such like evidence and in such manner as counterfeiters of the coin.

Proof that the defendant knew it to be counterfeit money at the time he uttered it, must of course rest on circumstantial evidence. If, for instance, it be proved that he uttered either on the same day or other times base money of the same description to the same or to a different person, or had other pieces of base money about him when he uttered the counterfeit money in question, this will be evidence from which the jury may presume a guilty knowledge. Per Thompson, B. in R. v. Whiley et al. 2 Leach, 983.

If a man utter a bad shilling and fifty other bad shillings are found upon him, this would bring him within the description of a common utterer; but if the indictment do not contain that charge, yet these circumstances may be given in evidence among other charges of uttering, to show that he uttered the money with a knowledge of its being bad. Per curiam. 2 Leach, 983; see also Ball's case, 1 Campb. 325; and Phil. on Ev. 137.

An associate not present, nor co-operating at an uttering of bad money, is not liable to be convicted with the actual utterer, merely on the ground that he is an utterer also, and has other bad money about him for the purpose of uttering.
VIII. Uttering Counterfeit Coin.

A man and woman were indicted for uttering a bad shilling to M. B., they having another bad shilling in their possession at the time. The uttering was by the woman alone, in the absence of the man. It was held by the twelve judges, that the man was not liable to be convicted with the actual utterer, although proved to be the associate of the woman on the day of the uttering, and to have had other bad money for the purpose of uttering. And it was also held, that the woman could not be convicted of the second offence of having other bad money in her possession at the time, on the evidence of her associating with a man not present at the uttering, but having large quantities of bad money about him for the purpose of uttering. R. v. Else and another, R. & R. 142.

If two prisoners are indicted for uttering a counterfeit shilling, and having another counterfeit shilling in their possession, it is not necessary to prove with certainty which of the pieces was the one uttered, and which found on them not uttered, if both the pieces of money are proved to be counterfeit. R. v. Skerritt, 2 C. & P. 427.

Where it appeared that two prisoners went to a shop, and that one of them went in and uttered the bad piece of money, having no more in her possession, and the other sold outside the shop having other bad money, it was held that both might be convicted, the uttering and the possession being joint. Id.

The 9th section of 15 Geo. II. c. 28, enacts, that if any person shall be convicted of uttering or tendering any false or counterfeit money as aforesaid, and shall afterwards be guilty of the like offence in any other county or city, the clerk of the assize or the clerk of the peace for the county or city where such conviction was so had, shall, at the request of the prosecutor or any other on his Majesty's behalf, certify the same by a transcript in a few words, containing the effect and tenor of such conviction; for which certificate two shillings and sixpence, and no more, shall be paid; and such certificate being produced in court shall be sufficient proof of such former conviction.

By this it seems that justices of the peace in sessions have power to try such offenders; otherwise this direction to the clerk of the peace to certify the conviction is incongruous; for he is not the proper person to certify what is done in another court, where he is not necessarily supposed to be present; but no power is given to the sessions by any express words in this statute to hear and determine such offences. 1 Russ. 56.

VIII. Uttering, Tendering, &c. Foreign Counterfeit Coin.

The stat. 37 Geo. III. c. 126, after reciting, ante, 725, enacts by sect. 4, that if any person or persons shall from and after the passing of this act utter or tender in payment, or give in exchange, or pay or put off to any person or persons any such false or counterfeit coin as aforesaid, resembling or made with intent to resemble or look like any gold or silver coin of any foreign prince, state, or country, or to pass as such foreign coin, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, and shall be thereof convicted, every person so offending shall suffer six months' imprisonment, and find sureties for his or her good behaviour for six months more, to be computed from the end of the said first six months; and if the same person shall afterwards be convicted a second time for the like offence of uttering or tendering in payment, or giving in exchange, or paying or putting off any such false or counterfeit coin as aforesaid, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, such person shall for such second offence suffer two years' imprisonment, and find sureties for his or her good behaviour for two years' more, to be computed from the end of the said first two years; and if the same person shall afterwards offend a third time in uttering or tendering in payment, or giving in exchange, or paying or putting off any such false or counterfeit coin as aforesaid, knowing the same to be false or counterfeit, and shall be convicted of such third offence, he or she shall be adjudged to be guilty of felony without benefit of clergy. See Clergy. Benefit of, Vol. 1.

Sect. 5. That if any person shall be convicted of uttering or tendering any such false or counterfeit coin as aforesaid, and shall afterwards be guilty of the like offence in any other county, city, or place, the clerk of the assize or clerk of the peace for the county, city, or place where such former conviction shall have been had, shall, at the request of the prosecutor or any other in His Majesty's behalf, certify the same by a transcript in few words, containing the effect and tenor of such conviction; for which certificate two shillings and sixpence, and no more, shall be paid, and such certificate being produced in court shall be sufficient proof of such former conviction.

Sect. 7. That it shall and may be lawful to and for any one justice of the peace on complaint made before him upon the oath of one credible person, that there is just cause to suspect that any one or more person or persons is or are or hath or have been concerned in making or counterfeiting any such false or counterfeit coin as aforesaid, resembling or made with an intent to resemble or look like any gold or silver coin of any foreign prince, state, or country, or to pass as such foreign coin, by warrant under the hand of such justice to cause the dwellinghouse, room, workshop, outhouse, or other building, yard, garden, or other place belonging to such suspected person or persons, or where any such person or persons shall be suspected to carry on any such making or counterfeiting, to be searched for any such false or counterfeit coin, or for tools or implements for coining such false or counterfeit coin, or for materials for making or coining the same; and if any such false or counterfeit coin or any such tools or instruments, or any such materials for making any such false or counterfeit coin shall be found in any place so searched, or if any such tools, implements, or materials shall be found in the custody or possession of any such person or persons whomsoever, not having the same by some lawful authority, it shall and may be lawful to and for any person or persons whatsoever discovering the same to seize, and he and they are hereby authorised and required to seize such false or counterfeit coin, tools, implements, and materials, and to carry the same forthwith to a justice of the peace of the county, city, or place where the same shall be seized, who shall cause the same to be secured and produced in evidence against any person or persons who shall or may be prosecuted for any of the offences aforesaid, in some court of justice proper for the determination thereof; and after such time as any such false or counterfeit coin, or any such tools, implements, or materials, shall have been produced in evidence as aforesaid, as well as much and such parts thereof as shall have been so produced as every other part thereof so seized and not made use of in evidence, shall forthwith, by order of the court where such offender or offenders shall be tried, or by order of some justice or justices of the peace in case there shall be no such trial, be defaced or destroyed or otherwise disposed of as such justice or justices shall direct.

Sect. 9 limits actions for acts, &c. to three months, and gives the general issue treble costs.

Having in custody a greater number than five pieces of counterfeit foreign coin, whether current here or not, makes the party liable to punishment by proceedings before a justice of the peace.

This is provided by the 6th section, which enacts, that if any person shall have in his custody, without lawful excuse, more than five pieces of any false or counterfeit coin of any kind resembling or made with intent to resemble any gold or silver coin of any foreign country, or to pass as such foreign coin, he shall be convicted upon the oath of one witness before one justice forfeit the same, which shall be cut in pieces and destroyed by order of such justice; and shall also forfeit not exceeding 5l. nor less than 40s. for every piece found in his custody, half to the informer and half to the poor; and if not forthwith paid, such offender may be committed to the goal or house.
Passing for other than Legal Value.

of correction to hard labour for three calendar months, or until such penalty shall be paid.

IX. Receiving or Paying for the Current Coin any more or less than its Lawful Value.

The coining and legitimation of money, and the giving it its current value, are the unquestionable prerogatives of the crown; though great doubt has been entertained whether by force of the statutes 25 Edw. III. c. 13, 9 Hen. V. st. 2, c. 6, and other acts settling the standard of sterling, the King is not now restrained from altering it by increasing the alloy. But at this day it is the less necessary to consider the point, because the impolicy of the act is alone sufficient to prevent the attempt from being made, unless the marketable and relative value of gold and silver should sensibly alter. 1 East’s P. C. 148; 1 Hale, 188; 4 Bla. Com. 88.

No person can be enforced to take in payment any money but of lawful metal, that is, of silver or gold, except for sums under sixpence. 2 Inst. 5, 7; 1 Hale, 195.

By stat. 14 Geo. III. c. 92, s. 4, 5, no other weight than such as shall be stamped or marked by the officer appointed by his Majesty for that purpose, shall be sufficient in law for determining the weight of the gold and silver coin of this realm. And if any person shall counterfeit such stamp or mark, or knowingly sell any weight with the impression of such counterfeit stamp thereon; or shall wilfully increase and diminish any such weight after it has been so stamped or marked; or use any such weight in weighing the gold and silver coin of this realm, knowing the same to be so increased or diminished, he shall on conviction before two justices forfeit any sum not exceeding 50l., half to the King and half to him that shall inform or sue; and in default of payment he shall be committed to the common gaol or house of correction for any time not exceeding three months.

The statute 5 and 6 Edw. VI. c. 19, after reciting that “divers covetous persons of their own authorities have of late taken upon them to make exchanges, as well of coined gold as of coined silver, receiving and paying therefore more in value than hath been declared by the King’s proclamation to be current for within this his realm and other his dominions, to the great hindrance of the commonwealth of this realm,” enacts, “that if any person or persons, after the 1st day of April next coming, exchange any coined gold, coined silver, or money, giving, receiving or paying any more in value, benefit, profit or advantage for it, than the same is or shall be declared by the King’s Majesty’s proclamation to be current for within this his Highness’s realm and other his dominions, that then all the said coined gold, silver and money so exchanged, and every part and parcel thereof, shall be forfeit, and the parties so offending shall suffer imprisonment by the space of one whole year, and make fine at the King’s pleasure: the one moiety of the said gold, silver or coin so forfeited to be to the King our sovereign Lord, and the other moiety to be to the party that seizeth the same, or will sue for it by bill, plaint, original action of debt, information or otherwise, in any of the King’s courts of record; in which suit no essoin, protection, or wager of law shall lie, be allowed, or admitted.”

In the cases of R. v. Young and R. v. Wright, it was urged that the exchanging guineas for bank notes, at a higher value than they were current for by the King’s proclamation, was not an offence within this statute; and, after solemn arguments before the judges, the objection was held good. 14 East, 402, 404.

In consequence of this decision, the 51 Geo. III. c. 127, and the 52 Geo. III. c. 50, (continued by the 53 Geo. III. c. 5, to the 25th March, 1814, and further continued by 54 Geo. III. c. 52, during the continuance of any act imposing any restriction on the Bank of England with respect to payments in cash) made several provisions upon this subject, which have now ceased by the operation of the 59 Geo. III. c. 49, s. 1, which removed the restrictions on payments in cash, under the several Bank acts, on the 1st of May, 1823. 1 Russ. 89.

The stat. 56 Geo. III. c. 68, has made several provisions as to receiving the current gold coin for more or less than its value, according to its denomination. They are as follows:—

By 56 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 13, it is enacted, "that no person shall by any means, device, shift, or contrivance whatsoever, receive or pay for any gold coin lawfully current within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland any more or less in value, benefit, profit or advantage, than the true lawful value which such gold coin doth or shall by its denomination import; nor shall utter or receive any piece or pieces of gold coin of this realm at any greater or higher rate or value, nor at any less or lower rate or value, than the same shall be current for in payment, according to the rates and values declared and set upon them pursuant to law; and that every person who shall offend herein shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of a misdemeanour, and being thereof convicted by due course of law, shall suffer imprisonment for the term of six calendar months, and shall find sureties for his or her good behaviour for one year more, to be computed from the end of the said six months; and if the same person shall afterwards be convicted of the like offence, such person shall, for such second offence, suffer one year's imprisonment, and find sureties for his or her good behaviour for one year more, to be computed from the end of the said last mentioned year; and if the same person shall afterwards offend against this act, and shall by due course of law be convicted of any subsequent offence, he or she shall be imprisoned for the term of two years for every such subsequent offence."

By s. 14, "if any person, who shall be convicted of receiving or paying any such gold coin contrary to this act, shall afterwards be guilty of the like offence, the clerk of the assize, or clerk of the peace for the county, city or place where such conviction was so had, shall, at the request of the prosecutor, or any other person, on his Majesty's behalf, certify such conviction, for which certificate 2s. 6d., and no more, shall be paid; and such certificate, being produced in court shall be sufficient proof of such former conviction."

By s. 15, "no person against whom any bill of indictment shall be found at any assizes or sessions of the peace, for any offence against this act, shall be entitled to traverse to any subsequent assizes or sessions; but the court at which such bill of indictment shall be found, shall forthwith proceed to try the person or persons against whom the same shall be found, unless he, she, or they, shall show good cause, to be allowed by the court, why his, her, or their trial should be postponed."

By s. 16, "that on any prosecution or trial of any offender or offenders, hereafter to be prosecuted or tried for any offence against this act, it shall not be necessary to prove that the gold coin received, or paid, or uttered contrary to this act, is the current gold coin of this realm; but the same shall be deemed and taken so to be, if received, or paid or uttered as such, until the contrary thereof shall be proved to the satisfaction of the judge, justice or court before whom any such offender or offenders shall be prosecuted or tried."

---

X. Tokens.

Bank Tokens]—The governor and company of the Bank of England, for the convenience of the public, were, by stat. 44 Geo. III. c. 71, empowered to issue certain silver dollars, and provision was therein made against the counterfeiting and uttering counterfeits; and the governor and company, for the further convenience of the public, were, by stat. 51 Geo. III. c. 116, authorised to issue certain silver pieces called tokens, for 5s. and 1s. 6d. each; and persons uttering or vending counterfeits were, by 52 Geo. III. c. 138, subject to certain punishments imposed by the said acts.
But upon the issuing of the new current silver coin, the further circulation of these tokens was prohibited, after the 25th of March, 1818, by 57 Geo. III. c. 113; extended (by stat. 58 Geo. III. c. 14,) to the 5th of July, 1818, and further to the 5th of April, 1819, &c.

By 57 Geo. III. c. 113, s. 1, if "any person or persons shall from and after the said 25th day of March, 1818, utter, offer or tender in payment, or give in exchange, or pass, circulate or put off, any such dollar or tokens, whether the value thereof shall be paid or given in money or goods, or in any other manner whatsoever, every person so offending, and being thereof convicted upon the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, before one or more of his Majesty’s justices of the peace acting for the county, riding, city or place within which such offence shall be committed, shall for every such dollar or token so uttered, offered, tendered in payment, given in exchange, or passed, circulate or put off, contrary to the prohibition hereinbefore contained, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 5l. nor less than 40s., at the discretion of the justice or justices of the peace who shall hear and determine such offence: provided that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to prevent any person or persons from presenting any such dollars or tokens for payment to the governor and company of the Bank of England, or at any time before the 25th day of March, 1820, or to any of their officers or servants, or to discharge or excuse the said governor and company from their liability to pay the same before the said 25th day of March, 1820: provided also, that nothing herein contained shall restrain or prevent any person or persons, after the 25th day of March next, from selling or disposing of any such dollars or tokens as aforesaid as old silver, according to the weight thereof, at the current price of silver, and without regard to the nominal or current value at which the same shall have been circulated."

Sect. 2. “That it shall be lawful for any justice or justices of the peace acting for the county, riding, city or place within which any offence against this act shall be committed, to hear and determine the same in a summary way; and such justice or justices, upon any information exhibited, or complaint made upon oath in that behalf, shall summon the person or persons accused, and also the witnesses on either side, and shall examine into the matter of fact, and upon due proof made thereof, either by the voluntary confession of the person or persons accused, or by the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, which oath such justice or justices is or are hereby authorised to administer, shall convict the offender or offenders, and adjudge the penalty for such offence.”

Sect. 3. “That if any person shall be summoned as a witness to give evidence before such justice or justices, either on the part of the informer or prosecutor, or of the person or persons accused, and shall neglect or refuse to appear at the time or place to be for that purpose appointed, without a reasonable excuse for such his neglect or refusal, to be allowed by such justice or justices, then such person shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of 20l., to be levied and paid in such manner and by such means as are directed for recovery of other penalties under this act.”

Sect. 6. “That the pecuniary penalties and forfeitures hereby incurred and made payable upon any conviction against this act, shall be forthwith paid by the person or persons convicted as follows; one moiety of the forfeiture to the informer, and the other moiety to the poor of the parish or place where the offence shall be committed; and in case the person or persons so convicted shall refuse or neglect to pay the same, or to give sufficient security, to the satisfaction of such justice or justices, to prosecute any appeal against such conviction, such justice or justices shall, by warrant under his or their hand and seal or seals and seals, cause the same to be levied by distress and sale of the offender’s goods and chattels, together with all costs and charges attending such distress and sale, returning the surplus (if any) to the owner or owners.”

Sect. 8. “That if no sufficient distress can be had, then and in such case the said justice or justices shall and may commit such offender or offenders, to be levied and applied.

Witnesses not attending.

Penalties 20l.

Penalties how levied and applied.

Appeal.

Offenders committed for want of distress.
LOCAL TOKENS.

57 Geo. 3, c. 112.

Appeal on notice.

Recognition.

Notice not less than eight days before trial.

Costs.

Final.

52 Geo. 3, c. 157.

LOCAL TOKENS]—The 52 Geo. III. c. 157, prohibited the circulation of local tokens of gold, silver or mixed metal after the 25th of March, 1813, but that period was extended, by 53 Geo. III. c. 19, to the 5th of July, 1813. By 53 Geo. III. c. 114, after reciting that "whereas an act passed in this session of parliament, intituled 'An Act to amend an act of the last session of parliament, to prevent the issuing and circulating of pieces of gold and silver, or other metal, usually called tokens, except such as are issued by the Banks of England and Ireland respectively,' and whereas it is expedient that the period limited in the said act for the circulation of pieces of gold or silver and mixed metals, in the said act specified and denominated tokens, should be further extended, and that the said act should be amended," it is enacted, "that so much of the said recited act as prohibits the circulation of any such tokens as are in the said recited act described, after the 5th day of July, 1813, shall be and the same is hereby repealed."

Sect. 2. "That from and after six weeks from the commencement of the next session of parliament, no piece of gold or silver, or of any mixed metal composed partly of gold or silver, of whatever name the same may be, shall pass or circulate as a token for money, or as purporting that the bearer or holder thereof is entitled to demand any value denoted thereon, either by letters, words, figures, mark or otherwise, whether such value is to be paid or given in money or goods, or other value, or in any manner whatsoever; and every person who shall, after six weeks from the commencement of the next session of parliament circulate or pass as for any nominal value in money or goods any such token, shall for every such token so circulated or passed, whether such person shall be or have been concerned in the original issuing or circulation of any such token, or only the bearer or holder thereof for the time being, forfeit any sum not less than 5l. nor more than 10l., at the discretion of such justice or justices of the peace who shall hear and determine such offence: provided that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to prevent any person from presenting any such token for payment to the original issuer thereof, or to discharge or excuse any such original issuer from his liability to pay the same."

Sect. 4. "That nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to authorise or make legal the issuing of any promissory note, not being a token composed of gold or silver, or of mixed metal composed partly of gold or silver, which cannot now be issued by law."

Sect. 5. "That nothing in this act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to any tokens issued or circulated by or under the authority of the governor and company of the Bank of England, or by or under the authority of the governor and company of the Bank of Ireland respectively; or in any manner to affect any such tokens or the circulation thereof; or to subject any company or companies, or person or persons, to any penalty for issuing or circulating any such tokens."
X.]

Local Tokens.

Sect. 4. Justices of the peace are empowered to hear and determine offences in a summary way.

Sect. 5. Witnesses not attending on summons to forfeit 20l., to be levied (as other penalties under these acts) by distress.

Sect. 9. Justices are empowered to detain offenders in custody until return can be had of any warrant of distress.

Sect. 10. In default of distress offenders may be committed to the common gaol or house of correction for three calendar months, unless the penalty be sooner paid, or the offender give notice of appeal to the next general quarter sessions, and enter into recognizance to try such appeal. Determination of sessions to be final.

By stat. 57 Geo. III. c. 46, s. 1, after reciting that "whereas various pieces of copper, and mixed metals composed in part of copper, usually denominated tokens, have lately been, and are issued and circulated, by persons residing in various parts of the United Kingdom, in great quantities, as money, and for a nominal value of the metals of which they are composed; and whereas it is expedient that the further making and issuing of such tokens should be prohibited, and that the circulation of those already made or issued should also be prohibited after a limited period." it is enacted, "that from and after the passing of this act, no piece of copper, or mixed metal composed in part of copper, of whatever value the same may be, shall be made or manufactured or originally issued as a token for money, or as purporting that the bearer or holder thereof is entitled to demand any value denoted thereon, either by letters, words, figures, marks or otherwise, whether such value is to be paid or given in money or goods, or in any manner whatsoever; and every person who shall, after the passing of this act, make or manufacture or originally issue, or cause or procure to be made, manufactured or originally issued, or permit or suffer to be so issued, on his or her behalf, as for nominal value in money or goods, any such token, shall for every token so made, manufactured or issued, or procured or permitted to be so made, manufactured or issued as aforesaid, forfeit any sum not less than 1l. nor more than 5l., at the discretion of the justice or justices of the peace who shall hear and determine such offence."

Sect. 2. "That from and after the 1st day of January, 1818, no piece of copper, or of any mixed metal composed partly of copper, of whatever value the same may be, shall pass or circulate as a token for money, or as purporting that the bearer or holder thereof is entitled to demand any value denoted thereon, either by letters, words, figures, marks, or otherwise, whether such value is to be paid or given in money or goods or other value, or in any manner whatsoever; and every person who shall, after the said 1st of January, 1818, circulate or pass, as for any nominal value in money or goods, any such token, shall, for every such token so circulated or passed, whether such person shall be or have been concerned in the original issuing or circulation of any such token, or only the bearer or holder thereof for the time being, forfeit any sum not less than 2s. nor more than 10s., at the discretion of the justice or justices of the peace who shall hear and determine such offence; provided that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to prevent any person from presenting any such token for payment to the original issuer thereof, or to discharge or excuse any such original issuer from his liability to pay the same: provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed as affecting any tokens which have been or may be issued by the Bank of England."

Sect. 3. "And whereas certain tokens made of copper or of a mixed metal composed partly of copper, and bearing the superscription 'Sheffield Penny Token,' were issued from time to time during the years 1812, 1813, 1814, and 1815, by the overseers of the poor of the township of Sheffield, in the county of York; and whereas the immediate suppression of the circulation of LOCAL TOKENS.

57 Geo. 3. c. 66.

Sheffield penny tokens issued for the relief of the poor may circulate until 25th March, 1823.

Overseers of the poor of Sheffield to pay 1d. for their tokens.

Justice upon complaint may summon overseers.

Overseers may pay such penny out of poor's rates.

Overseers of the poor of Sheffield may call in tokens before 25th March, 1823.

Birmingham penny tokens issued for the relief of the poor may circulate until 25th March, 1820.

Overseers of the poor of Birmingham to pay 1d. for their tokens.

the aforesaid tokens would be attended with great loss to the said township of Sheffield and to the holders thereof, who are for the most part labourers and mechanics, as well as with great inconvenience to the inhabitants of the town of Sheffield and the neighbourhood thereof; be it further enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to prevent such tokens as aforesaid from being passed and circulated at any time previous to the 25th day of March which will be in the year of our Lord 1823; provided always, that from and after the said 25th day of March, 1823, all and every the provisions of this act shall be construed to prevent such tokens as aforesaid from being passed and circulated."

Sect. 4. "That in case any token or tokens made of copper, or of a mixed metal composed partly of copper, with the superscription "Sheffield Penny Token," and which has or have been issued by the overseers of the poor of the township of Sheffield, at any time previous to the passing of this act, shall, after the 25th day of March, 1828, and previous to the 25th day of September, 1823, be presented to the overseers of the poor of the township of Sheffield for the time being, or their agent, at the workhouse of the said township, the said overseers shall receive and take such token or tokens as aforesaid, paying to the holder or holders thereof one penny of the current coin of the realm for each and every token so presented as aforesaid; and in case such overseers or their agent shall neglect or refuse to receive and take such token as aforesaid, and to pay one penny for the same as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for one justice of the peace, upon complaint upon oath in that behalf made, to summon such overseers or their agent, and after hearing the parties upon both sides, to direct and order (if he shall see just cause) the said overseers of the poor or their agent to take and receive such token as aforesaid, and to pay one penny for the same as aforesaid, together with all costs and charges whatever attending such complaint so made before such justice: provided always, that it shall and may be lawful for the overseers of the poor of the said township of Sheffield to pay such penny as aforesaid out of any money received by them for the relief and maintenance of the poor of the said township; but that it shall not be lawful for the said overseers of the poor to pay the costs and charges attending any such complaint as aforesaid out of any money received by them as aforesaid."

Sect. 5. "That in case the overseers of the poor for the township of Sheffield for the time being shall at any time previous to the said 25th of March, 1823, deem it advisable to call in such tokens as aforesaid, or any amount of them, it shall and may be lawful for them to take such measures as may to them seem necessary for that purpose; paying, however, for each and every token so called in, one penny of the current coin of the realm, out of any money received by them for the relief and maintenance of the poor of the said township of Sheffield."

Sect. 6. "And whereas certain other tokens made of copper, or of a mixed metal composed partly of copper, and bearing the superscription "Birmingham, One Penny," were issued from time to time during the years 1811, 1812, 1813, 1814, and 1815, by the overseers of the poor of the parish of Birmingham, in the county of Warwick: and whereas the immediate suppression of the circulation of the aforesaid tokens would be attended with great loss to the said parish of Birmingham, and to the holders thereof, as well as with great inconvenience to the inhabitants of the town of Birmingham and the neighbourhood thereof; be it further enacted, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to prevent such tokens as aforesaid from being passed and circulated at any time previous to the 25th day of March, 1820; provided always, that from and after the said 25th of March, 1820, all and every the provisions of this act shall be construed to prevent such tokens as aforesaid from being passed and circulated."

Sect. 7. "That in case any token or tokens made of copper, or of a mixed metal composed partly of copper, with the superscription "Birmingham, One Penny," and which have been issued by the overseers of the poor of Birmingham, ham at any time previous to the passing of this act, shall, after the 25th day of March, 1820, and previous to the 25th day of September, 1820, be presented to the overseers of the poor of Birmingham, or their agent, at the workhouse of the said parish, the said overseers shall receive and take such token or tokens as aforesaid, paying to the holder or holders thereof one penny of the current coin of the realm for each and every token so presented as aforesaid; and in case such overseers or their agent shall neglect or refuse to receive and take such token as aforesaid, and to pay one penny as aforesaid for the same, it shall and may be lawful for one justice of the peace, upon complaint upon oath in such behalf made, to summon such overseers or their agent, and after hearing the parties upon either side to direct and order (if he shall see just cause) the said overseers of the poor or their agent to take and receive such token as aforesaid, and to pay one penny for the same as aforesaid, together with all costs and charges whatever attending such complaint so made before such justice: provided always, that it shall and may be lawful for the overseers of the poor of the parish of Birmingham to pay such penny as aforesaid out of any money received by them for the relief and maintenance of the poor of the said parish; but that it shall not be lawful for them to pay the costs and charges attending any complaint out of such money.”
Local Tokens.

Sect. 8. “That in case the overseers of the poor of Birmingham shall, at any time previous to the said 25th day of March, 1820, deem it advisable to call in such tokens as aforesaid, or any amount of them, it shall and may be lawful for them to take such measures as may to them seem necessary for that purpose; paying however, for each and every such token so called in, one penny of the current coin of the realm, from and out of any money received by them for the relief and maintenance of the poor of the said township of Birmingham.”

Sect. 9. “That it shall be lawful for any justice or justices of the peace acting for the county, riding, city, or place within which any offence against this act shall be committed, to hear and determine the same in a summary way; and such justice or justices, upon any information exhibited, or complaint made upon oath in that behalf, shall summon the party accused, and also the witnesses on either side, and shall examine into the matter of fact; and upon due proof made thereof, either by the voluntary confession of the party, or by the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses or otherwise, (which oath such justice or justices is or are hereby authorised to administer,) shall convict the offender, and adjudge the penalty for such offence.”

Sect. 10. “That if any person shall be summoned as a witness to give evidence before such justice or justices, either on the part of the prosecutor or the person accused, and shall neglect or refuse to appear at the time or place to be for that purpose appointed, without a reasonable excuse for such his neglect or refusal, to be allowed by such justice or justices, then such person shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of 50l. to be levied and paid in such manner and by such means as are directed for recovery of other penalties under this act.”

Sect. 11. “That the justice or justices before whom any offender shall be convicted as aforesaid, shall cause the said conviction to be made out in the manner and form following; (that is to say,)

"BE it remembered, that on the..."

A. B. having appeared before me [or us] one [or more] of his Majesty's justices of the peace [as the case may be,] for the county, riding, city, or place, [as the case may be,] and due proof having been made upon oath by one or more credible witness or witnesses, or by confession of the party, [as the case may be,] is convicted of [specifying the offence,] in the sum of... Given under my hand and seal [or our hands and seals] the day and year aforesaid.

"which conviction the said justice or justices shall cause to be returned to the then next general quarter sessions of the peace of the county, city, riding, or place where such conviction was made, to be filed by the clerk of the..."
peace, to remain and be kept among the records of such county, riding, city, or place."

Sect. 12. "That it shall be lawful for any clerk of the peace for any county, riding, city, or place, and he is hereby required, upon application made to him by any person or persons for that purpose, to cause a copy or copies of any conviction or convictions filed by him under the direction of this act, to be forthwith delivered to such person or persons, upon payment of 1s. for every such copy."

Sect. 13. "That the pecuniary penalties and forfeitures hereby incurred and made payable upon any conviction against this act, shall be forthwith paid by the person convicted, as follows; one moiety of the forfeiture to the informer, and the other moiety to the poor of the parish or place where the offence shall be committed; and in case such person shall refuse or neglect to pay the same, or to give sufficient security to the satisfaction of such justice or justices to prosecute any appeal against such conviction, such justice or justices shall by warrant under his or their hand and seal, or hands and seals, cause the same to be levied by distress and sale of the offender's goods and chattels, together with all costs and charges attending such distress and sale, returning the overplus (if any) to the owner; and which said warrant of distress the said justice or justices shall cause to be made out in the manner and form following; (that is to say,)

"To the Constable, Headborough, or Tithingsman of

"WHEREAS A. B. of _ in the county of _ is this day convicted before me [or us] one [or more] of his Majesty's justices of the peace [as the case may be,] for the county of _ or for the riding of the county of _ or for the town, liberty, or district of _ [as the case may be,] upon the act of _ or _ or _ or _ [as the case may be,] for that the said A. B. hath [here set forth the offence,] contrary to the statute in that case made and provided, by reason whereof the said A. B. hath forfeited the sum of _ to be distributed as herein is set down, which he hath refused to pay: these are therefore in his Majesty's name to command you to levy the said sum of _ by distress of the goods and chattels of his the said A. B. and if within the space of _ days next after such distress by you taken, the said sum, together with reasonable charges of taking the same, shall not be paid, then that you do sell the said goods and chattels so by you distrained, and out of the money arising by such sale, that you do pay one half of the said sum of _ to _ who informed me [or us, as the case shall be,] of the said offence, and the other half of the said sum of _ to the overseer of the poor of the parish [township or place] where the offence was committed, to be employed for the benefit of such poor, returning the overplus (if any) upon demand to the said A. B. the reasonable charges of taking, keeping, and selling the said distress being first deducted; and if sufficient distress cannot be found of the goods and chattels of the said A. B. whereon to levy the said sum of _ that then ye certify the same to me [or us, as the case shall be,] together with this warrant, Given under my hand and seal [or our hands and seals] the _ day of _ in the year of our Lord _ ."

Sect. 14. "That it shall be lawful for such justices or justices to order such offender to be detained in safe custody until return may conveniently be had and made to such warrant of distress, unless the party so convicted shall give sufficient security to the satisfaction of such justice or justices for his appearance before the said justice or justices, on such day as shall be appointed by the said justice or justices for the day of the return of the said warrant of distress, (such day not exceeding five days from the taking of such security,) which security the said justice or justices is and are hereby empowered to take, by way of recognizance or otherwise."

Sect. 15. "That if upon such return no sufficient distress can be had, then and in such case the said justice or justices shall and may commit such offender to the common gaol or house of correction of the county, riding, division, or place, where the offence shall be committed, for the space of one calendar month, unless the money forfeited shall be sooner paid, or unless or until such offender, thinking him or herself aggrieved by such conviction, shall give notice to the informer that he or she intends to appeal to the justices of the peace at the next general quarter sessions of the peace to be held within the county, riding, or place wherein the offence shall be committed, and shall enter into recognizance before some justice or justices, with two sufficient sureties, conditioned to try such appeal, and to abide the order of and pay such costs as shall be awarded by the justices at such quarter sessions; which notice of appeal, being not less than eight days before such quarter sessions, such person so aggrieved is hereby empowered to give; and the said justices at such sessions, upon due proof of such notice being given as aforesaid, and of the entering into such recognizance, shall hear and finally determine the causes and matters of such appeal in a summary way, and award such costs to the parties appealing or appealed against, as they the said justices shall think proper; and the determination of such quarter sessions shall be final, binding, and conclusive to all intents and purposes."
Local Tokens.

Sect. 16. "That no person shall be disabled from being a witness in any prosecution for any offence against this act, by reason of his being an inhabitant of the parish wherein such offence was committed: provided always, that no proceeding to be had touching the conviction or convictions of any offender or offenders against this act shall be quashed or vacated for want of form, or be removed by writ of certiorari, or any other writ or process whatsoever, into any of his Majesty's courts of record at Westminster, or elsewhere."

Sect. 17. "That if any action or suit shall be commenced against any person or persons for any thing done or acted in pursuance of this act, then and in every such case such action or suit shall be commenced or prosecuted within three calendar months after the fact was committed, and not afterwards; and the same and every such action or suit shall be brought within the county where the fact was committed, and not elsewhere; and the defendant or defendants in every such action or suit shall and may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon, and that the same was done in pursuance and by the authority of this act; and if the same shall appear to have been so done, or if any such action or suit shall be brought after the time limited for bringing the same, or be brought or laid in any other place than as aforesaid, then the jury shall find for the defendant or defendants; or if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall become nonsuit, or discontinue his, her, or their action after the defendant or defendants shall have appeared, or if upon demurrer judgment shall be given against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, the defendant or defendants shall and may recover treble costs, and have the like remedy for the recovery thereof as any defendant or defendants hath or have in any other cases by law."

Sect. 18. "That nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to any copper monies of the realm now current or to be current, by virtue of any proclamation or proclamations that shall have been or may be issued by his Majesty."

XI. Forms, (a)

(No. 1.)

[Commencement as usual, as ante, p. 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. in the said county, twenty pieces of false, feigned, and counterfeit money, to the likeness and semblitude of the good, legal, and current money and [silver] coin of our Lord the King, called [shillings], falsely, deceitfully, feloniously, and traitorously did forge, counterfeit, and coin: against the form of the statute in that case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual, as ante, p. 8, to the end.]

Commitment for coining silver money. (b)

Not to extend to copper monies of the realm.

(a) The framing of indictments for coining being confined to a few members only of the profession, it is deemed inexpedient to insert forms of indictments here.

(b) See the 25 Edw. III. st. 5, c. 2, ante, 722.
Coin.

(No. 2.)

[Commencement as usual, as ante, p. 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. in the said county, [five] pieces of false, forged, and counterfeit copper money, to the likeness and similitude of the good, legal, and current copper money of this realm called [pennies], feloniously did make, coin, and counterfeit: against the form of the statute in that case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual, as ante, p. 8, to the end.]

(No. 3.)

[Commencement as usual, as ante, p. 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. twenty piece of the proper monies and coins of this realm called [half-crowns], then and there falsely, deceitfully, and traitorously, and for wicked lucre and gain’s sake, did coin, round, and file: against the form of the statute in that case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual, as ante, p. 8, to the end.]

(No. 4.)

[Commencement as usual, as ante, p. 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. one piece of false and counterfeit money, made and counterfeit to the likeness and similitude of the good, legal, and current money and silver coin of our Lord the King of this realm, called a [half-crown], and for a piece of such good, legal, and current money and silver coin called a [half-crown], then and there falsely and deceitfully did utter and tender to one E. F. he the said C. D., at the time he so uttered and tendered the said piece of false and counterfeit money as aforesaid well knowing the same to be false and counterfeit against the form of the statute in that case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual, as ante, p. 8, to the end.]

(No. 5.)

[Proceed as in the form (No. 4.), to the * and then thus:] and that the said C. D. at the time he so offered and tendered the said piece of false and counterfeit money as aforesaid, had about him, in his custody and possession, a certain one piece of false and counterfeit money, made and counterfeit to the likeness and similitude of the good, legal, and current money and silver coin of our said Lord the King of this realm, called a [half-crown] he the said C. D. then and there well knowing the said last-mentioned piece of false and counterfeit money to be false and counterfeit against the form of the statute in that case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual, as ante, p. 8, to the end.]

(No. 6.)

[Commencement as usual, as ante, p. 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. [twenty] piece of false and counterfeit milled money, made and counterfeit to the likeness and similitude of the good, legal, and current milled money and silver coin of our said Lord the King of this realm, called a [half-crown], (the said several pieces of counterfeit money not being then cut in pieces,) feloniously and unlawfully did pass and put off to one E. F. at and for a lower rate and value than the said pieces of counterfeit money by their denominations did then and there import, and were respectively coined and counterfeit for: against the form of the statute in that case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual, as ante, p. 8, to the end.]

(No. 7.)

[Commencement as usual, as ante, p. 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. unlawfully did procure and obtain certain pieces of false and counterfeit money, made and

(e) See stat. 11 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 1, ante, 726.
(d) See stat. 15 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 3, ante, 740.
(c) See stat. 15 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 2, ante, 740. See a form of commitment for a subsequent offence, Arch. Forms, 72.
(b) See 5 Eliz. c. 11, s. 2, ante, 730.
(a) See stat. 11 Geo. III. c. 40, s. 1, ante, 726.
(f) See ante, 745.
counterfeited to the likeness and similitude of the good, legal, and current money and [silver] coin of our said Lord the King, called [half-crowns], (he the said C. D. then and there well knowing the said pieces of false and counterfeit money to be false and counterfeit,) with intent the same as and for pieces of good, legal, and current money and [silver] coin, called [half-crowns], falsely and deceitfully to utter, tender, pay, and put off. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual, as ante, p. 8, to the end.]

(No. 8.)

[Commencement as usual, as ante, p. 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. knowingly, feloniously, and traitorously had in the custody and possession of the said C. D. (without lawful or sufficient excuse for that purpose,) two dies, made, to wit, of iron and steel, in and upon which respectively were made and impressed the figure, stamp, resemblance, and similitude of one of the sides or flats of the lawful [silver] coin current within this kingdom, called a [shilling], and which said dies would then and there make and impress the figure, stamp, resemblance, and similitude of one of the sides and flats of the said lawful silver coin current within this kingdom, called a [shilling]: against the form of the statute in that case made and provided. And you the said keeper, &c. [as usual, as ante, p. 8, to the end.]

Commitment for having coining tools in his possession. (a)

Combination. See post, Conspiracy, Vol. I.

Combination of Workmen. See post, Servants, Vol. V. p. 418 to 426.

Commission of Judges. See ante, Assizes, p. 286.

Commitment. (b)

COMMITMENT signifies the committing or sending of a person to prison, by a warrant or order, on account of some offence committed, or suspected to have been committed, by him.

There are two species of commitments which will be here noticed: 1st, Commitments for Safe Custody—and, 2d, Commitments in Execution.

As to commitments for re-examination, see Examination, Vol. II. p. 99.

COMMITMENTS FOR SAFE CUSTODY.

I. For what and who may be committed, 756.

(a) See stat. 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 26, 1 Chit. C. L. 106 to 117; 2 Hawk. c. 16; s. 1, ante, 729.

(b) As to commitments in general, see 3 C 2 Commitment.

II. Who may commit, 757.

III. To what Prison, and Time, &c. of Imprisonment, 758.
[6 Geo. 1. c. 19; 15 Geo. 11. c. 24; 24 Geo. II. c. 55; 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 14; 4 Geo. IV. c. 64.]

IV. How Commitment to be framed, 760 to 763.

V. Informations and Examinations to be put in writing, 763. See Bail, ante, 307.
[7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 2.]

VI. Charges of Commitment, 763.
[3 Jac. I. c. 10; 31 Car. II. c. 21; 27 Geo. II. c. 3.]

VII. Duty of Gaoler as to receiving, &c. Defendant, 764.
[4 Edw. III. c. 10; 56 Geo. III. c. 50.]

VIII. Certifying Commitment, 765.
[3 Hen. VII. c. 3.]

IX. Copy of, 765.
[31 Car. II. c. 21.]

X. Discharge of Defendant, 765.

XI. Forms as to, 766.

COMMITMENTS IN EXECUTION.

I. For What and who may be committed, 768.

II. Who may commit, and to what Prison. 768.

III. How Commitment to be framed, 769 to 772.

IV. Execution, Expenses, Copy, and Certificate of, 772.

V. Discharge of Defendant, 772.

VI. Forms as to, 773.

COMMITMENTS FOR SAFE CUSTODY.

And herein—1st. For what and who may be committed.—2dly. Who may commit.—3dly. To what Prison, and Time, &c. of Imprisonment.—4thly. How the Commitment is to be framed.—5thly. The Information and Examination to be put into Writing.—6thly. The Charges of Commitment.—7thly. The Duty of the Gaoler as to receiving the Defendant, &c.—8thly. Certifying the Commitment.—9thly. The Copy of it, &c.—And, 10thly. The Discharge of Defendant.

I. For what and who may be committed.

All persons apprehended for offences which are not bailable, and also all persons who neglect to offer or complete bail for offences which are bailable, must be committed. 2 Hawk. c. 18, s. 1.

It is necessary, however, that in all cases before committing a party for safe custody that some prima facie case be made out against him; Cor v. Coleridge, 1 B. & C. 43, 50; 2 D. & R. 86, S.C.; otherwise the magistrate would be subject to an action. See Justices, Vol. III. p. 486, 487.

We have already seen for what offence a party may be apprehended, and how he may be apprehended, ante, 257 to 259, 265; also as to what offences are bailable and what not, ante, 303; and how a party should bail himself, ante, 306.
For Safe Custody.

In Felonies]—We have seen that, in felonies, one justice cannot now take bail on a charge of felony or suspicion of felony. He must either dismiss the charge, or commit the accused if there be positive credible proof, or a strong presumption of guilt. And if he be of opinion there is not a strong presumption of guilt, but at the same time that he ought not to dismiss the charge, then he must order the party to be detained until he is taken before two justices, ante, 303.

We have also seen that, in felonies, if the prisoner be brought before two or more justices, either in the first instance, or on being ordered to be detained by a single magistrate, they may, if they are of opinion that there is not a strong presumption of guilt, but that still sufficient appears against him to make a judicial inquiry proper, admit him to bail; and they may admit him to bail, not only if no strong presumption of guilt be raised by the evidence adduced on the part of the accuser, but also when it has been raised, but is at the same time weakened by the evidence of the accused, ante, 303.

If the prisoner be charged with suspicion only of felony, yet if there be no felony at all proved to be committed, or if the fact charged as a felony be in truth no felony in point of law, the justice should discharge him as to the felony; as if a man be charged with felony for stealing a parcel of the freehold, or for carrying away what was delivered to him, and such like, for which, though there may be cause to bind him over as for a trespass, the justice should discharge him as to felony, because it is not felony. 2 Hale, 121.

Misdemeanors]—We have seen as to when a justice should bail or commit a party in case of misdemeanors, ante, 304.

Contempt]—It seems doubtful whether a justice can commit for a contempt. See R. v. James, 5 B. & A. 894; 2 Barnard. 155; post, Sessions,

It is said, however, that wheresoever a justice is empowered by any statute to bind a person over, or to cause him to do a certain thing, and such person being in his presence shall refuse to be bound, or to do such thing, the justice may commit him to the gaol, to remain there till he shall comply. 2 Hawk.
c. 16. s. 2.

A justice of the peace may commit a feme covert who is a material witness upon a charge of felony brought before him, and who refuses to appear at the sessions to give evidence, or to find sureties for her appearance. Bennett and Wife v. Watson and another, 3 M. & S. 1. And vide post, Examination,

For Re-examination]—As to commitments for further examination, see Liability of Magistrate]—If the magistrate, acting within the scope of his jurisdiction, but taking an erroneous view of the effect of the evidence, should come to a wrong conclusion and commit the defendant, and the defendant should be afterwards discharged by the superior court on an habeas corpus, yet he cannot on that account sue the magistrate. 14 East, 82; and see fur-

II. Who may commit.

A justice of the peace or other officer who has power to examine and bail the prisoner, has also in general, as incident to his office, power to commit him. 1 Ed. Raym. 68; 2 Hawk. c. 16. s. 3; Bane v. Methuen, 2 Bingh. 62; 9 Moore, 161, S. C. The 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 1, expressly recognises this power in justices of the peace. See ante, 303.
Commitment (for Safe Custody.)

The privy council and secretaries of state have the power of committing for treason and other offences affecting the public. 7 T. R. 756, 742; 2 Hawk. c. 16.

We have already seen who may bail a prisoner, see, 304, 305; and from this may be collected who may commit him.

III. To what Prison, and Time, &c. of Imprisonment.

To what prison.

If the party accused of a felony be not bailed, or discharged without bail, he must be committed to the common gaol of the county, &c. 5 Hen. IV. c. 10; 23 Hen. VIII. c. 2.

Or, when charged merely with small offences, either to the common gaol or house of correction, at the option of the committing magistrate. 6 Geo. I. c. 19.

The Court of King's Bench may commit defendants to any prison in England they think fit. Moore, 666.

In England.

The prison must be within the realm of England. 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 5; and see the habeas corpus act, post, Habeas Corpus, Vol. II. giving a remedy by action for acting to the contrary.

Stocks.

Justices may commit certain offenders to the stocks, or other custody, by particular statutes.

Different county.

Generally, if a man commit felony in one county, and be arrested for the same in another county, he shall be committed to gaol in that county where he is taken. Dal. c. 170.

Yet if he escape, and be taken on fresh suit in another county, he may be carried back to the county where he was first taken. Id.

Also by statute 24 Geo. II. c. 55, s. 1, if a person be apprehended upon a warrant indorsed in another county, for an offence not bailable, or if he shall not there find bail, he shall be carried back into the first county, and there be dealt with according to law. See this act at length, post, Habeas Corpus, Vol. V.

21 Geo. 2, c. 55.

Stat. 15 Geo. II. c. 24, recites that "whereas doubts and questions have arisen, touching the commitment of offenders, by justices of the peace of liberties and corporations, to the houses of correction of counties, ridings, or divisions, in which such liberties or corporations are situate, though the inhabitants of such liberties and corporations contribute to the maintenance and support of such houses of correction;" and enacts, "that in all cases where any person liable by law to be committed to the house of correction, shall be apprehended within any liberty, city or town corporate, whose inhabitants are contributory to the support and maintenance of the house or houses of correction of the county, riding, or division, in which such liberty, city or town corporative is situate; it shall and may be lawful for the justices of the peace of such liberty, city, or town corporate, to commit such person to the house of correction of the county, riding or division, in which such liberty, city, or town corporate is situate; which person so committed shall and may be received, detained, dealt with and ordered, and be set and kept to hard labour, or conveyed and sent away, or discharged, and be subject and liable to the same correction and punishment, to all intents and purposes, as if committed by any justice or justices of the peace of the same county, riding, or division."

This act to be construed liberally.

This act is a declaratory one, and should have a liberal construction; and therefore where justices of a borough, contributing to the county rate, have committed persons to the county house of correction for offences cognizable within the county, the justices at their borough sessions have a right to order such prisoners to be brought before them for trial there. R. v. Ass. 2 B. & A. 533. It is questionable also where a county magistrate, having concurrent jurisdiction, has committed a prisoner for an offence within the borough, whether the borough sessions have not the same power of ordering such prisoner to be brought before them for trial.
III.] To what Prison, &c.

Where the justices of a borough had exclusive jurisdiction within the borough itself, but jurisdiction concurrent with that of the county justices over certain places called the liberties of the borough, it was held that for an offence committed within the liberties they might commit to the county gaol, and cause the prisoner to be brought before them for trial at the borough sessions. R. v. Musson, 6 B. & C. 74; 9 D. & R. 172, S. C.

Stat. 60 Geo. III. & 1 Geo. IV. c. 14, after reciting that "whereas the trial of capital offences before justices of peace, within local and exclusive jurisdictions not being counties, may be attended with inconvenience, and it is desirable that some remedy should be provided for the same;" enacts, "that the justices of the peace acting within and for any town, liberty, soke, or place, not being a county, but having an exclusive jurisdiction for the trial of felonies and misdemeanors committed within the same, shall, from and after the passing of this act, have full power within their respective limits, at their discretion, to commit any person duly charged before them or any of them with any capital offence committed within such limits, to the gaol of the county within which such town, liberty, soke or place shall be situated, there to be tried at the next session of oyer and terminer or general gaol delivery, to be held in and for such county, in the same manner as if such offence had been committed within any other part of the said county, and as if such person had been committed by any justice of the same county, not being within such limits."

Sect. 2 of the same act empowers local justices to bind over the parties and witnesses to prosecute and give evidence, and return the recognizances and deposits to the clerk of assize or other proper officer; and by sect. 3 the expenses allowed by the judge are to be paid by the local jurisdiction as the judge shall order; but as to this see post, Costs, Vol. I.

As to the commitment of vagrants, see the 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, post, Gnasl, Vol. II.; Vagrants, Vol. V.

Time of Imprisonment]—The time during which the defendant may be imprisoned will be treated of while considering the mode of framing the commitment, post, 761. As to the time for which a party may be committed for re-examination, see Davis v. Cooper, 10 B. & Crid. 24; 4 C. & P. 134, S. C.; post, Examination, Vol. II. p. 99, 100.

Mode of Imprisonment and Right to have Attorney, &c. in Prison]—The 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, provides for the mode and places of imprisonment of persons committed for trial for various offences, and the admissions at proper times and under certain restrictions of persons with whom such prisoners may desire to communicate. See post, Gnasl, Vol. II.

The observance of this act may be enforced by mandamus from the Court of King's Bench, ordering the sheriff and gaoler to admit an attorney into the prison to consult with the prisoners. R. v. Thurite, M. T. 1823.

It has been held on this act, that prisoners committed to gaol for trial who are able but refuse to work are not entitled by law to have any food provided for them by the public, and therefore where a magistrate reported as an abuse to the justices at the quarter sessions, that untried prisoners had been compelled to work at the treadmills, and the justices at the sessions ordered that the treadmill should be applied to the employment of other prisoners as well as those sentenced to hard labour, and that those committed for trial who were able to work and had the means of employment offered them by which they might earn their support, but who refused to work, should be allowed bread and water only, the Court of K. B. refused to grant a mandamus to compel the justices to order such prisoners any other food. R. v. Justice of Yorkshire, N. R., 2 B. & Crid. 286; 3 D. & R. 510, S. C.
Commitment (for Safe Custody.)

IV. How Commitment to be framed.

Commitments to the custody of gaolers, &c., must be in writing under the hand and seal of the magistrate making the commitment, directed to the gaoler or keeper of the prison, mentioning the time and place of making it.

The magistrate may, by parol, order a party to be detained for a reasonable time, until the magistrate can make out the commitment; (Still v. Walls, 7 East, 533;) or in cases of felony, until the prisoner (in case of doubt as to bailing) shall be taken before two justices, in pursuance of the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 1, ante, 303.

It is said that the authority of the magistrate ought to be shown, but this in strictness is not absolutely necessary, for his authority may be supplied by parol evidence. See 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 13; 2 Hale, 122; Ken. R. 122; 2 Marsh. Rep. 377. It is however usual and best to state such authority. Id. Toone, 63.

The commitment may be in the King's name, but it is most usually in the magistrate's awarding it. See Dall. J. 125; 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 14.

Direction.—The commitment should be directed to the gaoler or keeper of the prison, and not generally to carry the party to prison. 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 13; R. v. Smith, 2 Str. 934; 1 Ld. Raym. 424. The magistrate's warrant and commitment is usually directed to a constable and to the keeper of gaol, directing the former to convey the prisoner into the custody of the gaoler, and the latter to receive and keep him. In London and the metropolis, the commitment is usually directed to the gaoler only.

Name of Party.—It should contain the name and surname of the party committed, if known; if not known, then it may be sufficient to describe the person by his age, stature, complexion, colour of his hair, and the like, and to add that he refuseeth to tell his name. 1 Hale, 577.

Oath.—It is safe, but not absolutely necessary, to set forth that the party is charged upon oath. 2 Hawk. c. 17, s. 117; 2 Wils. 158; 1 Leach, 157.

Cause.—It ought to contain concisely the cause, as for treason, or felony, or suspicion thereof; otherwise if it contain no cause at all, if the prisoner escape it is no offence at all; whereas if the nuntius contained the cause, the escape were treason or felony, though he were not guilty of the offence: and therefore for the King's benefit, and that the prisoner may be the more safely kept, the nuntius ought to contain the cause. 2 Inst. 52.

And hereupon it appeareth, that a warrant or nuntius "to answer to such things as shall be objected against him," is utterly against law. 2 Inst. 591.

Also it ought to contain the certainty of the cause; and therefore if it be for felony, it ought not to be generally for felony, but it must contain the special nature of the felony, briefly, as for felony, "for the death of J. S.;" or for burglary, "in breaking the house of J. S.;" and the reason is, because it may appear to the judges of the King's Bench, upon an habeas corpus, whether it be felony or not. 2 Hale, 122.

And although it is not necessary to state in a warrant of commitment a charge of felony, that the act was done "feloniously," yet unless it sufficiently appears on the facts stated in the commitment to be in law a felony, the judges of the Court of King's Bench are bound to bail the defendant. R. v. Judd, 2 T. R. 255; 2 Chit. Rep. 138.

In Dr. Grosewell's case it was resolved, "that the cause of commitment ought to be certain, to the end that the party may know for what he suffers, and how he may regain his liberty." 1 Ld. Raym. 215.

The commitment ought not to be in the disjunctive. R. v. Evered, Cold. 26. Two justices committed Robert Collebole, an apprentice, for running away from his master. An objection was taken to the form of the commitment, for the uncertainty thereof, which ran thus: as an apprentice or servant, for disobeying his indentures or articles.” Lord Mansfield said, that the objection to the warrant of commitment as running in the disjunctive must undoubtedly prevail. The counsel for the prosecution consented to the prisoner’s discharge.

Where an offence is created by statute, it should be described accordingly in the commitment. 5 T. R. 169; 2 Leach, 593.

But a commitment for safe custody before conviction need not be so peculiarly certain, and is not construed so strictly as commitment in execution after conviction, and at all events need not be framed with the same precision as an indictment. 7 B. & Cres. 669; sed vide Fortes. 272, part, 769.

A commitment stating that A. B. had been discovered and apprehended under circumstances that denoted a derangement of mind and a purpose of committing some crime for which, if committed, he would be liable to be indicted, to wit, an assault; and that the said A. B. being brought before the justice, he committed him as a dangerous person, suspected to be insane, under the 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 94, s. 3, was held to be sufficient, although it did not state the name of the person whom the prisoner intended to assault, and it did not appear that the committing magistrate had received any evidence. R. v. Gourlay, 7 B. & Cres. 669; 1 M. & R. 619, S. C.

A commitment for treasonable practices is legal. R. v. Desmond, 7 T. R. 736.

And commitments for high treason in general are good. 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 16. And see as to a libel, 2 Wills. 133, 159.

Even in cases of felony, the want of the certainty of the cause seems not to make the commitment absolutely void, so as to subject the gaoler to a false imprisonment; but it lies in averment to excuse the gaoler or officer, that the matter was for felony. 1 Hale, 584.

And although the commitment itself be informal, yet if the corpus delicti appear on the deposition returned to the court, the defendant will not be bailed but remanded. R. v. Marks, 3 East’s Rep. 157; Cald. 295; 1 Chit. C. L. 113.

Conclusion—It must have an apt conclusion; as if it be for felony, or a crime either at common law or created by statute, for which he is punishable by indictment, to detain him “till he be thence delivered by law,” or “by order of law,” or “by due course of law,” or words to that effect. 2 Hale, 123; 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 18; R. v. Nash, 2 Bla. Rep. 806.

But if the commitment be not for an offence so indictable, or being an offence rather of a civil than criminal nature, as for contumacy in refusing to do something which he ought to do, the conclusion ought to be “until he comply, and perform the thing required,” for he is entitled to be discharged immediately upon the performance of his duty. If, therefore, an overseer of the poor be committed for refusing to account, the warrant of commitment must conclude, “there to remain until he shall account.” 1 Chit. C. L. 152.

And when the commitment is in pursuance of a special authority, the terms of the commitment must be special, and exactly pursue that authority. Nash’s case, 2 Bla. Rep. 806.

In a case, however, where a collector of the parish rates was committed to the county gaol by warrant of two justices, upon complaint made against him for that he having been duly appointed collector of the rates for the parish of Richmond, pursuant to stat. 25 Geo. III. c. 41, refused to account, and pay over the monies collected by him by virtue of the act to W. S., the person duly authorised to receive them; and the justices adjudged that he should be committed to the gaol, there to remain without bail or mainprize, until he should have made a true and fair account, and until such money, as upon the said account should appear to be remaining in his hands, should be paid by him or his sureties to W. S., and they required the keeper of the gaol to receive and safely keep him until he should be discharged by due course of law, and because the warrant directed that he should be detained “until he was discharged by due course of law;” a habeas corpus was obtained on the ground of the warrant being void; the cases of Yorley, 1 Selk. 351; 1 Ld. Resm. 100, S. C.; Bracy, 1 Ld. Resm. 99; Hollingshead, 2 Ld. Resm. 851; and Baldwin v. Blackmore, 1 Burr. 603, having been cited, Levi Ellenborough, C. J., after the argument of the case, said, "if there was any uncertainty on the face of the commitment, I should have agreed with the argument. But coupling the premises with the conclusion, is it not in effect the same as if the warrant had directed the gaoler to detain the party until he had accounted? We must read the warrant as if the magistrates had in the conclusion recited over again the adjudication." Et per Le Blanc, J. "Some precise authority should be shown to justify the court in adopting the objection made to this warrant. When the party has accounted and paid over the money, he will be entitled to be discharged by due course of law." The prisoner was remanded. Ex parte Goff, 3 M. & S. 203.
Commitment (for Safe Custody.)

A conviction by two justices of an overseer, under stat. 17 Geo. II. c. 38, upon complaint of the succeeding overseers, for refusing and neglecting to deliver over to them "a certain book belonging to the parish, called The Bastardy Ledger," convicting him of the said offences, and adjudging that he should be committed to the common gaol "until he shall have yielded up all and every the books concerning his said office of overseer belonging to the parish," &c.; was held void as to the adjudication in respect to the imprisonment and the commitment made in pursuance thereof, on account of a clear excess of jurisdiction, the imprisonment being for too long a time; and it was held, that the imprisonment under the commitment was a trespass in the committing magistrates, for which an action was maintainable, the commitment being void in toto. Groome v. Forrester, 5 M. & S. 314.

In the case of R. v. James Gordon, 1 B. & A. 572, (n.) the prisoner being committed to the New Prison, Clerkenwell, till the next general sessions, for assaulting a customhouse officer's assistant in execution of his duty, a motion was made for a habeas corpus, because the stat. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 11, directs that such offender shall be committed, without bail, till the next quarter sessions. The writ was granted. Afterwards, the defendant being brought up, the keeper of New Prison returned the warrant of commitment, which appeared to be to the general sessions; but he also returned a warrant of detainer for the same offence, issued the day before he was brought up, by the same justice, which was till the next quarter sessions. The defendant, therefore, was remanded without opposition, the warrant of detainer being strictly regular.

See further as to the conclusion of the commitment where it is in execution, post, 770, 771.

If only part of the conclusion be irregular, it doth not seem to make the warrant void, but the law will reject that which is surplusage, and the rest shall stand; so that if the matter appear to be such, for which he is to remain in custody, or be bailed, he shall be bailed or committed as the case requires, and not discharged, but the wrong conclusion shall be rejected. 1 Hale, 584; and see Davis v. Copper, 10 B. & Cres. 37.

And we have just seen, though a warrant of commitment for felony be informal, yet if the corpus delicti appear in the depositions returned to the court, they will not bail, but will remand the prisoner. The practice in cases of defective commitments was in this case altered, to prevent in future prisoners thus remanded from renewing the same application to another court or judge. R. v. Marks and others, 3 East. 157; R. v. Taylor, 7 D. & R. 622; 3 D. & M. M. C. 491; post, p. 773.

Seal.—It must be under seal; without this, the commitment is unlawful, the gaoler is liable to false imprisonment, and the wilful escape by the gaoler, or breach of prison by the felon, makes no felony. 1 Hale, 583.

But this must not be intended of a commitment by the sessions, or other court of record: for there the record itself, or the memorial thereof, which may at any time be entered of record, are a sufficient warrant, without any warrant under seal. 1 Hale, 584.
VI.]

Charges of the Commitment.

Time and Place of Making].—It should also set forth the time and place at which it is made. 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 13.

A mistake in the date might be fatal. See Ex parte McGee, 6 Mod. Rep. 206; Salt's case, 13 Vesey, 361.

V. Information and Examination to be taken in Writing, &c.

We have already seen, ante, Ball, p. 307, that by 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 2, justices, before they commit a person to prison for an offence, should take the examination of such person, and the information on oath of the witnesses, so far as is material, in writing, under a penalty for omission.

VI. Charges of the Commitment.

By stat. 3 Jac. c. 10, s. 1, "all and every person and persons whatsoever, that from and after the end of this present session of parliament, shall be committed to the common or usual gaol within any county or liberty within this realm, by any justice or justices of the peace, for any offence or misdemeanor, to any such gaol, that the said person or persons so to be committed as aforesaid, having means or ability thereunto, shall bear their own reasonable charges for so conveying or sending them to the said gaol, and the charges also of such as shall be appointed to guard them to such gaol, and shall so guard them thither: and if any such person or persons so to be committed as aforesaid shall refuse, at the time of their commitment and sending to the said gaol, to defray the said charges, or shall not then pay or bear the same, that then such justice or justices of the peace shall and may by writing under his or their hand and seal, or hands and seals, give warrant to the constable or constables of the hundred, or constable or tithe-man of the tithe or township where such person or persons shall be dwelling and inhabit, or from whence he or they shall be committed as aforesaid, or where he or they shall have any goods within the county or liberty, to sell such and so much of the goods and chattels of the said persons so to be committed, as by the discretion of the said justice or justices of the peace shall satisfy and pay the charges of such his or their conveying and sending to the said gaol, the apprehension to be made by four of the honest inhabitants of the parish or tithe where such goods or chattels shall remain and be, and the overplus of the money which shall be made thereof to be delivered to the party to whom the said goods shall belong."

And by stat. 27 Geo. II. c. 3, st. 1, reciting that "whereas by an act passed in the third year of the reign of King James the First, intituled, 'An Act for the rating and levying of the charges for conveying malefactors and offenders to the gaol,' every offender so to be conveyed shall bear the charges of himself and of those who convey him; and if he refuse so to do, his goods within the same county may be distrained and sold to satisfy the same: and if he hath no goods, the constable, churchwardens, and other inhabitants of the parish where he was taken, shall make a tax on every inhabitant thereof to pay the said charges: and whereas the taxing the parish where such offender was taken to pay such charges is a great discouragement to parishes to take offenders, and it is also found by experience to be very difficult to make a rate on the inhabitants to raise such tax, whereby constables and others are often kept out of their money by them advanced for the service of the public, and sometimes lose the same, to their very great injury and vexation;" enacts, "that from and after the 24th day of June, 1754, when any person, not having goods or money within the county where he is taken, sufficient to bear the charges of himself and of those who convey him, is committed to gaol or the house of correction, by warrant from any justice or justices of the peace, then, on application by any constable or other officer

CHARGES OF COMMITMENT.

Time and place.

Examinations to be taken in writing.

Charges to be paid by the offender if able.

If not able, to be paid out of the county rates.
Commitment (for Safe Custody.)

who conveyed him, to any justice of the peace for the same county or place, he shall upon oath examine into and ascertain the reasonable expenses to be allowed such constable or other officer; and shall forthwith, without fee or reward, by warrant under his hand and seal, order the treasurer of the county or place to pay the same, which the said treasurer is hereby required to do, as soon as he receives such warrant; and any sum so paid shall be allowed in his accounts."

Sect. 4. "That nothing in this act contained shall extend to empower such court, or any justice or justices of the peace, to make warrants or orders on the treasurer of the county of Middlesex for the payment of the expenses of the constable or other officer in conveying any person to gaol, or for the payment of any person for his time, trouble, and expense, who shall appear on his recognizance to give evidence as aforesaid; but that within the said county of Middlesex the expenses of the constable or other officer, occasioned by his conveying of any person to gaol by virtue of a warrant from any justice or justices of the peace, shall (after such expenses have been examined into upon oath, and allowed by such justice or justices, and for which no fee or reward shall be taken) be paid by the overseer or overseers of the poor of the parish or place where the said person was apprehended, who is and are hereby authorised and required to pay the same; and the sum or sums so paid shall be allowed in his or their accounts."

By the Habeas Corpus Act, 31 Car. II. c. 2, s. 2, the charge of conveying an offender is limited not to exceed 12d. a mile; which may be an argument for allowing as much in this case, especially as security is to be given before a man is removed on that act by habeas corpus that he shall not escape by the way, which renders guards in that case not so necessary.

The provisions of the 55 Geo. III. c. 50, do not seem to affect these regulations.

As to the expenses of carrying vagrants to gaol, where they have no effects, see 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 39; 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, s. 22, post, Vagrant, Vol. V.

A justice before whom a deserter is brought and committed to the county gaol, may, under the authority of these statutes, if the deserter be unable to bear the charges himself, direct the expenses of conveying him thither to be paid by the treasurer of the county to the constable of the parish who found and apprehended him in the parish, and conveyed him to the gaol. R. v. Pierce, 3 M. & S. 62.

VII. Duty of Gaoler as to Receiving, &c. the Prisoner.

If the gaoler shall refuse to receive a felon, or shall take any thing for receiving him, he shall be punished for the same by the justices of gaol delivery. Dall. c. 170, p. 410. Stat. 4 Edw. III. c. 10. See also stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 50.

But if a man be committed for felony, and the gaoler will not receive him, the constable must bring him back to the town where he was taken; and that town shall be charged with the keeping of him until the next gaol delivery; or the person that arrested him may in such case keep the prisoner in his own house, as it seemeth. Dall. c. 170, p. 410.

But in other cases it seems that regularly no one can justify detaining a prisoner in custody out of the common gaol, unless there be some particular reason for so doing; as if the party be so dangerously sick that it would apparently hazard his life to send him to the gaol, or there be evident danger of a rescous from rebels, or the like, 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 9; see ante, 206.

A gaoler is protected from liability though he should receive by mistake of the constable a person whom it was intended not to confine. Sir T. Jones, 214; Coup. 479; sed vide 3 Campb. 35.
VIII. Certifying the Commitment.

By stat. 3 Hen. VII. c. 3, the sheriff or gaoler shall certify the commitment to the next gaol delivery.

As to the defendants being compellable to work, &c. see post, Gaol, Vol. II.

IX. Copy of Commitment.

The Habeas Corpus Act, 31 Car. II. c. 2, s. 5, enacts, that if any officer or gaoler shall, upon demand made by the prisoner or other person on his behalf, refuse to deliver, or within the space of six hours after demand shall not deliver, to the person so demanding, a true copy of the warrant of commitment or detainer of such prisoner, he shall forfeit to the prisoner or party aggrieved, for the first offence 100l. and for the second offence, 200l.; and shall also be deprived of his office: and the prisoner suing as the party aggrieved is entitled to the costs of action. See 1 H. Bla. 10.

And where a person is sent over from Ireland under a warrant from a secretary of state for that country, charged with any offence, and is committed to prison until he can be brought before a judge, and the warrant is left with the gaoler, this is such a commitment as entitles the prisoner to a copy under the Habeas Corpus Act, after it has been demanded. 3 Esp. Rep. 174.

But where a person after appearing before a magistrate, and being unable to find bail, at his own request is permitted to continue in the custody of the officer for a short time, he is not entitled to a copy of the commitment. 1 Stra. 167.

And service of a demand of a copy of the commitment on the turnkey of a prison, is not sufficient to support an action against the gaoler for the penalty incurred by him under the Habeas Corpus Act, if the gaoler himself were in the prison; but if he be not there, then the deputy may be served; and if the deputy have no deputy, then in the absence of the deputy, service may be made on the turnkey, or it may be left at the gaol; for it is the duty of the governor to leave some person in his place. 2 Bos. & P. 530.

As to the right to a copy of conviction, see post, Confiscation, Vol. I. As to the right to a copy of indictment, see post, Vol. III. p. 356, 357.

X. Discharge of Defendant.

It seems that a person legally committed for a crime certainly appearing to have been done by some one or other cannot be lawfully discharged by any one but the King, till he be acquitted on his trial, or have an ignoramus found by the grand jury, or none to prosecute him on a proclamation for that purpose by the justices of gaol delivery. But if a person be committed on a bare suspicion, without an indictment, for a supposed crime, where afterwards it appears that there was none, as for the murder of a person thought to be dead, who afterwards is found to be alive, it hath been held, that he may be safely dismissed without any further proceeding, so that he who suffers him to escape is properly punishable only as an accessory to his supposed offence; and it is impossible that there should be an accessory where there can be no principal, and it would be hard to punish one for a contempt in disregarding a commitment founded on a suspicion, appearing in so uncontested a manner to be groundless. 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 22.

When a defendant is advised that his commitment is illegal, or that he is entitled to be discharged or bailed by a superior jurisdiction, he may obtain relief by writ of habeas corpus. See post, Habeas Corpus, Vol. II.
Commitment (for Safe Custody.)

XI. Forms.

(No. 1.)

General form of warrant of commitment for safe custody.

KENT [the county where the commitment is made]: J. P. Esquire, one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, to the constable of [in the said county, and to the keeper of the common gaol, or if an offence of small degree, say, house of correction,] at [in the said county.]

These are to command you the said constable, in his Majesty's name, forthwith to convey and deliver into the custody of the said keeper of the said common gaol [or house of correction] the body of C. D. charged this day before me, the said justice, on the oath of of A. B. [labourer,] and others, for that he the said A. B. on the day of [in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and at [in the said county, did, &c. [stating the offence concisely as tribal, ante, 560; see various forms under the particular titles of offences.] And you the said keeper are hereby required to receive the said A. B. into your custody in the same [common gaol] and him there safely to keep, until he shall be hence delivered by the course of law, [ante, 761.] Herein fail you not. Given under my hand and seal the day of [in the year of our Lord J. P. (L.S.)]

(No. 2.)

The like in the King's name.

County of [William the Fourth, by the grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith,] the keeper of our [gaol] at [in our said county or to his deputy, &c.;] whereas A. O. [labourer] is charged this day before me, the said justice, on the oath of [labourer] by him, as it is said, committed, in feloniously taking and carrying away of the value of of the property of We therefore command you, and each of you, that you receive him the said A. O. into your custody in our said [gaol] or that one of you do receive him, there to remain all his be delivered from your custody according to the law of our kingdom of England. Given under my hand and seal the day of [in the year of our reign. J. P. (L.S.)]

(No. 3.)

Commitment of a person for further examination. (a)

County of [J. P. Esquire, one of the justices of our lord the King, assigned to keep the peace in and for the said county, to the constable of the said county, and to the keeper of the common gaol [or house of correction] at in the said county.]

These are to command you the said constable, in his Majesty's name, forthwith to convey and deliver into the custody of the said keeper of the said common gaol [or house of correction] the body of A. O. charged this day before me, the said justice, on the oath of A. I. on suspicion of having, [have not forth the substance of the offence as in a commitment in general, as the case may be, see ante, 560] but as much as E. F. a material and necessary witness against the said A. O. for his offence and crime aforesaid, resides at [Leeds, as the case may be,] and he the said A. I. hath not been able to procure the attendance of the said E. F. but will use his best endeavour so to do on the day of instant. You the said keeper are hereby required to receive the said A. O. into your custody in the said [common gaol] until next the day of instant, when you are hereby required to bring the said A. O. at [in the said county, before me, or before such others of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, as shall be then and there present, to be re-examined and further dealt with according to law. Herein fail you not. Given under my hand and seal the day of [in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and J. P. (L.S.)]

(a) As to this, see post, Examination, Vol. II.
COMMITMENTS IN EXECUTION.

And herein—1st. For what said who may be committed in Execution.
—2dly. Who may Commit, and to what Prison.—3dly. How Commitment to be framed.—4thly. The Execution, Expenses, Copy and Certificate of Commitment, &c.—5thly. The Discharge of the Defendant.

(a) See the act, ante, 763.  (b) See 3 Jac. I. c. 10, s. 1, ante, 763.
Commitment (in Execution.)

I. For What, and Who may be Committed in Execution.

A commitment in execution is used either as an original punishment, or as the means of enforcing payment of a pecuniary fine, or in any other manner enforcing obedience to the sentence of a magistrate or sessions.

The power of making commitments of this nature is derived from the statute provisions, in many cases, however, it exists at common law as an incidental means of enforcing the law.

If a statute assigns a commitment as a mode of punishment in the first instance, the commitment follows upon, and is the legal consequence of the judgment. But where it is assigned merely as a substitute to enforce a punishment or penalty, the magistrate cannot adopt it till he has ascertained the punishment, or penalty cannot be enforced. As if a statute imposes a penalty for an offence to be levied by distress, or a commitment in default of payment, before making the commitment, the want of sufficient goods must answer the penalty should be ascertained, and this is generally done by means of the officer’s return to a warrant of distress, though other means would, it seems, be now sufficient. See now 3 Geo. IV. c. 18; post, Distress, Vol. I.; and the case of R. v. Hawkins, Fort. 272; Hill v. Betteson, 1 Stra. 710.

Where an offender is convicted in one penalty, under a statute providing a corporal punishment, on failure of sufficient distress, and has effects sufficient only to satisfy part, it has been held that the goods ought not to be taken, but the corporal punishment should be resorted to. If, however, the same person be separately convicted in two penalties, and his goods are sufficient to satisfy one only, they ought to be levied under one conviction, and the corporal punishment should be inflicted for the other. (See R. v. Wyatt, 2 Ld. Raym. 1195; Fort. 132; 11 Mod. 54.) But the law never intended that a man should suffer both punishments for one conviction. 2 Ld. Raym. 1196.

By the 5 Geo. IV. c. 18, (which we shall hereafter, post, Distress, Vol. I. more fully notice,) it is enacted, that where a penalty is directed to be recovered before a magistrate, on default of payment thereof, a magistrate may order a distress on the offender’s goods, and in default of a sufficient distress, no sale of goods shall take place, but the offender may be committed unless he give security, &c.; and by sect. 2, in cases where penalties are directed to be recovered by distress, but no remedy provided where sufficient distress cannot be found, justices may commit the offender, &c.; and by sect. 3, if the offender after committal to prison shall pay the amount of the penalty, &c. to the keeper, he shall be forthwith discharged; and the 4th section empowers justices to commit to prison without issuing a warrant of distress in certain cases having the offender’s consent.

II. Who may Commit, and to what Prison.

Who may commit, and to what prison.

The observations already made, ante, 757, 758, will for the most part here apply.

In the case of a conviction the commitment is in general made by the justice who convicted the offender. By 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, s. 2, however, a commitment may in all cases be made by one justice, even in cases where the conviction must be by two, and it is immaterial whether the justice who makes the commitment be one of the justices before whom the conviction was made. See post, Distress, Vol. 1.
III.] Form of Commitment.

III. How Commitment to be framed.

The observations already made as to the form of the commitment for safe custody will be applicable here, ante, 760 to 763.

It seems, however, that commitments in execution must be more peculiarly certain and construed more strictly than commitments for safe custody, See Esperte Gourdlay, 7 B. & Cress. 669; 1 M. & R. 619, 3 C.; sed vide per Parker, C. J. R. v. Hawkins, Post. 272.

Several cases have been pointed out as to the requisite certainty in commitments for safe custody, ante, 760 to 763.

In the case of a conviction, it is necessary to state in the commitment in execution, on the same, that the offender was convicted of the offence. Therefore where one was brought up by habeas corpus, and the warrant was returned in the following form, viz. "receive into your custody the body of F. R. herewith, &c. brought before me J. S. one of his Majesty's justices, &c. by J. A. constable, and charged before me, on the oath of M. S. for being a rogue and vagabond within the meaning and intent of an act (17 Geo. II.) &c. for that the said F. R. on, &c. at, &c. did unlawfully use a certain craft to deceive, &c. (setting out the offence of acting as a fortune teller) contrary to the statute; him the said F. R. therefore safely keep in your custody, &c." The court, considering this as a commitment by way of punishment and not for safe custody only, were unanimously of opinion that the commitment was bad, because it only stated that the party had been charged with, not that he had been convicted of, the offence imputed to him. R. v. Rhodes, 4 T. R. 220; 12 East, 78, n.; 2 Inst. 52; R. v. Cooper, 6 T. R. 599.

Also a warrant of commitment in execution after a conviction must show before whom the conviction was, as likewise the authority of the person committing. R. v. York, 5 Burr. 2684.

The commitment should correspond in every material particular with the conviction. In a late case it was decided, that though the conviction may be correct, yet if the commitment be for a different offence, or do not disclose any offence at all, the magistrate is liable to an action for the imprisonment, &c. under it. Rogers v. Jones, 3 B. & Cress. 409; 1 R. & M. 129, S. C.; and see Wickers v. Clutterbuck, 2 Bing. 483; post, Justices, Vol. III. p. 487.

Where a defendant was committed under the Malicious Trespass Act, (then the 1 Geo. IV. c. 56, now the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 24, post, Malicious Injuries to Property, Vol. III. p. 741,) and the commitment recited, "that one M. P. had made complaint to the justice that he had lost a post or pale out of his fence, and that he had cause to suspect and did suspect that G. H. on whose premises the same was found, did cut, spoil, and take and carry away the same, and that the said G. H. did not appear before the justice, and not giving the justice any satisfactory account how she came by the post, nor producing the party of whom she bought it, nor any credible witness to testify the sale, she was therefore by him committed, 'for wilfully and maliciously carrying away the same,'" Per Beiley, J. "This commitment is clearly bad; the charge recited is, that the defendant had cut, spoiled and taken away the post, and the justice convicts her of carrying it away. It is perfectly consistent with the statement in the commitment that somebody else may have cut and spoiled the post, and that she might have carried it away, which is no offence within this act. Therefore as she is convicted of Commitment (in Execution.) [III.

FORM OF COMMITMENT.

It is not, however, necessary to state the conviction in a precise or technical form, but only to show that the party has been convicted of some specific offence and by a person having competent authority for that purpose. 1 Polk on Conv. 255; R. v. Helps, 3 M. & S. 331; R. v. Rogers, 1 D. & R. 156; 1 D. & R. M. C. 59; 5 B. & A. 773, S. C.

It is not required, therefore, to set forth the evidence or the facts in detail; R. v. Walter, 8 Mod. 5; or the name of the witness; and if by mistake a wrong name is mentioned, as that of the witness upon whose oath the conviction was made, it is surplusage and may be disregarded. Moses v. Johnson, 12 East, 67.

In a commitment for an offence against a statute, it is sufficient to state that it was "contrary to a certain statute made and passed in the first year of the reign of Geo. 1." without pointing out specifically the statute. R. v. Harpur, 1 D. & R. 222; 1 D. & R. M. C. 67, S. C.; and see further post. Embritson, Vol. III. p. 345; post, Constitution, p. 526.

Where a commitment is inflicted only by a statute, as an alternative punishment for want of a sufficient distress, such want should be noticed in the commitment. See R. v. Chouler, 1 Ed. Rang. 545; R. v. Whitecock, 1 Stra. 263. It is submitted it is no longer necessary to state how the want of a sufficient distress appears to the magistrate, see the 5 Geo. IV. c. 15, s. 1, unless the act authorising the commitment points out how it must appear, as does the second section of that act. Post, Distress, Vol. I.

The time during which the defendant is to be imprisoned and the manner of the imprisonment must be stated accurately and according to the directions of the law or statute from which the authority to commit is derived, and in this respect more accuracy is required than in commitments for safe custody, ante, 761.

Where a statute appoints imprisonment, but limits no time how long, in such case the prisoner must remain imprisoned at the discretion of the court. Dall.. c. 170, p. 410.

Under the Vagrant Act (17 Geo. II. c. 5, s. 7, now the 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, post, Vagrants, Vol. V.) which directed the offender to be imprisoned till the next sessions or for any less time, as the justice should think proper, a commitment ordering the party to be detained, not for any limited time but until he should be discharged according to the laws and customs of this realm, was held bad. R. v. Hall, 3 Burr. 1636.

A commitment under the 35 Eliz. c. 2, (which empowers a justice to inquire into certain matters and commit such persons as refuse to answer,) "till discharged by due course of law," was held bad. Forsey's case, 1 Salk. 351. And so in a case where magistrates committed for a contempt. R. v. James, 1 D. & R. 569; 1 D. & R. M. C. 131; 5 B. & A. 894, 3 C.; and see Ex parte Leake, 9 B. & Cres. 284.

A commitment by the Vice Chancellor of Oxford stating the offence to be carrying goods without a license, and ordering the party to remain in custody until he should give security to carry no more and to observe the statutes of the University for life, was adjudged to be illegal. R. v. Borese, 2 Stra. 917.

If a statute order a commitment for hard labour, it must be so signified in the commitment. Where a statute, besides ordering a commitment to prison, adds also, "there to remain and be corrected and kept to hard labour," the correction understood is by whipping. R. v. Hone, 13 East, 607; post, Executions, Vol. V. p. 408.

The condition, if any, upon which defendant may be discharged, must be distinctly stated in the commitment.

Therefore if he be authorised to be committed till the payment of a penalty or the performance of some other act, the condition must be distinctly expressed and such as is authorised. It ought to be for imprisonment until he has paid the penalty.
How to be Framed.

A commitment reciting that the defendant had been convicted by the College of Physicians and fined 20l. and was thereby committed to gaol "till he should be delivered by the said college or otherwise by due course of law," was held bad, as being too general, and not sufficiently ascertaining whether the commitment was a distinct punishment or merely for enforcing the fine. Dr. Grocevell's case, 1 Ld. Raym. 213.

Where justices committed the late overseer of a parish, under 17 Geo. II. c. 38, upon a conviction (on the complaint of the succeeding overseers) for neglecting and refusing to deliver over a certain book belonging to the parish, called "the Bastardy Ledger," and committed him, in pursuance of their adjudication, "until he should have yielded up all and every the books concerning his said office of overseer belonging to the parish;" the court held the commitment void in toto, for which the magistrates might be sued in trespass for false imprisonment, although the conviction had not been quashed. Groom v. Farrer, 5 M. & S. 314.; and see Experto Leake, 9 B. & Cris. 234, as to a commitment by commissioners of bankrupts.

If the commitment be till payment of a penalty, the sum must be stated and fixed. Thus a conviction and commitment for a forcible entry, "there to remain till they shall have paid a fine to the King," the justices not having assessed any fine, was held to be bad. R. v. Elsoell, 2 Ld. Raym. 1575; Str. 794.

So under the 6 Geo. I. c. 16, s. 1, which empowers a justice to commit till the penalty and charges are paid, a commitment for nine months or until the sum of 15l. "together with the charges previous to and attending the conviction shall be paid," was held bad, for want of ascertaining the exact sum by the payment of which the defendant might be released. R. v. Hall, Coop. 26. And see a case on the commitment of a toll-keeper for refusing to account. R. v. Catherall, Flagg. 266.

So where a conviction took place on the Stage Coach Act, 50 Geo. III. c. 48, and the commitment recited the conviction, from which it appeared the defendant had been committed by the justices for three months, "unless before that time he pays the sum of 6l. together with the expenses of the warrant, viz. the sum of —— shillings, without expressing the sum which he was to pay for the expenses, the court held the commitment bad on that account, for the defendant could not know on what terms he might be discharged and the gaoler was equally in the dark. The conviction and commitment should have ascertained precisely what sum for expenses the defendant was to pay. R. v. Payne, 4 D. & R. 72; 1 D. & R. M. C. 67; R. v. Rogers, 5 B. & A. 773; 1 D. & R. 156; 1 D. & R. M. C. 59, S. C.

The form of a commitment for costs, in default of a sufficient distress, is given by the 18 Geo. III. c. 19, see post, Costs, Vol. I.

Where a party was committed as the reputed father of a bastard child, "till he should pay the sum due and legal accustomed fees, or until he should be otherwise delivered by due course of law," the commitment was held bad, the commitment not having been authorised by the 49 Geo. III. c. 68, s. 3. Robson v. Spearman, 3 B. & A. 493.

A commitment for payment of two sums of money, one of which was not due, was held bad altogether, though as to one of the sums it was correct. Experto Addis, 2 D. & R. 167; 1 B. & C. 90; and see Goff's case, 3 M. & S. 203.

It is not necessary expressly to state to whom the payment of the penalty or costs should be made. See R. v. Rogers, 1 D. & R. 156; 1 D. & R. 59; 5 B. & A. 773, S. C.

It seems, however, that it must appear from some part of the commitment, who is the party entitled to the penalty, and at all events it is better that it should. See R. v. Helps, 3 M. & S. 351.

It must appear that the sum awarded to be paid was sanctioned from the nature of the offence committed. In a case under the Malicious Trespass Act, (1 Geo. IV. c. 56, now the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 24,) where it was not stated that the damage sustained by the injury amounted to 5l. and defendant was convicted in and committed for non-payment of that sum, the Commitment (in Execution.)

If a commitment be bad in part, it is bad for the whole. _Ex parte Addis_, 2 D. & R. 167; 1 B. & C. 90, ante, 771; _Goff's case_, 3 M. & S. 203.

If the commitment be void, an action for false imprisonment will lie against the magistrates making the same, and this although the conviction be not quashed. See _Groom v. Forrester_, 5 M. & S. 514; _Rogers v. Jones_, 3 B. & C. 409; 1 R. & M. 129, S. C.; _Wickes v. Clutterbuck_, 2 B. & S. 483; _post_, _Justices_, Vol. III. p. 487.

Besides this, if the commitment be void, the party may obtain his discharge by _habeas corpus_. See _post_, _Habeas Corpus_, Vol. II.

It is a general rule that if a warrant of commitment in execution on a conviction manifestly defective on the face of it, shows that there has been a conviction, the court will not notice the defect until the conviction is returned into court; and if the conviction be right, the defects in the commitment will be cured, provided the latter show the like offence as is stated in the conviction. _R. v. Taylor_, 7 D. & R. 622; 3 D. & R. M. C. 491, S. C. _ante_, 762.

And the Court of King's Bench will not criticise the commitment with the same strictness to which a conviction is subjected, if there be reasonable ground for presuming that the conviction on which the commitment is founded is free from objection, and which in general may be presumed. _R. v. Rogers_, 1 D. & R. 156; 1 D. & R. M. C. 59; 5 B. & A. 773, S. C.; and see further, _post_, _Habeas Corpus_, Vol. II.

IV. Execution, Expenses, and Copy and Certificate of Commitment.

As to the mode of executing a warrant of commitment, see in general, _post_, _Warrant_, Vol. V.

The observations already made, _ante_, 763, 765, as to the expenses, copy or certificate of the commitment for safe custody, will here apply.

V. Discharge of Defendant.

A commitment in execution does not, like a commitment for safe custody, in any case admit of bail. See 11 _Mod._ 45, 52.

And although a right of appeal be given by statute to the next sessions, which may not be till after the term of imprisonment has expired, (as is the case with the present Vagrant Act, 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, s. 11,) yet after a commitment by one justice, it is not competent for others to discharge the defendant upon his appealing to the next sessions and giving bail to prosecute that appeal. _R. v. Brooke_, 2 _T. R._ 190.

It is said in _Dall._ c. 170, p. 410, that upon the defendant's finding sureties for payment of the fine, he ought to be discharged; but this seems very questionable.

If the commitment be until payment of a certain fine or penalty, it follows as of course that the party is to be set at liberty immediately on payment or tender thereof. 1 _Paley on Conv._ 265. A payment or tender to the gaoler or officer entrusted with the execution of the commitment would, it should seem, be sufficient.

Where an officer, after a tender of the penalty, persisted in conveying a person to gaol, insisting also upon payment of a further sum, indorsed by the justice on the warrant of commitment, under the name of costs, he was held liable to an action for false imprisonment. _Smith v. Sibson_, 1 _Wils._ 153.

The warrant of commitment remains in force until it be executed, so long as the magistrate who made it is living, _post_, _Warrant_, Vol. V.
Commitment.

Forms.

(No. 6.)

To the Constable of , in the said county, and to the keeper of the [house of correction] at , in the said county.

WHEREAS C. D., late of , in the said county, [labourer,] was on this day duly convicted before me, J. P., one of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, for that he said C. D. &c. [here state the offence, as in the conviction,] against the form of the statute in that case made and provided; and I the said J. P. thereupon adjudged the said C. D., for his said offence, to be imprisoned in the [house of correction] at , in the said county, [and there kept to hard labour, if ordered,] for the space of ; these are therefore to command you the said constable of aforesaid, to take the said C. D., and him safely to convey to the [house of correction] at aforesaid, and there to deliver him to the said keeper thereof, together with this precept; and I do hereby command you the said keeper of the [house of correction] to receive the said C. D. into the said [house of correction,] there to imprison him [and keep him to hard labour, if ordered,] for the space of ; and for your so doing, this shall be your sufficient warrant. Given under my hand and seal, at , in the county aforesaid, this day of , in the year of the reign of our sovereign lord King William the Fourth.

J. P.

Commitment where the punishment is by imprisonment, &c.

(No. 7.)

To the Constable of , in the said county, and to the keeper of the [house of correction] at , in the said county.

WHEREAS C. D., late of , in the said county, [labourer,] was on this day duly convicted before me, J. P., one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, for that he said C. D. &c. [here state the offence, as in the conviction,] against the form of the statute in that case made and provided; and I the said J. P. thereupon adjudged the said C. D., for his said offence, to, &c. [as in the conviction, to the word "months,"] unless the said sums should be sooner paid: and whereas the said C. D., being so convicted as aforesaid, and being now required to pay the said sums, hath not paid the same or any part thereof, but herein hath made default: these are therefore to command you the said constable of aforesaid, to take the said C. D., and him safely to convey to the [house of correction] at aforesaid, and there to deliver him to the said keeper thereof, together with this precept; and I do hereby command you the said keeper of the said [house of correction,] to receive the said C. D. into the said [house of correction,] there to imprison him [and keep him to hard labour, if ordered,] for the space of calendar months, unless the said sums shall be sooner paid; and for your so doing, this shall be your sufficient warrant. Given under my hand and seal, at , in the county aforesaid, this day of , in the year of the reign of our sovereign lord King William the Fourth.

J. P.

Commitment in default of immediate payment of a penalty.

(No. 8.)

To the Constable of , in the said county, and to the keeper of the [house of correction] at , in the said county.

WHEREAS C. D., late of , in the said county, [labourer,] was on the day of last past, duly convicted before [me] J. P., one of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, for that he said C. D. &c. [here state the offence, as in the conviction,] against the form of the statute in that case made and provided; and [I] the said J. P., thereupon adjudged the said C. D., for his said offence, to &c. [as in the conviction, to the end of the adjudication]; and [I] the said J. P., then and there ordered that the said sums should be paid by the said C. D. on or before the day of ; then next; and whereas the said C. D. hath not, on or before the said day of , paid the several sums or any part thereof, nor hath he yet paid the said several sums or any part thereof, but therein hath made default: these are therefore to command you the said constable of aforesaid, to take the said C. D., and him safely to convey to the [house of correction] at aforesaid, and there to deliver him to the said keeper thereof, together with this precept; and I do hereby command you the said keeper of the said [house of correction,]

Commitment in default of payment of a penalty within a limited time.
Common Prayer.

FORMS.

to receive the said C. D. into the said house of correction, there to imprison him [and keep him to hard labour, if ordered,] for the space of seven months, unless the said sum shall be sooner paid; and for your so doing, this shall be your sufficient warrant. Given under my hand and seal, at , in the county aforesaid, this day of , in the year of the reign of our sovereign lord king William the Fourth.

J. P.

Common.

AS to when a commoner may be a witness, post, Chiturg., Vol. II. p. 73; as to putting stoned horses on commons, post, Harms., Vol. III. p. 34; as to putting scabbed sheep on, see Sheep, Vol. V. p. 490.

Common Prayer.

See ante, Church, Churchwardens.

[1 Edw. VI. c. 1; 1 Mar. sess. 2, c. 3; 1 Eliz. c. 3; 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 4; 1 W. & M. sess. 1.]

BY the 1 Eliz. c. 2, the book of common prayer shall be provided at the charge of the parishioners of every parish, and see 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 4.

By stat. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 4, s. 7, where an incumbent resides upon his living, and keeps a curate, the incumbent himself (not having lawful impediment, to be allowed by the bishop) shall at least once a month publicly read the common prayer, and (if there be occasion) administer the sacraments and other rights of the church, on pain of 5l. to the poor, on conviction, by confession, or oath of two witnesses, before two justices; and in default of payment in ten days, the same to be levied by the churchwarden or overseer by distress and sale, by warrant of such justice.

All commanders, captains, and officers at sea, shall cause the public worship of Almighty God, according to the liturgy of the church of England, to be performed in their respective ships; and prayers and preachings by the chaplains shall be performed diligently. Stat. 22 Geo. II. c. 33, art. 1.

By stat. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 4, s. 19, 20, 21, no person shall be received as a lecturer, or allowed to preach or read any lecture or sermon, without license from the bishop, and assenting to the 39 articles, and reading the common prayer, before his first sermon, and on the first lecture day of every month; on pain of three months' imprisonment for every offence, by two justices of the peace, on certificate from the bishop of the offence committed.

Impugners of the form of worship in the church of England, established by law, and contained in the book of common prayer; of the 39 articles; of the rites and ceremonies of the church; and the Episcopal government shall be excommunicated (a) ipso facto, and not restored but by the bishop archbishop on their repentance. Can. 3, 6, 7.

By stat. 1 Eliz. c. 2, s. 4—8, if any person, vicar, or other minister, that ought to use the common prayer, or to administer the sacraments, shall refuse to do the same, or (willfully standing in the same) shall use any other form, or shall speak any thing in derogation of the same book or of any thing therein contained; he shall on conviction for the first offence forfeit to the King one year's profit of all his spiritual promotions, and be imprisoned

(a) As to excommunication being abolished, except under circumstances, can. 637.
Common Prayer.

for six months; for the second offence, shall be deprived of all his spiritual promotions, and be imprisoned for a year; and for the third offence, shall be deprived of all his spiritual promotions, and be imprisoned during life. And if he has no spiritual promotion, he shall for the first offence be imprisoned for a year, and for the second during life.

But this shall not restrain the spiritual court from proceeding against these offenders; and they may be deprived by the said court, according to the course of the spiritual law, for the first offence. 1 Eliz. c. 2, s. 16, 23. 1 Hawks. c. 7, s. 4; 1 East's P. C. 10.

By the same statute, sect. 18 & 20, if any person whatsoever shall in plays, songs, or by other open words, speak any thing in derogation of the same book or any thing therein contained; or shall by open fact cause or procure any minister in any place to say common prayer openly, or to minister any sacrament, in other form, or shall interrupt or let any minister to say the said common prayer; he shall (being indicted for the same at the next assizes) forfeit to the King for the first offence 100 marks, and for the second 400 marks; which if not paid in six weeks after conviction, he shall suffer six months' imprisonment for the first offence, and twelve months for the second; and for the third offence, shall forfeit all his goods and chattels, and be imprisoned during life.

By stat. 1 Edw. V. c. 1, if any person shall speak irreverently of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, he shall suffer imprisonment, and make fine and ransom at the King's will. And three justices, one being of the quorum, may take information by the oaths of two witnesses and, afterwards, at the sessions, may inquire thereof by the oath of twelve men upon indictment. And they shall, at the sessions where the offender shall be indicted, direct a writ to the bishop to appear by himself or deputy at the trial. But no person shall be molested, but within three months after the offence committed.

By stat. 1 Mar. sess. 2, c. 3, if any person shall disturb a preacher in his sermon by word or deed, he shall be apprehended and carried before a justice of the peace, who shall commit him to safe custody, and within six days he and another justice shall examine the fact, and if they find him guilty by two witnesses, or confession, they shall commit him to gaol for three months, and further to the next sessions; and if at the sessions he repents and is reconciled, he shall be discharged on finding sureties for his good behaviour for a year; if not, he shall be continued in gaol till he does; saving the ecclesiastical jurisdiction; and he shall not be punished both ways.

This statute, though made in queen Mary's reign, extendeth to the divine service now established. Gibs. 372.

A parish clerk refused to read in church a notice which was presented to him for that purpose, and the person presenting it read it himself at a time when no part of the church service was actually going on, viz. whilst the minister was walking from the communion table to the vestry room. The defendant, a constable, by order of the minister, took him out of the church and detained him an hour after the service was over. He then allowed plaintiff to go, on his promise to attend a magistrate the next day, which he accordingly did, but no complaint being made against him he was discharged. For this the plaintiff brought an action of trespass for an assault and false imprisonment, and obtained a verdict. Adolphus, on motion for a new trial or a nonsuit, cited the state. 1 Mar. sess. 2, c. 3, s. 3, 1 W. & M. c. 18, s. 18, in support of it. Sed per Abbott, C. J. "It appears to me, that the 1 Mar. sess. 2, c. 3, merely gave to the common law cognizance of an offence which was before punishable by the ecclesiastical law; in order to be within that statute, the party must maliciously, wilfully, or of purpose molest the person celebrating divine service. Had the notice been read by the plaintiff whilst any part of the service was actually going on, we might have thought that he had done it on purpose to molest the minister; but the act having been done during an interval when no part of the service was in the course of being performed, and the party apparently supposing that he had a right to give such a notice, I am not prepared to say that the 1 Mar. sess. 2, c. 3, warranted his detention, in order that he might be taken before a justice of the peace. Neither does the case come within the toleration act, 1 W. & M. c. 18. That only applies where the thing is done wilfully, and of purpose maliciously to disturb the congregation or misuse the preacher. The detention of the plaintiff after the time when the service ended was therefore illegal, and we ought not to disturb the verdict which has been found.” Rule refused. Williams v. Glennister, 2 B. & C. 699; 4 D. & R. 217, S. C.

By stat. 1 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 18, s. 18, “if any person or persons, at any time or times after the 10th day of June, 1688, do and shall willingly and of purpose, maliciously or contemptuously come into any cathedral or parish church, chapel, or other congregation permitted by this act, and disquiet and disturb the same, or misuse any preacher or teacher, such person or persons, upon proof thereof before any justice of peace, by two or more sufficient witnesses, shall find two sureties to be bound by recognizance in the penal sum of 50l., and in default of such sureties shall be committed to prison, there to remain till the next general or quarter sessions; and upon conviction of the said offence at the said general or quarter sessions, shall suffer the pain and penalty of 20l. to the use of the King’s and Queen’s Majesties, their heirs and successors.” And see Hist, Vol. V.

The Court of King’s Bench refused to grant a certiorari, to remove an indictment at the sessions for a person not behaving himself modestly and reverently at the church during divine service; which although punishable by ecclesiastical censures, yet the court conceived it a proper cause within cognizance of the justices of the peace. And this was before the above-mentioned statute of 1 W. & M. c. 18; 1 Keb. 491. But in R. v. Huls and others, 5 T. R. 542, it was held that an indictment upon stat. 1 W. & M. c. 18, at the quarter sessions may before verdict be removed by certiorari into the King’s Bench, and upon conviction of several defendants, each is liable to the penalty of 20l. See 3 Burn’s Eccl. Law, tit. Public Worship.

The almanac at the beginning of the common prayer is good evidence. ante, 129.

Compensation. See Costs, Vol. I.; Rewards, Vol. V.

Compounding. See Award, ante, p. 300; Felony, Vol. II.; Information, Vol. III. p. 373.

Compromise. See Award, ante, p. 300; Felony, Vol. II.; Information, Vol. III. p. 373.

Confederacy. See Conspiracy, post, 782.
Confessions, \( \text{(a)} \)

Confessions made by the party accused may be considered as regards,

I. Confessions made at the Trial of Defendant, 777.

II. Confessions made before Justices on Examination, 777.

III. Confessions made on other Occasions, 778 to 782.

---

I. Confessions on the Trial of Defendant.

Confessions made by the accused on his trial may be either expressed or implied.

An expressed confession is, where a defendant pleads guilty and thereby directly confesses the crime with which he is charged, which is the highest conviction that can be. 2 Hawk. c. 31, s. 1; 1 Chit. C. L. 428.

But it is usual for the court, especially if the punishment be capital, to advise the party to plead and put himself upon his trial, and not presently to record his confession, but to admit him to plead. 2 Hale, 225.

In smaller offences, as assaults, or the like, it may be advisable to confess the indictment, as the defendant may afterwards produce affidavits to show that the prosecutor made the first assault, which he cannot do after conviction. 1 Salk. 55.

And in trifling personal injuries, the prosecutor and defendant frequently settle the charge in private, and the latter comes into court and pleads guilty to the indictment; and upon proving a general release given by the former, submits to a small fine for the breach of the peace which his conduct has occasioned. Dick. Sess. 156; Cro. C. C. 21; and see post, Sessions, Vol. V. p. 467.

As to the mode in which confession is made, and the subsequent proceedings on charges of felony, see 1 Chit. C. L. 428, 429.

An implied confession is where a defendant in a case not capital doth not directly own himself guilty, but in a manner admits it by yielding to the King's mercy, and desiring to submit to a small fine; which submission the court may accept of if they think fit, without putting him to a direct confession. 2 Hawk. c. 31, s. 3.

---

II. Confessions at Examinations before Magistrates.

Confessions, when duly made on examinations before magistrates, in pursuance of the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 2, ante, 307, are of themselves evidence against the confessor.

The rules noticed post, 778 to 782, showing what confessions in general are admissible in evidence, will here apply.

The mode of conducting the examination will be found post, Examination, Vol. II.

(a) A magistrate should not only be upon his guard against extorted, but also against collusive confessions. A remarkable instance of this kind is mentioned by Mr. Dickenson, as singularly illustrative of the propriety of this caution. Two brothers committed a robbery in a dark night to a large amount, and fled. A younger brother, who was innocent, in order to favour their escape, contrived to draw suspicion on himself, and when examined, tacitly admitted his guilt. He was afterwards committed to prison, and all pursuit of his brothers was discontinued. On the trial, he proved an alibi on the clearest and most satisfactory evidence, and was consequently acquitted. In the mean time, the actual felon had safely arrived in America with their plunder. 1 Dick. Just. 460.
Confession.

It may be as well here to notice that the examination must not be upon oath; 1 Hale, 585; if it be, the court will not allow it to be given in evidence; and where it was in writing, and purported to have been taken upon oath, Le Blanche, J., even refused to admit parol evidence to prove that the prisoner, at the time of his examination, was not in fact sworn. R. v. Smith and others, 1 Stark. 242.

Where one of three prisoners stated, in the presence and hearing of the others, in his examination before the magistrate, that he and one of the others committed the felony, and this was not contradicted by the other, still Holroyd, J., held that this could not be given in evidence against the other, and he said it had been so ruled by several of the judges in a case tried at Chester. R. v. Appleby and others, 3 Stark. 33.

The confession ought to be reduced into writing, and it is advisable for precaution and facility of future proof to have it signed by the defendant. In Lambe’s case, the question for the opinion of the judges was, whether a written examination taken by a committing magistrate, and containing a confession, which the prisoner on hearing it read over to him admitted to be true, but refused to sign, ought to have been received in evidence, as it was not signed either by the magistrate or by the prisoner; and a majority of the judges held that such a confession would have been evidence in common law, and that it is not rendered inadmissible by any provision in the statutes of Philip and Mary respecting examinations and informations before justices of the peace. In this case the examination was rendered admissible by the prisoner’s acknowledging the truth of its contents; if he had not made such an admission, but had only refused to sign it after it had been read over to him, it could not have been received in evidence. 3 Leach 625; 1 Phill. Eliz. 116; 3 Hawk, c. 46, s. 41; 4 Esp. 172.

After the examination of a prisoner before a magistrate upon a charge of felony has been taken down by the magistrate’s clerk, it is read over to him, and he is told that he may sign it or not as he chooses; having declined to sign it, the examination cannot be read in evidence. R. v. Telcastle, 2 Stark. C. N. P. 483.

The confession should be taken down in the very words uttered by the prisoner, post, Vol. II. p. 98.

A confession before a magistrate, if taken down in writing at the time, should be produced, and proved by the magistrate or his clerk to have been duly taken; see 1 Hale, 585; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 3; 1 Leach, 240, 348; but if it be clearly shown that the examination of the defendant was not reduced to writing, or perhaps if the writing be lost or destroyed, then parol evidence of it may be admitted. See R. v. Lamb, 2 Leach, 629. R. v. Hollerhead, 4 C. & P. 242; Phillips v. Wimborne, id. 273; post, Vol. II. p. 53.

III. Confessions on other Occasions.

The confession of the defendant himself, whether taken on an examination before justices of the peace in pursuance of the statute of 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 2, 3, 4, 5, upon a bailment or commitment for felony or misdemeanor, or in discourse with private persons, is allowed to be given in evidence against the party confessing, but not against others. 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 2.

The general rule on this subject was very fully considered in a judgment delivered by Mr. Justice Gross, in a case reserved for the opinion of the twelve judges, and it seems to be now clearly settled, that a free and voluntary confession, made by a prisoner accused of an offence, whether made before he is apprehended or after, whether on a judicial examination or after commitment, whether reduced into writing or not; in short, that any voluntary confession made by a prisoner to any person at any time or place, is strong evidence against him. Lamb’s case, 2 Leach, 552; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 31; 1 Phill. on Eq. 110.

The confession of the prisoner is sufficient ground for a conviction, though there be no other proof of his having committed the offence, or of the offence having been committed, if that confession was in consequence of a charge against him; R. v. Eldridge, R. & R. C. C. R. 440; R. v. White, id. 508; R. v. Tippert, id. 508; and especially if there is evidence that he had been desires to keep out of the way of the person upon whom the offence is supposed to have been committed, or if any of his companions under the same charge have attempted to do so. R. v. Falkiner, id. 431.
In general.

Where a witness answers questions upon examination on trial, tending to criminate himself, and to which he might have demurred, his answers may be used for all purposes. 4 Camp. 10; R. v. Mercereau, 2 Stark. C. N. P. 396. But the latter case seems incorrectly reported, see per Lord Tenterden, C. J., in R. v. Gilham, R. & M. C. C. 203, post, 780.

Though a statute only empowers a justice to convict upon the oath of one or more witnesses, this implies a power to convict upon the confession of the party alone. R. v. Gage, 1 Stra. 546; Poley, 32; 1 B. & A. 100; 4 B. & A. 510.

It is said by Mr. J. Blackstone, that confessions, even in cases of felony at the common law, are the weakest and most suspicious of all testimony, ever liable to be obtained by artifice, false hopes, promises of favour, or menaces; seldom remembered accurately, or reported with due precision; and incapable in their nature of being disproved by other negative evidence. 4 Blac. Com. 357.

Nature of Confession]—Before any confession can be received in evidence, it must be ascertained with certainty that such confession was neither obtained by threats nor promises, but was perfectly free and voluntary; 2 East’s P. C. 657; for, says Lord Hale, I have often known the prisoner disown his confession upon his examination, and hath sometimes been acquitted against such his confession. 2 Hale, 284, 285.

The confession will be presumed to be freely made until the contrary appear; and the magistrate’s clerk cannot, unless the prisoner alleges that the confession was unduly obtained, be asked by the prisoner’s counsel whether the confession was voluntarily made. 6 St. Tri. 831.

If the promise or menace, &c. take place previously to the prisoner’s being brought before the magistrate, and the confession be before the magistrate, the court will in general refuse to admit the confession to be given in evidence, unless it appear that the prisoner was undeceived by the magistrate, and cautioned by him not to expect the favour, or not to regard the menaces held out to him. 2 East’s P. C. 658; and see 1 Phil. Ev. 112.

But a confession made in consequence of questions put by the officer who had charge of the prisoner, a boy about fourteen years of age, on a charge of felony, and when he had no food for nearly a day, but obtained without threat or promise, was held admissible. R. v. Thornton, R. & M. C. C. 37.

A prisoner was charged with stealing a guinea and two promissory notes; the prosecutor told him that it would be better for him to confess. It was held, that after this admonition, the prosecutor might be allowed to prove that the prisoner brought him a guinea and a 5l. note, which he gave up to the prosecutor as the guinea and one of the notes that had been stolen from him. R. v. Griffin, R. & R. C. C. R. 151.

It is no objection that the confession was made under a mistaken supposition that some of the prisoner’s accomplices were in custody; not even though some artifice had been used to draw him into that supposition. R. v. Barley, 1 Phil. Ev. 7th ed. 111.

If a prisoner, who is committed on a charge of felony, ask the turnkey of the gaol to put a letter into the post, addressed to the prisoner’s father, and the turnkey promise to do so, and instead of that, on receiving the letter, he conveys it to the visiting magistrates of the gaol, who forward it to the prosecutor. This letter is evidence against the prisoner, notwithstanding the manner in which it was obtained. R. v. Derrington, 2 C. & P. 418.

A person charged with murder made a confession before the coroner. It appeared that before he made this confession, B., who was both a clergyman Confession.

In General.

What is a threat or promise.

and a magistrate, had had an interview with him; held, that the prosecutors were not bound to call B. before they put in the confession, but that it would be fair for them to do so, and that if the prosecutors did not call B. the prisoner might call him before the confession was read, to prove that some inducement was held out. _R. v. Clewes, 4 C. & P. 221._

With respect to what shall be deemed a threat or promise; a confession induced by saying, "unless you give me a more satisfactory account, I will take you before a magistrate," cannot be received in evidence. So also saying to the prisoner that it would be worse for him if he did not confess, or that it would be better for him if he did, is sufficient to exclude the confession, according to constant experience. _R. v. Thompson, 1 Leach, 291; 2 East's P. C. 659._

In the case of _Thomas Case_ he was indicted at the Old Bailey in Feb. Sess. 1784, for stealing, on the 4th of the same month, an iron bar, the property of Edward Meux, Esq. It was the bar of a window belonging to a public house in High Street, Bloomsbury, and the prisoner, on pretence of drinking a pint of beer, contrived to take it away. On going the ensuing evening to the same house, the publican suspecting that he was the person who had stolen the bar, sent for a constable, by whom, on the charge given, he was taken to the watch-house, where he remained all night. On the next morning, the constable, as he was taking him to the magistrates, called with him at the publican's house, and in the conversation which took place, the publican said, "I am in great distress about my iron; if you will tell me where they are, I will be favourable to you." In consequence of which the prisoner confessed that he had taken the property, and told him where it was; but there being no other evidence, _Gould, J._, told the jury they must acquit the prisoner; for that the _lightest hopes of mercy_ held out to a prisoner to induce him to disclose the fact, was sufficient to invalidate a confession. _1 Leach, 328, notis._

In the case of _R. v. Jones, R. & R. C. C. 152_, the prosecutor had asked the prisoner, on finding him, for the money he (the prisoner) had taken out of the prosecutor's pocket; but before the money was produced said, "he only wanted his money, and if the prisoner gave him that, he might go to the devil, if he pleased;" after which, the prisoner took eleven shillings and sixpence halfpenny out of his pocket, and said it was all he had left of it; and a majority of the judges held, that the confession ought not to have been received.

A prisoner, committed on a charge of murder, sent for the chaplain of the gaol to pray with him. The chaplain told him that, as the minister of God, he ought to warn him not to add sin to sin by attempting to dissemble with God, and that it would be important for him to confess his sins before God, and to repair, as far as he could, any injury he had done. The chaplain stated that he considered he had made a great impression, and that he told the prisoner he did not wish him to confess to him. There were two interviews; and the chaplain said he was almost sure that he always used the terms confessing his sins before God, but was not quite positive that he mentioned the words "before God" every time. After this the prisoner sent for the gaoler, who warned him not to tell him any thing but what he wished to be repeated to the magistrates. The prisoner then made a confession. After this the prisoner sent for the mayor, who said, "Before you say any thing, I must apprise you, (as I have done several times,) that it will be, probably, given in evidence against you; you are therefore to exercise your own discretion, and say little or nothing, as you think best; and if you have changed your mind and don't choose to say any thing, I will retire, and shall not feel at all angry at your having brought me down." The prisoner made another confession, which was taken down, and read over, and he admitted its correctness, but he could not sign it as his hand shook so much. These confessions were objected to by the prisoner's counsel, but, after argument, the twelve judges held that they were rightly received. _R. v. Gileam, R. & M. C. C. 196; Car. C. L. 61; Tufa. Dick. Sess. 356, 357, S. C._
In general.

A., a prisoner charged with murder, was visited by B., who was both a magistrate and a clergyman; B. told him that if he was not the person who struck the fatal blow, and he would tell all that he knew, he (B.) would use his endeavours and influence to prevent anything from happening to him, and that if he (A.) did not make a disclosure, some one else would probably do so. After this, B. wrote to the secretary of state, who returned an answer that mercy could not be extended to A., which answer was communicated by B. to A. After this, A. sent for the coroner, and wished to make a statement. The coroner told him that if he did so, it would be used as evidence against him. The prisoner made a confession: held, that this confession was admissible. R. v. Cleaves, 4 C. & P. 221.

Where it appeared that the prisoner, on being taken into custody, had been told by a person, who came to assist the constable, that it would be better for him to confess, but that, on his being examined before the committing magistrate on the following day, he was frequently cautioned by the magistrate to say nothing against himself; a confession under these circumstances before the magistrate was held to be clearly admissible. R. v. Lingate, 1 Phil. Ex. 7 ed. 115; R. v. Hardwick, id.; R. v. Rosier, id.; Stark. on Ex. Part. IV. 2550.

If a confession be obtained by undue means, nothing the prisoner afterwards says, under the influence of having made that confession, can be received. R. v. Sarah Nute, 1 Burn's J. 24 ed. 688.

In R. v. Jenkins, R. & R. C. C. R. 492, it was held, that if a confession be improperly obtained, it is a ground for excluding evidence, not only of the confession, but of any act done by the prisoner in consequence, towards discovering the property.

But although a confession may not be receivable in evidence, yet any discovery that takes place in consequence of such confession will be admitted as a substantive fact: as if a man by promise of favour be induced to confess that he knowingly received certain stolen goods, and that they are in such a room in his house, and the goods be found there accordingly, although the confession itself cannot in that case be given in evidence, yet it may be proved that in consequence of something the witness heard from the defendant, he found the goods in question in the defendant's house. R. v. Lockhart, 2 East's P. C. 658; 1 Leach, 430; and see 1 Leach, 300, n. and 301, n.

If persons having nothing to do with the apprehension, prosecution, or examination of the prisoner, advise him to confess, this is no ground for excluding a subsequent confession made to another person. R. v. Row, R. & R. C. C. R. 153; R. v. Gibbons, 1 Carr. & P. 97; R. v. Tyler, 1 Carr. & P. 129.

It is fully settled, that whenever a person's confession is made use of against him, it must all be taken together, and not by parcels. If the confession be not in writing, the whole of what the prisoner said must be fully stated, although it may happen that some part of it concerns other prisoners who are tried on the same indictment; in such case it is not possible to make any selection, for until the evidence has been heard, it cannot be known what it is, or to whom it relates, and all that can be done is to direct the jury not to take into their consideration such parts as affect the other prisoners. But a distinction might perhaps be made in this respect, in case the confession has been reduced into writing, if that part which relates to the other prisoners is capable of being separated and detached from the rest, and can be omitted without affecting in any degree the prisoner's narrative against himself. 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 42, 43, 44; 4 Taunt. 245; and see the Queen's case, 2 B. & B. 294.

If there be proof of recent possession of stolen property, and the prosecutor give in evidence a declaration in which the prisoner asserted that he bought the goods of A. B., the prosecutor having made the prisoner's declaration evidence, it must be taken as true until it is contradicted; but if there be other evidence to falsify it, the judge will leave both the prisoner's declaration and Acts subsequent to an extorted confession.

Confession.

A party's confession is only evidence against himself, and not against his accomplices; 3 Stark. 33; 1 Hale, 585; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 3; R. v. Tegg, Bell. 17, 18; R. v. Boshay, 3 St. Tr. 474; although he charges his accomplice in his hearing, and the accomplice does not deny it. R. v. Appleby, 3 Stark. 33; 1 Phil. Ex. 7th ed. 116.

In Tinker's case, however, the dying declarations of an accomplice were held by the judges to be good evidence against the principal; and the majority of the judges were of opinion, that this evidence would of itself be sufficient to convict, although the testimony of the accomplice, if lying, would not, unless corroborated by other evidence. 1 East's P. C. 334.

Also, in cases of conspiracy, and of high treason in compassing the King's death, &c., any thing said or written by one of the accomplices, not as a confession simply, but for the purpose of furthering the common design, is admissible evidence against the others. R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 140, Hil; 5 Esp. 125; 6 T. R. 527.

Confidential Communications, how for privileged in Evidence, post, Evidence, Vol. II. p. 68.

Conjures. See Game, Vol. II.

Conspiracy.

I. What it is, 783.

[33 Edw. I. stat. 2.]

II. Prosecution for, 785.
I. Conspiracy—(What it is.)

III. Evidence of, 787.

IV. How punishable, 788.

V. Forms, 789.

---

I. What it is.

Conspiracy is when two or more combine together to execute some act for the purpose of injuring a third person or the public.

1. By the common law there can be no doubt but that all confederates whatsoever, wrongfully to prejudice a third person or the public, are highly criminal; as where divers persons confederate together by indirect means to impoverish a third person, or falsely and maliciously to charge a man with being the reputed father of a bastard child, or to maintain one another in a matter whether it be true or false. 1 Hawk. c. 72, s. 2.

2. And conspiracy by statute is as follows: "Conspirators be they that do confeder or bind themselves by oath, covenant, or other alliance, that every of them shall act and bear the other falsely and maliciously to indict, or cause to indict, or falsely to move or maintain pleas; and such as retain men in the country with liversies or fees for to maintain their malicious enterprises; and"

---

("a") Mr. Talfourd, in his much improved and useful edition of Dickenson's Sessions, makes the following observations as to this offence.

"The offence of conspiracy is more difficult to be ascertained precisely than any other for which indictment lies; and is indeed rather to be considered as governed by positive decisions than by any consistent and intelligible principles of law. It consists, according to all the authorities, not in the accomplishment of any unlawful or injurious purpose, nor in any one act moving towards that purpose; but in the actual concert and agreement of two or more persons to effect something, which, being so concerted and agreed, the law regards as the object of an indictable conspiracy. There are two classes of cases in which the criminality of such agreement is perfectly intelligible and obvious: 1. Where the object proposed would, if accomplished, be a criminal offence in all parties acting in it. 2. Where, though the ultimate object may be lawful, the means by which the parties, conspirators, propose to effect their purpose necessarily involve in them an indictable offence. Of the first kind are conspiring to commit a felony—conspiring to obtain money under false pretences—conspiring to suborn or abduct a witness—where the object, if carried into effect, would be a substantive offence, and where therefore concert is indictable as an act in itself tending to promote the same; the second kind is a conspiracy to support a cause, in itself just, by false testimony; and the same principle would apply here; for whether the concerted offence be the end or the means it is equally an offence, which, if consummated, would subject the offenders to the visitation of criminal justice. But it is not easy to understand on what principle conspiracies have been holden indictable, where neither the end nor the means are, in themselves, regarded by the law as criminal, however reprehensible in point of morals. More concert is not in itself a crime; for associations to prosecute felons, and even to put laws in force against political offenders, have been holden legal. R. v. Murray and others, tried before Abbott, C. J. at Guildhall, 1823. If then there be no indictable offence in the object, no indictable offence in the means, and no indictable offence in the concert, in what part of the conduct of the conspirators is the offence to be found? Can several circumstances, each perfectly lawful, make up an unlawful act? And yet such is the general language held on in this subject that at one time the immorality of the object is relied on; at another the evidence of the means; while at all times the concert is stated to be the essence of the charge, and yet that concert, independent of an illegal object or illegal means, is admitted to be blameworthy." Mr. Talfourd then proceeds to comment on Mackin's case, 2 Campl. 369, the case of R. v. Farmer, 13 East, 226, and that of R. v. Grey, 3 St. Tr. 519; and considering it a hopeless task to lay down any fixed principles whereby this offence may be governed, he points out the several instances of cases wherein parties have been convicted of conspiracies, and which will be found collected in the above text.
Conspiracy.

Against individuals.

this extendeth as well to the takers as to the givers: and stewards and tenants of great lords, which by their office or power undertake to bear or maintain quarrels, pleas, or debates, that concern other parties than such as touch the estate of their lords or themselves. 33 Edw. I. st. 2.

As to conspiracies among workmen, see 6 Geo. IV. c. 129, post, Sects. Vol. V. p. 418.

From this definition of conspirators, it seems clearly to follow, contrary to the opinion of Lord Coke, that not only those who actually cause an innocent man to be indicted, and also to be tried upon the indictment, whereupon he is lawfully acquitted, are properly conspirators, but that those also are guilty of this offence who barely conspire to indict a man falsely and maliciously, whether they do any act in prosecution of such conspiracy or not. 1 Beck. c. 71, a. 2; 2 Ld. Raym. 1169.

But an action will not lie for the conspiracy unless it be put in execution; for in such case, the damage is the ground of the action. 1 Ld. Raym. 378.

Combining together to marry a girl to get her fortune amounts to a conspiracy, and is indictable. 3 Vex. & B. 173.

Conspiring to seduce a girl is indictable. R. v. Lord Grey and others, 3 St. Tr. 519.

If a man and woman marry in the name of another, for the purpose of raising a specious title to the estate of the person whose name is assumed, it is a conspiracy. R. v. Robinson and Taylor, 1 Leach, 37.

So a conspiracy to injure the reputation of an individual by inducing or preferring a complaint before a magistrate, though no indictment or complaint be preferred, is indictable; 1 Bla. Rep. 392; and this though the offence intended to be charged was not cognizable in the temporal courts. 1 Salk. 174.

It seems an indictment lies for conspiring to cheat and defraud a man by selling him an unsound horse. 2 B. & A. 204; 1 Stark. C. N. P. 402.

But no indictment lies for conspiring to commit a civil trespass on a preserve to take game, though effected in the night and with destructive weapons. R. v. Toms, 13 East, 228.

An agreement between individuals to support each other in all undertakings, lawful or unlawful, is illegal. 9 Co. 56.

But associations to prosecute felons, and even to put laws in force against political offenders, are lawful. R. v. Murray and others, cor. Abbott, C.I. Guildhall, 1823.

An agreement amongst several to hiss and condemn a play, &c. is indictable. 2 Camp. 358.

A conspiracy to deprive a man of an office under an illegal trading company, is not indictable. R. v. Straton, 1 Campb. 549, n.

A conspiracy to deprive public trade, to affect public health, to violate police, or to insult public justice or the like, is indictable. Thus it is an indictable offence to conspire on a particular day by false rumours to raise the price of the government funds, with intent to injure the subjects who should purchase on that day; R. v. De Berenger, 3 M. & S. 57; for, as there observed by Lord Ellenborough, C.J., the purpose itself is mischievous; it strikes at the price of a vendible commodity in the market, and if it gives it a fictitious price, by means of false rumours, it is a fraud levelled against all the public, for it is against all such as may possibly have any thing to do with the funds on that day. And it was held in the same case, that an indictment for such an offence need not specify the particular persons who purchased as the persons intended to be injured, for the conspiracy is the thing which constitutes the crime; and it is sufficient if the indictment state the conspiracy as it existed at the time when the crime was complete.

A conspiracy by magistrates to present a false certificate that a road under indictment is in repair, is indictable. R. v. Maweby, 6 T. R. 619, 638.

A conspiracy to prevent a prosecution for a felony, is an offence. 14 Ta. 65.

So is a conspiracy to commit a felony or misdemeanor. R. v. Pollman, 2 Camp. 229; R. v. Roberts, 1 Camp. 399.
I.] What it is.

Journeymen confederating and refusing to work for certain wages, may be indicted for a conspiracy, notwithstanding the statutes which regulate their work and wages do not direct this mode of prosecution; for the offence consists in conspiring, and not in the refusal, and all conspiracies are illegal, although the subject-matter of them may be lawful. R. v. Journeymen Tailors of Cambridge, 8 Mod. 11, 320.

A conspiring to sell unwholesome provisions is indictable. R. v. Macarty, 2 Ld. Raym. 1179.

To complete the offence of conspiracy no act need be done in consequence thereof.

A bare conspiracy to do a lawful act to an unlawful end is a crime. Suppose there is a conspiracy to let lands of 10l. a-year value to a poor man, in order to get him a settlement, or to make a certificate man a parish officer, or a conspiracy to send a woman big of a bastard child into another parish to be delivered there, and so to charge that parish with the child; certainly these are crimes indictable. Per. cur. R. v. Edwards and others, 8 Mod. 321; and see 1 Bla. Rep. 392.

One person alone cannot be guilty of a conspiracy: 1 Hawk. c. 72, s. 8; but one person may be prosecuted for having conspired with others, and may be tried and convicted alone, if the others escape or die before the time of trial, or the finding of the bill. 1 Stra. 193; 2 Stra. 1227. And if all but one be acquitted, and it is not stated as a conspiracy with certain persons unknown, the conviction of a single defendant will be invalid and no judgment can be passed on him. Poph. 202; R. v. Scott, 3 Burr. 1262; 12 Mod. 262; 1 Hawk. c. 72, s. 8. But if an action on the case in nature of a conspiracy be brought against several persons, and all but one be acquitted, yet judgment may be given against that one only. 1 Hawk. c. 72, s. 8.

And where two conspire and one dies, the survivor may still be indicted for the conspiracy. 2 Stra. 1227; R. v. Nicholls, 13 East, 412, n.

And even where the other defendant has pleaded and is alive, but has not been tried, a verdict of guilty of conspiring with him may be sustained, and judgment given on it, although it is possible he may be afterwards acquitted. R. v. Cooke, 5 B. & C. 338; 7 D. & R. 672, S. C.

A husband and wife alone cannot be indicted for a conspiracy, because they are esteemed but as one person in law. 1 Hawk. c. 72, s. 8.

But in the case of R. v. Cope and others, 1 Stra. 144, the husband and wife and servants were indicted for a conspiracy to ruin the trade of the prosecutor, who was the King’s card-maker. The evidence against them was, that they had at several times given money to the prosecutor’s apprentices, to put grease into the paste, which had spoiled the cards. But there was no account given that ever more than one at a time was present, though it was proved they had all given money in their turns. It was objected that this could not be a conspiracy; for several persons might do the same thing, without having any previous communication with each other. But it was ruled, that the defendants being all of a family, and concerned in making of cards, it would amount to evidence of a conspiracy. And see further, post, 787.

II. Prosecution for.

In the case of a conspiracy to indict a person of a crime, or carry on any other malicious prosecution against him, his remedy is by action on the case, or else by indictment; (see 5 East, 552;) or sometimes he may move the Court of King’s Bench for and obtain a criminal information against the offenders, but then he will generally be compelled to abandon any civil remedy. 2 Burr. 719; 2 T. R. 198. To sustain an action on the case some actual damage must be sustained. 1 Ld. Raym. 378. The most usual course, especially where pecuniary compensation is not the object, is to indict. See 5 East, 552.
Conspiracy.

Indictment]—The venue should be laid in the county where the conspiracy took place; 1 Salk. 174; it seems it may be laid in the county in which an act was done by any one of the conspirators in furtherance of their common design. 4 East, 164.

It is usual to set out the overt acts, that is to say, those acts which may have been done by any one or more of the conspirators, in order to effect the common purpose of the society; but this, as we shall see, is not absolutely requisite.

If the indictment lay the offence to be an unlawful conspiracy, this, whether it be to charge a man with criminal acts, or such only as may affect his reputation, is fully sufficient. The several charges in the indictment are not to be considered as distinct and separate counts, but as one and the same united and continued offence, pursued through its different stages. R. v. Rispal, 1 Bla. Rep. 368.

An indictment against several persons for conspiring together, “by indirect means,” to prevent one H. B. from exercising the trade of a tailor, was held good, without stating the mode. The illegal combination is the gist of the offence, and it is enough to state the conspiracy and the object. R. v. Eglins and others, 1 Leach, 274; 13 East, 230, n.

In a late case, an indictment charging that the defendants conspired “by divers and sundry pretended and subtle means and devices, to obtain and secrete to themselves of and from P. D. and G. D. divers large sums of money of the respective monies of the said P. D. and G. D., and to cheat and defraud them respectively thereof,” was held sufficient; for the gist of the offence being the conspiracy, if that fact and its object be stated, the particular means and devices need not be set out. R. v. Gill and another, 2 B. & A. 204.

When the object of the combination is to indict the prosecutor, it is not necessary to show what particular offence it was intended to charge him, but it will suffice to say that they conspired to injure him by a crime punishable by the laws of this kingdom, and then it may be alleged that they, according to the conspiracy, did indict him; R. v. Spragg, 2 Burr. 993; in such a case, there is no occasion to aver the innocence of the party injured, if the conspiracy be laid false; for he will be presumed guilty until the contrary appears. R. v. Best, 1 Salk. 174; 1 Slo. 183.

So, in an indictment for conspiring to pervert the course of justice by producing a false certificate of justice of peace that a road indicted was to repair, in order to influence the judgment of the court, it is not necessary to allege that the defendants knew the certificate to be false; it is sufficient that they agreed to certify the fact as true, without knowing it to be so. R. v. Mannley, 6 T. R. 619.

An indictment for a conspiracy “to defraud J. W. of divers goods, and a pursuance of the conspiracy defrauding him of divers goods, to wit, of the value of 100l.” is good, without specifying such goods; (1 Clat. Rep. 683) and the court in such case would not, it should seem, call upon the prosecutor to deliver a particular of such goods; (Id.); and an indictment for conspiracy to defraud divers persons seems sufficient, without stating their names. 3 M. & S. 75.

Where the act only becomes illegal from the means used to effect it, much must be stated as will show its illegality, and charge the defendant with a substantive offence. Thus, in an indictment for a combination to marry paupers, in order to throw the burden of maintaining them on another parish, it is necessary to show that some threat, promise, bribe, or other means was made use of, because the act of marriage being in itself lawful, the procuring it requires this explanation in order to be charged as a crime: 1 East's P. C. 461, 462; it is also material in this case to show the intent of the combination, by stating that the husband was a pauper, and the wife legally settled in the parish from which she was taken. 8 Mod. 320; 1 Esp. Rep. 306, 307.

Trial of indictment.—The trial must be in the county where the conspiracy took place. 1 Salk. 174. In R. v. The Rev. John King and others, 2 Clat. Rep. 217, it was held no reason for changing the venue in an indictment for a conspiracy to destroy foxes and other vermin, that the gentry of the county in which the indictment was found are addicted to fox-hunting.
Evidence of.

A conspiracy is cognizable by the general quarter sessions, being a trespass. R. v. Rapal, 3 Burr. 1921; 1 Bla. Rep. 368.

On a motion for a new trial, or in arrest of judgment, all the defendants convicted must be present in court, and this though the motion be made on behalf of one of them only. R. v. Spragg, 2 Burr. 936; R. v. Teal and others, 11 East, 307; R. v. Askew, 3 M. & S. 9; R. v. Lord Cockrane, 3 M. & S. 10, n.; R. v. Hollingberry, 4 B. & Crec. 329; 6 D. & R. 345, S. C.

But when the indictment is removed into the King's Bench by certiorari, and set down for argument, it is not necessary that the defendant should appear in person, because it is in the nature of a special verdict, and his innocence may still be presumed. R. v. Nicholls, 2 Stra. 1227.

III. Evidence of.

The evidence must bring the case within the rules already laid down as to what is a conspiracy, ante, 783 to 785.

The actual fact of conspiring need not be proved; but it may be inferred from circumstances and the concurring conduct of the defendants. R. v. Parsons, 1 Bla. Rep. 392.

In prosecutions for conspiracies it is an established rule, that where several persons are proved to have combined together for the same illegal purpose, any act done by one of the party, in pursuance of the original concerted plan, and with reference to the common object, is in the contemplation of law the act of the whole party; and therefore, the proof of such act, after proof of the combination, would be evidence against any of the others who were engaged in the same conspiracy; and any declarations also made by one of the party at the time of doing such illegal act, seem not only to be evidence against himself, as tending to determine the quality of the act, but also to be evidence against the rest of the party, who are equally responsible as if they had themselves done the act. But what one of the party may have been heard to say at some other time when no act was committed by him, as to the share which some of the others had in the execution of the common design, or as to the object of the conspiracy, cannot, it seems, be admitted as evidence against the other defendants. 1 Phil. Evid. 94; R. v. Saltar, 5 Esp. 125; 2 Stark. 141; R. v. Roberts, 1 Camp. 399. And in R. v. Henry Hunt and others, for unlawfully meeting together with persons unknown, for the purpose of exciting discontent and disaffection, it was held (H. Hunt having presided at their meeting) that resolutions passed at a former meeting assembled a short time before, in a distant place, and at which H. Hunt also presided, and the avowed object of which meeting was that of the meeting mentioned in the indictment, were admissible in evidence to show the intention of H. Hunt in assembling and attending the meeting in question. 3 B. & A. 566.

The letters of one defendant to another are, under certain circumstances, admissible in evidence to rebut the charge of conspiracy, if they show that he was the dupe of the other, and was not himself a participator in any fraud. R. v. Whitehead, 1 Cor. & P. 67.

In the Queen's case it was considered, that on a prosecution for a crime to be proved by conspiracy, general evidence of an existing conspiracy may in the first instance be received, as a preliminary step to that more particular evidence, by which it is to be shown that the individual defendants were guilty participators in such conspiracy. That this is often necessary to render the particular evidence intelligible, and to show the true meaning and character of the acts of individual defendants. But in such cases, the general nature of the whole evidence intended to be adduced should be opened to the court; and if upon such opening, it should appear manifest that previously no particular proof sufficient to affect the individual defendants is intended to be adduced, it would become the duty of the judge to stop the case in limine, and not to allow the general evidence to be received, which, even if attended with no other bad effect, such as exciting an unreasonable prejudice, would certainly be a useless waste of time. 2 Brod. & Bing. 310.
Conspiracy.

Evidence of. Upon an indictment against workmen for a conspiracy against their employers, to prevent them from taking any apprentice, it was held that evidence of their having turned out from their employment with intent to compel their masters to dismiss any one apprentice, was sufficient to support the charge. R. v. Ferguson and another; 2 Stark. N. P. C. 489.

Where several conspire to procure an employment under government by corrupt means, it seems that a banker, who receives the money in order to pay it over for that purpose, becomes a party to the conspiracy. R. v. Pollins, 2 Camp. 233.

In Watson's case, (2 Stark. C. N. P. 140, and see Stark. on Evid. part iv. 404,) after evidence of a treasonable conspiracy, to which the prisoner who was upon his trial was a party; it was held, that papers found in the lodgings of a conspirator, at a subsequent period to the apprehension of the prisoner, might be read in evidence, although no absolute proof had been given of their previous existence, strong presumptive evidence having been admissible to show that the lodgings had not been entered by any one in the interval between the apprehension of the prisoner and the finding of the papers. Upon the same trial, evidence having been given that a paper containing seditious questions and answers had been found in the possession of a conspirator, but had not been published, the court doubted whether the paper was sufficiently connected by evidence with the object of the conspiracy to render it admissible, and it was not read; but they held, that if proof was to be given that the instrument was to be used for the purposes of the conspiracy, it would clearly be admissible.

It makes no difference as to the admissibility of the act or declaration of a conspirator against a defendant, whether the former be indicted or not, or tried or not, with the latter, for the making one a co-defendant does not make his acts or declarations evidence against another, any more than they were before; the principle upon which they are admissible at all is, that the act or declaration of one is the act or declaration of both, united in an common design, a principle which is wholly unaffected by the constitution of their being jointly indicted. Neither does it make it material what the nature of the indictment is, provided the offence involve a conspiracy. Thereupon an indictment for murder, if it appeared that others, together with the prisoner, conspired to perpetrate the crime, the act of one, done in pursuance of that intention, would be evidence against the rest. 6 T. R. 528.

Where one of several defendants charged with a conspiracy has been acquitted, the record of acquittal is evidence for another defendant subsequently tried. R. v. Horse Tooke, Old Bailey, 1794.

Where two defendants were indicted for a conspiracy to commit a fraud, and the defence of one was, that he himself had been deceived by the representations of his co-defendant, and part of a written correspondence having been received in evidence for the crown; it was held, that the whole of the correspondence between the defendants, up to the time of the overt act of the conspiracy, was admissible in evidence for the defence. R. v. Whithead, D. & K. C. N. P. 61.

Where an indictment for a conspiracy against A., B., and C. called a witness, and examined him as to a conversation between himself (C.) and A.; it was held, that the counsel for the prosecution were at liberty to examine as to other conversations between A. and C. although they tended chiefly to criminate A. who had called no witnesses. R. v. Kroche, 2 Stark. 343.

The wife of one co-defendant, in a case of conspiracy, is not a competent witness for another defendant, for as a joint offence is charged against all the defendants, an acquittal of the others would be a ground for acquittal of her husband. R. v. Lockyer, 5 Esp. C. N. P. 107; R. v. Frederick, 2 Stru. 1094.

And for further information, see Starkie on Evidence, part iv. tit. Conspiracy.

IV. Punishment, &c.

It is clear that those who are convicted of conspiracy at the suit of the party shall have judgement of fine and imprisonment, and to render the plaintiff his damages. 1 Hen. c. 72, s. 9.
Forms as to.

Also it is certain that he who is convicted at the suit of the King of a conspiracy to accuse another of a matter which may touch his life, shall have judgment that he shall lose the freedom and franchise of the law (whereby he is disabled as a juror and discredited as a witness.) 1 Hnau. c. 72, s. 9.

And this is commonly called villainous judgment, which is given by the common law, and not by any statute. But it now is the better opinion, that the villainous judgment is by long usage become obsoleste, there being no instance of its having been pronounced since the reign of Edward the Third; but instead thereof the delinquents are usually sentenced to fine, imprisonment, and surety for good behaviour. 4 Bla. Com. 136, 137; 2 Burr. 986, 1027; 1 Hnau. c. 72, s. 9.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 25, assaults committed in pursuance of a conspiracy to raise the rate of wages, are punishable with imprisonment with or without hard labour, for not exceeding two years, and the offender may be fined and required to find sureties for keeping the peace, see ante, 278.

An attorney has been struck off the roll after conviction for a conspiracy.

As to the incompetency of witnesses convicted of a conspiracy, see post, Evid. Proc. Vol. II. p. 64.

V. FORMS.

(No. 1.)

THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C. D. late of, &c. [here state the names and additions of all the defendants,] being persons of evil minds and dispositions, on, &c. [the venue,] unlawfully and wickedly [or if the conspiracy be malicious, say, falsely and maliciously,] did conspire, combine, confederate, and agree together to [here state the object of the conspiracy according to the substance of the facts.] And the jurors aforesaid upon their oath aforesaid do further present, that the said C. D. &c. in pursuance of and according to the said conspiracy, combination, confederacy, and agreement, between them the said C. D. &c. as aforesaid had, did, on, &c. at, &c. [the place where the overt act took place,] here set out the overt acts of conspiracy according to the substance of the facts,] to the great damage of the said A. B. [the party immediately injured,] to the evil example of all others, and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity. [Add a second count, stopping at the statement of the conspiracy, omitting the overt acts, and concluding as above. Add a third count, as general as possible, upon the principle laid down in 2 B. & A. 204, ante, 786.]

(No. 2.)

THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that R. B. late of, &c. P. J. late of, &c. R. G. late of, &c. and E. C. late of, &c. being persons of evil name, fame, and dishonest conversation, and not endeavouring to seek their living by honest labour, according to the laws of this kingdom of England, but compassing, devising, and conspiring amongst themselves by what unlawful means they might unlawfully and unjustly obtain and acquire into their hands and possession the goods, chattels, and money of the honest and harmless men and subjects of the said Lady the Queen, to maintain their dishonest and diabolical course of living, on, &c. at, &c. falsely, unlawfully, wickedly, and cruelly contriving, intending, conspiring, and devising among themselves to deceive and defraud one P. P. the younger, of [mercer,] not only of his monies, but also to deprive him the said P. P. of his good name, fame, estate, and credit, and to bring the said P. P. into the greatest hatred, scandal, contempt, and infamy amongst all the liege men and subjects of the said Lady the Queen, on, &c. aforesaid, at, &c. aforesaid, falsely, unlawfully, deceitfully, maliciously, and for the cause of wicked gain conspired, contrived, consulted, and agreed among themselves falsely, unjustly, wickedly, and diabolically to charge and accuse the said P. P. to be the father of a child whereof

(a) This precedent is from 3 Ld. Raym. 37. It was the indictment against Best, and held valid, 1 Salk. 174. Conspiracies present themselves in such a variety of shapes, that it is thought sufficient to give only the above forms as precedents. See various forms, 3 Chit. C. L. 1145, et seq.
Conspiracy.

The said E. C. was then pregnant, as they then and there pretended, and by the conspiracy among them so as aforesaid before had and there with force and arms, &c. they did falsely and maliciously affirm, and every one of them then and then did falsely and maliciously affirm, that he the said P. P. then lately before had carnal knowledge of the body of her the said E. C. and had carnally known the said E. C., and that he the said P. P. was the father of the pretended child whereof the said E. C. was then pregnant as she asserted and pretended, and that for the further execution of the premises they the said R. B., P. J., R. G., and E. C. then and then agreed and concluded among themselves that he the said R. B. should go to the said P. P. and falsely, wickedly, maliciously, and for the sake of wicked gain should accuse him the said P. P. that he the said P. P. then lately before had carnal knowledge of the body of the said E. C. and had carnally known her the said E. C., and that he the said P. P. was the father of the said pretended child whereof they pretended that she the said E. C. was pregnant. And the jurors do further say, that the said R. B. in execution of the premises, and according to the said conspiracy, consultation, and agreement among them the said R. B., P. J., R. G., and E. C. as aforesaid before had, afterwards, to wit, on the said, &c. aforesaid, with force and arms, &c. falsely, wickedly, maliciously, dishonestly, did for the sake of wicked gain, in the hearing of many faithful liege men and subjects of the said Lady the Queen, accused and accused the said P. P. that he the said P. P. then lately before had had carnal knowledge of the body of the said E. C. and had carnally known her the said E. C., and that he the said P. P. was the father of the said pretended child whereof they affirmed the said E. C. was then pregnant, to the great damage, scandal, and defamation of the said P. P. to the pernicious example of all others, and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity. [Add other counts more general.]

See the form of indictment for riot and conspiracy to annoy prosecutor a in house, Vol. V. p. 301.

Constable.

The office of a constable in apprehending offenders and in executing warrants, is treated of under the titles Arrest and Warrant; and in like manner the other particulars of his duty may be found under the respective titles throughout the book; this title treating only of the office of a constable in general.

As to peace officers appointed under the Metropolitan Police Act, see Police, Vol. V.

[13 Edw. I. st. 2, c. 6.]

II. Who shall be a Constable, and of Special and Deputy Constables, 792 to 796.
[5 Hen. VIII. c. 6; 12 Hen. VIII. c. 40; 1 Will. III. c. 18; 6 & 7 Will. III. c. 4; 10 & 11 Will. III. c. 23; 16 Geo. II. c. 16; 21 Geo. III. c. 32; 42 Geo. III. c. 90; 52 Geo. III. c. 155; 57 Geo. III. c. 44; 1 Geo. IV. c. 37.]

III. How Elected and compellable to act, 796 to 798.
[13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12; 1 Geo. II. st. 2, c. 13.]

IV. His Power as Conservator of the Peace, 799.

V. His Duty as Officer to Justices, 799.
[5 Geo. IV. c. 18.]

VI. Punishment for Neglect of Duty, 800.
[27 Geo. II. c. 20; 33 Geo. III. c. 55; 5 Geo. IV. c. 83.]

VII. His Indemnity and Protection in his Office, 802 to 806.
[7 Jac. I. c. 6; 21 Jac. I. c. 12; 24 Geo. II. c. 44; 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 83.]
I. Origin of Constables, and Nature of the Office.

The sundry names of high constables, or constables of lathes, rapes, wa-pentakes, hundreds, and franchises, and the divers names also of petty constables, tithingman, borsholders, borowheads, headborows, chiefpledges, and such other (if there be any) that bear office in towns, parishes, hamlets, tithings, or borowes, are all in effect but two, that is to say, constables and borsholders.

The word constable is evidently a compound, but it seems to be uncertain from whence it has been originally derived. Borsholders, (which is the other general name, and doth contain within it the meaning of tithingman, borowheads, headborows, thirdborows, and chiefpledges,) is a word compounded of the Saxon borge, borrow, or borhoe, a pledge, and elder, the elder, chief, or head; and borsheldier, in one word, doth mean the chief or head of the sureties or pledges. For the understanding whereof it is to be remembered, that by the ancient laws of this realm (before the coming of King William the Conqueror) it was ordained for the more sure keeping of the peace, and for the better repressing of thieves and robbers, that all free-born men should cast themselves into several companies, by ten in each company; and that every of those ten men of the company should be surety and pledge for the forthcoming of his fellows; so that if any harm were done by any of these ten against the peace, then the rest of the ten should be aimerced, if he of their company that did the harm should fly, and were not forthcoming to answer to that wherewith he should be charged. And for this cause the companies are yet in some places of England called boroes, of the said word borge, borrow, or borhoe, signifying a pledge or surety; and in other places they are called tithings, because they contain (as hath been said) the number of ten men with their families. And even as ten times ten do make an hundred, so because it was then also appointed that ten of these companies should at certain times meet together for their matters of greater weight, therefore that general assembly, or court, was and yet is called a hundred. Furthermore, it was then also ordained, that if any man were of so evil credit that he could not get himself to be received into one of these tithings or borowes, then he should be shut up in prison, as a man unworthy to live at liberty amongst men abroad. Now whereas every of these tithings or borowes did use to make choice of one man amongst themselves to speak and to do in the name of them all, he was, therefore, in some places called the tythingman, in other places the borowes elder, (whom we now call borsholder,) in other places the borowhead or headborow, and in some other places the chiefpledge, which last name doth plainly expound the other three that are next before it; for head or elder of the borowe and chief of the pledges are all one; and in some shires, where every third borough hath a constable, there the officers of the other two are called thirdborowes. And in these tithings or borowes sundry good orders were observed; and amongst others, first, that every man of the age of twenty-one years should be sworn to the King. Then, that no man should be suffered to dwell in any town or places unless he were also received into some such suretyship and pledge as is aforesaid. Thirdly, that if any of these pledges were imprisoned for his offence, then he ought not to be delivered without the assent of the rest of his pledges. Again, that no man might remove out of one tything or borow to dwell in another, without lawful warrant in that behalf. Lastly, that every of these pledges should yearly be presented and brought forth by their chiefpledge at a general assembly for that...
Constable.

In some places at this day there is both a tithingman and constable, where the tithingman is as it were a deputy to execute the office in the constable's absence; but there are some things which a constable hath power to do that tithingmen cannot intermeddle with; for the constable may do whatever the tithingman may do, but not e converso, the tithingman not having an equal power with the constable. But in places where there is no constable, the office and authority of tithingman seems to be all one under a different name. 1 Bla. Com. 357.

By the statute of Winchester, 13 Edw. I. st. 2, s. 6, in every hundred and franchise two constables shall be chosen to make the view of armour, and they shall present defaults of armour, and of suits of towns, and of highways, and such as lodge strangers in uplandish towns, for whom they will not answer.

From hence Lord Coke and others will have it, that high constables are as more ancient than this statute. But Mr. Hume (as agreeably with Leaust, Dallion, and other authorities,) says, that it seems to be the better opinion that both constables of hundreds, which are commonly called high constables, and also constables of tithings, which are at this day commonly called petty constables or tithingmen, were by the common law, and not first ordained by the said statute of Winchester; for that statute doth not say that there shall be such officers constituted, but clearly seems to suppose that there were such before the making of it. 2 Hawk. c. 10, s. 33.

In short, the truth of the matter seems to be this; the far greatest part of the business of high constables at this day is not at all appropriated to them as high constables, but only as officers to execute the precepts of the justices of the peace, which any other person may do as well as they. The original and proper authority of a high constable, as such, seems to be the very same and no other, within his hundred, as that of the petty constable within his vill; and therein, most probably, he is coeval with the petty constable. He has the superintendence and direction of all petty constables within his district; and he is in a manner responsible for their conduct, since he is bound to notice and to present their defaults, for his neglect of which duty he is reprehensible himself. The other usual branches of this office, such as the surveying of bridges, the issuing of precepts concerning the appointing of overseers of the poor, surveyors of the highways, assessors, and collectors of the land-tax and window duties, and in like manner the viewing of armour by the above-mentioned statute, are in him, not of necessity, but as matter of convenience, and it is discretionary in the justices whom they will appoint to be their officers in these cases; others have been superadded to their office, for the like reason of convenience, by sundry acts of parliament, such as the issuing of precepts for the licensing of alehouses, for the levying of county rates, and for returning lists of jurors; since one person can do all much easier and cheaper than so many different persons.

Nature of office in general.—The office of constable is either strictly derivative or ministerial, as in obeying warrants and precepts of justices, coroners and sheriffs, and the charges of private individuals; or is original and judicial, as a conservator of the peace at common law; and in many cases it is exercised by virtue of particular acts of parliament. It has been asserted, however, that the office is wholly ministerial and no way judicial; but this seems too general a position, see per Ashurst, J. 2 T. R. 406; Com. Dig. Lect. M. 5.

II. Who shall be a Constable, and herein of Special and Deputy Constables.

No person is qualified to be a constable who is not an inhabitant of the place for which he is to serve; Field, Pen. Stat. 331; and actual residence in the parish is essential. R. v. Adlard, 7 D. & R. 340; 4 B. & C. 772, S. C. And therefore a person occupying a house and paying all parish rates in respect of it, and carrying on the trade of a printer, frequenting the house daily on all working days, and sometimes remaining there during the night at work, but not sleeping in the house, is not liable to serve the office of constable in the parish where the house is situate. Id. But one who is resident within a private leet within the hundred is not therefore exempt from serving the office of constable of the hundred, and a custom to elect such a one is good. R. v. Gener, Coop. 13.
Who shall be.

Tenants in ancient demesne are liable to serve as constables. Residants in a manor owing suit and service to a leet within the same, but not commensurate or extensive with it, the limits of the hundred reaching beyond those of the leet, are obliged to serve as constables out of the leet but within the hundred. R. v. George, Lefti, 365, 418.

Every inhabitant may not be a fit person to be appointed to this office, for he ought to be of the able sort of parishioners; and if a very ignorant or poor person be chosen, he may by law be discharged, and an able person appointed in his room. Dall. c. 28.

Aged persons incapacitated by weakness, and in Westminster persons of sixty-three years old, are expressly exempted, 31 Geo. II. c. 17, s. 13.

In R. v. Clarke, 1 T. R. 692, it was held that the King may exempt any person, or whole bodies corporate, from serving the office of constable; subject however to this restriction, that the exemption be not extended so far as to prevent the existence of the office in any particular place, and grants of this nature should be construed strictly.

It hath been said, that a custom in a town that the inhabitants shall serve the office of constable by turns, according to the situation of their several houses, is not good; for that by such a course it may come to a woman's turn to be a constable, as an inhabitant of one of those houses; yet we find such customs allowed to be good in later books; and it seems, that the consequence of the reasoning above mentioned may well be denied, since a woman in such case may procure another to serve for her. 2 Hawk. c. 10, s. 37; 1 Bac. Abr. 683; vide 2 T. R. 406.

Also it seems that a practising physician, being chosen constable in pursuance of such custom, has no remedy for his discharge; for that there are no precedents of this kind, and his calling is private. 2 Hawk. c. 10, s. 41.

By stat. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 40, the president, commons, and fellows of the faculty of physic in London shall not be chosen constables.

And by stats. 5 Hen. VIII. c. 6, and 18 Geo. II. c. 15, surgeons in London shall be freed and exempted from the office of constable.

In the case of R. v. Pond, on an indictment against Pond, a surgeon, for refusing to be constable, it was moved by the attorney-general that a noli prosequi might be granted, for that by stat. 5 Hen. VIII. c. 6, (and by stat. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 40, for the incorporating of barbers and surgeons, which incorporation was dissolved by the above stat. of 18 Geo. II.) all persons of the corporation of surgeons within London are exempt; and though it had been held that physicians are not exempt, yet by the equity of those statutes, and by the custom of the realm, all surgeons have been allowed the same privilege; and therefore a noli prosequi was allowed, unless cause shown. And no cause was shown, the reporter says, that ever he heard of. R. v. Pond, Com. 312.

However, in a later case it has been held, that a member of the Barbers' Company in the city of London is not exempted from serving the office of constable. R. v. Chepple, 3 Campb. 91.

By stat. 6 & 7 Will. III. c. 4, apothecaries in London and within seven miles thereof, being free of the company of apothecaries, and also those in the country who have served seven years' apprenticeship, shall be exempted from the office of constable, but in the house, is not liable to serve the office of constable.

Also it seems certain that if a sworn attorney, or other officer of the courts at Westminster, be chosen into this office, he may have a writ of privilege for his discharge, by reason of his necessary attendance in those courts: and it hath been resolved, that such officers shall have this privilege, not only where there is no special custom concerning the election of constable, but also where they are chosen by a particular custom, in respect of their states or otherwise; for that no such custom shall be intended to be more ancient than the usages of those courts, and therefore shall give way to them. 2 Haw. c. 10, s. 39.

And upon the like reasons it is taken for granted, that practising barristers at law and the servants of members of parliament have the same privilege; but there seem to have been no resolutions to this purpose. 2 Haw. c. 10, s. 39.

Also it hath been resolved that an alderman of London, for the like reasons is not compellable to be a constable. 2 Haw. c. 10, s. 40.

But it hath been held that a captain of the King's guards, being presented to serve as constable, in pursuance of a custom in respect of his rank in a town, cannot claim this privilege; for that notwithstanding he is bound by his office to personal attendance on the King's person, yet such office being of late institution, shall not prevail against an ancient custom. 2 Haw. c. 10, s. 41.

Masters of arts are not exempted; (5 Vin. Abr. 429;) nor officers or watchmen in the customs; (1 Sid. 272;) nor a younger brother of the Trinity House; (1 T. R. 679.)

It has been said, that if such officers as before mentioned, or a gentleman of quality who hath no such office, or a practising physician, be chosen constable of a town, which hath sufficient persons besides to execute this office, and no special custom concerning it, perhaps he may be relieved by the King's Bench; but it seems that even a custom cannot exempt firing persons from serving the office of constable, where there are not sufficient besides them to execute it. But these points seem not to be settled. 2 Haw. c. 10, s. 41.

No man that keeps a public house ought to be a constable. Per Holt, C. I. 6 Mod. 42; et vide 1 Ed. Raym. 138; but the 3 Geo. IV. c. 77, s. 19, which absolutely disqualified alehouse keepers from being constables, is expired.

A seafaring man serving the office of headborough, is thereby exempt from being impressed. Experte Fox, 5 T. R. 276.

No sergeant, corporal, drummer, nor private man, serving in the militia shall, during the time of such service, be liable to serve the office of constable, stat. 42 Geo. III. c. 90, s. 174.

And no officer, non-commissioned officer, or effective member of any yeomanry corps or volunteer cavalry, was, during the period of his continuing enrolled in and an effective member of such yeomanry corps or volunteer cavalry, compellable or compelled to serve the office of constable in the place to which he belonged, stat. 57 Geo. III. c. 44, s. 3. But the yeomanry cavalry are now abolished.

Every teacher or preacher in holy orders, or pretended holy orders, that is a minister, preacher, or teacher of a congregation, shall, from the time of his subscription and taking the oaths, be exempted from the office of constable. 1 Will. III. c. 18, s. 11.

And every teacher or preacher in any congregation or assembly for religious worship of protestants, who shall employ himself solely in the duties of such teacher, etc. and not follow any trade or other employment for his livelihood except that of a schoolmaster, and who shall produce a justice's certificate of having taken and made and subscribed the oaths and declaration specified in stat. 19 Geo. III. c. 44 (a), shall be exempt from the civil service and offices specified in stat. 1 Will. III. c. 18 (a), and from being bailed to serve, and from either serving in the militia or local militia of any county, etc. in any part of the United Kingdom, 52 Geo. III. c. 155, s. 9.

Foreigners naturalized are exempt. R. v. Ferdinand de Miere, 5 Burr. 2799.

Prosecutors of felons, the original proprietors of a certificate, (commonly called a Tyburn ticket,) are exempt from parish or ward offices within the parish or ward in which the felony happened; 58 Geo. III. c. 70, s. 2; 10 & 11 Will. III. c. 23. This statute of Will. III. being passed for the encouragement and reward of persons exerting themselves for the public good in the apprehension and conviction of certain offenders, is to receive a liberal construction, and to be considered as extending to offices within the parish or ward not, in legal strictness, parish or ward offices; and, accordingly, a certificate under this act has been held to exempt the party from serving the office of petty constable for a township within, though not co-extensive with the parish where the felony was committed, and for which the certificate was granted. 7 East's Rep. 174. But such a certificate does not extend to offices to be exercised beyond the bounds of the parish; as that would be to extend the exemption into a different district than that in which the party had the required merit, which must be confined to the parish where the felony was committed. R. v. Derbyshire, 2 Burr, 1182; Mosley v. Stonehouse, 7 East's Rep. 185, 6; 3 Smith, 181, S. C.

(a) See post, Dissenters, Vol. I.
Who shall be.

Special Constables]—Stat. 1 Geo. IV. c. 37, intituled "An Act to increase the power of magistrates in the appointment of special constables;" after reciting that "whereas doubts have arisen whether any person or persons can be compelled to act as special constables, except in any actual tumult, riot, or felony; and whereas it is expedient that justices of the peace should have the power of compelling certain persons to act as special constables, not only in case of actual tumult, riot, or felony, but also on the reasonable apprehension thereof, for the prevention of the same," enacts and declares, "that from and after the passing of this act, [8th July, 1820.] in all cases where it shall be made to appear to any two or more justices of the peace, acting for any county, city, division, riding or place, by the information on oath of five respectable householders of such county, city, division, riding or place, that any tumult, riot or felony has taken place, or is likely to take place, and may reasonably be apprehended, such justices may and are hereby authorised to call upon, nominate, and appoint, by precept in writing under their hands, any householders or other persons (not legally exempt from serving the office of constable) residing within their respective divisions, or the neighbourhood thereof, to act as special constables, for such time and in such manner as to the said justices shall seem fit and necessary for the preservation of the public peace, and for the prevention or suppression of any tumult, riot, or felony; and the said justices are hereby empowered to administer to such person so appointed the usual oaths administered by law to all special constables."

Sect. 2. "That in case any person (not legally exempted as aforesaid) so called upon, nominated and appointed by such justices as aforesaid, shall neglect or refuse to take upon themselves the office, and to act as such special constables, such person so neglecting or refusing shall be liable to such and the same fines, penalties, and punishments, as persons refusing to take upon themselves the office of constable are now by law subject to."

As to the expenses of special constables, post, 808.

Deputy Constables]—Inasmuch as the office of a constable is wholly ministerial, and no way judicial, it seems that he may appoint a deputy to execute a warrant directed to him, when by reason of sickness, absence, or otherwise, he cannot do it himself; yet it doth not seem to be settled that a constable can make a deputy, without some special cause. 2 Hawk. c. 10, s. 36.

In Medhurst v. Wate, 3 Burr. 1259, the high constable appointed a deputy to billet soldiers under the Mutiny Act; this appointment was by parol only, and the deputy was not sworn. By Lord Mansfield, C. J. and the court—The high constable had power by the act to billet soldiers, and he may appoint a deputy to this particular ministerial act. This is a ministerial (not a judicial) act, and a constable may appoint a deputy to do ministerial acts.

In R. v. The Inhabit. of Hope Mansell, Cald. 232, it was considered that a constable could appoint a deputy.
WHO SHALL BE.

Constand.

796

And in R. v. Clarke, 1 T. R. 643, it seemed to be admitted as a settled point that a constable may appoint a deputy.

The superior must be answerable for his deputy upon any miscarriage; unless the deputy is duly allowed and sworn, for then he is constable. Wood's Inst. b. 1, c. 7.

It has been held, that where a person is appointed constable, and he procures a deputy to serve for him, who is approved of by the inhabitants and sworn in at the leet, the liability of the principal is at an end, and he cannot afterwards be called upon to serve the office; if, therefore, the substitute abscond and do not serve, the principal is discharged notwithstanding. Underhill v. Witts, 3 Esp. 56.

By stat. 1 Will. III. c. 18, s. 7, if any person dissenting from the church of England shall be chosen high or petty constable, and shall scruple to take upon him the office in regard of the oaths, or any other matter required to be done in respect of such office, he may execute it by a sufficient deputy to be provided, to be allowed by such persons and in such manner as such officer should by law have been allowed.

And by stat. 31 Geo. III. c. 32, s. 7, the like privileges are given to Roman Catholics on their taking and subscribing the oath and declaring therein specified. See post. Baptists, Vol. V.

Watchmen may be appointed by constables as their assistants, subject to the custom of the place for the appointment of watchmen. 1 Bla. Com. 557, 4th edit. 292. A watchman thus appointed has for the time being the authority of the constable and his deputy. 1 Ch. C. L. 24.

III. How Elected and Compellable to Act.

Regularly the constable is to be chosen by the jury in the leet, and if the party be present and refuse, the steward may fine him; if absent, the homage must present his refusal at the next court, and then he shall be amerced; also if the party chosen be present, he shall take the oath in the leet; if absent, before the justices of the peace, who still administer the oath to him as conservators of the peace at common law. Fletcher v. Ingras, 1 Salk. 175; 1 Ld. Raym. 69, 70; 1 Ken. Rep. 318.

Sometimes the election may be founded on a custom, as it frequently is in some parishes at a vestry meeting, wardmote, or otherwise. See R. v. Preschard, 2 Stra. 1149.

Anciently the practice was, that in every hundred where there was a feudal lord, the constables were sworn in and admitted by the lord or his steward in his leet; but where there was no such feudal lord, the sheriff in his too had the swearing and placing of them in; also if there was no feudal lord of the hundred, an annual officer was chosen, who was to preside over the whole hundred, who was called the high constable; but if the hundred were feudal, as it often anciently was, then such lord of the hundred administered the office himself. 1 Bac. Ab. Const. A. 683.

But now the usual manner is, that the high constables of hundreds are chosen either at the quarter sessions of the peace, or if out of the sessions, then by the greater number of the justices of the division where they reside; and likewise that they are sworn either at the sessions, or by warrant from the sessions; which course hath been often allowed and commanded by the justices of the assize. Dall. c. 28.

The reason thereof may be this, as hath been intimated above, namely, that their office at present doth not so much consist in executing the office of high constable as such, as in executing the justices' precepts, which they may do for the most part, whether they be indeed high constables or not.

And, moreover, every petty constable being a principal peace officer, and it being necessary for the preservation of the peace that every vill should be furnished with one, the justices of the peace have ever since the institution of their office taken upon them, as conservators of the peace, not only to swear the petty constables, which have been chosen at a torn or leet, but also to nominate and swear those who have not been chosen at any such court, on the neglect of the sheriffs or lords to hold their courts, or to take care that such officers are appointed in them. Also, it seems, that such justices have always used for good cause to displace such officers which have been so chosen and sworn by them. And this power of justices of the peace having been confirmed by the uninterrupted usage of many ages shall not now be disputed, but shall be presumed to have been grounded on sufficient authority. And some have carried this point so far, as to allow the justices at their sessions to swear one who was chosen at the leet, and unduly rejected by the steward, who had sworn another in his place. 2 Hawk. c. 10, s. 49.
How Elected and Compellable to Act.

And in the case of Dr. Franchard, he was chosen constable of Milborne Port at the leet, which immediately adjourned; and he was afterwards sworn in by a single justice of the peace; and upon motion for an information as not being duly sworn, the court held this to be a good swearing. R. v. Dr. Franchard, 2 Stra. 1149.

The justices of the county of Northampton at their general sessions chose a constable for Holmby, and for not coming in to take the oath proceeded against him; which proceedings being removed by certiorari into the King's Bench, it was moved on affidavits that there had not been a constable there for fifty years before, and that he might be discharged; alleging likewise, that Holmby was a privileged place, and that all the inhabitants were the Duke of York's tenants. But the court held, that they could not discharge him on motion, and said that they must determine the matter by action of false imprisonment, or some other way; and inclined strongly that he could not any way be discharged. For, per curiam, though originally constables were chosen in leets, yet the constable being an officer whose duty it is to keep the peace, the justices may choose him in cases of necessity. Case of the Constable of Holmby, 2 Keb. 557; 1 Boc. Abr. 684.

However, it is certain that justices of the peace had power to nominate and swear constables, on the default of the torn or leet, before stat. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, and therefore that they have such authority in some cases not mentioned in that statute, which enacts, (s. 15,) that if a constable shall die, or go out of the parish, any two justices may make and swear a new one, until the lord shall hold a leet, or till the next quarter sessions, who shall approve the officer so made and sworn, or appoint another; and if any officer shall continue above a year in his office, the justices in their quarter sessions may discharge him, and put in another till the lord shall hold a court as aforesaid. 2 Hawk. c. 10, s. 50. But justices, even in sessions, are not empowered by this statute to discharge constables chosen and sworn at the court leet. 2 Stra. 1098. And the provisions of the act must be strictly complied with by the sessions; therefore an appointment in the disjunctive, “for a year or until others be chosen,” was quashed. 2 Stra. 1090. The court will grant a quo warranto against a constable elected at a vestry and sworn in at the sessions under this statute, for primâ facie the right of appointing is in the leet, and the sessions have no power if there has been no default. 2 Stra. 1213; Fitzg. 192; Doug1. 536.

Charter justices have the same authority in cases of this nature as justices under a general commission. Weatherhead v. Drewery and others, 11 East, 168. The borough of Derby is a town corporate by a charter of Charles II. which charter, after creating a mayor and other officers, also declares that certain of these shall be justices of the peace within that borough. Until 1809 there had never been an appointment of a high constable within the borough. In that year there was one appointed; and for levying by distress a rate in the nature of a county rate imposed by the quarter sessions of the borough upon the said borough, an action of trespass was brought against the high constable and two magistrates. And it was held, that it was competent to them to create such office, and that stat. 13 Geo. II. c. 18, extended to charter justices as well as to justices having commissions immediately from the crown. This doctrine had also been held in the case of R. v. J. Green, 6 T. R. 228.
Oath of Constable]—As the form of a constable's oath, in Dalis, doth not contain the hundredth part of the constable's duty, nor indeed the most material instances of it, it may be more eligible (as no particular form is directed by any statute,) to swear him (a) to the due execution of his office as general, than to descend to those particulars; lest, by mentioning some part of his duty, and not others, he may be induced to think that those others are not so necessary.

By stat. 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 13, high constables are to take the oaths of allegiance, supremacy, and abjuration, as other persons who qualify for offices; but they are not within the stat. 25 Car. II. c. 2, as to receiving the sacrament, and subscribing the declaration against transubstantiation; and petty constables are exempted both from the one and from the other.

Security]—A high constable employed in collecting county rates may be required by justices to give security. 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 19.

Mandamus to compel the swearing of a constable.

Mandamus to swear in]—The King's Bench hath power by mandamus to compel the court or judge to swear a constable duly chosen. 2 Hert. c. 16, s. 47.

Quo warranto]—The office of constable being a burdensome one, the Court of King's Bench will not put a person, de facto elected and sworn, by the court least, to the expense of showing by what authority he holds the office, at the relation of a different body of persons claiming the right of election, where those persons do not expressly show an immemorial custom in their body to elect, and that the deponents believe there is such custom. R. v. Lane, 5 B. & A. 488; 1 D. & R. 6, S.C.

In the case of R. v. Standard Hill, 4 M. & S. 378, which was an application to have overseers appointed for a will, it was held to be necessary to swear positively that it was a will by reputation.

Constable refusing to be sworn.

Constable Refusing to be Sworn]—If constables when chosen refuse to be sworn, a justice of the peace may bind them over to the assizes or sessions, (there to be indicted.) Dalh. c. 28. R. v. Lane, 2 Stra. 920.

But it seemeth there can be no commitment, but only indictment upon the refusal; and if found against him, to assess a good fine upon him, and then commit him for that cause. R. v. Crawley, Cro. Cas. 567.

It seems that the sheriff, or steward of the leet, cannot lawfully commit them for such refusal, without more; but it is said, that if the party be present in the court, he may be fined; and that if he be absent, and have a certain time and place appointed him by the sheriff or steward for the taking of the oath before a justice of the peace, and have also express notice of such appointment, and be presented at the next court, for having refused to take it accordingly, he may be amerced; also, it seems, that in either case he may be indicted (a) at the assizes or sessions. It is advisable in all pleadings in any action concerning such a fine or amercement, and in all indictments for such refusal, especially and expressly to set forth the manner of every such election, appointment, notice, and refusal, and before whom the court was holden. And it hath been adjudged that it is insufficient to say in general that the party was duly elected, or lawfully elected, or that he had notice, without setting forth the special circumstances thereof. Also it is said to have been adjudged that an indictment for not finding a sufficient person to serve the office of constable, without showing that the party refused to serve it himself, is insufficient, 2 Hark. c. 10, s. 46. And see further, as to the consequences of refusing to fill an office, post. Of & &.s, Vol. III.

Special constables appointed under the 1 Geo. IV. c. 37, are compellable to act under the same penalties for refusal as other constables. Ante, 798.
IV. His Power as a Conservator of the Peace.

Every high and petty constable are by the common law conservators of the peace. 2 Henk. c. 8, s. 6; Crom. 6; Dalt. c. 1.

And, therefore, if any man shall make an affray or an assault upon another in the presence of a constable, or shall threaten to kill, beat, or hurt another, or shall be in a fury ready to break the peace, the constable may commit him to the stocks, or other safe custody for the present, and after may carry him before a justice or to gaol, until he shall find surety for the peace, which surety the constable himself may also take by obligation, to be sealed and delivered, to the King's use; and if the party will not find surety to the constable, he may imprison the party until he shall do it. Dalt. c. 1.

The observations and law already collected, ante, cit. Arrest, as to when and how constables should interfere and arrest offenders, or suspected offenders, will be here applicable.

It was formerly the practice for high and petty constables to make presentments of various matters at the sessions, but that course of proceeding is abolished by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 38.

See also various duties of constables collected under titles, Airhouses, Affray, Badby Houses, Blasphemy, Bridges, Customs, Disorderly Houses, Fires, Gaming Houses, Harbors, Hawkers and Pedlars, Hue and Cry, Lunatics, Military Law, Plague, Poor, Presentments, Riots, Serants, Sessions, Vagrants, Warrant, Weights, Wrecks, &c.

V. His Duty as Officer to Justices.

It hath always been held that the constable is the proper officer to a justice of the peace, and bound to execute his warrants; and therefore it hath been resolved, that where a statute authorizes a justice of the peace to convict a man of a crime, and to levy the penalty by warrant of distress, without saying to whom such warrant shall be directed, or by whom it shall be executed, the constable is the proper officer to serve such warrant, and indictable for disobeying it. 2 Henk. c. 10, s. 36.

Formerly a distinction existed between warrants directed to constables by name and such as were directed to them by the description of their office. It was considered in the former case, that a constable might execute the warrant any where within the jurisdiction of the magistrate issuing it; in the latter, only within the precincts of his office. R. v. Weir, 1 B. & Crez. 288; 2 D. & R. 444, S. C.

Now, however, the stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 18, s. 6, reciting, "that whereas warrants addressed to constables, headboroughs, tithingmen, boreholders, or other peace officers of parishes, townships, hamlets, or places, in their characters of and as constables, headboroughs, tithingmen, boreholders, or other peace officers of such respective parishes, townships, hamlets, or places, cannot be lawfully executed by them out of the precincts thereof respectively, whereby means are afforded to criminals and others of escaping from justice;" for remedy thereof enacts, "that it shall and may be lawful to and for each and every constable, and to and for each and every headborough, tithingman, boreholder, or other peace officer for every parish, township, hamlet, or place, to execute any warrant or warrants of any justice or justices of the peace, or of any magistrate or magistrates within any parish, township, hamlet, or place, aforesaid, lying or being within that jurisdiction for which such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, shall have acted when granting such warrant or warrants, or when backing or indorsing any such warrant or warrants, in such and the like manner as if such warrant or warrants had been addressed to such constable, headborough, tithingman, boreholder, or other peace officer, specially by his name or names, and notwithstanding the parish, township, hamlet, or place, in which such warrant or warrants shall Punishment for Neglect.

Constable.

be executed shall not be the parish, township, hamlet, or place, for which he shall be constable, headborough, tithingman, or horseholder, or other peace officer, provided that the same be within the jurisdiction of the justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates so granting such warrant or warrants, or within the jurisdiction of the justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates by whom any such warrant or warrants shall be backed or indorsed."

The act is not to extend to Scotland.

Inasmuch as before the passing of this act a constable was in no case bound, but only authorised, to execute a warrant addressed to him by name, out of the precincts of his office, neither is it now incumbent on him to execute such warrant beyond the boundary of his jurisdiction. Gisbert v. Syney, 1 M'Clel. & Y. 469.

The mode of executing warrants, and the law relative to the breaking open of doors under them, will be found under title WARRANT, post, Vol. V.

VI. Punishment for Neglect of Duty.

It is the duty of a constable to execute the legal warrants of justices of the peace, and to perform the functions of his office with reasonable dispatch and care; and his omission so to do, or his misconduct or extortion in his office is punishable by indictment, upon which fine or imprisonment may be adjudged against him. 2 Hawk. c. 10, s. 35; 2 Hale, 90.

If there be two constables appointed for a certain precinct, they are both officers throughout the whole of it, and each is responsible for any mischief from the neglect of duty throughout the whole, and punishable for not discharging his duty in every part of it, although there may have been a lag continued usage for each of them to act only for one particular part of the precinct. R. v. Tantton, 3 M. & S. 470.

As to the liability of constables for their deputies, see ante, p. 796.

By stat. 33 Geo. III. c. 55, s. 1, it is enacted, "that it shall and may be lawful for any two or more of his Majesty's justices of the peace, assembled at any special or petty sessions of the peace, upon complaint being made upon oath before them of any neglect of duty, or of any disobedience of any lawful warrant or order of any justice or justices of the peace by any constable, overseer of the poor, or other peace or parish officer, or upon complaint made to such two or more justices upon oath, by or on the behalf of any apprentice to any trade or business whatsoever, whether bound apprentice by any parish or township or otherwise, provided that not more than the sum of 10l. be paid upon the binding of such apprentice, against his or her master or mistress, of any ill usage of such apprentice by such master or mistress (such constable, overseer, or other officer, master or mistress, having been duly summoned to appear and answer such charge or complaint), to impose, upon conviction, any reasonable fine or fines, not exceeding the sum of 40s., upon such constable, overseer, or other officer, master or mistress respectively, as a punishment for such disobedience, neglect of duty, or ill-usage, and by warrant under the bands and seals of any two or more of such justices assembled, at any such special or petty sessions as aforesaid, to direct such fine or fines, if not paid, to be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the person or persons so offending, rendering the overplus (if any), after deducting the amount of such fine or fines, and the charges of such distress and sale, to such offender or offenders; and such fine or fines which may be imposed upon any such constable, overseer, or other officer as aforesaid, shall be applied and disposed of for the relief of the poor of the parish, township, or place, where the offenders shall respectively reside, at the discretion of the justices imposing the same, and such fine or fines, which may be imposed upon any such master or mistress, shall, at the discretion of the justices imposing the same, be either so applied and disposed of as aforesaid, or be otherwise paid and applied to or for the use and benefit of such apprentice, for or towards a recompense or compensation for the injury which PUNISHMENT FOR NEGLECT.

28 Geo. 3. c. 65. Appeal.

Persons not trespassers for irregularities of proceedings.

Penalty on officers neglecting their duties under Va-grant Act.

On conviction of officers, &c. Justices to make order for payment of expenses of prosecution.

VI.

Punishment for Neglect.

may have been by him or her sustained by reason of such ill-usage as aforesaid; and if any person shall be aggrieved by the imposition of such fine or fines as aforesaid, or by any order or warrant of distress for raising or levying the same, or by the judgment or determination of the said justices, or by any act to be done in the execution of such warrant of distress, such person or persons so aggrieved shall and may appeal to the next general or quarter sessions of the peace to be held for the county, riding, or division, within which such person shall reside, of which appeal ten days' notice at the least shall be given; and for want of such distress, such person or persons shall be committed to the house of correction for any space of time not exceeding ten days."

Sect. 2. "That no person acting under any such warrant of distress as aforesaid shall be deemed a trespasser ab initio, by reason of any irregularity or informality in such warrant, or in any proceedings thereon, but any person aggrieved by the issuing or execution of such warrant may recover the special damages thereby by him or her sustained, in an action of trespass, or on the case, in any of his Majesty's courts of record."

But by the stat. 27 Geo. II. c. 20, a. 2, the officer executing such warrant, if required, shall show the same to the person whose goods and chattels are distained, and shall suffer a copy thereof to be taken.

Stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, a. 11, enacts, "that in case any constable or other peace officer shall neglect his duty in any thing required of him by this act, or in case any person disturb or hinder any constable or other peace officer in the execution of this act, or shall be aiding, abetting, or assisting therein, and shall be thereof convicted upon the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses before one or more justice or justices of the peace where such offence shall be committed, every such offender shall for every such offence forfeit any sum not exceeding £4.; and in case such offender shall not forthwith pay such sum so forfeited, the same shall be levied by distress and sale of the offender's goods, by warrant from such justice or justices; and if sufficient distress cannot be found, it shall be lawful to and for one or more such justice or justices to commit the person so offending to the house of correction, there to be kept for any time not exceeding three calendar months, or until such fine be paid; and the said justice or justices shall cause the said fine, when paid, to be forthwith delivered to the treasurer of the county, riding, division, or place, where such offence shall have been committed, to be by him added to and used as part of the stock of the said county, riding, division, or place."

Sect. 12. "That in case any constable or other peace officer shall be convicted before any one or more justice or justices of the peace, for any neglect of any duty required of him by this act, or of any disobedience of any lawful warrant or order of any justice or justices of the peace issued under the provisions of this act, and in case any two or more justices of the peace shall impose any fine, or direct any penalty to be paid by such officer, under and by virtue of the powers given to justices of the peace by an act passed in the thirty-third year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled, 'An Act to authorise justices of the peace to impose fines upon constables, overseers, and other peace or parish officers, for neglect of duty, and on masters of apprentices for ill-usage of such their apprentices, and also to make provision for the execution of warrants of distress granted by magistrates,' or under any other powers enabling such justices in that behalf, then and in every such case it shall be lawful for such justice or justices, upon conviction of any such offender, to reimburse and allow to the person or persons on whose complaint or information such offender shall have been convicted, all necessary costs and expenses which such person or persons may thereby have incurred, or by any appeal made in consequence thereof, by making an order under his or their hands and seals upon the treasurer of the county, riding, division, or place, to pay to such person or persons the amount of such costs and expenses, on producing the said order and giving a receipt for the same, and the same shall be allowed the said treasurer in his account."

See post, Va-grants, Vol. V.

Vol. I. 3 F
VII. His Indemnity and Protection in his Office.

Formerly the constable was bound to take notice of the jurisdiction of the justice; insomuch, that if the justice issued a warrant in any matter whereby he had no jurisdiction, the constable was punishable for the execution of it. But now, by stat. 24 Geo. II. c. 44, s. 6, it is enacted, "that no action shall be brought against any constable, headborough, or other officer, or against any person or persons acting by his order and in his aid, for any thing done in obedience to any warrant under the hand or seal of any justice of the peace, until demand hath been made or left at the usual place of his abode, by the party or parties intending to bring such action, or by his, her, or their attorney or agent, in writing, signed by the party demanding the same, of the perusal and copy of such warrant, and the same hath been refused or neglected for the space of six days after such demand; and in case after such demand and compliance therewith, by showing the said warrant to, and permitting a copy to be taken thereof by the party demanding the same, any action shall be brought against such constable, headborough, or other officer, or against such person or persons acting in his aid for any such case as aforesaid, without making the justice or justices who signed or sealed the said warrant defendant or defendants, that on producing or proving such warrant at the trial of such action, the jury shall give their verdict for the defendant or defendants, notwithstanding any defect of jurisdiction in such justice or justices, and if such action be brought jointly against such justice or justices, and also against such constable, headborough, or other officer, or person or persons acting in his or their aid as aforesaid, then a proof of such warrant the jury shall find for such constable, headborough or other officer, and for such person or persons so acting as aforesaid, notwithstanding such defect of jurisdiction as aforesaid; and if the verdict shall be given against the justice or justices, that in such case the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall recover his, her, or their costs, against him or them, to be taxed in such manner by the proper officer as to include such costs as such plaintiff or plaintiffs are liable to pay to such defendant or defendant for whom such verdict shall be found as aforesaid."

Sec. 8. "That no action shall be brought against any justice of the peace for any thing done in the execution of his office, or against any constable, headborough, or other officer, or persons acting as aforesaid, unless commenced within six calendar months after the act committed."

By stat. 7 Jac. I. c. 5, (made perpetual by 21 Jac. I. c. 12,) if an action is brought against a constable for any thing done by virtue of his office, or also all others which in his aid, or by his command, shall do a thing concerning his office, may plead the general issue, and give the special matter in evidence; and if he recover, he shall have double costs. See the enactments in full, post, Justices, Vol. III. p. 497.

Sec. 5. Such action shall be laid in the county where the fact was committed, and not elsewhere.

As to the protection of constables and persons acting without warrant under the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, relating to larceny, see Larceny, Vol. III. p. 555; and as to the protection of constables, &c. acting under the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, relating to malicious injuries, see post, Malicious Injuries to Property, Vol. III. p. 726; Beechy v. Sides, 9 B. & C. 806, Vol. III. p. 727.

The object and purport of the 6th and 8th sections of the 24th Geo. II. differ very materially. The legislature intended by the 6th section to prevent the constable or other officer, when acting in obedience to the warrant, from being answerable on account of any defect of jurisdiction in the justice, and to afford him an absolute protection at whatever period of time the action might be brought against him; by the 8th section, to absolve him from responsibility to the law, after the lapse of six calendar months, where he has acted not in strict obedience to his warrant, but bonâ fide and in good faith.
obedience thereto. Parton v. Williams, 3 B. & A. 330; Smith v. Wilshire, 2 B. & B. 619; 5 Moore, 320, S. C. Et per Abbott, C. J., in the case of Parton v. Williams, "The legislature manifestly had very different objects in view in the 6th and 8th sections of the statute upon which the present question arises. By the common law, an officer, who merely executed the warrant of a magistrate, was answerable for the consequences, if the magistrate acted without authority. One object, therefore, of the legislature was to relieve the officer from that inconvenience, and to provide that if he acted in obedience to the warrant of the magistrate, he should be protected. That was the object of the 6th section, which makes it necessary to demand a copy of the warrant from the officer before he can be sued. If he gives that copy, although the party may be entitled to an action against the magistrate, yet, if he joins the officer in it, the production of the warrant will be a protection to the latter, and will entitle him to a verdict. The 6th section is, therefore, obviously intended to protect the officer in those cases only where the justice remains liable. And it is necessary, in order to bring the officer within it, that he should act most strictly in obedience to his warrant. And in that case the statute gives him an absolute protection at whatever time the suit may be brought against him. To give him any further protection, when he has so acted, does appear to me to be wholly useless. For I cannot understand why a limitation of time is to be imposed upon any action which the legislature has declared not to be maintainable at all. The 8th section must, therefore, have a very different object in view. It enacts, 'that no action shall be brought against any justice of the peace for any thing done in the execution of his office, or against any constable, headborough, or other officer or person, acting as aforesaid, unless within six calendar months after the act committed.' The justice, therefore, is protected absolutely, unless the action be brought within that period of time: he has the benefit of that statute's limitation for whatever he may do in the execution of his office, although he may do something not authorised by law. This provision, therefore, is evidently intended for the benefit of persons who intend to act right, but by mistake act wrong. The section then proceeds to state, 'or against any constable, headborough or other officer or person, acting as aforesaid.' And it has been argued that these latter words imply that the officer must be acting in obedience to the warrant to be entitled to the protection. But I am of opinion that they are to be taken as equivalent to those words of the 6th section, 'acting by his order and in his aid,' in which case they are coupled with the antecedent word 'person' alone. I have already assigned the reasons which induce me to think that this provision cannot be confined to cases within the protection of the 6th section. It may, perhaps, be too much to say that it will apply in all cases where the officer may have acted in what he may have supposed to have been the due execution of his duty. It is, however, unnecessary to decide that point here. Nor is it necessary to pronounce any opinion upon the case of Postlethwaite v. Gibson, (to be found in 3 Exp. Rep. 226,) where Lord Kenyon thought that unless the officer had a warrant, he was not protected by the 8th section. If it were necessary to determine whether a constable, who without a warrant acts in the execution of his office, and in the discharge of his ordinary duty, be entitled to the protection of this statute, I should wish for further time to consider of it. But in Postlethwaite v. Gibson the constable was not acting in the execution of his ordinary duty; for it is no part of that duty to arrest a man for a felony upon the order of a private individual. Any person who is not a constable may equally do it; but both do it at their peril. If it turn out that the party arrested has committed a felony, then they are justified. Here, however, the constable had a warrant, directing him to take the goods of William Parton. He went to the house where he really supposed those goods to be found; and it occupied a jury a very considerable time to decide whether he was mistaken or not: he meant therefore to obey the warrant, and, as far as he was concerned, he was acting bonâ fide in obedience to it. It, afterwards, however, turned out that the goods belonged to the plaintiff, and, therefore, he was not obeying the warrant of the justice so as to make the justice responsible.
As I consider, however, that the 8th section was intended to give a benefit in addition to that given by the 6th section, it appears to me that this case falls within it. And I think also that the officer, as far as regards himself, and as far as regards the law which protected him, may be considered as having acted _bona fide_ in obedience to the warrant which he had received. This action ought, therefore, to have been brought within the period of six months. Rule absolute. And see _Beechey v. Sales_, 9 _B. & Crez._ 806, _pet._, Vol. III. p. 727.

Demand of warrant.
When constable is protected by the act.

Demand of Warrant when necessary, and when Constable is protected by the 6th Section of the Statute—When the constable has done an act in obedience to the warrant of a magistrate, he cannot be sued, but only the magistrate who has exceeded his jurisdiction, provided the constable give a copy of his warrant after the demand in pursuance of the 24 Geo. IV. c. 44, s. 6. But where a constable had no warrant at all, or he has acted beyond his authority, then he is liable for the excess, and no demand of the copy of the warrant is necessary.

As to what actions the act extends to, see _post_, 806.

A constable executing the warrant of a justice of the peace, and sued for trespass without the magistrate, is within the protection of stat. 24 Geo. II. c. 44, s. 6, and entitled to a verdict on proof of such warrant, having first complied with the plaintiff's demand of a perusal and copy of the warrant before the action brought, though not within six days after such demand, as the act directs. _Jones v. Vaughan_, 5 _East_, 445.

If the warrant direct the officer to seize "stolen goods," and he seizes goods which fall within the description contained in the warrant in other respects, although they turn out not to be stolen, he is still under the protection of the statute. _Price v. Messenger_, 2 _Bos. & _Pul._ 158; 3 _S. & _R._ 96, S. C.

And a constable who assists a parish officer in levying a distress for poors' rates, under a warrant of magistrates directed to such officers, is not liable to an action of trespass, although a demand was duly made on such constable in pursuance of the 24 Geo. II., because the demand ought to be made of the parish officer. _Clarke v. Devey_, 4 _Moore_, 465.

The constable is not protected from an illegal act if he had no warrant at all; ( _Postlethwaite v. Gibson_, 3 _Exp._ 226); or if he acted beyond the limits of the authority given him by the warrant, although he acted _bona fide_. _Money v. Leach_, 3 _Burr._ 1768; _Prestidge v. Woodman_, 1 _B. & _C._ 15; 2 _D. & _R._ 43, S. C. And, generally speaking, he is not protected from an illegal act, done under a warrant, unless the magistrate be liable. _Stevenson_, 2 C. & P. 464; _Bell v. Oakley_, 2 _M. & _S._ 260.

Therefore where a constable having a warrant to search for certain specific goods, alleged to have been stolen, found and took away those goods and certain others, also supposed to have been stolen, but which were not mentioned in the warrant, and were not likely to be of use in substantiating the charge of stealing the goods mentioned in the warrant; it was held, the constable was liable to an action of trespass, without any demand of the warrant. _Crozier v. Cundey_, 6 _B. & _Crez._ 232.

Where a constable, acting under a warrant to take the goods of A, took the goods of B., believing them to belong to A.; the Court of King's Bench were clearly of opinion that he was liable, without any demand of the warrant. _Parton v. Williams_, 3 _B. & _A._ 350; _ante_, 803.

Neither is such a demand necessary if, under a warrant to take up a disorderly person, the constable take up one that is not so; or, under a warrant to take up the author, printer or publisher of a libel, he take up one who was neither author, printer or publisher. _Money v. Leach_, 3 _Burr._ 1768.

Nor if, in order to levy a poor's rate under a warrant of distress granted by two magistrates, he break and enter the party's house, and break the windows, &c. _Bell v. Oakley_, 2 _M. & _S._ 259.

Nor where he executes the warrant out of the jurisdiction of the magistrate without being expressly authorised by the warrant so to do. _Milton v. Green_, 5 _East_, 233; _1 Smith_, 402, S. C. In that case goods were taken by constables under a warrant of distress, granted by a justice of the peace for the county of Kent, directed "To the constables of the lower half hundred of C. and G. in the county of Kent;" which warrant recited, that the plaintiff, (whose goods were distrained) of the parish of G. in the said county, was balloted for the militia of the said county, and, having refused to serve, &c. was convicted in a certain penalty, for levying which the warrant was granted. The Court of King's Bench held, that if the warrant turn out to have been executed within a certain part of the parish of G. within the jurisdiction of the cinque ports, and not within the county of Kent, the constables are not within the protection of stat. 24 Geo. II. c. 44, s. 6, and may be sued in trespass without the magistrate's being made a defendant.
Indemnity and Protection.

Nature, &c. of the Demand, and Refusal of Warrant, &c.]—The 6th section of the 24 Geo. II. ante, 802, points out the mode in which the demand should be made. The signature of the attorney to the demand, on behalf of the party demanding, is sufficient. Jory v. Orchard, 2 B. & P. 42. On the trial, if there be two copies, the one served and the other kept, the production of the latter is sufficient, without giving notice to produce the former. Id.

If the constable deliver a copy before the commencement of the action, although after the expiration of six days from the demand, it is sufficient. Jones v. Vaughan, 5 East, 445.

The constable is in no case required to return the warrant to the justice, or to part with the warrant out of his own possession, for that is his justication. 1 East's P. C. 319. He should either make a copy himself, or allow the party applying to take one, either from such party's reading it, or else from his own reading.

As to the duty of a constable, &c. showing his warrant when executing it, see post, Barratt, Vol. V. He must certify to the justice what he hath done in execution of the warrant.

Limitation of Actions]—We have seen, ante, 802, that the 8th section of the 24 Geo. II. c. 44, limits an action against a constable, for anything done under colour of his office, to be brought in six calendar months after the act committed.

This section we have also seen, ante, 802, is more extensive in its protection than the 6th section; for by this provision a constable is protected from liability to be sued, after six months, for a trespass manifestly beyond and not in obedience to a warrant. Smith v. Wiltshire, 5 Moore, 322; 2 B. & B. 619, S. C.; Theobald v. Crickmore, 1 B. & A. 227; Parton v. Williams, 3 B. & A. 330. And the circumstance of there having been no warrant is immaterial. Id.

Some constables, under a warrant to search a house for black cloth which had been stolen, finding no black cloth, took cloth of other colours, and carried it before a magistrate, refusing at the same time to tell the owner of the house searched whether they had any warrant or no: held, that they were within the protection of stat. 24 Geo. II. c. 44, and that an action against them ought to have been commenced within six months after the grievance complained of. Smith v. Wiltshire, 5 Moore, 322; 2 B. & B. 619, S. C.

Where a constable, acting under a warrant commanding him to take the goods of A., takes the goods of B., believing them to belong to A., he is entitled to the protection of the 8th section of the act. Parton v. Williams, 3 B. & A. 330.

Where a constable, having a magistrate's warrant of distress to levy a church rate under the 53 Geo. III. c. 127, broke the door of and entered the plaintiff's dwellinghouse, it was held that although he thereby exceeded his authority, yet no action could be maintained after the expiration of three calendar months. Theobald v. Crickmore, 1 B. & A. 227.

The action should be brought within the six calendar months inclusive, it should seem, of the day of committing the act. 4 Moore, 465; and post, Justices, Vol. III. p. 495; Timz, Vol. V. Where the cause of action is a continuing one, as an imprisonment of plaintiff, it is sufficient to show that the action was commenced within six months of the end of such imprison-constable. [VII.

What acts the 34 Geo. 3 extends to.

Venue and plea.—We have seen, ante, 802, that the 21 Jac. I. c. 12, provides that the action against a constable shall be brought in the county where the act was committed, and that he may give the special matter of defence under the general issue. In construction of this act, it may be laid down that in an action against a constable or other officer, for an illegal act not done bonâ fide in the execution or under colour of his office, may be laid in any county, but if he reasonably thought it was his duty to act, though he was mistaken, it is otherwise. Anon. 1 Stra. 446; 2 Esp. R. 226, 542; Straight v. Gee, 2 Stark. 445; Beechey v. Sides, 9 B. & C. 806. Per Pratt, C.J., in 1 Stra. 446, "The 21 Jac. I. only applies where the act is for a matter relating to the execution of his office; but if after his authority is expired, he abuses the party, or if he meets a man, and knocks him down, he may be sued for it as all other people may." The same act protects all who act in aid or by the command of such constable; but if a private person be the prime mover, and act as a principal in the transaction, he will not be entitled to its protection; (Straight v. Gee, 2 Stark. 445;) and with respect to the person who may be said to act is said and by the command of the constable, it has been held, that if a person procures a warrant against another, and points out the latter to the constable, he is entitled to the protection of the act, and may plead the general issue, and give the special matter in answer. Nathan v. Cohen, 3 Campb. 257.

The constable’s deputy seems within the act. Moore, 845; Boc. Ab. Const. (D); sed vide, 3 B. & C. 762; 5 D. & R. 654, 8. C.

Parish Officers]—Where a person is not an officer or person within the meaning of this or a similar act, though he may have supposed he was so, he is not within the protection of the act. See Copland v. Powell, 8 Moore, 400; 1 Bingh. 369, 8. C.; Jones v. Williams, 3 B. & C. 762; 5 D. & R. 654, 8. C.

Costs.—To entitle a defendant to double costs under the 21 Jac. I. c. 12, 802, there must be a certificate from the judge. Grinsdale v. Holloway, Doug. 307. It may be granted either at the trial or after. Harper v. Carr. 7 T. R. 448; 2 B. & R. 621. But such certificate is not necessary if the fact appear on a special verdict. R. v. Poland, 1 Stra. 49; Devonsish v. Merritt, 2 Stra. 974.

As to how to calculate double costs, and other points as to the costs, see Tidd’s Prac. 9th ed. 987, &c.

Offences in Obstructing, &c. Constables.

It is an indictable offence at common law to assault or interfere with a constable or peace officer whilst in the execution of his office. See post, Escape, Vol. I.; Rescue, Vol. V.; 3 Chit. C. L.

We have already seen that by the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 25, assaults on peace officers are punishable with a severer punishment than common assaults, ante, 278; and see a precedent of indictment for an assault on a peace officer, ante, 281.

By the Metropolitan Police Act, 10 Geo. IV. c. 114, s. 8, persons assaulting or resisting police officers, or assisting therein, are subject to a penalty of not exceeding 5l., to be recovered before two justices; post, Walter, Vol. V. p. 126.
VIII. His Expenses.

By stat. 27 Geo. II. c. 20, s. 2, it is enacted, "that the officer making such distress shall, and is hereby empowered to deduct the reasonable charges of taking, keeping, and selling such distress, out of the money arising by such sale; and the overplus, (if any) after such charges, and also the said penalty or sum of money shall be fully satisfied and paid, shall be returned on demand to the owner of the goods and chattels so distrained; and the officer executing such warrant, if required, shall show the same to the person whose goods and chattels are distrained, and shall suffer a copy thereof to be taken."

By stat. 3 Jac. I. c. 10, s. 1, it is enacted, "that all and every person and persons whatsoever, that from and after the end of this present session of parliament, shall be committed to the common or usual gaol within any county or liberty within this realm, by any justice or justices of the peace, for any offence or misdemeanor to any such gaol, that the said person or persons so to be committed as aforesaid, having means or ability thereunto, shall bear their own reasonable charges for so conveying or sending them to the said gaol, and the charges also of such as shall be appointed to guard them to such gaol, and shall so guard them thither: and if any such person or persons so to be committed as aforesaid shall refuse, at the time of their commitment and sending to the said gaol, to defray the said charges, or shall not then pay or bear the same, that then such justice or justices of the peace shall and may, by writing under his or their hand and seal, or hands and seals, give warrant to the constable or constables of the hundred, or constable or tithingman of the tithing or township where such person or persons shall be dwelling and inhabit, or from whence he or they shall be committed as aforesaid, or where he or they shall have any goods within the county or liberty, to sell such and so much of the goods and chattels of the said persons so to be committed, as by the discretion of the said justice or justices of the peace shall satisfy and pay the charges of such his or their conveying and sending to the said gaol, the appraisement to be made by four of the honest inhabitants of the parish or tithing where such goods or chattels shall remain and be, and the overplus of the money which shall be made thereof to be delivered to the party to whom the said goods shall belong."

And by stat. 27 Geo. II. c. 3, s. 1—4, if he have not money nor goods within the county sufficient to bear the charges of himself and of those who convey him to the gaol or house of correction, the constable may make application to a justice, who may upon oath examine into and ascertain the reasonable expenses, and shall by his warrant (without fee) order the treasurer to pay the same, except in Middlesex, where the same shall be paid by the overseers of the parish where the person was apprehended.

By the 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, s. 8, the expenses of carrying to gaol, and maintaining an idle and disorderly person, rogue, vagabond, or incorrigible rogue, are to be paid out of the money found upon him, or arising from the sale of any property in his possession and use, post, Pagrant, Vol. V.

And by stat. 41 Geo. III. U. K. c. 78, s. 1, it is enacted, "that from and after the passing of this act, it shall and may be lawful to and for any two justices of the peace for any county, city, division, riding or place, within that part of the United Kingdom called England, when any person or persons shall have been nominated or appointed a special constable or special constables, for the purpose of executing any warrant or warrants in any case or cases of felony, to order, by any writing or writings under their hands, such proper allowances to be made to such special constable or special constables, for his or their expenses, trouble, and loss of time in executing or endeavouring to execute such warrant or warrants, as to him or them shall seem reasonable and necessary; which orders shall be afterwards laid before and submitted, on the oath of such special constable or constables, to the consideration of the justices assembled at the next general quarter sessions of the peace to be held for such county, city, division, riding or place, as the case may be; and the justices so assembled at such general quarter sessions may allow or disallow the whole or any part or parts of such allowances so ordered by such justices issuing such warrant or warrants, and shall and may thereupon then order and direct the treasurer for such county, city, division, riding or place, to pay such sum or sums of money to such special constable or special constables, as to the said justices so assembled shall seem reasonable and necessary; and such treasurer shall, and he is hereby authorised and required forthwith to pay the sum and sums of money so ordered and directed to be paid to the person or persons empowered to receive the same; and such treasurer shall be allowed the same in his accounts."

(n) See these acts more fully, ante, Commitment, p. 763.
Constable. [VIII.

Sect. 2. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for any two justices of the peace, within their respective jurisdictions, to order and direct, by any writing or writings under their hands, such reasonable and necessary allowances to be made to any high constable or high constables for any county, city, division, riding, hundred, or place, within that part of the United Kingdom called England, for any extraordinary expenses incurred by him or them in the execution of their respective duties, in any case or cases of tumult, riot, or felony; and such orders shall be laid before and submitted, on the oath of such high constable or constables, to the consideration of the justices assembled at the next general quarter sessions of the peace to be held for such county, city, division, riding or place, as the case may be; and the justices so assembled at such general quarter sessions may allow or disallow the whole or any part or parts of such allowance so ordered, and shall and may then order and direct the treasurer for such county, city, division, riding or place, to pay such sum or sums of money to such high constable or high constables as to the said justices so assembled shall seem reasonable; and such treasurer shall, and he is hereby authorised and required forthwith to pay the sum or sums of money so ordered and directed to be paid, to the person or persons empowered to receive the same; and such treasurer shall be allowed the same in his accounts."

In the case of R. v. Js. of Leicester, 7 B. & C. 8, where the high constable of a borough, by the direction of the justices, employed and paid a number of special constables to suppress riots at an election, and the ordinary constables were also constantly employed by him during the same period in endeavouring to keep the peace, for which service he made them a compensation; it was held that the justices were warranted in considering the monies so expended as "extraordinary expenses," incurred by the high constable in case of riot, within the meaning of the 41 Geo. III. c. 78, s. 2, and in making an order upon the treasurer to reimburse him those expenses.

The 1 Geo. IV. c. 37, s. 3, enacts, "that it shall and may be lawful for the justices of the peace, assembled at the general or quarter sessions held for any county, city, division, riding or place, where special constables have been called out as aforesaid, (ante, 795) to order and direct such reasonable allowances for trouble and expenses, to be made to any person or persons called out by authority of this act, as to the said justices shall seem fit, which allowances the said justices may order the treasurer of such county, city, division, riding or place, to pay to such persons as the said justices shall direct; and such treasurer shall, and he is hereby authorised and required, forthwith to pay the sum or sums of money so ordered and directed to be paid to the person empowered to receive the same; and such treasurer shall be allowed the same in his accounts."

Sect. 4. "That the court before which any indictment may be tried under the provisions of this act shall have the power to award reasonable costs of trial to such persons as may prefer the said indictment, and may order the treasurer of such county, city, division, riding or place, wherein such indictment shall be tried, to pay the sum or sums of money so ordered, to such persons as the said court shall direct; and such treasurer shall, and he is hereby authorised and required forthwith to pay the sum or sums of money, so ordered and directed to be paid, to the persons empowered to receive the same; and such treasurer shall be allowed the same in his accounts."

Sect. 5. "That this act shall be deemed and taken to be a public act, and shall be judicially taken notice of as such by all judges, justices, and others, without being specially pleaded."

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 7, if the high constable sued on this act shall produce and prove before two justices of the jurisdiction, residing in or acting for his hundred or district, an account of the just and necessary expenses which he shall have incurred in the prosecution of such action, they shall make an order for payment thereof on the treasurer of that jurisdiction; and if in such action judgment shall be given against the plaintiff, the high constable shall in like manner be reimbursed the just and necessary expenses incurred by him in consequence of such action, over and above the taxed costs to be paid by the plaintiff; and if it shall be proved to two such justices that the plaintiff is insolvent, so that the high constable can have no relief as to such taxed costs, they shall make a similar order for payment of the amount of such taxed costs. See Hundred, Vol. III.

By 56 Geo. III. c. 55, s. 16, the justices in general or quarter sessions, or at any adjournment thereof, may make allowances and compensations to the constables, &c., for collecting the county rate under this act.

As to the rewards for taking deserters, see post, Military Law, Vol. III.; and for collecting the fines for not furnishing the complement of militia. Id.

By stat. 18 Geo. III. c. 19, s. 4, after reciting "whereas constables, headboroughs, and tithingmen, are or may be at great charge in doing the business of their parish, township, or place, and in many cases are not sufficiently indemnified by the laws, enacts, that every constable, headborough, or tithingman, shall every three months, and within fourteen days after he shall go out of such office, deliver to the overseers of the poor of the said parish, township, or place, for the time being, a just account in writing, fairly entered in a book to be kept for that purpose, and signed by him, of all sums so by him expended on account of the said parish, township, or place, in all cases not hitherto provided for by the laws heretofore made, or by this act, and also of all sums received by him on the account of the said parish, township, or place; and the said overseers of the poor, or their successors, shall, within the next fourteen days after the said account or accounts shall be so delivered, lay the same before the inhabitants of the said parish, township, or place; and in case the said account or accounts be approved of by the majority of such inhabitants, the overseers of the poor of the said parish, township, or place, for the time being, are hereby authorised and required to pay out of the poor rates, made or to be made for such parish, township, or place, such sum or sums of money as shall appear to be due on the said account or accounts; but in case the said account or accounts, or any part thereof, shall be disallowed, then the said overseers of the poor for the time being shall then deliver back to the said constable, headborough, or tithingman, such book of accounts; and it shall and may be lawful to and for the said constable, headborough, or tithingman, then to produce the said book before any one or more of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the county, riding, division, city, town corporate, franchise, or liberty, wherein such parish or township shall be situate, giving reasonable notice thereof to the overseers of the poor of the said parish, township, or place, for the time being; which said justice or justices is and are hereby authorised to examine the same; and to hear and determine any objection or objections that shall be made to the said accounts, and to settle the sum which to him or them shall appear due on the said account, and to enter the same in the said account, and to sign his or their name or names thereto; and the overseers of the poor of the said parish, township, or place, for the time being, are hereby authorised and required to pay the said sum, out of the money which shall come to their hands by virtue of any rate or assessment made or to be made for the relief of the poor."
Sect. 5. "That in case the overseer or overseers of the poor of the said parish, township, or place, for the time being, shall find that the said parish, township, or place is aggrieved by any negligence, or thing done or omitted by the said constable, headborough, or tithingman, or by any of his Majesty's justices of the peace, or shall have any material objection to such account or any part thereof, or to such determination as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for such overseer or overseers, in any of the cases aforesaid, give reasonable notice to the said justice, constable, headborough, or tithingman, to appeal to the next general or quarter sessions of the peace for the county, riding, division, city, town corporate, franchise or liberty, where such said parish, township, or place lies; and the justices of the peace there assembled are hereby authorised and required to receive such appeal, and to hear and decide the same; but if it shall appear to the said justices that reasonable notice was not given, then they shall adjourn the said appeal to the next quarter sessions, and then and there finally hear and determine the same; and the said justices may award and order, to the party for whom such appeal shall be determined, reasonable costs, in the same manner that they are empowered to do in case of appeals concerning the settlement of poor persons by an act made in the eighth and ninth years of King William the Third intituled, 'An Act for supplying some defects in the laws for the relief of the poor of this Kingdom.'"

Sect. 6. "That in all corporations or liberties which have not four justices of the peace, it shall and may be lawful for the overseer or overseers of the poor of the parish, township, or place, for the time being, where an appeal is given by this act, to appeal, if he or they shall think fit, to the next general or quarter sessions of the peace for the county, riding, or division wherein such corporation or liberty is situate."

Sect. 9. "That it shall and may be lawful for his Majesty's justices of the peace, in and for any county, riding, division, city, town corporate, franchise or liberty, in quarter sessions assembled, to lay down or alter, from time to time, such rules and regulations as to any costs or charges thereafter allowed to any person whatsoever, by virtue of any part of this act, for better carrying the intent of any part of this act into execution, and for preventing any unnecessary expense, as to them shall seem most just and reasonable; which rules and regulations, having received the approval and signature of one or more of his Majesty's judges of oyer and terminer, or general gaol delivery, at the assizes for the county wherein such rules and regulations shall have been made, shall be binding, and not otherwise, on any persons whatsoever; and no person whatsoever shall be allowed any greater sum of money, by virtue of this act, than according to the said rules and regulations so approved of as aforesaid, anything herein contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Though a constable be not entitled to the allowance of the expenses incurred in a prosecution arising within his precinct, yet if he has charged them in his accounts, and the item has been allowed under the statute of 18 Geo. III. by two justices, though after disallowance by the vestry, the sessions cannot give redress unless a majority of the churchwardens and overseers concur in the appeal. R. v. Jr. Lancashire, 5 B. & A. 757.

But if the appeal be made by proper persons, although the justices in sessions should confirm the allowance of the two justices, made after the disallowance by the vestry, the Court of King's Bench will quash their order, unless in cases where it is the duty of a parish or township to prosecute such offenders, or the constable have previously to the prosecution received from the inhabitants some authority to proceed. R. v. Seville, 5 B. & A. 182.

Nor is the constable entitled to be allowed in his accounts the costs of a prosecution, although for an assault made on one of the overseers, and although the proceeding were directed by a justice and approved by the court which tried it; and if an overseer take upon him to pay such costs to the constable, he is not entitled to have it allowed in the parish in his account; and even if allowed by the vestry, afterwards by two justices, and that allowance by the IX. His Account and Removal from his Office.

The High constables shall at the general or quarter sessions, if thereunto required, account for the general county rate by them received, on pain of being committed to gaol until they shall account, and shall pay over the money in their hands, according to the order of the said court, on the like pain. And all their accounts and vouchers shall, after having been passed at the sessions, be deposited with the clerk of the peace, to be kept amongst the records, and inspected by any justice without fee. 12 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 8; and see 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 12.

And in such manner as constables are to be chosen, in the same manner, and by the like authority, are they to be removed; so as if there shall be cause to remove and put a high constable from his place, it hath not been thought fit that any one or two justices should do it upon their discretion, but that it should be done by the greater part of the justices of that division, and that for some just cause; or else that it be done at the sessions. Dall. c. 28.

And it seems clear that the sheriff or steward of the leet, having power to place a constable in his office, have by consequence a power of removing him. 2 Haw. c. 10, s. 38.

And also the justices of the peace have used, for good cause, to displace all such constables as have been chosen and sworn by them. 2 Haw. c. 10, s. 38.

By Stat. 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, s. 15, if a constable shall continue above a year in his office, the sessions may discharge him, and put another in his place till the lord shall hold a leet.

And if the court or other judge shall refuse to discharge a constable, the King's Bench may compel them by mandamus. 2 Haw. c. 10, s. 47.

(a) The following is a list of fees usually allowed to the constables of most parishes in England:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Description</th>
<th>£</th>
<th>s</th>
<th>d</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>For the oath of office, at a fair in the parish,</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>For the service of any warrant at the instance of the parish,</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(if served in the parish,)</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>For every mile beyond the limits of the parish,</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>If beyond the distance of five miles, and not exceeding a day's journey,</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>For every journey of one day or more, per day, including all expenses,</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>For attending the bench of justices at their petty sessions,</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The like at their general or quarter sessions, (including expenses,)</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Attending the coroner with notice of a death</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Summoning a jury, and attending the inquisition</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Expenses of the jury</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Billeting of soldiers</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pressing of waggoners for soldiers' baggage</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Table of fees.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Description</th>
<th>£</th>
<th>s</th>
<th>d</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Attending on a search night, or at a fair in the parish,</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Attending to see that shops and public houses are shut during divine service</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Attending on the day of election of a member of parliament,</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>For conveying a felon or other prisoner to gaol, when the parish is liable</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Making a list of jurors to return to the sessions</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Verifying the same</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Making out a list of persons to serve in the militia, or any other military force</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Verifying the same</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Summoning any person billeted in the militia, &amp;c.</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Service of any poor's rate summons</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Attending as a peace officer within the parish on any public occasion, or</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Any criminal</td>
<td>.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Constable's Oath.

YOU shall well and truly serve our sovereign lord the King, and the like, if this be, if sworn in a court leet, in the office of constable for the [township] of [for the year ensuing, or until another be sworn in your stead, according to the best of your skill and knowledge. So help you God.

Indictment against a petty constable for not taking the office after being chosen at a court leet. (b)

County of [THE jurors of our lord the King upon their oath present, that A. O. late of [township] in the said county, [year], and in the year of the reign of county aforesaid, and a fit and able person to serve the office of constable for the said [township]; and he the said A. O. on the day and year aforesaid in the [township] and county aforesaid, at the court leet of G. H., lord of the manor of aforesaid, helden before I. E. [gentleman], steward of the court, was elected and chosen, according to the ancient custom of choosing constables, for the said [township], for one year from thence next following, to do and perform all and singular those things which belong to the office of constable, or otherwise according to the custom for choosing constables; and that the said A. O. afterwards, to wit, on the day and year aforesaid, at the [township] and county aforesaid, had due notice given to him by A. B. bailiff of the aforesaid manor, of his being elected and chosen constable aforesaid, and then and there was by him invited to appear before J. P. Esquire, then and there and yet being our said Majesty's justices assigned to keep the peace in and for the said county, and to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors in the said county committed, on the said day of in the year aforesaid, to take his place for the due execution of the said office of constable for the same [township], according to the duty of that office; nevertheless the said A. O. not regarding his duty in behalf, but contriving and intending wholly to neglect and to serve the said office as unstable, after he the said A. O. was so elected and chosen into the said office aforesaid, to wit, on the day and year last aforesaid, and continually afterwards until the day of taking this indictment, at the [township] aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, unlawfully and contumaciously did neglect and refuse, and still doth neglect and refuse, to take his said oath for the due executing the said office of constable, in any wise to execute the same office, to the great hindrance of justice, to the great dishonor of our said lord the King, and to the evil example of all others, and against the peace of our said lord the King his crown and dignity.

The like where defendant was elected at a vestry.

THE jurors of our lord the King upon their oath present, that C. B., etc., on, etc., and long before, was and still is an inhabitant and resident within the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, and a fit and able person to execute office of constable for the said parish; and that the said C. B. on the day and year aforesaid, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, at a vestry then held and duly holden in and for the said parish, at the vestry room of and in the parish church of the said parish there situate, lawfully, in due manner and form, and according to the custom of the said parish, was elected and chosen by the men inhabiting and resident within the same parish, to be one of the constables of and for the said parish, for one year, from thence next following, to do and execute all and singular the things which belong to the office of constable; and that the said C. B. afterwards to wait, on the day and year aforesaid, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, had due notice thereof, and then and there was required to appear before J. P. Esquire, then and yet being one of the justices of our said lord the King in and for the county aforesaid, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, etc.

(a) See other forms referred to 3 Chit. C. L. index, tit. Constable; see forms for assaulting constables, ante, 280, 281; also post, Extortion, Vol. I.; Libel, Vol. III.; Rescue, Vol. V.

(b) See other forms, 3 Chit. C. L. 266, &c.
Conviction:

other misdemeanors committed in the said county, on, &c. in the year aforesaid, to take his oath for the due execution of the said office of constable for the said parish, according to the duty of that office. Nevertheless, the said C. D. not regarding his duty in that behalf, but contriving and intending the due execution of justice to hinder and prevent, afterwards, to wit, on the day and year aforesaid, with force and arms, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, unlawfully, wilfully, obstinately, and contemptuously did refuse, and from hence continually until the day of taking this inquisition, unlawfully, wilfully, obstinately, and contemptuously hath refused, and still doth refuse, to take his said oath for the due execution of the said office of constable, or in any wise to take upon himself or execute the said office; contrary to his duty in that behalf, in manifest contempt of our said lord the King and his laws, and against the peace of our lord the King his crown and dignity.

Contempt. See ante, Attachment; post, Order, Vol. III.

As to the power of justices to commit for, see post, Examination, Vol. II. p. 99; Justices, Vol. III. p. 469.
As to the power of sessions to commit for, see post, Sessions, Vol. V. p. 477.

Conviction. (a)

Under this title will be considered only those convictions which take place before magistrates in a summary way, and without the intervention of a jury.

The power of a justice of the peace to convict an offender in a summary way without a trial by jury is in restraint of the common law, and in abundance of instances a tacit repeal of that famous clause in the Great Charter, that a man shall be tried by his equals, which also was the common law of the land long before the great charter, even from time immemorial, beyond the date of histories and record. Therefore generally nothing shall be presumed in favour of this branch of the office of a justice of the peace; but the intendment will be against it. (b) For which reason where this special power is given to a justice of the peace by act of parliament, it must appear that he hath strictly pursued it; otherwise the common law will break in upon him, and level all his proceedings. So that where a trial by jury is dispensed withal, yet he must proceed nevertheless according to the course of the common law in trials by juries, and consider himself only as constituted in the place both of judge and jury.

Therefore there must be an information or charge against a person; then he must be summoned or have notice of such charge, and have an opportunity to make his defence; and the evidence against him must be such as the common law approves of, unless the statute specially directs otherwise; then if the person be found guilty, there must be a conviction, judgment, and execution, all according to the course of the common law, directed and influenced by the special authority given by statute; and in the conclusion, there must be a record of the whole proceedings, wherein the justice must set forth the particular manner and circumstances, so as if he shall be called

(a) See in general Paley on Convictions, Boscauen on Convictions, Archbold on Convictions.

(b) See rules of construction, post, 835.
to account for the same by a superior court, it may appear that he has conformed to the law, and not exceeded the bounds prescribed to his jurisdiction.

We will proceed to enquire into—

I. The Information, 815 to 827.

1st. When necessary, 816.

2d. Time when to be laid, 816.

Computation of Time, 816.

3d. Who to be Informer, 817.

4th. Before whom to be laid, 817.

Magistrate Refusing to Receive Information, 817.

5th. Against whom it may be laid, 817.

6th. The Joiner of Several Offences, 818.

7th. Form of Information, 818.

When must be in Writing, 819; On Oath, 818; States of Time of laying it, 816; Of Place where laid, 818; Of Name of Informer, 818; Of Party aggrieved, 819; Of Magistrate and his Authority, 819; Of Offender, 819; Of Time of Committing Offence, 819; Of Place of Offence Committed, 820; Of the Offence itself, 821; Certainty, 821; Must be Positive, 821; And not by way of Recital, 822; Or in Disjunctive, 822; Or Argumentative, 822; Scienter, 822; Offence must be stated within Terms of the Statute, 822; Precise Words of the Act, 823; Sometimes a more minute Description necessary, 823; Negativing Exceptions in Statute, 824; Presumption of Law, 824; Matters of Defence, Evidence, &c. 824; Technical Words, 825; Statement of Statute itself, 825; Written Instruments, 825; Chattels, Monies, &c. 825; Quantity and Value, 825; Conclusion as to Offence being against Statute, 826; Construction of Information, 826; Defect in Information, 826; Surplusage, 826.

[3 Geo. IV. c. 23, s. 2; 31 Eliz. c. 5.]

II. The Summons, 827.

When Requisite, 827; Form of, 827; Service of, 829; Consequence of Defects in, 828.

III. Proceedings at the Hearing, 828 to 834.

Before whom to take place, 828.

Appearance or Default, 829.

Presence of Advisers, Counsel, &c. 829.

Confession of the Charge, 830.

Denial of the Charge, 831.

Proof of the Charge, 831.

Oath and Examination of Witnesses, 831, 832.

The Defence, 832.

Claim of Right or Authority, 833.

Taking down Examinations in Writing, 833.

Adjournment, 833.
Conviction.

Time of making Conviction, 833.
The Judgment, 833.
Fixing the Penalty, 834.
Drawing up Conviction, 834.

IV. The Conviction, Form, &c. of, 835 to 848.

1. Form of Convictions in General, 835 to 846.
   1st. General Requisites and Construction of, 835.
   General Rules of Construction of, 835; Defects in Form, 836.

2. Particular Parts of, in General, 836, 837.
   The Information or Charge against Defendant, 837.
   The Summons, 838; The Appearance on Default, 838; The Confession or Defence, 838; The Witnesses and Evidence, 839 to 843; The Adjournment, 843; The Adjudication or Judgment, 843 to 846; The Subscription and Date, 846.

[3 Geo. IV. c. 23.]

2. Form of, when pointed out by Statute, 846 to 848.
   Certain Expressions used in particular Forms explained, 847; Alternative Punishments, 847; Blanks, 847; Titles of Acts, 848; Defects in Form, 849.

V. Proceedings after Conviction, 848 to 850.

Copy of Conviction, 848.
Return of Conviction to Sessions, 849.
Erroneous Acquittal, 849.
Erroneous Conviction, 849.
Certiorari and Appeal. See ante, Appeal, Certiorari.
Enforcing Conviction. See ante, Commitment, p. 768, &c., post, Distress, Vol. I.; Recognizance, Vol. V.

VI. Forms, 850.

General Form of Information on a Penal Statute, 850; The like, stating several Offences, 850.
General Form of a Summons to Accused, 850; To a Witness, 850.
General Form of Conviction where Defendant Appears and Pleads, or Refuses to make Defence, 851; The like where Imprisonment or Hard Labour is added, 851; The like where the Penalty is Mitigated, 851.
The like where Defendant appears and Confesses, 851.
The like where Defendant does not appear, 852.

I. The Information before Conviction.

We have already stated, ante, 813, that there must be an information or charge against an offender before he be convicted, and such information or charge is the first step to be taken. Upon this the magistrate grants a summons or warrant requiring the defendant to appear before him, which is in general requisite, unless the defendant appear without it. In this way the charge is brought on for hearing.
Conviction.

We will now consider the law and practice as regards the information:
1st. As to where an information is necessary;—2d. The time when it is to be made;—3d. Who is to be the Informer;—4th. Before whom information to be laid;—5th. Against whom to be laid;—6th. The joinder of several Offences—and 7th. Its form.

(1.) When information necessary.

(1.) When necessary].—It is absolutely essential in all proceedings to convict a party of an offence created or prohibited under a penal statute, that there should be some information or complaint before the conviction or some other justices. Brookshaw v. Hopkins, Lofft, 240; R. v. Fuller, 1 Ld. Raym. 510.

Such information is indeed dispensed with where a justice is authorized to convict on view of the offence; as by the 19 Geo. II. c. 21, s. 2, for profane swearing; by the 13 Geo. III. c. 78, s. 60, for riding on a wagon in the highway; as by the Vagrant Act, 5 Geo. IV. c. 83; or by the General Turnpike Act, 3 Geo. IV. c. 126, s. 132. See Jones v. Owen, 3 D. & R. 600; 1 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 290, S. C.

(2.) Time when to be laid.

(2.) When to be laid].—In general the penal statute on which the information is founded limits the time as to when the conviction must take place, and the information must be laid accordingly within that time.

Some statutes appoint an interval which must elapse before any prosecution; as 19 Geo. III. c. 50, s. 2, &c.

By stat. 31 Eliz. c. 5, s. 5, 6, all actions, suits, bills, indictments, or informations on any penal statute, whereby the forfeiture is limited to the King only, shall be brought within two years after the offence committed: if limited to the King and to any other who shall prosecute, then within five years; and in default of such prosecution, then to be brought for the King within two years after that year ended. Provided, that if they are or shall be limited by statute to be brought within shorter time, then they shall be brought within such time limited.

If an offence prohibited by a penal statute be also an offence at common law, the prosecution of it as of an offence at common law, is no way restrained by this statute. 2 How. c. 26, s. 44.

The party griev'd is not a common informer within the restraint of this statute, but he may sue in the same manner as before. 2 How. c. 26, s. 47.

It will be observed that this statute applies to all actions and informations for penalties.

The statutes of 18 Eliz. c. 5, s. 1, requiring the time of the information to be entered, &c. and the 21 Jac. I. c. 4, s. 3, requiring an oath to be made at the time of exhibiting the information, do not apply to informations before justices out of sessions.

As regards the computation of the time limited by penal statutes.

If the time be expressed by the year, or any aliquot part thereof, as a half or quarter, &c. of a year, the computation is by calendar months of twelve months to the year. But if months are mentioned, and not the year, they are always computed by lunar months of four weeks to the month. R. v. Peckham, Earth. 406; R. v. Bellamy, 2 D. & R. 727; 1 B. & Cen. 500; 1 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 376, S. C. Vide R. v. Cussens, 1 Sid. 181. And see fully, post, 6this, Vol. V.

Where the time is dated from the offence committed, the day on which it was committed is to be reckoned as one; but otherwise if it be from the day of doing the act in question. See R. v. Green, 10 Mod. 212; R. v. Alderley, Doug. 465.

If goods are found, subjecting the party having them in his possession to a forfeiture for receiving them illegally, the day on which they are found will be presumed to be the day whereon such forfeiture was incurred. R. v. Bass, 5 T. R. 251.

See further as to the computation of time in actions against justices, post. Justices, Vol. III. p. 495.

It a statute say, that the offender shall be convicted in a limited time, the conviction must take place within that time, and the laying the information will not suffice. See R. v. Bellamy, supra. Alter where it is not so pecu-

(3.) Who to be the Informer]—Generally speaking any person may be the informer; see Esp. Penal Statutes, p. 11; but sometimes the statute giving the penalty allows only particular persons to be informers.
Where the informer is entitled to any part of the penalty he is not in general a competent witness to support the conviction. See 2 Ld. Raym.
1545; Evidence, Vol. II. p. 74.
Where the information is for the recovery of a penalty given to the party grieved, he must be the informer; or else it must appear that the information is laid at his instance. See R. v. Downe, 2 B. & A. 378; 1 Chit. Rep. 147; Burr. 2279; post, 818, 819; Gurney, Vol. II.

(4.) Before whom information to be laid]—The information must be laid before a justice having jurisdiction to hear it and determine as to the offence. The penal statute frequently points out before whom the conviction is to take place. See further as to the jurisdiction of justices of the peace to receive these informations, post, Justices, Vol. III. p. 464 to 473.
One justice may receive the information and grant a summons or warrant upon it in all cases. Even in those in which the conviction must be by two or more justices. This is enacted by the 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, s. 2, in the following words: "That in all cases where two or more justices, deputy lieutenants, or others, are authorised and required to hear and determine any complaint, one justice, deputy lieutenant, or such other person shall be competent to receive the original information or complaint, and to issue the summons or warrant requiring the parties to appear before two or more justices of the peace, deputy lieutenants, or others, as the case may require; and after examination upon oath into the merits of the said complaint, and the adjudication thereupon, by any such two justices, deputy lieutenants, or other persons, being made, all and every the subsequent proceedings to enforce obedience thereto or otherwise, whether respecting the penalty, fine, imprisonment, costs, or other matter or thing now enacted, or to be hereafter enacted, may be enforced by either of the said justices, deputy lieutenants, or other persons, or any other justice of the peace or deputy lieutenant for the same county, riding, or place, in such and the like manner as if done by the same two justices, deputy lieutenants, or other persons, who so heard and adjudged the said complaint; and where the original complaint or information shall be made to any justice or justices of the peace, deputy lieutenant or deputy lieutenants, or other person or persons different from him or them before whom the same shall be heard and determined, the form of conviction shall be made conformable and according to the fact."

A justice of the peace cannot properly refuse to receive an information regularly laid before him within his jurisdiction, and upon refusal in some cases a mandamus, and in others a criminal information, might be awarded against him; see Stra. 413; R. v. Newton, id. 530; R. v. Benn, 6 T. R.
198; Paley, 17, 18. Some statutes inflict a penalty on his refusal; see Smith v. Langham, 2 Stra. 234. Where, however, a justice has a reasonable ground for doubting his jurisdiction, the Court of King's Bench will not enforce him to hear the information. Semble, R. v. Js. Buckingham, 2 D. & (5.) Against whom it may be laid]—The party against whom the information may be laid must depend on the words of the penal statute, and the facts constituting the offence within it. See the various titles of offences under penal statutes throughout this work.

A femme covert may be convicted on a penal statute; see R. v. Crofts, 2 Stra. 1120; Foster's case, 11 Rep. 61; post, 819; Giff, Vol. V.
Vol. I. 3 G
Conviction.

So may an infant. 4 Bla. Com. 308; 2 B. & P. 98, 520; 8 T. R. 545; see post, Infants, Vol. III.

In some cases a man may be responsible for the act of his servants and of those he employs, even where the act is done without his privity or knowledge. See Mitchell v. Torrus, Parker's Rep. 227; 1 Vent. 190, 238; post. Servants, Vol. V.; Libel, Vol. III. As to who may be joined as defendants in the same conviction, see post, Indictment, Vol. III.; post, Gaunt, Vol. II. Where the act is such that several may join in it, all the offenders may be included in the same information and conviction, see post, 818.

(6.) Several offences.

(7.) Form of information—When must be in writing.

(7.) Form of the Information—When in Writing—When the information is required by statute to be in writing, that form must be observed, as this is usually directed where power is given to apprehend the offender the first instance; but unless expressly so directed, it does not seem necessary that it should be in writing. R. v. Willis, Bosc. 16; Paley, 18. In practice the magistrate always requires an information in writing, drawn in regular form, to be lodged with him before he will grant a summons against an offender on a penal statute. When the statute requires the information to be in writing, the conviction should state it was so. R. v. Willis, Bosc. 16; see also Basten v. Carew, infra.

On oath.

Oath]—The information need not be upon oath, if not expressly required by the statute authorising the conviction. R. v. Willis, Bosc. 16; Basten v. Carew, 5 D. & R. 558; 3 D. & R. M. C. 563; 3 B. & Cre. 649, S.C.; the statute requires such oath, it must be administered and taken before the magistrate receives the material part of the information. See R. v. Ellis, 1 D. & R. 734; 3 D. & R. Mag. C. 364. The information, when required to be on oath, should state it was exhibited on oath.

Time of laying information.

Day of exhibiting it]—The day and year on which it is exhibited must be stated therein, as well that it may appear to be subsequent to the offense and prior to all the other proceedings, as in order to ascertain that the prosecution is within the time limited by the particular statute on which it is based. 2 Ld. Raym. 1546; 1 Id. 510; Paley, 58.

In R. v. Kent, 2 Ld. Raym. 1546, the conviction was quashed because the information was set out to be exhibited on 2d Nov. 1 Geo. II. and the conviction was laid to be on 2d Oct. 1 Geo. II. See R. v. Picton, 2 Eas. 128.

Place where laid. Place of exhibiting it]—The place also where the information is stated to be received must be stated in it, in order to show that the magistrate at the time was acting within his jurisdiction. Bosc. 24; and see Kitte and Lem. case, 1 B. & C. 101; 2 D. & R. 212, S.C.

Name of Informer, &c. Name of Informer, &c.]—The name of the informer should be set forth in all cases, that the person convicted may know who is his accuser. See Paley on Conv. 80, n. p.

It is absolutely necessary that it should be set forth where any part of the penalty is given by the statute to the informer, in order that the conviction may appear to be founded upon other evidence than that of the informer himself, who is in such cases an incompetent witness. R. v. Stone, 2 Ld. Raym. 1545.

And where a statute directs that certain things shall be forfeited to the person seizing the same, the information must show that the person to whom the thing is adjudged is the person who seized it, and it is not enough that this is stated in the adjudication. R. v. Smith, 5 M. & S. 133.
The Information.

But it is not necessary (as in penal actions) to allege that the informer sues as well for himself as for the other parties. R. v. Lovet, 7 T. R. 152.
It does not seem necessary, though advisable and proper, to state the informers abode and addition.

Where the penalty is given as a compensation to a party aggrieved by the offence, it must appear either that he is the informer, or that the information is laid at his instance. R. v. Corden, 2 Burr. 2279; and the later case of Gams*, Vol. 11.

Name, &c. of Magistrate.—Summary convictions before magistrates being by virtue of a circumscribed and extraordinary power, the name and style of the justice or justices, before whom the information is lodged, must be set forth in the statement of the information, from which it must appear that he or they had authority to take such information. 2 Salk. 471; R. v. Johnson, 1 Stra. 261; Paley, 79.

It is not sufficient therefore to describe him as a justice in the county, without saying of or for the county. R. v. Dobbs, 2 Salk. 473. It is, however, no objection that he is described as being a justice, &c., without the word "there being a justice, &c." for that is implied. R. v. Chipps, 1
Stra. 711.

If the statute give cognizance of the offence to the next justice of the county, the convictions magistrate should be so described, for no other but the next has any jurisdiction. Sandert’s case, 1 Sauad. 263; Dall. c. 6. But if the act only mentions justices in or near the place, it is but directory, and they need not be so described; 2 Keb. 539; nor if the statute speaks of justices acting for the division need they be so alleged, for any justice of the 793.

The omission of the word assigned in the description of the style of a magistrate has been once held to be fatal. 1 Sauad. 263. Such an omission, however, does not now seem material. 2 Burnard. 383; Paley, 79. And see the 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, post, 836.

By 26 Geo. II. c. 27, no order or adjudication of justices is now invalid, though it is not expressed that either justice is of the quorum.

Name, &c. of Offender.—The name of the offender should be correctly stated, otherwise the proceedings would be unavailable if he did not appear.
If there be several offenders, each must be named. A conviction against "Messrs. Harrison and Company," was considered bad, and this although none of the parties even objected to the conviction on that ground. *R. v.
Harrison*, 8 T. R. 598.

The addition of the offender is not material, and need not be stated, though

The General Turnpike Act allows proceedings against a driver misbehaving himself to be carried on against him without describing his name, if he refuse to disclose it. See 3 Geo. IV. c. 126, s. 132; post, Highways, Vol. III. p. 198.

It is no objection that the defendant appears to be a feme covert, for a feme covert may be convicted on a penal statute, without joining her husband. This point was so decided in the case of a conviction on stat. 9 Geo.
II. c. 23, for selling gin, to which exception was taken, that the defendant appeared to be a feme covert, and therefore could make no contract for the sale; or that if she could be convicted of the offence, that the husband ought to have been joined for uniformity. But it was held that the conviction was right, for it was an offence which the woman might commit alone. *R. v.
Crofts*, 2 Stra. 1120; vide Foster’s case, 11 Rep. 61; Paley, 82.

Time of Offence.—The time of committing the offence should be stated, in order that the magistrate may appear to have proceeded in the first instance upon a legal charge, and also that it may appear the information has been commenced within the limited time. R. v. Fuller, 1 Salk. 369; *R. v. Cas Conviction.

The precise day, however, it seems, need not, as in indictments, be named, if the offence be alleged to have been committed between such a day and such a day, provided the first of the days be between the time limited by the statute. 2 Hurl. c. 25, s. 62; R. v. Chandler, 1 Saik. 378; 1 Ed. Raym. 581; Cork 62; 5 Mod. 445; R. v. Simpson, 10 Mod. 243.

It is more regular, however, to fix the charge to a certain day, where it can be done. Paley, 83.

Where an information appeared to be exhibited on the 29th May, 1803, and the offence was charged to have been committed "within three months to wit, on the 12th May now last past," it was held, that the words last past might refer to the day of the month and not to the month itself, so as to obviate the objection of the information being out of time, by supposing it to refer to May, 1804. R. v. Crisp, 7 East, 389.

Stating the offence to have been on the "20th day June," omitting the words "of," would not, it seems, be bad. R. v. Huggins, 3 C. & P. 602.

See further as to the mode of stating time, post, INDICTMENT, Vol. III. p. 391.

In all cases, notwithstanding the necessity to state a time, it is not essential that it should be stated truly. If there afterwards appear to be a variance in this respect between the information and the evidence, it will be immaterial, if it appear from the evidence that the prosecution was actually commenced in due time.

Place where offence committed.—The place, viz. the parish, &c. and the county, wherein the offence was committed should be stated in the information, in order that the offence may appear to have been committed in the place over which the magistrate's jurisdiction extends. Paley, 83. And though the conviction pursues the form given by the statute, which does not expressly require that the place where it was committed should be shown. R. v. Hazell, 13 East, 139; Kite and Lane's case, 1 B. & C. 101.

The mention of the county in the margin does not supply the want of an allegation of the fact being committed in the county; for the insertion of it in the margin is only to show in what county the conviction was made. R. v. Austin, 8 Mod. 309. But where a place has been once named, as "at R. in the county of H.," it is enough afterwards to say, "at B. aforesaid," without saying "in the county aforesaid," for it will not be presumed to lie in two counties. R. v. Burnaby, 2 Ed. Raym. 901.

Courts and magistrates are bound ex officio to take notice of the known divisions of the kingdom, as, whether such a place is within or without the hundred of manors; R. v. Vaux, Bosc. 158; but not so of the local situations and distances of different places in the counties from one another. Dryden, 4 B. & Ald. 243. And see further as to this 1 Chit. Pleas, 5th ed.

Notwithstanding a place must be stated, it is not in essential, unless perhaps in averments of local situation, necessary to prove the offence was committed at the place stated. See post, INDICTMENT, (e) Vol. III. p. 335.

(a) A conviction before the lord mayor of London, on stat. 16 & 17 Car. II. c. 2, for selling coals short of measure, was quashed, because it was not proved that the coals were sold in London, or the liberties thereof, without which the lord mayor had no jurisdiction. Q. v. Highmore, 2 Ed. Raym. 1220; Paley on Conv. 85.

So also in a conviction for illegally insuring lottery tickets against stat. 22 Geo. III. c. 47, the information laid the offence in Great Queen Street, in the parish of St. Giles, &c. The evidence was as follows: T. J. deposes, "that on the 10th of March last, he insured personally (not stating where) with the said Jeffries the defendant, No. 18, 435, and paid 2s. 9d. to receive one guinea drawn blank or prize on the 30th day of drawing." It was objected, that the evidence did not prove the offence as committed in the place laid in the information, which it ought to have done. For wherever the jurisdiction of the magistrates is local, the offence must be proved to have been committed within their jurisdiction. And of this opinion were the court. Therefore the conviction was quashed. R. v. Jeffries, 1 T. R. 241.

The strictness with which this point
The Information.

If indeed it be an information for an offence where the statute creating it gives a part of the penalty to the poor of the parish in which it is committed, a material variance between the parish laid and that proved would be fatal.

Statement of the Offence itself—All acts which subject men to new and other trials than those by which they ought to be tried by the common law, ought to be taken strictly. The information must, therefore, contain an exact description of the offence; which, in order to give the justice a jurisdiction, must appear to be within both the letter and spirit of the statute that creates it, and which must be exactly described, that the defendant may know what charge he is to answer. Bosc. 25.

The evidence subsequently stated in the conviction can only support the original charge, but can by no means extend or supply what is wanting in the information. Paley, 86; R. v. Baines, 2 Salk. 680; 2 Ld. Raym. 1268; R. v. Wheatman, Doug. 232; R. v. Denman, 1 Chin. Rep. 155; post.

Most of the observations relative to the general requisites of an indictment will be here applicable, and the reader is referred thereto, post, Indictment, Vol. III. p. 324 to 327.

The statement as to the offence should be made with sufficient certainty, and the offence so definitively described that the defendant may know what he is called upon to answer, and so that his conviction on or acquittal against the charge may insure his subsequent protection. Certainty.

The statement should be with as much certainty as the nature of the case will admit of. It ought to be certain to every intent. The information and conviction must have as much certainty in it as in an indictment. See R. v. Pain, 7 D. & R. 678; 3 D. & R. M. C. 517, S. C.

A direct and positive charge must be stated against the defendant; it does not suffice to state merely facts amounting to a presumption of guilt, however sufficient such facts may be as prima facie evidence against him. Thus where the charge in an information (under the 8 Ann. c. 18, s. 3, for selling bread under the assize) was that the bread wanting so much weight, &c. was bought in the shop of the defendant: it was held, that the charge ought to have been more direct, viz. of the sale of so much bread by the defendant, for though the fact of a servant selling in his master's shop is good evidence required is exemplified by the following case: R. v. Haccell, 13 East, 139; Paley, 85. This was a conviction on 41 Geo. III. (G. B.) c. 38, against a manufacturer for combining to refuse work. The act gives a general form for the conviction, in which it is merely required to state the offence, without any thing pointing to the date or place. The offence was in substance stated in the following manner, viz. "that the defendant on a certain day (he being then employed by G.S., &c. of Wallington, in the county before mentioned, in the trade of a calico printer, carried on by them at Wallington aforesaid, and whilst he was such workman, and so employed as aforesaid,) refused to work with one S.B., then also employed by G.S., &c. in the said manufacture carried on by them at Wallington aforesaid." This conviction was quashed, because it was not expressively averred where the refusal was given, so that it did not appear to be within the jurisdiction of the magistrate. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. in delivering the judgment observed, that the words then and there were not to be exploded altogether, and they had sometimes more meaning than was commonly imagined. And see R. v. Edwards, 1 East, 278.

Stat. 12 Car. II. c. 24, s. 45, giving summary jurisdiction in offences against the excise, to two or more justices of the peace residing near to the place where such offence shall be committed, must be understood to be confined to justices of the county wherein the offence was committed. Therefore where a defendant was convicted by two resident justices on stat. 19 Geo. III. c. 50, s. 2, for having in his custody and possession a private and concealed still for illicit distillation; and the evidence only showed that his house was in the county and that the still was found concealed in the garden of the said house, such garden not appearing to be in the same county, the conviction was held bad. R. v. Chandler, 14 East, 267. against the master, still it is but evidence, and what is evidence merely is not enough to be laid in the information. R. v. Bradley, 10 Mod. 155.

All the facts necessary to support the proceeding must be expressly alleged, and not left to be gathered by inference or intendment. Thus a conviction for having concealed brewing utensils, the deposit, which appeared to be taken on a day subsequent to the information, only made the witness state that the defendant now has two concealed vessels, &c., and the conviction was quashed because it should have appeared that the defendant had them at the time of the information, for though the words might be made to imply as much, yet Lord C. J. Holt said, "a conviction must be certain and not taken by collection." 1 Ld. Raym. 509.

A statement of the offence by way of recital will not do. 2 Str. 900; Sess Ca. 159; 2 Ld. Raym. 1363.

Or in an argumentative way. 1 Salk. 373.

If the knowledge of the party is mentioned by the statute as an ingredient of the offence, nothing short of a direct averment to that effect is sufficient unless indeed equivalent words are used. The words "unlawfully, fraudulently, and against the form of the statute," are not equivalent to "knowingly." R. v. Jukes, 8 T. R. 536; Paley, 88. In a late case, however, upon conviction against a carrier for having game in his possession contrary to the 5 Ann. c. 14, s. 2, it was considered the scienter need not be alleged, the word "knowingly" not being used in the statute. R. v. Marsh, 4 D. & R. 260; 2 D. & R. M. C. 182; 2 B. & Cres. 729, S.C.; post, Sess. Vol. II.

It was there said, that if the word "knowingly" had been in the statute, undoubtedly "knowledge" must have been averred in the information, as some evidence must have been given on the part of the informer, to show that the act complained of was committed with the defendant's privity. But in the case before the court no averment or evidence to that effect was necessary. It was quite enough for the informer to prove that the defendant, being a carrier, had, in the language of the act, "in his custody or possession," the things prohibited. After such proof, it was for the defendant to show such a degree of ignorance as would excuse him, but that was to come by way of defence.

The offence must in every respect be brought within the terms of the statute, by a statement of the circumstances which make up the statutory definition of the offence.

A conviction on 3 W. & M. c. 10, s. 2, for killing deer, was quashed for not describing the place where they were killed as being inclosed, according to the terms of that statute. R. v. Moore, 2 Ld. Raym. 791; R. v. Salk. 2 Chit. Rep. 519. And the like where the defendant was convicted under the 33 Hen. VIII. c. 6, merely for having a hand gun in his house, and the words of that statute are "use to keep in his house." R. v. Llewellyn, 1 Show. 48.

Convictions on the game laws for keeping and using a dog to destroy game or for using a hound, have been set aside, for neither of these denomina-tions is contained in the statutes. Reason v. Lisle, Com. 587; Hookey v. Wilkes, 2 Stru. 1126. But a dog called a greyhound is sufficient. R. v. Hartley, Cald. 175. And see other instances stated, post, Com. Vol. II.

So a conviction on stat. 22 & 23 C. II. c. 25, s. 7, against unlawfully killing and taking fish in any river, &c. without the license or consent of the lord or owner of the water, was quashed, because it did not describe the offence in the words of the statute, or say that the defendant stole the fish, or took and killed the fish of another person, or in another person's pond. R. v. Mollinson, 2 Burr. 682.

So in R. v. Trelawney, 1 T. R. 222, the conviction, (which was on stat.
The Information.

22 Geo. III. c. 47, s. 13, against insuring tickets in any state lottery to be authorised by act of parliament,) was quashed, because the information did not express that the ticket insured was a ticket in the state lottery, though the lottery was described as being authorised by stat. 25 Geo. III. c. 59.

So where the 45 Geo. III. c. 121, s. 7, made all British subjects liable to arrest on being found on board any ship liable to forfeiture under the smuggling acts, and a conviction under that act did not allege that the party was a British subject, the conviction was quashed, though it pursued the general form given by the 3 Geo. IV. c. 110. Exparte Hawkins, 2 B. & C. 31; 3 D. & R. 209, S. C.

Where the act of 9 & 10 Wil. III. c. 27, required a license to be taken out by every hawker, pedlar, &c. going from town to town to sell goods; and a conviction under that act only described the defendant as a hawker and pedlar and offering to sell goods, but said nothing about his going from town to town; the conviction was quashed. For though it was stated that the defendant was found trading as a hawker and pedlar, yet this (being a conclusion of law) was held too general a description to bring the defendant within the terms of the act; and it was also agreed, that the defect was not helped by the defendant's confession, which went only to the offence as charged in the information. R. v. Little, 1 Burr. 613; Paley, 90; post, Hawkers and Pedlars, Vol. II.

The statement of the charge in the information, however, need not be always expressed in the precise and technical words of the act, but it is sufficient if the words used in the one are synonymous with and equivalent to the words contained in the other.

As an information, under the 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 106, s. 4, (which prohibited "combinations to obtain an advance of wages," stating that defendant attended a meeting for carrying on a combination of journeymen "for the purpose of obtaining an advance of wages," was held to be correct. R. v. Ridgway, 5 B. & A. 527; and see 1 Chit. C. L. 283, and cases there cited.

It is, however, always safest to follow the words of the act, and we have already seen instances in which a departure from this may render the proceedings fatal.

Words and matters of form must be as strictly observed in informations and convictions as in indictments. See per cur. Exparte Paine, 5 B. & Cres. 251; 7 D. & R. 678, S. C.

It generally suffices to state the offence in the words of the statute, per Holt, C. J. R. v. Speed, 1 Id. Regm. 583; but sometimes a circumstance plainly implied though not expressly contained in the act, forms a necessary ingredient in the offence, and must be stated. Paley, 104, 95. Where the 24 Geo. III. c. 47, s. 1, prohibited vessels from hovering on the coasts of the kingdom with certain goods on board, and a conviction under this act merely stated that a vessel was found hovering, &c. but omitted to add, without any lawful excuse, or words to that effect; the conviction was held bad, though it pursued the general form given by the 3 Geo. IV. c. 110; for a vessel may be hovering for an innocent purpose, as for a pilot or by stress of weather, and the hovering contemplated by the act is hovering with power to proceed on the voyage and without any sufficient cause for not doing so. Exparte Hawkins, 2 B. & C. 31; 3 D. & R. 209, S. C.; and see 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 11.

In R. v. Jarvis, 1 Burr. 164; 1 East, 647, n. Mr. J. Denison said, "that it is not always sufficient to pursue the words of the statute; it may be necessary to go farther." It was so determined in R. v. Chapman, 5 Ye. 203, upon a conviction of a person for robbing an orchard; which the court held not sufficient, but it ought to have appeared of what, and how the orchard was robbed, that they might judge whether it were a robbery within the meaning of stat. 43 Eliz. c. 7.

And when a statute, in describing an offence, makes use of general terms which will include a variety of circumstances, it is not enough that the information should follow the very words of the statute, but it is necessary to state Conviction.

what particular fact prohibited has been committed, or what particular as enjoined has been omitted. Paley, 102; R. v. James, Cald. 458, there cit:
R. v. Jarvis, 1 Burr. 152; R. v. Perrott, 3 M. & S. 379; and see post. In-Negativing Exceptions in Statute]—It has been said, “that a conviction on a penal statute ought expressly to show, that the defendant is not with any of its provisos; for,” continues the author, “since no plea can be omitted to such a conviction, and the defendant can have no remedy apais-it, but from an exception to some defect appearing in the face of it, and if the proceedings are in a summary manner, it is but reasonable that such conviction should have the highest certainty, and satisfy the court that the defendant had no such matter in his favour as the statute itself allows him to plead.” 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 113. But this is to be understood with the following limitation, that where the enacting clause of a statute constitutes an act to be an offence under certain circumstances, and not under others, then as the act is an offence only sub modo, the particular exceptions must be expressly specified and negatived; but where a statute constitutes an act to be an offence generally, and in a subsequent clause makes a proviso or exception in favour of particular cases, or in the same clause, but not in the enacting part of it, by words of reference or otherwise, makes such proviso or exception, there the proviso is a matter of defence or excuse, which need not be noticed in the information. See 1 Stra. 555; 2 Id. 1101; 1 T. R. 144, 162; 2 M. & S. 539.

Thus the case of R. v. Clarke, 1 Coup. 35, was a conviction on ex-23 Hen. VIII. c. 9, s. 16, against playing at bowls; and the court quashed the conviction because it was not alleged in the information, that the playing at bowls was out of the defendant’s own orchard, and it is only unlawful a modo.

So in the case of informations on stat. 5 Ann. c. 14, s. 4, for killing a goose in which it is now fully settled that it is necessary to state and negative the qualifications enumerated in stat. 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25. See 1 Stra 66; R. v. Hill, 2 Id. Rem. 1415; R. v. James, 1 Burr. 148; post, Galm, Vol. II. And this is so necessary, that if the qualifications mentioned in stat. 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, are not set out and negatived in these informations, their being negatived by the evidence will not supply the defect.
R. v. Wheatman, Doul. 346, post, Galm, Vol. II.

A summary conviction for any offence created by statute must negat every exception contained in the clause creating the offence; and a declarinmitting so to do is not aided by a proviso in the statute, that “no conviction for any offence in the act shall be set aside for want of form, or through the mistake of any fact, circumstance, or other matter, provided the material fact alleged were proved;” for this in effect requires all material facts to be alerted; and it is a material fact that the defendant did not come within the

But if a subsequent statute make any exception to a former one, it is incumbent on the defendant to show by way of defence that he comes within such exception; and when the prosecutor is not obliged to negat the ex-cceptions in a statute, and he negatives some of them only, that part of the information will be rejected as surplusage. R. v. Hall, 1 T. R. 320.

So where negatives are descriptive of the offence, they must be set for:
for what comes by way of proviso in a statute must be insisted on by way of defence by the party accused; but where exceptions are in the enacting part of a law, it must appear in the charge that the defendant does not fall within any of them. R. v. Jarvis, 1 East, 646, 647, n.

Matters which need not be stated]—Presumptions of law need not in general be stated; nor need facts ex officio noticed, by all courts and justices.

Matters of defence, or facts more peculiarly in the defendant’s own knowledge, need not in general be stated. Id. 326.
The Information.

Conclusions of law, resulting from the facts, need not be stated, and are best omitted. See post, Indictment, Vol. III. p. 323. Mere matters of evidence need not be stated. Id. 326.

Technical Words, &c.]—There is no rule that other words shall be employed in the conviction than such as are in ordinary use. Many of the technical phrases which may be requisite in indictments are not so in convictions, although it has been said that more particularity is required in convictions than in indictments. See R. v. Chandler, 1 Ld. Raym. 581; R. v. Green, 1 Calk. 391. The fact need not be charged “against the peace of the King.” 1 Ld. Raym. 581. Neither is the omission of the word “unlawfully,” (R. v. Chipp, 11 Str. 711,) or “knowingly,” (R. v. Marsh, 4 D. & R. 260; 2 B. & C. 717; 3 D. & R. M. C. 182, S. C.;) any objection, unless used in the act as part of the description of the offence. R. v. Speed, 1 Ld. Raym. 583.

General Epithets]—If the charge falls short of the necessary legal description of the offence, the omission is not cured by any allegations of its being done unlawfully or fraudulently, or the like, or by stating that it was against the form of the statute; R. v. Jukes, 8 T. R. 556; R. v. Jarvis, 1 Burr. 148; for the last allegation is no more than a legal inference, which must be supported by the previous allegation. Dyer, 363; 1 Str. 493; and see 4 D. & R. 83. So the word “duly” is of no avail. See some cases collected, 1 Chit. Pl. 4th edit. 216, 233.

Statement of Statute itself]—There is no necessity to state any public statute, the justices being bound ex officio to notice it. But a private statute must be set out in its parts relating to the offence. See post, Indictment, Vol. III. p. 345. If the statute be described, a substantial variance in the statement of it would be fatal. See 2 Hawk. c. 26, s. 10, 104.

Written Instruments]—The mode of stating written instruments will be found pointed out, post, Indictment, Vol. III. p. 347.

Chattels, Monies, &c.]—Personal chattels should be described specifically by the names usually appropriated to them. As to the mode of such description, see post, Indictment, Vol. III. p. 348. A conviction for hawking goods without a license must specify the goods that were sold. R. v. Schooy, 2 Chit. Rep. 522; and see Chance v. Adams, 1 Ld. Raym. 77; R. v. Gibbs, 1 Str. 497; R. v. Gilbert, 1 East, 583. In R. v. Rabbits, 6 D. & R. 341; 3 D. & R. M. C. 269, it was held, that an order and adjudication on the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 4, for fraudulently and clandestinely removing goods to avoid a distress need not specify the goods.

Quantity, Value, &c.]—The information should specify a particular quantity or value where any things turn upon it. The value or quantity of the chattels, &c. is more especially necessary to be shown in cases where it is the measure of the penalty or damages to be given by the justice. Thus a conviction upon stat. 43 Eliz. c. 7, s. 1, against cutting of trees, &c. was questioned for not mentioning the number of trees cut, being the measure of the damages to be given in that case. Q. v. Burnaby, 2 Ld. Raym. 900; 1 Selk. 181.

In an information on the 5 Geo. III. c. 14, for taking and destroying fish, the information should state the number or quantity of fish taken, killed, or destroyed. R. v. Marshall, 2 Keb. 594.
But it is sufficient if the conviction be for swearing 150 oaths in these words, viz. (specifying the words once) without repeating each 150 times. R. v. Roberts, 1 Str. 608. Thus in the case of swearing, before the legislature, by stat. 19 Geo. II. c. 21, had directed a summary form of words for the conviction, it was required not only to set forth that the person had cursed or sworn in general, but the particular oaths and curses were to be set forth, that the court might judge thereupon, whether they were indeed oaths and curses or not. R. v. Sparling, 1 Stra. 497; R. v. Poplewell, 1 Stra. 686; R. v. Charycey, 2 Id. Raym. 1368.
Conviction.

A conviction for buying a certain quantity of wheat, to wit, 15 bushels of wheat, (contrary to 28 & 23 Car. II. c. 12,) has been held sufficiently certain. R. v. Arnold, 5 T. R. 353.

Although it may be essential to specify the number, quantity, and value of chattels, &c. it does not appear absolutely requisite to prove the precise number and quantity stated.

See further, post, indictment, Vol. III. p. 348, 349.

Conclusion against Statute]—In analogy to indictments for offences created by statute, it is, it should seem, absolutely requisite that the information and conviction should state that the offence was against the form of the statute, which is usually done after stating the offence by the following words: "against the form of the statute in such case made and provided." See the cases and law fully collected, post, indictment, Vol. III. p. 351.

Where one statute is relative to another, as where one creates the deed and the other the penalty, the information and conviction should consist against the form of the statutes. See id.

As to the general rules of construing the information, see post, 835.

Defects in. If the information be incorrect in any of the above particulars, the magistrate may dismiss the complaint.

The misstatement or omission of any material averment in the information is not cured by any statement in the evidence specified in the conviction, if the defendant can be convicted only of the charge in the information; and that must be sufficient to support the conviction, the evidence being held to prove only, and not supply the defects in the information. R. v. Wheatman. Doug. 232. In R. v. Denman, 1 Chit. Rep. 155, Holroyd, J. said, "it is a rule with respect to summary proceedings before justices in penal cases, that after a conviction nothing can be intended so as to get rid of any defect in point of form. Everything necessary to support the conviction must appear on the face of the proceedings, and must be established by regular proof, or by the admission of the party of that which is proved."

See further as to what defects in information and conviction are cured, post, 848.

The 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 20, post, Vol. III. p. 352, does not, it seems, apply to informations before justices out of sessions. See Davies v. Bain, 8 B. & C. 355; 3 B. & C. 586, S.C.

A conviction by conviction being an entire act, cannot be seved, and be bad in part, and good as to the rest, even though their several parts may be in their nature distinct. R. v. Patchet, 5 East's Rep. 344; 1 Smith's Rep. 547; R. v. Catherall, 2 Stra. 900. Thus a conviction for not accounting for tolls, and also for not paying over the receipts, being defective as to the latter offence for not specifying the sums, though correct as to the former, was discharged altogether. R. v. Catherall, 2 Stra. 900. This position does not militate against that immediately preceding, because in the case of superfluous insertions they are taken as if they had not been part of the conviction, and, therefore, errors in them do not affect the other parts which are correct, nor the whole taken together. By consent, however, it seems a conviction may be set aside as to part of the judgment. Coop. 725.

See as to commitments in execution, ante, 772; and as to commitments for safe custody, ante, 762.

Surplusage]—Any defect in the manner of stating that which is in itself surplusage, and might be omitted altogether, does not vitiate the rest which is sound. The principle difficulties arise from the impracticability of fixing absolutely and incontrovertibly any definite rule or criterion by which to determine at once what shall be considered what of surplusage. This is a difficulty not to be entirely removed, because every case must stand on its own peculiar circumstances; but besides, the determinations on convictions.
noticed hereafter and throughout this work, some tolerably precise notion on the subject may be deduced from the law of indictments, post, indictment, Vol. III. p. 326, 327. Thus if an indictment conclude "contrary to the form of the statute," when in fact there is no statute applicable to the case, and, therefore, no uncertainty can ensue, but it is an offence at common law; this conclusion may be rejected as surplusage, and the proceedings supported. Coop. 835; 5 T. R. 197; 2 Leach, 585. So if the word "there" be inserted when locality makes no part of the charge and need not be averred, it may be rejected as immaterial and surplusage, because there probably can be no preceding matter to which it can be referable. 2 Sent. Ca. 7. And generally all words that are entirely useless or without particular sense or meaning, especially if they contravene the intent or purpose of the indictment, ought to be struck out as surplusage. 1 Id. Raym. 502; 2 Leach, 536, 535. But though perhaps not absolutely necessary to be inserted at all, if any averments be introduced so connected with the main charge that they cannot be separated, and still leave the necessary part a charge sufficiently made by itself, all must be proved, and no part can be struck out as surplusage; but if they can be separated, and after such separation the material part remain sensibly true and grammatically correct, and containing a sufficient charge in law, that which has been unnecessarily introduced may be struck out as surplusage. 2 Leach, 594; 2 Campb. 135, 584; see Dick. Sent. 3d ed. 594.

II. The Summons.

When the information is laid, if the justice or justices think it sufficient, and see cause for calling upon the party complained of for an answer to it, it is their duty to issue a summons. If they refuse to issue it, they may be compelled to do so by mandamus. R. v. Benn, 6 T. R. 195.

It is absolutely requisite in all cases, unless where the legislature has dispensed therewith, that the defendant should be summoned, in order that he may have an opportunity of being heard and making his defence. This is but natural justice, and if a magistrate should proceed against a person without summoning or hearing him, he would be guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable either by information or indictment. R. v. Allington, 2 Str. 678; R. v. Venables, 2 Id. Raym. 1406; R. v. Constable, 7 D. & R. 663; 3 D. & R. M. C. 2 Str. 630; 6 T. R. 198; R. v. Colamin, 8 D. & R. 344; Paley, 21.

But if the defendant appear and be present during the whole hearing of the case against him, and do not ask for further time for the hearing of it, he may be convicted without a summons. See R. v. Stone, 1 East, 649; R. v. Johnson, 1 Str. 261; 1 Salk. 383; 3 Burr. 1785.

In the case of orders a summons is in general requisite, though it need not in general be stated on the face of the order to have been issued. Paley, 125; post, Order, Vol. III.

In all proceedings for penalties, though a summons be dispensed with by statute, if there be no ground for supposing that the party will abscond, it is but reasonable the first process should be by summons to attend and show cause.

Where a particular form of summons is required by the statute, the same form of must be adopted. R. v. Croke, Coop. 30.

The summons may be directed either to the offender, requiring him to appear, or to some third person, requiring him to summon the offender.

It should state the substance of the charge laid against the defendant.

It should name a day and time for the defendant's appearance. Natural justice requires that the defendant should have a reasonable time allowed him for making his defence. A conviction upon default of appearance, where the summons was to appear immediately upon the receipt of it, was held bad. R. v. Mallinson, 2 Burr. 679; and in R. v. Johnson, 1 Str. 261, post, 823, an objection made to the summons, that it was to appear on the same day, was only removed by the fact of the defendant having actually appeared, and so waived any irregularity in the notice.

In the summons it is usual, and upon many accounts convenient, to fix not only a day, but a particular time of the day for the appearance of the party; but if he appear at the time, and the justices shall not attend, he is not to go away, but must wait during the remaining part of the day, for many things may happen to hinder the justice's immediate attendance.
Conviction.

The summons must not require the defendant to appear on an impossible day. In Reg. v. Dyer, 1 Salk. 181, it was stated that the defendant was summoned to appear, and did appear on Tuesday, the 17th of April, 1802. The 17th April fell on a Friday, not Tuesday; and it being objected that the time of the summons being impossible, it was the same as if there had been no summons; the court quashed the conviction, saying, "there could be no such day, and, therefore, he could not appear thereupon; and when the day is not set forth, his appearance on another cannot be intended." See R. v. Picton, 2 East, 196, post, 833.

The summons should name a certain place for the defendant's appearance. R. v. Simpson, 1 Stra. 46.

In R. v. Johnson, 1 Stra. 261, the defendant was convicted for keeping a gun to kill game, not being qualified. It was objected that there was no reasonable summons; for it was made to appear the same day, which might be impossible upon account of the distance, or the summons being served; and his witnesses might not be got together on so short a warning; then it was to appear at the parish aforesaid, whereas there were two parishes mentioned before; so that the man might have gone to one, whilst they were convicting him at the other. It was answered that the defendant appeared at the time, and made defence; so that curers all defects in the summons, and by the court, the answer is right.

The summons must not bear date on a day earlier to that on which information was laid; if it does, the conviction will be bad. R. v. Krat, 1 Ld. Raym. 1546.

It should be signed by the justice by whom it is issued. R. v. Stevens, 2 East, 365.

We have already noticed the 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, s. 2, which allows one justice to receive the information and issue a summons where two or more justices are empowered to hear and determine, ante, 817.

In general it is necessary that the service of the summons should be on the person of the defendant, unless where personal service is dispensed with, which is sometimes the case by statute; or by defendant's appearance. R. v. Hall, 6 D. & R. 84; 3 D. & R. M. C. 19; R. v. Columba, 8 D. & R. 34; 10 Mod. 344; Pacey, 23.

Lord C. J. Parker was of opinion, 10 Mod. 345, (and the provisions specially introduced into many acts of parliament, to make a service at the dwellinghouse sufficient, seem to justify the inference,) that the law in other cases is understood to require a service upon the person.

Several statutes expressly direct that a service of the summons at the defendant's dwellinghouse shall suffice. See Mirriss, Vol. II.; Stagg, Carke, Vol. V. p. 551. In these and the like cases, leaving a copy at the house is sufficient; R. v. Chandler, 14 East, 268; and the delivery may be to a person on the premises apparently residing there as a servant. Id. and see R. v. Clement, 4 B. & A. 218.

If the summons be defective in any of these particulars, or be not duly served, the party commits no default by not appearing, and the magistrate cannot proceed in the defendant's absence upon such a defective summons; and if he did so proceed, knowing of the defect, he would make himself liable to an information or indictment. R. v. Simpson, 1 Stra. 44; R. v. Venus, 2 Ld. Raym. 1407; R. v. Allington, 1 Stra. 678; Pacey, 21.

But we have already seen, if the defendant appears and pleads, and does not question the validity of the summons, he cannot afterwards take any advantage of the defective form or service thereof, ante, 827.

As to the mode of stating the summons in the conviction, see post, 833.

III. Proceedings at the Hearing.

Before whom to take place]—The jurisdiction of justices of the peace in general, as it regards the place where the offence was committed, the time of the offence, and its nature, will be noticed hereafter under title Justices, post, Vol. III. p. 464 to 473; and see the various titles of offence throughout the work.
III.] Proceedings at the Hearing.

Whether the conviction should take place before one or more justices, depends entirely on the statute giving cognizance of the offence. If the statute allow one justice to convict, the conviction may be by two or more; but where the statute requires the conviction to be by two justices, a conviction by one would be coram non judice, and void, and the justice making the conviction, and the constable executing it, would be liable to an action of trespass, if the party's goods were distrainted upon, or himself committed. See post, Justices, Vol. III. p. 466.

Appearance or Default]—The defendant either appears or makes default. Upon the accused party's appearing before the justice, either in obedience to the summons, or upon being apprehended and brought there under a warrant, or where, after personal service of the summons, the party does not attend at the time and place appointed by it, and oath is duly made of the service, the justice then proceeds to the hearing of the case.

The information (if one have been drawn up in form) is first read to the defendant; or if no information have been drawn up, then the charge is read to him from the summons or warrant: and he is asked what he has to say to the charge thus made against him. Such information must be read or stated to defendant, who should be apprized of the charge against him, and put to plead thereto; (per Groshe, J., 2 T. R. 23;) after this the defendant either confesses the charge or denies it, and makes defence immediately, or prays time.

By his appearance he cures any defect or irregularity in the summons or even the want of a summons altogether; (R. v. Johnson, 1 Stra. 261; R. v. Barrett, 1 Salk. 383; 2 Salk. 428; 3 Burr. 1785; 1 East, 649;) except in a case where a special form of summons is required by the act which is not complied with. R. v. Croke, Coup. 30.

The defendant has a right to have the presence and assistance of counsel or attorney, or such legal advice or assistance as he can procure, in the conduct of his defence, on the final hearing of the information, for on such hearing the magistrate is sitting judicially, and with power to decide upon law, fact, and punishment, and not as a mere ministerial officer in taking examinations, when the defendant has no such right. This appears fully settled by the late case of Dauney v. Cooper, 10 B. & Cres. 257, where it was held, that the proceedings against a party in a summary manner, under the 5 Ann. c. 14, for keeping and using a gun to destroy game, is of a judicial nature, at which all persons have a priori facie right to be present; and, therefore, where a magistrate had, without any specific reason, caused a party, who claimed a right to be present, to be removed from a justice-room, where such a proceeding was going on, it was held, that he was liable to an action of trespass. (a)

(a) Dauney, Gent. one, &c. v. Cooper, Clerk, and others, 10 B. & Cres. 237.

The declaration alleged that the defendants, on, &c. at, &c. made an assault on plaintiff, and beat him and forced and compelled him to go from and out of a certain room, there called the justice-room, in which the defendants, as justices of our Lord the King, assigned to keep the peace, &c., were then and there holding a certain court, to wit, a court of petty sessions for the administration of justice, whereby the plaintiff was hindered and prevented from exercising his business as an attorney in the said room.

2d count, for a common assault and battery. 3d, for an assault only. Pleas not guilty. At the trial before Best, C. J. at the Lincolnshire Lent Assizes, 1829, it appeared that on the 14th day of Feb. 1828, one Preston was summoned to appear before the defendants, on the 18th of the same month, to an information charging that he, on the 3d of January preceding, did unlawfully keep and use a gun to kill game. Preston requested the plaintiff to attend for him as his attorney, and did not go in person. The plaintiff attended accordingly in the justice-room, when the defendant Cooper, being informed that he attended on behalf of Preston, said, that the magistrates Conviction.

If the defendant confesses charge, the magistrate then, after taking a formal minute of such confession, passes judgment, and imposes the penalty or punishment proceeding in question was of a judicial nature, it could only be in a court, viz. that all persons, whether attorneys or not, had a personal right to be present.

The judgment of the court was delivered by Bayley, J. In this case, the court, during the argument, intimated an opinion upon one particular point; and after thinking further upon the subject, and having had a conference with Lord Teazerden also, we adhere to the opinion we then formed. In the opinion of the plaintiff, against three justices is having turned him out of a room: and one of the questions which the parties were desirous of having ascertained was, whether upon a summary conviction upon the game laws the defendant had a right as a matter of law to be present. In the case, he himself was not present, but he insisted upon a right to appear by his attorney. We do not think it at all necessary to give any opinion upon that point, whether it be of matter of right, whether it may be some matter of indulgence or not, or whether the magistrates have or have not a right to exercise a discretion upon that subject, or of questions upon which we say nothing. When any such question shall arise we will decide it; but the ground upon which our present opinion is founded is, that the magistrate was proceeding upon a summary conviction, and, therefore exercising a judicial authority. He was, as it were, a court of justice for that purpose; and we are all of opinion, that it is one of the essential qualities of a court of justice that its proceedings should be public, and that all persons who may be desirous of hearing what is going on, if there be room in the place for that purpose,—provided they do not interrupt the proceedings, and provided there is no specific reason why they should be removed,—have a right to be present for the purpose of hearing what is going on. And in this instance, one of the three defendants, without any authority, without any ground of offence given by the party who was the plaintiff in this case, took upon himself to turn him out. It appeared in evidence that he was there as the friend of the defendant, he might be there as one of the public: but as the friend of the defendant, he might be desirous of knowing what evidence there was to support the case, and who were the witnesses; and it might be of great importance to the defendant, with a view to attempt pre-Proceedings at the Hearing.

It has been determined, that though the act only empowers the justice to convict upon the oath of one or more witnesses, this implies a power to convict upon the confession of the party alone. R. v. Gage, 1 Str. 546. As the confession supplies the want of evidence, so it cures any objection to the manner of taking the depositions; such, for instance, as that they were not made in the presence of the defendant. R. v. Hall, 1 T. R. 320; Manna v. Duers, 3 B. & A. 103, post, p. 839.

If the defendant denies the charge, or neglects to appear, after being duly summoned, in the latter case, after due proof of the summons, the next step is to substantiate the information by testimony. For this purpose the prosecutor or informer must produce his witnesses (a) to prove the facts alleged, and after that, if the defendant appear, he may produce witnesses for the defence.

The examination of such witnesses must be upon oath, and no legal conviction can be founded upon evidence not so taken. There is a difference in the manner in which the acts are worded in regard to the mode of examination to be pursued. For while some acts expressly mention the testimony of witnesses on oath, others in general terms authorise the magistrate to hear and determine, or to convict or give judgment on the examination of witnesses, without noticing the oath. But such general expressions seem, in legal construction, necessarily to refer to the only kind of testimony known to the law, viz. that upon oath: "For," says Dalton, "in all cases wheresoever any man is authorised to examine witnesses, such examination shall be taken and construed to be as the law wills, i.e. upon oath." Dalt. c. 6, a. 6. This was the opinion of Lord C. J. Broke and Mr. Lambert, and the latter, (adds the latter,) because in these cases of conviction by justices of the peace the trial depended wholly upon these examinations. Id. c. 115, 164; Plow. 12 a.; Lamb. 517; and see Exparte Aldridge, 4 D. & R. 83; 2 D. & R. M. C. 120. S.C.

The oath must be administered before the witnesses are examined, and administering it afterwards is irregular; for at the time the witness is giving evidence he ought to be under the sanction and control of an oath. R. v. Kiddy, 4 D. & R. 734; 2 D. & R. M. C. 364, S.C.; post, Examination, Vol. II. p. 95.

The power of justices to administer an oath by virtue of that jurisdiction, which is conveyed in the authority to hear, examine, and convict, without any express mention of a power to administer an oath, does not seem, from any thing now extant, to have been ever questioned so as to be brought to a judicial decision. See Paley, 34, 35; 15 Geo. III. c. 39; post, title Justice, Vol. III. p. 485; Gibbs, Vol. III.

The competency of witnesses will be treated of hereafter under the title of Competency of witnesses.

Proceedings at Hearing.

Denial of the charge or neglect to appear.

Proof of charge.

Oath and examination of witnesses.
Constitution.

Mode of examination.

With respect to the mode of examination, it is observed by Paley, in his Treatise on Convictions, p. 39, that "although no mode be pointed out by the statutes giving jurisdiction over the offence, yet as justice requires that the accused should be confronted with the witnesses against him, and have an opportunity of cross-examination, it is requisite, in the summary mode of trial now under consideration, that the witness and deposition be taken in the presence of the defendant, where he appears; for although the legislature by a summary mode of inquiry intended to substitute a more expeditious process for the common law method of trial, it could not design to dispense with the rules of justice as far as they are compatible with the method adopted. Indeed it may be useful upon this occasion to notice the general maxim which has been laid down as a guide to the conduct of magistrates in regulating all their summary proceedings, viz. that "acts of parliament, in what they are silent, are best expounded according to the use and reason of the common law." Verb. Parker, C. 1. R. v. Simpson, 1 Stra. 45. Unless, therefore, the defendant forfeits the advantage by his wilful absence, he ought to be called upon to plead before any evidence is given; (1 T. R. 320;) and the witnesses must be sworn and examined in his presence; (R. v. Vipont, 2 Burr. 1163;) or if the evidence has been taken down in his absence and is read over to him afterwards, the witness must, at the same time, (unless the defendant upon hearing the evidence should confess the fact (R. v. Hall, 1 T. R. 320;) be re-sworn in his presence, and not merely called upon to assert the truth of his former testimony; (R. v. Crouther, 1 T. R. 125;) for the intent of the rule is that the witness should be subjected to the examination of the defendant upon his oath. 2 Burr. 1163; 0. R. v. Kidd, 4 D. & R. 734;"

The evidence must fully establish the offence with which the defendant is charged; as it regards the time when it was committed, the place where it was committed, and every fact and circumstance necessarily constituting the offence; for if any one of these be not proved, or cannot fairly be presumed from other facts or circumstances which have been proved, the defendant should not be convicted. See further, post, p. 839 to 843. Where the facts constituting an offence are all of a positive nature; there can be no doubt that they must be established in proof, by the prosecutor, before any judgment of conviction can be pronounced; but with regard to such offences as are made penal only by the want of certain qualifications in the offender, or by the absence of several exculpatory circumstances, a difficulty will sometimes occur in determining the degree of negative proof which ought to be required by the magistrate. Paley, 40; R. v. Turner, 5 M. & S. 206. The defendant's own representations or admissions afford a legitimate and strong ground for the conclusion; and it has been decided that, before whom an information was exhibited on the game laws, were justified in founding the want of the defendant's qualification upon the fact of his having sworn before them, acting in another capacity, as commissioners of the income tax, to an estate under 1000l. a year. R. v. Clark, 8 T. R. 120; Paley, 43.

After hearing all the evidence in support of the charge, the defendant should be called upon for his defence; and the magistrate is bound to hear the evidence tendered by him.

Besides protesting against and commenting on the validity or effect of the evidence tendered against him, the accused may defend himself by proving that he is within some proviso or exception which excuses or qualifies the fact charged, or that the act complained of was done under an asserted authority, or pursuant to a claim of right or property; for where the title is Proceedings at the Hearing.

To property comes in question, the exercise of a summary jurisdiction by justices of the peace is ousted. R. v. Burnaby, 1 Salk. 181; 3 Salk. 217; 2 Ld. Raym. 900. This principle is not founded upon any legislative provision, but is a qualification which the law itself raises in the execution of penal statutes, and is always implied in their construction. See Paley, 48, 49. From the cases cited on the point, and collected in Paley, 48, 49, it will be seen, that without entering into the substantial merits of the title set up, it is sufficient to stop the summary interference of a magistrate by conviction, that even a colour of title appears to be in question, and that the act was really done under an assertion of that supposed title, however weak the claim may appear to be. Even as it has been held, that the act of killing fish in a private fishery after it is given to the owner that it was done to try the right to the place in question, did not subject the party to penalties under 5 Geo. III. c. 14, s. 4, although the same title had before been tried and determined by a verdict against the party now claiming it, the act of parliament having expressly excepted persons who have a just right or claim. Kinnersley v. Orpe, Doug. 500; see Hunt v. Andrews, 3 B. & A. 341. The rule, however, ought not to be so extended as to enable an offender to arrest the summary jurisdiction of the justice by a mere fictitious pretence of title. An assertion of right, therefore, is not to be regarded, where it evidently appears that no colour or pretence for it exists; as where the party's own showing or other manifest circumstances prove the claim to be wholly groundless. Calcraft v. Gibbs, 5 T. R. 19; Grant v. Hulton, 1 B. & A. 134. It is said, per Holt, C. J., 2 Ld. Raym. 901, that upon a suggestion of title, the Court of King's Bench, at any time while the conviction remains below, and has not been removed by certiorari, will grant a prohibition after conviction to stay the justice from proceeding upon it. See further, post, Exam., Vol. II.

The justice should, for his own protection, take down with great care the examination, or the material part of the examination of the witnesses, formally in writing, in the exact natural language and peculiar expressions used by the witnesses. Mere memoranda, or such minutes as may satisfy the justice at the moment, are not sufficient; for the magistrate is bound, as we shall see hereafter, (see post, 840,) to set out the evidence on the record of the conviction, as nearly as possible in the words used by the witnesses, and if he neglects so to do a mandamus lies to compel him. See post, Re Riz, 4 D. & R. 352; 2 D. & R. M. C. 249; R. v. Marsh, id. 260; and see R. v. Warnford, 5 D. & R. 489. Should therefore the justice have omitted to take regular and formal minutes of the evidence, he will have considerable, if not insurmountable difficulty in obeying such a mandamus; and see further as to the mode of taking down examinations, post, Examination, Vol. II.

The 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 2, 3, provides that the magistrates in cases of felony and misdemeanor shall put the examination, or the material part of it, into writing. Post, Examination, Vol. II.

If the defendant pleads not guilty, and requires time for his defence, and to produce his evidence, it is reasonable, and the law seems to require that the party should be allowed a proper interval for that purpose. See R. v. Stone, 1 East, 469; Paley, 30, 31; and the hearing may, either upon the application of the defendant, or for any other cause, be adjourned to a subsequent day; taking care not to exceed the time, (if any,) limited by the act for making the conviction. R. v. Foley, 3 East, 487; R. v. Bellamy, 1 B. & Cre. 500; post, Game, Vol. II. But if the limitation refers only to the time within which the offence must be prosecuted, (as in 29 Car. II. c. 7, and many other acts,) and not (as in the game acts, 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, 5 Ann. c. 14, post, Game, Vol. II.) to the time of making the conviction, then, provided the information has been laid in due time, the hearing and subsequent proceeding to judgment will be valid, though postponed to a term beyond the period mentioned in the act. R. v. Berratt, 1 Salk. 303; Paley, 32.

When the case and evidence have been heard and concluded on both sides, The Judgment.

Vol. I. 3 H Condictio.

it remains for the magistrate to convict or acquit the party, according to his judgment upon the circumstances. The degree of credit due to the evidence on either side is entirely for his consideration. In summary proceedings before a justice of peace, he is substituted for a jury, as far as relates to the conviction, that is, to the finding of the party guilty or not guilty. He should judge therefore of the guilt or innocence of the defendant from the evidence, in the same manner as if he were upon a jury: if the evidence is such as to leave no reasonable doubt upon his mind of the guilt of the defendant, he should convict him; if otherwise, he should acquit him. R. v. Reason, 6 T. R. 375; R. v. Smith, 3 T. R. 590.

If no reasonable doubt exist in the mind of the magistrate, the person charged is entitled to the benefit of that doubt. Such cases, it is to be recollected, differ very materially indeed from those where mere civil rights are concerned, and where the mere preponderance of evidence may be sufficient to decide the question. 2 Stark. Eq. 414.

It is sufficient to authorise a conviction, that there is such evidence before the magistrate as might in an action, or on an indictment, be left to a jury: and the Court of King's Bench, when the conviction is brought before it, will not examine further, to see whether the conclusion drawn by the magistrate be or be not the inevitable conclusion from the evidence. R. v. Davis, 6 T. R. 178. And if the magistrates think it fit to dismiss the case, although there appears prima facie ground for a conviction, their acquiescence cannot be questioned; since no other court can judge of the credit due to witnesses which it did not hear examined. R. v. Reason, 6 T. R. 376; R. v. Ridgeway, 1 D. & R. 132; 1 D. & R. M. C. 38; 5 B. & A. 37; Foley, 53; post, 843.

In some cases the statute is peremptory as to the penalty or punishment, giving no discretion to the justice to lessen or vary it; and in such cases the justice of course can only pursue the directions of the statute. In other cases the penalty or punishment is left in some measure in the discretion of the justice, as to the amount and nature of the penalty or punishment: in such cases he should guide his discretion according to the circumstances of the case and the condition in life of the defendant, and the circumstances of aggravation or extenuation, under which the offence is proved to have been committed. See post, 843, 844.

The magistrate is not obliged to fix the penalty or punishment at the instant of conviction, but may take time, either for the purpose of informing himself of the legal penalty, or of considering the amount proper to be imposed. Therefore, though the forfeiture must necessarily appear as a part of the judgment in the conviction when formally drawn up, post, 837, (which will otherwise be irregular,) yet if it be ascertained and imposed at any time before the conviction is so drawn up, and appears in the record returned to the Court of King's Bench on a writ of certiorari, that court will not set any objection on the ground that it was not in fact imposed by the magistrate at the time when he convicted the offender; La. Raym. 1614; 1 Saik. 33 for the court will not take notice of any defect which does not appear on the face of the conviction itself. R. v. Luton, 5 T. R. 338; R. v. Cudworth, 3 D. & R. 35; 1 D. & R. M. C. 485; Foley, 53; post, 848, 849.

The conviction need not be drawn up at the time of the trial, and the conviction may be complete in operation of law before the formal instrument setting it out is drawn up. It may be drawn up at any time before a return to a certiorari or the sessions, though after a commitment, Massey v. Johnson, 12 East, 32, or after the penalty has been levied by distress. R. v. Barker, 1 East, 182; Still v. Wells, 7 East, 533; post, 848.

Where a magistrate in an action against him justifies under a conviction, it must be drawn up and produced at the trial. See Bridge v. Corry, 1 M. & R. M. C. 1.

As to giving a copy and returning the conviction, see post, 848.
of Convictions in general.

Convictions in general.

Their General Requisites and Construction—and Convictions in general.

(General Requisites and Construction of.)—The conviction in all cases be upon parchment, seal and stamp of the justice; Dam. c. 115; R. v.
see Bacon v. Carew, 3 D. & R. 558; 2 D. & R. 619, S. C.; showing the time when it was made, and figures at length. 2 H. H. 170; Paley, Conv.

Proceedings in the present tense; it may state should be in the present tense, for that is 824 to 826, and will be found further treated of the parties. Hall v. Clarke, 1 Mod. 31.

Convictions are, that it should be precise and ascertaining magistrate has power to convict, that the above to the conviction have been duly taken, and necesarily, a term not readily explained or understood, the for the 111. p. 324.

whee have as much certainty in it as an indict-R. 679; 5 B. & Cres. 251, S. C., per thing and indivisible, see ante, 826.

of convictions, it was formerly more ple against this summary mode of pro-formation upon the boasted right of meric, however, has taught such vested in justices of the peace Convictions not exclusive and given consistently.
there be a reason of covering defects.

convicted with strictness, it be taken to be true.
ent certainty on that justice has been strict was created, that the similar to those adopted have been adopted, it will be clear, nice exceptions ought Sed. 141, Lord Ellenborough said Convictions, and will intend to Devon, 1 Chit. Rep.

Therefore, it is a general rule, that the evidence in adant may not retract the charge, and to fect his defence be not improper to the second action. 25, 8. 57. 6 ed.
Conviction. [IV.(1.)]

it was said, that "no intendment can be made in favour of a conviction so as to get rid of an objection in point of form."

The courts will never presume injustice or impartiality in magistrates. Ska. 123, but give them credit to the truth of the facts stated, subject to the peril attending the wilful abuse of that credit by a false statement. 10 Mol. 382; Basten v. Carew, 5 D. & R. 558; 3 B. & C. 649.

By the third section of 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, it is enacted, "that in all cases where it appears by the conviction that the defendant has appeared and pleaded, and that the merits have been tried, and that the defendant has not appealed against the conviction, where an appeal is allowed, or, if appealed against, the conviction has been affirmed, such conviction shall not afterwards be set aside or vacated, in consequence of any defect of form whatever; but the construction shall be a fair and liberal construction, as will be agreeable to the justice of the case." See the construction of the words defect of form, post, 848.

2d. The particular parts of a conviction in general.]—The conviction, (which, as we have already seen, is a record of the summary proceedings before a justice or other convicting an offender,) in its particular parts consists of the statement of—1st, The Information, or Charge against the Defendant—2dly, The Summons or Notice of such Information, in order that he may make his defence—3dly, His Appearance or Non-Appearance—4thly, His Confession or Defence—5thly, The Witnesses and Evidence against him—6thly, The Adjournment—7thly, The Judgment or Adjudication—and 8thly, The Subscription and Date.

Before proceeding to inquire minutely as to how these statements should be made, we must notice the important act of 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, intituled "An Act to facilitate summary proceedings before justices of the peace and others," which in a great degree, to avoid the perplexity so often felt in drawing up a conviction, has provided an outline of a form to be used and filled up in all cases where the statute creating the offence, or regulating the mode of prosecuting it, has not given a specific form. The first section of the act (reciting that great inconveniences often arise in summary proceedings before justices of the peace, deputy lieutenants and others, from the want of a general form of conviction) enacts, "that from and after the passing of this act, in all cases wherein a conviction shall have taken place, and no particular form for the record thereof has been directed, the justice or justices, deputy lieutenant or deputy lieutenants, or other person or persons duly authorised to proceed summarily therein, and before whom the offender or offenders shall have been convicted, shall and may (a) cause the record of such conviction to be drawn up in the manner and form following, or in any words to the same effect, (b) mutatis mutandis; (that is to say,)

County [or as the case is the year of may be] of the year of our Lord at in the county of A. B. of in the county of labourer, [or as the case may be] personally come before me, [or, before us, &c.] C. D. one [or more, as the case may be], of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said and informed me, [or us, &c.] that E. F. of in the county of on the day of at in the said did [here set forth the fact for which the information is laid] contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided, wherein the said E. F. after being duly summoned to answer the said charge, appeared before me, [or us, &c.] on the day of at in the said and having heard the charge contained in the said information, declared he was not guilty of the said offence, [or as the case may happen to be,] did not appear before me, [or us, &c.] pursuant to the said summons, [or did neglect or refuse to make any defence against the said charge]: whereupon I [or we &c. or, nevertheless, I, or we, &c.] the said justice, [or justices,] did proceed to examine into the truth of the charge contained in the said information, and on the day of aforesaid, at the parish of aforesaid, one credible witness, to wit, A. W. of in the county of upon his oath deponeth and saith, [if E. F. be present, say, in the presence of the said E. F.] that, within months [or as the case may be] next before the said information was made before me [or, &c.] the said justice by the said A. B. to wit, on the day of in the year the said E. F. at in the said county of [here state the evidence, and as nearly as possible in the words used by the witness, and if more than one witness be examined, state the evidence given by each] [or, if the defendant confess, instead of stating the evidence, say,] and the said E. F. acknowledged and voluntarily confessed the same to be true: therefore it manifestly appearing to me [or us, &c.] that he the said E. F. is guilty of the offence charged upon him in the said information, I [or we, &c.] do hereby convict him of the offence aforesaid, and do declare and adjudge, that he the said E. F. hath forfeited the sum of of lawful money of Great Britain, for the offence aforesaid, to be distributed [or, paid, as the case may be] according to the form of the statute in that case made and provided. Given under my hand [or, our hands, &c.] and seal, the day of in the year of our Lord

(a) The act is compulsory, and not merely directory. See Re Ris, 4 D. & R. 362, post, 637.
(b) As to these words, see post, 848.
Form of, in general.

The second section of the act enacts, that one justice, &c. may receive the original information, &c. where two or more justices are empowered to hear and determine. See the enactment, ante, 817.

Sect. 3. "That in all cases where it appears by the conviction that the defendant has appeared and pleaded, and the merits have been tried, and that the defendant has not appealed against the said conviction where an appeal is allowed, or if appealed against, the conviction has been affirmed, such conviction shall not afterwards be set aside or vacated in consequence of any defect of form whatever, but the construction shall be such a fair and liberal construction as will be agreeable to the justice of the case."

Sect. 4. "That nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to that part of the United Kingdom called Scotland."

This act is compulsory on the magistrates as to the mode of drawing up the conviction, and not merely directory; and they may be compelled by mandamus to adopt the form prescribed, or one like it in effect. Re Rit, 4 D. & R. 352.

It is to be observed, however, that it is not sufficient to adhere literally to the form given by this act, where, from the nature of the case, the general terms adopted in the form do not show in reality the facts, and this observation, as will be hereafter seen, will in many cases peculiarly apply to that part of the form stating the adjudication of the penalty and its distribution. See post, 847. And see as to the construction and mode of drawing up forms of convictions, when the form is expressly pointed out by a statute, post, 846 to 848.

We will now proceed to take notice, in regular order, of the different statements in the conviction, and herein,

First, The Information or Charge.—The conviction must recite the information. This it usually does in the past tense, until the prayer of process against the defendant. The conviction must set out the information, and it is conceived that it should be set out exactly as it was laid before the justice, without any material variation.

We have already seen how the information, when in writing, should be framed, and especially as to the statement therein of the time of making it, the place where made, the authority before whom made, the informer making it, and the offence and charge made. Such observations will be found here applicable; for all objections that can be taken to an information, and which are not merely for a defect in form, may be taken also to this part of the conviction. See fully, ante, 818 to 826.

In describing the offence, therefore, all that the framer of the conviction has to do, is to follow the form of the information.

(n) As to a clause of this nature, see post, 848.
Where there has been no information in writing, drawn up in form and which is not unfrequently the case where it is not otherwise expressly required, and where the proceedings are not at the suit of a common informer for a penalty, the mode of stating the offence may be collected from the observations, ante, 518 to 526.

Where there has been no information, but the magistrate has convicted a his own view (as in a few instances he is authorised by statute so to do), the stating such view, the offence may be described in the mode pointed at ante. 515 to 526.

Secondly. The Summons.—The necessity for, the form, and the service of the summons upon the offender, have been already considered, ante, 827.

It must be stated in the conviction that the defendant was summoned; to answer the information; unless in those cases (which are not many) in which particular statutes have allowed justices to convict persons without a summons, or on view of the offence, in which latter case the view must be stated.

If the offender be stated to be present at the time of the proceedings, as to have heard all the witnesses, and not to have asked for any further time to bring forward his defence, if he had any, this at all times has been deemed sufficient. R. v. Stone, 1 East, 649. See also 1 Str. 261, ante. 827.

A statement that the defendant was duly summoned, will now, since the form prescribed by the 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, s. 1, in all cases suffice, unless where there is another form of conviction pointed out by the statute. See 1 Str. 261; 1 East, 639; 1 Salk. 385; 3 Burr. 1785.

Thirdly. Defendant’s Appearance.—The defendant’s appearance or non-appearance should be stated according to the fact.

It was formerly doubted whether the justice, having summoned the defendant, might, if he did not appear, proceed to hear the evidence and convict him, in cases where the statute does not expressly give such a power; but since the case of R. v. Simpson, 1 Str. 44, it seems perfectly settled that a party who does not appear after regular notice may be convicted in his absence. In that case, which was a conviction for deer-stealing, it was objected, that as no appeal would lie, the justices should not have proceeded in the absence of the party, especially where it might end in a corporal punishment, as it might have done there for want of a distress. Parker, C.J. delivered the resolution of the court: “We are all of opinion the offender may be convicted without appearing. The statute is silent as to the mode of proceeding, and the law of England, it is true, in point of natural justice always requires the party charged with an offence to be heard before he is condemned in judgment; but that rule must have this exception, unless it is through his own default: were it otherwise, every criminal might avoid conviction.” Bosc. 60; Paley, 21.

If the defendant appear, he cannot afterwards take advantage of any irregularity in the summons, except indeed if it be so that it did not allow sufficient time for defence; and if he waive that objection at the time of hearing, he cannot afterwards take advantage of that particular objection as an appeal. R. v. Stone, 1 East’s Rep. 639.

If the defendant appear by attorney, and not in person, that fact should be stated. R. v. Simpson, 1 Str. 44.

Fourthly. Defendant’s Confession.—If the defendant appear, and confess that he is guilty of the offence imputed to him, the appearance and confession are recorded in the conviction; and then, if it be a confession of the entire offence, instead of stating any evidence, which is quite unnecessary in such a case, the justice may at once proceed to the conviction and adjudication; but if it be a confession merely of a fact, which forms but a part of the offence charged, the conviction then, after stating the confession in the words of the defendant, proceeds to state the evidence as to the other facts and circumstances constituting the offence charged, and, lastly, states the conviction.
Form of, in general.

The confession cures any objection to the manner of taking the evidence; as that it was not taken in the defendant's presence, or that improper evidence was taken, or the like. R. v. Clarke, Coop. 35; R. v. Hall, 1 T. R. 320.

The mode of stating the confession is pointed out by the form given by the 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, ante, 836.

The general rule, that if the defendant confess the offence it is needless to go into the proof of it, is to be understood of a confession to the full extent of a good and sufficient information; for where either the confession does not come up to the charge in the information, or is made upon an insufficient information, it will not supply the want of evidence in the one case, or of a sufficient charge in the other. Thus, in R. v. Little, 1 Burr. 613, confession by the defendant of a single fact of offering to sell silk handkerchiefs without a license, was held not sufficient to convict him of a trading as a hawkker, pedlar or petty chapman, without license; because a single act of selling a parcel of silk handkerchiefs to a particular person is not a proof that he was such a hawkker, pedlar or petty chapman, as ought to have taken out a license. Conviction quashed. Paley, 93. But in another conviction upon the same statute, it was alleged that the defendant was apprehended for trading as a hawkker and pedlar, and was charged upon oath before the justice with having sold a piece of muslin as a hawkker, pedlar and petty chapman, which fact he confessed; this being held to be sufficient to warrant a conviction for not producing a license demanded by the justice. R. v. Smith, 3 Burr. 1475. Paley, 139. R. v. Corden, 4 Burr. 2279, was the case of a confession of an insufficient charge; and the conviction, which was upon stat. 5 Geo. IIII. c. 14, for preserving fish, not being on the complaint of the owner, nor showing his dissent to the fishing, and the property not being proved on oath, was quashed; and see ante, 830, 831.

As to the power of the justices to take the confession of the defendant, it has been determined, that though the act only empowers the justice to convict upon the oath of one or more witnesses, this implies a power to convict upon the confession of the party alone; for per curiam, the intent of mentioning the oath of one witness was only to direct the justices that they should not convict on less evidence. R. v. Gage, 1 Stra. 546.

As to what confession is sufficient, and how far magistrates should be cautious of acting on confessions, see ante, Confession.

Fifthly, The Witnesses and Evidence]—With respect to the mode of taking the evidence and of the competency of witnesses, see ante, 831, 832; post, Evidence, Vol. II. p. 94 to 78; Examination, Vol. II.

It is requisite to name the witness, that he may appear to be a different person from the informer (a), as the statutes generally give the latter a share of the penalty, and therefore he cannot be a witness, excepting where the act shall specially so direct. 2 Ld. Raym. 1545; 1 Stra. 318; Andr. 18, 240; Bosc. 69. The 3 Geo IV. c. 23, ante, 836, requires the name of the witness to be stated.

It is sufficient to set forth in a conviction that the witness was examined on oath, without adding that the magistrate had authority to administer the oath, if the statute gives such authority. R. v. Pickton, 2 East, 195. In R. v. Glossop, 4 B. & A. 616, (b) it was held, that from a statement that certain witnesses came before the justices upon their oaths to them severally and respectively administered, it substantially appeared that the oath was administered to the witnesses in the presence of the magistrates. In R. v. Sedgy, 2 Chit. Rep. 522, it was held unnecessary to state how the witnesses were sworn. The 3 Geo IV. c. 23, ante, 836, now gives a proper precise form as to these statements.

(a) As to when informers may or may not be witnesses, see post, Evidence, Vol. V. p. 102.
(b) More fully noticed, post, Evidence, Vol. II. p. 74.
The witness must be sworn and examined in the defendant's presence, even though he were sworn when the information was taken; and there it is not sufficient in such a case to read over the informer's deposition in the presence of the defendant. R. v. Crowther, 1 T. R. 125.

In the case of R. v. Vipont and others, 2 Burr. 1163, the conviction was that the defendants had heard the charge, (of conspiring to advance their wages in the woollen manufacture,) and being called upon by the justices to show cause why they should not be convicted, and having nothing to say whereby to defend themselves, are therefore convicted: this was quashed by the court; because the evidence ought to be particularly set forth, that the court may judge thereof; and it must be given in the presence of the defendant, that he may have an opportunity of cross-examination. R. v. Cradock, 1 T. R. 127, and R. v. Bensell, 6 T. R. 75; Bosc. 71.

The 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, a. 1, requires the justice to state that the witness gave his evidence in the defendant's presence, if such was the fact, ante, 338.

But, though the evidence ought to be given in the presence of the defendant, if the appearance of the defendant and the examination of the witness are both stated on the same day, the court will presume that the witness was examined in the presence of the defendant, though it be not expressly stated. 3 Burr. 1786; Comr. 241, 242; 2 T. R. 23; and R. v. Last, 7 T. R. 152.

Even though it be stated that the appearance was at A. and the evidence was given at B. R. v. Swallow, 8 T. R. 284.

Where, in a conviction, the information was stated to have been laid on the 29th May, 1805, and that the defendant appeared on the 4th Jan., (without mentioning the year,) and it concluded by stating the conviction as signed and sealed on this 4th of June, 1805; the court held that the proceedings appeared to have been all one continuing transaction, from the appearance of the defendant after the summons to the close of the conviction; and that this appeared, both from the antecedent date of May, 1805, and the date of the conviction, to have been June, 1805, because the defendant was stated to have appeared on the 4th June, and the conviction was signed and sealed on the 4th June, 1805; and they held that it therefore appeared that the evidence was given in the defendant's presence, as his departure pending the continuance of the transaction could not be presumed. R. v. Cryer, East, 389.

The 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, a. 1, ante, 836, in the form therein prescribed, since that the evidence should be stated, as nearly as possible, in the words used by the witness, and that if more than one witness be examined, then that the evidence given by each shall be. independently of this it was previously settled, that in all convictions, the evidence must be set out particularly, not merely the result of it; and that sufficient proof must appear upon the face of the record to sustain every material part of the charge, and to warrant the adjudication. R. v. Love, 7 T. R. 152. It was laid down by Lord Mansfield, in *1 Burr. 1163, as an undoubted maxim, that on a conviction the evidence must be set out in order that the superior court may judge of it. It has been likewise solemnly recognized as a known distinction between order and convictions, that in the former it is allowed to state the result only of the evidence, whereas under the same mode of stating it would be undoubtedly bad in a conviction. (R. v. Lloyd, 2 Str. 999.) In a very early case (Reg. v. Green, 10 Mod. 212,) the conviction was quashed, because the evidence was not set forth. It was only laid that the witness was sworn de veritate praesens, and that it did not appear from what was sworn to the justice that the defendant was guilty; but it was said it ought so to have appeared to the court. Again, a conviction for taking pilchards contra formam stantis was quashed; and the reason assigned was, because the witness swore generally that the defendant was guilty of the premises; for that is taking the law upon himself. R. v. Baker, 1 Str. 316. A conviction on the candle case was set aside, because the evidence was not set out, it being only alleged that the offence was fully and duly proved.

*(e) See Gibbs, Vol. III.*
Form of, in general.

R. v. Baker, 1 Stra. 316; R. v. Theed, 2 Stra. 919; 2 Barnard. 16, 79. (a)

In R. v. Marsh, 4 D. & R. 260, 2 B. & C. 717, S. C., it was suggested that the magistrate might have great difficulty in setting out the evidence in the words used by the witnesses, it not being usual to take the depositions in writing; but the court said it was the duty of the magistrate to take down the evidence, and give the detail of it in the conviction.

It has been held that if a conviction state in the words of the statute the deposition of the witness to the fact, it is sufficient; but if the magistrate endeavour to shelter himself from detection by merely stating the fact of the offence in the terms of the act of parliament, as if it were the legal effect of the evidence, when the evidence itself would not warrant the conclusion, he subjects himself to a criminal information, upon a proper case laid before the court. R. v. Pearce, 9 East, 358. And in R. v. Allen, cited Paley on Conv. by Dowling, 165, n. Abbott, C. J., said, that no witness would swear in the words of the statute, and that the court could not, on a conviction stating a witness so swore, assume that the magistrate had done his duty; and the magistrate was there ordered to draw up a fresh conviction.

In those cases where the offence is created in a section in a statute, which section contains particular exceptions, though it is necessary to negative every one of those exceptions in the information, (Dought. 331,) it has been doubted whether or not it be necessary also to negative them in the evidence given in support of the charge. In R. v. Jarvis, 1 Burr. 154, Mr. J. Denison said it was necessary to negative, by the evidence and adjudication, that the defendant had any of the particular qualifications to kill game, that being a conviction on the game laws. But it was determined and fully settled by the Court of King's Bench in R. v. Turner, 5 M. & S. 206, 2 Phil. Ev. 25, 189, that a conviction which specifically negatives the several qualifications mentioned in the statute was sufficient, without stating evidence to negative those qualifications. And see the opinions of Lawrence, J., and Le Blanc, J., in R. v. Stone, 1 East, 653; R. v. Marsh, 4 D. & R. 260; 2 B. & C. 717, S. C.; Paley, 180, 184. Vide post, Game, Vol. II.

The evidence, both in support of the information and for the defence, must be stated where it is relevant to the matter at issue. Per Abbott, C. J. Re Rix, 4 D. & R. 334.

Matter of evidence, irrelevant to the charge contained in the information, need not be stated. Id.

Nor need every word used by the witness. Per Abbott, C. J. R. v. Warnford, 5 D. & R. 490.

The justices must use their discretion in the statement, but they must attend to the general direction contained in the act 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, s. 1. Id.

If the justices omit to state the evidence in the conviction, as we have just seen they are bound to do, the Court of King's Bench will compel them to do so by mandamus. In Re Rix, 4 D. & R. 352, where justices omitted to set out on the record of a conviction on the Building Act, the evidence adduced on the hearing of the information as nearly as possible in the words used by each of the witnesses, in pursuance of the 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, a mandamus was issued to compel them; and so in the case of a game conviction. 4 D. & R. 354, n.; R. v. Marsh, id. 260; R. v. Warnford, 5 D. & R. 489; 2 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 511; R. v. Allen, 5 D. & R. 490.

Under circumstances, if the evidence be not set forth as it was given, a criminal information or indictment might be supported against a magistrate. See R. v. Peace, 9 East, 358. See post, Justices, Vol. III. p. 481 to 486.

The evidence, when set forth, must contain sufficient to warrant the conviction. Therefore it must be of a fact existing at the time of the information; and so it must appear. In R. v. Fuller, 1 Id. Raym. 509, a conviction on stat. 8 & 9 Will. III. c. 19, for keeping two concealed washbacks

(a) In orders it seems sufficient to state the result of the evidence. R. v. Killett, 4 Burr. 2063, post, Orders, Vol. III.
Conviction. [IV.(1.)

was quashed, because, though the information, which was given on the 8th March, charged the defendant with then having the washbacks, the evidence, which was not given until the 3rd of April, was merely that the defendant habet et custodit eadem duo et conceletia exacta; confining it to the time when the evidence was given, and of course subsequent to the day of the information.

So it should appear that the fact was proved to have been committed in some place within the jurisdiction of the magistrate. R. v. Jeffries, 1 T. R.
241; R. v. Smith, 8 T. R. 588.

When a certain time is limited by statute for a summary prosecution before justices of peace, it is necessary on that account also to fix the offence to a certain date, and state the time of committing the offence in that part of the conviction in which the evidence is set forth. Paley, 132. For if that be not shown either by positive proof of the day, or by express reference in the evidence to a date previously mentioned, the conviction cannot be supported; as is exemplified in this case—a conviction on the Malt Act, cf Geo. III. c. 38, s. 30, stated an information to have been exhibited on the 29th of May, 1805, charging "that the defendant within three months last past did wet certain corn," &c. The evidence stated was, that the witness, on the 22d of May, (without mentioning the year,) found a floor of malt then in the operation, &c. (so proceeding to state the fact of the offence.)
The conviction was quashed on account of the defective manner in which the date was alleged in the evidence. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "The evidence ought to appear to support the information, and the justices should either have stated the evidence of the witness to be that the offence was committed on the 22d May, 1805, if they really so understood the witness's mean; or if they had any doubt of that, they should have inquired of him more particularly as to the date of the fact. But here the date of the year neither appears expressly by the evidence, nor by any words of reference in any other date which is certain. And if they have done their business slovenly, we cannot supply their omission. As it stands on the conviction the offence does not appear to have been committed within three months before the prosecution commenced, which is necessary to give them notice. R. v. Woodcock, 7 East, 146.

It is sufficient, however, to refer to a date already mentioned and supported. Thus where a conviction was dated the 4th of June, and the information exhibited the 29th of May, charged the offence within three months last past, viz. on the 12th of May now last past; it was held sufficient that in the evidence, the fact was sworn to have happened on the said 12th of May. R. v. Crisp, 7 East, 389.

The evidence must go to establish the identical offence which forms the subject of the information. It is not sufficient that there appears to be evidence of another offence of the same kind and subject to the same penalty.
Mag. Ca. 67, S. C.

If the offence be confined to persons of a particular description, there must be competent evidence of their answering that description. R. v. Litt., 1 Burr. 609; R. v. Smith, 3 Burr. 1475; Paley, 199, 200, by Dower.

If the evidence set forth be such as might reasonably warrant the conclusion drawn by the justices, the conviction will be good. Thus in a convict-against defendant for causing to be acted at a place called the Colney Theatre, for gain and reward, a certain entertainment of the stage called Richard the Third, the evidence set forth was, that the defendant was seen once or twice at the rehearsal of the piece, and that the defendant engaged an actor to perform, and gave him a check for the amount of his benefit; it was held that the justices were warranted in drawing the conclusion that the defendant causcd the play to be acted. R. v. Glossop, 4 B. & A. 616. (a) Et per Lex Kenyon, C. J. R. v. Davis, 6 T. R. 178; it is sufficient in convictions, if there were such evidence before the magistrate as in an action would be sufficient to be left to a jury.

(a) See this case more fully noticed, post, Plagiers, Vol. V.
Where a power of conviction is given by statute to a magistrate, he is the sole judge of the weight of the evidence given before him, and the Court of King's Bench will not examine whether or not he has drawn a right conclusion from the evidence. But if no evidence appear on the conviction to support a material part of the information, the court will quash the conviction. R. v. J. Smith, 8 T. R. 588.

Where the justices acquitted the defendant upon evidence which prima facie was sufficient to convict, and there being no contradictory or explanatory evidence; the court said that the evidence given was entirely and exclusively for the consideration of the justices below, who were placed in the situation of a jury; and as they had acquitted the defendant, the court could not substitute themselves in the place of the justices acting as jurymen, and convict him. That they could not judge of the credit due to the witnesses whom they did not hear examined. That they could only look to the form of the conviction, and see that the party, if convicted, had been convicted by legal evidence. R. v. Reason, 6 T. R. 375, ante, 834.

If the defendant, when put on his defence, sets up a claim of right to the thing he is accused of taking or destroying, and there is any pretence or colour for such right, the justice ought to acquit him. Per Lord Chief Justice Holt, in R. v. Speed, 1 Ld. Raym. 583; ante, 832, 833.

Sixthly, The Adjournment—If the magistrate adjourns the hearing of the information, (and which he may do if either the defendant or the prosecutor requires time for adducing further proofs, ante, 833,) the fact of the adjournment should be stated in the conviction. If a certain time be limited within which the conviction must take place, a conviction after that period cannot be supported, though it appears on the face of it to be upon an information commenced in time, and adjourned with the consent of the defendant to a future day. R. v. Tolley, 3 East, 467; and see R. v. Bellamy, 2 D. & R. 727; 1 B. & C. cres. 508, S. C.

Seventhly, The Judgment or Adjudication—The conviction must contain a judgment and adjudication of the defendant's having been convicted, and also an adjudication of the forfeiture incurred thereby. See Paley, 206, 208. Even in cases where the punishment is fixed by statute there must be an adjudication; for the want of which the conviction in R. v. Harris, 7 T. R. 238, was quashed.

In that case Lord Kenyon, C. J. said, "a conviction is in the nature of a verdict and judgment, and therefore must be precise and certain." And it may be observed as a general rule, that the adjudication on every point to which it refers must be precise and certain, and that a judgment for too little is as bad as one for too much; and this is so whether it respect the fine, the costs, or any other portion of the penalty which lies attached to the commission of the offence. R. v. Salomon, 1 T. R. 251.

The form given by the 3 Geo. IV. ante, 836, points out the form of the judgment. No formal style of adjudication is necessary as in other judgments. It has been held that a judgment in these terms, viz. "that R. T. (the defendant,) according to the form of the statute, is convicted," is a sufficient adjudication that he is convicted of the offence. R. v. Thompson, 2 T. R. 18; see R. v. Chandler, 14 East, 287; R. v. Jeffries, 4 T. R. 768.

In R. v. Hawkes, 2 Stra. 858, a conviction for killing a deer was quashed, because it was only "he is convicted," without any judgment of forfeiture. And in the case of R. v. Vipont and others, 2 Burr. 1163, ante, 840, the conviction not adjudging the forfeiture, was for that reason, as well as the other before mentioned, determined to be ill; especially as the statute upon which the conviction was made leaves the judgment discretionary concerning the duration of the punishment, the offender being subjected to be imprisoned by the justices for any time not exceeding three months; et vide R. v. Ashton, 8 Mod. 175. The 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, ante, 836, shows that a judgment of forfeiture should be stated.
Conviction.

In cases where a corporeal punishment is assigned, the adjudication should expressly and particularly state it. R. v. Wincott, 2 Burr. 1163; and see ante, Commitment, p. 770, as to what is a sufficient form of adjudication in this respect.

The penalty, whether pecuniary or corporeal, must be stated with sufficient certainty as to its amount and nature, and be such as is warranted by the statute; and more strictness is required in this respect where it is discretionary. Paley, 221, 224. See some cases, post, 845, 846, as to the mode of stating the costs and charges.

Where a statute inflicts a penalty and orders the offender to be committed or set in the pillory, on failure of payment or of sufficient distress, it is sufficient to adjudge the penalty and distribution, without noticing the contingent punishment. R. v. Chandler, East. 501.

The mitigation of penalties is not of course, but depends upon the power given to justices by particular acts of parliament to exercise their discretion in this case, within certain bounds, in the instances mentioned in those acts. It is a general rule that where a statute gives a discretionary power of mitigating a penalty, there the legislature must have intended to place the matter under the jurisdiction of justices of the peace. See per Abbott, C. J., Rex v. Poole, 4 B & Cres. 156.

A judgment for too small a penalty is as bad as a judgment for too much. R. v. Salomons, 1 T. R. 252.

Whenever this discretionary power of mitigating penalties is exercised, it ought to be stated in the conviction; Paley, 209, 210; for otherwise it cannot appear to the court upon appeal, how or in what degree the justice has exercised the authority with which he was invested. Thus the conviction must first adjudicate the whole penalty inflicted by the statute, and then is a separate sentence state to what inferior sum he has mitigated it; for otherwise it could not appear that he had exercised his authority in both points according to the terms of the statute. See Dick. Sess. 3d ed. 595, see post, 851.

Several Offences or Penalties]—If the information be for two or more offences, and the justice find him guilty of all, the conviction must state him to be guilty of the "offences" charged upon him in the information; if, on the other hand, the justice find him guilty of one of the offences only, the conviction should state that offence specially, thus: "that he the said E. F. is guilty of the offence firstly above charged upon him in the said information, for that he the said E. F. on ______ did," &c. stating the offence as in the information; if the conviction in such a case were to state that the defendant was guilty of the "offence" charged, &c. it would be quashed because it would be uncertain of which of the offences he was guilty. R. v. Salomons, 1 T. R. 249.

It is no objection to a conviction, that the defendant has been convicted of several penalties. It is the constant practice in actions on the game laws and not unfrequent in convictions. R. v. Scawen, 8 T. R. 288; Paley, 211. Under particular acts of parliament only one offence can be committed on the same day. As under stat. 29 Car. II. c. 7, for exercising a trade on the Lord's Day. Crepps v. Darden, 2 Coop. 640. So under stat. 5 Anne. c. 14, s. 4, for keeping or using a dog or gun. R. v. Matthews, 10 M. & W. 26; and Marriott v. Shaw, Com. 274; R. v. Lovett, 7 T. R. 152. But under stat. 12 Geo. II. c. 36, for selling books originally printed here and afterwards reprinted abroad and imported into this country, the party may incur several penalties on the same day for several distinct acts of sale of such books here. Brooke, q. t. v. Milliken, 3 T. R. 509.

This question must in all these cases depend on the nature of the statute which creates the offence.

Where a statute imposes a penalty if any person or persons shall do as at prohibited, if two persons do such act together, and are jointly convicted, it is deemed but one offence, and the magistrate can inflict only one penalty. Thus in R. v. Bleasdale, 4 T. R. 809, where the defendants were convicted in 5l. each, under 5 Anne, c. 14, s. 4, for using a greyhound to destroy
Form of, in general.

Game without being qualified, the court, without hearing any argument, said the conviction could not be supported, for that it was only one offence, and that the magistrate should only have convicted them in one penalty. And see R. v. Swallow, 8 T. R. 286. But if either the penalty imposed by the statute be upon each person convicted, or if the particular nature or quality of the offence be such that the guilt of each of the parties be essentially distinct from that of the others, in either of these cases the parties ought to be convicted in several and distinct penalties. R. v. Clarke, Coup. 610; Crepps v. Durden, Coup. 640. In the construction of the Toleration Act, 1 W. & M. c. 18, s. 18, which inflicts a penalty of 20l. on any person or persons who may disquiet or disturb any congregation permitted by that act, it has been decided that several persons for a joint disturbance are liable to separate penalties of 20l. each. R. v. Hube and others, 5 T. R. 542. Vide post, Dissenters, Vol. I. See the cases of R. v. Smith and others, R. & R. C. C. 368; R. v. Southern, Id. 444; decided on the act against night poaching; post, Game, Vol. II.

Distribution of Penalty—In general the application of the penalty constitutes a necessary part of the judgment. The 3 Geo. IV. c. 22, s. 1, directs that the form shall state the penalty “to be distributed (or ‘paid’ as the case may be,) according to the form of the statute in such case made and provided;” and such an adjudication would at all events suffice where the statute giving the penalty points out the mode of its distribution without leaving it discretionary in the justice. See Salk. 383; Paley, 225. Where, however, the statute does not positively and directly fix the mode of distribution of the penalty, but leaves it in any degree uncertain or discretionary, then the precise mode of distribution should it seems be stated. R. v. Dempsey, 2 T. R. 96.

In a case where the distribution directed by the statute was part to the party aggrieved, and the remainder to the overseers of the poor of the parish, a distribution to the poor of the township was held bad, because there may be many townships in the same parish, and therefore there was uncertainty; but it was admitted if it had been general, viz. to be distributed as the law directs, it would have been sufficient, for there would not necessarily have been any uncertainty in such a case. R. v. Priest, 6 T. R. 538. In R. v. Smith, 5 M. & S. 133, the defendant was convicted on the 12 Geo. III. c. 61, s. 18, for conveying at one time a larger quantity of gunpowder than is allowed by statute, which authorises the seizure of such gunpowder, and directs that upon conviction of the offender, the same shall be forfeited for the use of the person making the seizure. The justices having adjudged the gunpowder to be forfeited “to the use of the aforesaid J. G. the person who seized the same,” without showing previously by the evidence that there had been in fact a seizure, and that he was the person seizing, the court quashed the conviction. See post, Gunpowder, Vol. II.

Costs—With respect to costs, by stat. 18 Geo. III. c. 19, s. 1, “where any complaint shall be made before any of his Majesty’s justices of the peace for any county, riding, division, city, town corporate, franchise, or liberty, and any warrant or summons shall issue in consequence of such complaint, that then it shall and may be lawful to and for any justice or justices of the peace, who shall have heard and determined the matter of the said complaint, to award such costs to be paid by either of the parties, and in manner and form as to him or them shall seem fit, to the party injured: and in case any person, so ordered by the said justice or justices of the peace to pay such sums of money as aforesaid, shall not forthwith pay down or give security for the same to the satisfaction of the justice or justices, it shall and may be lawful for the said justice or justices, by warrant under his hand and seal, or their hands and seals, to levy the said sum or sums by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such person so refusing or neglecting; and where goods and chattels of such person cannot be found, to commit such person to the house of correction for the county, riding, division, city, town corporate, franchise, or liberty, wherein such person shall reside, there to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding one month, nor less than ten days, or until such sum or sums of money, together with the expenses attending the commitment of such person to such house of correction, be first paid."
Conviction.

Before this act a justice had no power to award costs unless expressly authorised by statute.

When an act gives power to a magistrate, on a summary conviction, to award the reasonable charges of taking a distress, he must ascertain the amount in the conviction; and an adjudication that the defendant shall pay the reasonable charges of the levy is bad. R. v. Symons, 1 East, 189.

If the imprisonment be not for any certain period, but generally till the payment of a fine, or the performance of some other act, the condition must be distinctly expressed, and such as is authorised by statute. If it be till payment, the sum must be fixed. Thus a conviction and commitment for a forcible entry, "there to remain till they shall have paid a fine to the king," the justices not having assessed any fine, was held to be irregular. R. v. Elwell, 2 Eq. Raym. 1514; Daley, 190; see ante, tit. Commitment, p. 770. So under stat. 6 Geo. III. c. 48, s. 1, which empowers the magistrate to commit till the penalty and charges are paid, a commitment for nine months, or until the sum of 15l. "together with charges previous to and attending the conviction, shall be paid," was held to be bad, for want of ascertaining the exact sum by the payment of which the defendant might be released. R. v. Hall, 1 Coop. 60.

The justice himself must ascertain and award the amount of the costs, and he cannot delegate that act to another, or the conviction would be vitiated. R. v. St. Mary, Nottingham, 13 East's Rep. 57.

The rules before laid down as to the mode of stating the forfeiture and its distribution will for the most part apply here, see ante, 844, 845. As to costs in general, post, Costs, Vol. I.

The conviction need not adjudge that if the penalty, &c., be not paid the offender shall be committed. See R. v. Helpa, 3 M. & S. 331; R. v. Chandler, Carkh. 501; ante, Commitment, p. 769, 771.

Seventieth, The Subscription and Date]—The conviction is complete by the convicting justice or justices subscribing and sealing it, by which act it becomes a record, and without which it cannot be produced before any court for any ulterior purpose, as for appeal, &c. Dall. c. 115; R. v. Elwell, 2 Sta. 794; see Boston v. Carea, 5 D. & R. 553; 2 D. & R. M. C. 563; 3 B. & C. 649, S. C. It seems immaterial as to the time when the magistrate puts his subscription and seal. R. v. Picton, 2 East, 198; and see R. v. Barker, 1 East, 185, post, 848.

The conviction must be dated, or else it must otherwise appear when it was made. In R. v. Picton, 2 East, 196, it was held, that an impossible or incongruous date, if the conviction be complete without it, (id. est, if it otherwise appear truly and properly when it was made,) may be rejected as surplusage, and will not vitiate.

V. Form of Conviction when pointed out by Statute. (a)

Many of the preceding rules as to the general requisites and formal parts of convictions in general will here apply.

If a statute prescribe any particular form of conviction it is best to adhere to it strictly, adopting the very words; at all events the conviction must be according to the intent and purpose of the act. See R. v. Priest, 6 T. R. 538, ante, 836, 837.

Indeed some statutes are so worded in this respect that the form must be literally pursued. Thus if a statute say, "the conviction shall be in the form following," the direction is peremptory and must be obeyed. R. v. Jefferson, 4 T. R. 769.

(a) These rules and observations will generally be found in Dickinson's Sessions, 2d and 3d editions.
In convictions directed by statutes, wherein summary forms are given, (omitting the information, summaries, and evidence,) the material part begins at the word "convicted." It is equally necessary in those, as it is in common law convictions, that certain essential ingredients should appear on the face of the instruments, viz. the jurisdiction of the convicting magistrate, the time, the place, and the charge, in such terms as to bring the whole within the description given of the offence in the act of parliament; also that the defendant had not any such defence as that may have afforded him; for, without these being evident upon the inspection of the record, the court cannot say that he has incurred the penalty, or subjected himself to the forfeiture annexed. By way of example: under the Bread Acts, if the offence be laid where an assize has been set, it will be necessary to set forth what the assize is in that place, in order to show what is the deficiency of weight; to state the time of purchasing and of weighing, in order to show that the article was found deficient within the then limited terms for trial; the species of bread, to show that the object of the complaint does not fall within the exception.

Dick. Sess. 3d. edit. 394, 5.

In many of the summary forms inserted in statutes, the words "(here state the offence)" are used; when this is the case, the offence must be described as fully as is there insisted on; ex. gr. the statute against combinations among journeymen manufacturers, 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 106, gave a summary form, and in which, by way of a parenthesis, these words were inserted. On these it was decided, that agreements among these workmen for certain specified purposes being the offence to be punished, it is necessary the agreement itself should be set out in the conviction, in order to show on the face of it that it was an agreement for the special purposes denounced by the statute in the very terms used therein, so that it might appear that the magistrate had authority to convict, and that the defendants had incurred the penalty. R. v. Neild, 6 East’s Rep. 417; R. v. Hasell, 13 East’s Rep. 193; Dick. Sess. 3d edit. 595.

Sometimes it is said in the statute that the magistrate before whom the party is convicted, (and in consequence of which conviction the alternative punishments of pecuniary penalty or imprisonment, according to the circumstances in each particular case, are annexed,) "shall cause the said conviction to be made out in manner and form following, or in any other form of words, mutatis mutandis; which conviction shall be good and effectual to all intents and purposes, without stating the case, the fact, or the evidence in any more particular manner." In such instances it must be even more decidedly necessary to set out the adjudication with particular precision, for otherwise, without the statement of the case, the facts, or the evidence, it cannot appear to the court upon the face of the conviction appealed from, which of the alternative sentences has been pronounced; what is the subject or the object of the appeal; and what is the judgment they have to confirm or to reverse.

Where a blank is left for inserting the offence, the same accuracy is requisite in the description of it as in other cases. R. v. Hasell, 13 East, 139.

In some of these statutable forms the titles of acts are ordered to be set forth thus, "(here set forth the title of the act)." Wherever these directions occur they must be strictly complied with; that is to say, no word must be omitted or changed, lest such omission or alteration should make the whole taken together convey a different meaning from what was the design of the act. Mills v. Wilkins, 2 Saak. 609; Dick. Sess. 595, 3d edit.

In some cases it is necessary that the conviction should be more particular than even the words inserted in the statute itself. Thus where a statute leaves it discretionary in the justices to distribute the penalty in such proportions as they shall think fit, the distribution forms part of the judgment, and must be expressed expressly on the conviction itself, although the statute gives a form of conviction stating generally the penalty "to be distributed according to the form of the statute in that case made and provided." R. v. Dempsey, 2 T. R. 96; and see Dick. Sess. 2d edit. 701; 3d ed. 591; R. v. Barrett, 1 Saak. 383; R. v. Helps, 3 M. & S. 331.

If a statute direct the conviction of any offence under it to be drawn up according to an annexed form, or to the effect thereof, and the convicting justice, beside all the requisites indicated by the statute itself, unnecessarily...
Conviction.

Although, as is often the case, the act directs "that no conviction under the act shall be set aside for defect in form or through the mistake of any fact, circumstance, or other matter, provided the material facts alleged be proved," yet, notwithstanding these words, every material fact must be alleged, and the omission, if any, is not aided by reference to such case. R. v. Jukes, 8 T. R. 536. Lord Kenyon, in allusion to a provision in the terms just mentioned, says, with regard to the section in the act that no conviction shall be quashed for want of form, "I confess I am not able to understand it as applied to proceedings removed into this court. It enacts that no conviction on this act, (36 Geo. III. c. 60, s. 11,) shall be set aside by my court for want of form, or through the mistake of any fact, circumstance, or other matter whatsoever, provided the material facts alleged in such conviction, and upon which the same shall be grounded, be proved to the satisfaction of the court. I can understand it as far as respects the proceedings before the sessions by way of appeal. On an appeal the whole case is got into, evidence is to be given to support the conviction, and then it may be known whether the material facts alleged in such conviction, and upon which the same shall be grounded, be proved to the satisfaction of the court. But when the conviction is removed here by certiorari, I do not understand how we can inquire into those facts." 8 T. R. 540.

VI. Proceedings after Conviction.

Copy of Conviction]—A justice ought to give the defendant a copy of the conviction if he demands it, for it is a record, and he is entitled to it. R. v. Midlam, 3 Burr. 1720. (a)

It seems, however, that a defendant is not entitled, as of right, to have a copy of a conviction to enable him to appeal against it at the sessions for any matter of mere form, or to pick holes in it without regard to the merits. R. v. Justices of Huntington, 8 D. & R. 588; 2 D. & R. M. C. 594, S.C.

The copy, however, given is not to be conclusively taken as the true copy, at least so far as regards mere formal defects, for the court will notice only the record of the conviction returned by the magistrates. The defendant should, therefore, be cautious not to rely on mere formal defects in the copy given him. In a case where the sessions, upon proof that the appellant had received from the clerk of the convicting magistrates a copy of his conviction, signed and sealed by such justices, purporting on the face of it to have been made upon the information of B. and C., (though such copy was drawn upon the back of the paper which contained the information of A., (the true informer B. and C. being only the witnesses who had been examined in support of the charge,) and though the same justices had returned to the sessions to be filed of record a regular conviction of the same date, signed and sealed by them, on parchment, stating to have been made on the information of A., and supported by the evidence of B. and C., according to the truth of the case,) had quashed the latter conviction so returned by the justices, as being at variance with the minutes of the conviction delivered to the appellant, without entering into the merit of the case, upon a preliminary objection taken by the appellant, the Court of King's Bench quashed the order of sessions generally, thereby setting up again the registered conviction, considering that the variance arose from the mere mistake and irregularity of the justice's clerk, and that the appellant was not really surprised by it, but had received his appeal on the merits. R. v. Allen, 15 East, 332.

A conviction may be drawn up after the penalty has been levied. This was decided in R. v. Barker, 1 East, 186. On a motion by Gibs and Best for a criminal information against the mayor of the borough of Great Yarmouth, for returning to a writ of certiorari a conviction of a party in another and more formal shape than that in which it was first drawn up, and of which a copy had been delivered to the party convicted by the magistrate's clerk, Lord Kenyon, C. J. said, "If the magistrate has done no more than return the conviction in a more formal shape, instead of sending it up in the informal manner in which it was first drawn, and supposing that the facts as they really happened will warrant him in the return he has now made, I am of opinion, that it was not only legal but laudable in him to do as he has done; and he would have done wrong if he had acted otherwise. It is a matter of constant experience for magistrates to take minutes of their proceedings without attending to the precise form of them at the time when they pronounce their judgment, to serve as memorandums for them to draw up a more formal statement of them afterwards, to be returned to the sessions, and it is by no means unusual to draw up the conviction in point of form after the penalty has been levied under the judgment, nor is there any legal objection to this method, provided the facts will warrant them in stating what they do. It is no answer to say that a party convicted may be thereby induced to incur an unnecessary expense in suing out a certiorari, to get rid of an informal conviction; for a mere informality, in the manner of drawing up a conviction, ought not to be the inducement for removing it into this court, but some substantial defect in the justice and legality of the proceeding itself before the magistrate.” And see R. v. Js. of Huntington, 5 D. & R. 588; 2 D. & R. M. C. 594, S. C.; Massey v. Johnson, 12 East, 32; ante, 834, 846.

(a) As to the defendant's right to a copy of the record of an indictment against him, see Indictment, Vol. III. p. 357.
Proceedings after Conviction.

Return of Conviction]—In all cases a justice of the peace ought to return a conviction by him to the sessions, whether the party appeal or not, or whether an appeal is or is not given, that the crown may not be deprived of its share of forfeitures, as also for other reasons. R. v. Eaton, 2 T. R. 285.

In cases of convictions under the late acts, for larceny or malicious injuries to property, it is enacted, that every justice of the peace, before whom any person shall be convicted of any offence against these acts, shall transmit the convictions to the next court of general or quarter sessions, which shall be holden for the county or place wherein the offence shall have been committed, there to be kept by the proper officer among the records of the court. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 74; 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 40.

In other statutes also the return of the conviction is particularly pointed out and directed, and especially in cases where a second conviction is to be visited by a severer judgment, because in such cases the first conviction, or a true copy thereof as returned and filed by the clerk of the peace, is usually declared to be sufficient evidence of the former conviction.

It seems that in all cases where a conviction is necessary, if the convicting justice, after receiving due notice of appeal, neglect to return the conviction, whereby the party is prevented from prosecuting his appeal, independently of any other punishment for such misdemeanor in his office, he is liable to an action for damages. See R. v. Medlam, 3 Burr. 1720.

Erroneous Acquittal]—An acquittal by the justices is conclusive, and cannot be reversed by the Court of King’s Bench, or otherwise, and that is so even though the justices state in return to a certiorari evidence which prima facie is sufficient to convict. R. v. Reason, 6 T. R. 575, ante, 834; and see Evidence, Vol. II. p. 52.

Erroneous Conviction]—An erroneous conviction may be set right by appeal or certiorari. See titles Appeal, Certiorari, ante.

A justice of the peace cannot be compelled to enforce an erroneous conviction where the error is in matter of substance, therefore he cannot be compelled to issue a warrant to levy the penalty adjudged; for where a mandamus was directed to a justice of the peace, commanding him to levy, or cause to be levied, a certain penalty, in a certain conviction, against T. L. the justice returned, “that the defendant was convicted of the penalty before him, (setting forth the manner and occasion,) but that the conviction was invalid in law, and was not a conviction of any offence for which the penalty was

VOL. I.
FORMS.

Conviction.

payable, or could be legally levied." Per Curiam. "The return to the mandamus is good and sufficient; for although when a justice has once convicted a man he ought to proceed to enforce that conviction, yet it is altogether a nullity the justice is not bound to proceed further in order subject himself to damages." It is, however, otherwise if the crime be

As to appeals and writs of habeas corpus and certiorari, see ante, Appelcertiorari; and post, Habeas Corpus, Vol. II.

As to the mode of enforcing the conviction, see ante, Commitment ex

As to the liability of magistrates and officers, see Constables, ante, 584; post, Justices, Vol. III. p. 481, 487, and as to how far the conviction will protect them, see post, Evidence, Vol. II. p. 51, 52.

FORMS.

(No. 1.)

General form of information on a penal statute. (a)

Kent. [The venire.] BE it remembered, that on the day of in the year the quarter of our Lord at in the said county, C. D. of the offence is alleged, [labourer,] who, as well for our sovereign lord the King, as he is for the benefit of the public, and as in his behalf, (b) personally cometh before me J. P. one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, and [as well for our said lord the King, or the public benefit of the public] informeth me that A. B. late of the parish of in the said county of the agreement, [labourer,] within the space of six months or whatsoever time is limited by the statute, now last past, to wit, on the day of in the year aforesaid; he hath offended in such the county aforesaid; [here state the facts and circumstances] constituting the offence, as directed, ante; see the various titles of offences; contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided; whereby, &c.
"The force of the statute in such case made and provided, the said A. B. hath forfeited, &c. said offence the sum of ." Wherefore the said C. D. [who may be aforesaid,] prageth the consideration of me the said justice in the premises, and that the said A. B. may be convicted of the offence aforesaid, [and that one moiety of the said fine or penalty may be adjudged to our said lord the King, and the other moiety thereof to the said C. D. according to the form of the statute in such case made and provided]; and as the said A. B. may be summoned to appear before me or some other justice, and swear the premises, and make his defence thereto.

(No. 2.)

The like, stating several of ences. (c)

[Proceed as in the above form to the aforesaid, and then state the second or subsequent offences, thus: ] And also that the said A. B., on the said date, &c. (stating the offence as directed in the above form to the aforesaid, and conclude the informant as in the above form,) wherefore the said C. D. &c.

(No. 3.)

General form of a summons.

County of

To the Constable of
in the county of

WHEREAS information and complaint have been made before me J. P. Exert one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, that A. O. of the county aforesaid, [labourer,] on the day of now last past, at in the county aforesaid, did [here set forth the offence as charged in the information, These are therefore to require you forsooth forthwith to summon the said A. O. to appear before at in the said county, on the day of in the hour of in the noon of the same day, to answer to the said information and complaint, and to be further dealt with according to law. And be you then there to certify what work have done in the premises. Herein fail you not. Given under my hand and seal day of in the year of our Lord

(a) See the observations as to the form of the information, ante, 818 to 826.
(b) If the penalty is given wholly to the the infor brackets, and the other parts of the information not applicable to such a ca
(c) That several offences may be joined.
see R. v. Sowllse, 8 T. R. 386, ante, 844.
Forms.

(No. 4.)

County of To the Constable of WHEREAS information hath been made before me J. P. Esquire, one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, that [here set forth the substance of the complaint]; and that A. W. of in the said county, [yeoman], is a material witness to be examined concerning the same; these are therefore to require you to summon the said A. W. to appear before me at in the said county, on the day of at the hour of in the noon of the same day, to testify his knowledge concerning the premises. Herein fail you not. Given under my hand and seal, the day of in the year of the reign of . J. P.

(No. 5.)

General form of conviction where the defendant appears and pleads or refuses to make a defence. (a)

County [or as the case may be] of the year of our Lord at in the county of A. B. of in the county aforesaid [labourer] personally came before me, J. P. one [or us two, &c.] of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, and informed me, [or us], that C. D. of in the county of in the year aforesaid, at in the said did [here set forth the fact for which the information is laid, ante, 818 to 826, contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and as usual in such cases; whereupon the said C. D. after being duly summoned, [ante, 827,] to answer the said charge, appeared before me, [or us] on the day of instant, at in the said and having heard the charge contained in the said information, [declared he was not guilty of the said offence, or did neglect and refuse to make any defence against the said charge.] Whereupon I, [or us], the said justice, [or justices,] did proceed to examine into the truth of the charge contained in the said information; and on the day of aforesaid, at in the county of E. upon his oath depose and saith, in the presence of the said C. D. that [here state the evidence, and as nearly as possible in the words used by the witness, ante, 839 to 843; and if more than one witness be examined, state the evidence given by each, thus:] and one other credible witness, to wit, G. H. of in the county of upon his oath depose and saith, in the presence of the said C. D. that [&c. stating his evidence, as noted on, ante, 839 to 843; and also a witness, produced and examined on the part of the said C. D. to wit, I. K. of in the county of upon his oath depose and saith, that [&c. stating his evidence.] Therefore, it manifestly appearing to me, [or us,] that the said C. D. is guilty of the offence charged upon him in the said information, I, [or us,] do hereby convict him of the offence aforesaid, [ante, 843,] and do declare and adjudge that he the said C. D. hath forfeited [ante, 843,] the sum of lawful money of Great Britain, for the offence aforesaid, to be distributed, [ante, 845,] [or paid, as the case may be,] according to the form of the statute in that case made and provided; [and also that the said C. D. shall forthwith pay unto the said A. B. the further sum of for his expenses in the prosecution in this behalf expended.] Given under my hand and seal, [or, our hands and seals,] the day of in the year of our Lord J. P.

(No. 6.)

[Proceed as directed in the above form (No. 5), and state the adjudication thus:] do declare and adjudge that the said C. D. for his said offence be imprisoned in the for the space of calendar months. Given under my hand, &c.

(No. 7.)

[Proceed as directed in the above form (No. 5), and state the adjudication thus:] do declare and adjudge that the said C. D. hath forfeited for his said offence the sum of lawful money of Great Britain, the one moiety thereof to the use and benefit of the other moiety to the [the informer, or as the statute directs,] according to the form of the statute in such case made and provided. And I, the said justice, seeing cause to mitigate or lessen the said penalty, do at the request of the said defendant, according to the statute, mitigate and lessen the same to the sum of over and above the reasonable costs and charges of the said informer, by him laid out and expended in and about the said information, &c. to be distributed and go and be applied, one moiety thereof to, &c. [as before,] and the other moiety to, &c. and which costs and charges of the said A. B. the said

(a) The 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, s. 1, ante, 836, prescribes this general form of conviction.
Conviction.

Forms.

payable, or could be legally levied." Per Curiam. "The return to the sumdam is good and sufficient; for although when a justice has once convicted a man he ought to proceed to enforce that conviction, yet if it is altogether a nullity the justice is not bound to proceed further in what subject himself to damages." It is, however, otherwise if the error be merely formal. R. v. Robinson, 2 Smith's Rep. 274; Dick. Sect. 590, 3d ed.

As to appeals and writs of habeas corpus and certiorari, see ante, Appeal, Certiorari, and post, Habeas Corpus, Vol. II.

As to the mode of enforcing the conviction, see ante, Commitment in Election, p. 278; post, Justice, Vol. I. Fines, Vol. II.; Recapitulation, Vol. I.

As to the liability of magistrates and officers, see Constables, ante, vol. post, Justice, Vol. III. p. 481, 487; and as to how far the conviction protects them, see post, Evidence, Vol. II. p. 51, 52.

---

Forms.

(No. 1.)

General form of information on a penal statute. (a)

Kent . [The venue.] BE it remembered, that on the day of in the year in the county, C. D. of the county aforesaid, [labourer,] who, as well for our sovereign lord the King, or who is as the poor of the parish of in the county, as for himself, doth present in behalf, (b) personally cometh before me J. P. one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, and as well for our said lord the King, or the poor of the parish aforesaid, [labourer,] as for himself, (b) informeth me that A. B. late of the parish of in the county aforesaid, [labourer,] within the space of six months (or whatever time is limited by the statute,) now last past, to wit, on the day of in the year aforesaid, the poor of the county aforesaid; [here state the facts and circumstances constituting the offence, ante; see the various titles of offence, contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided; whereby the force of the statute in such case made and provided, the said A. B. hath forfeited for a said offence the sum of . Wherefore the said C. D. [who may be the informer] prizeth the consideration of me the said justice in the premises, and that the said A. B. may be convicted of the offence aforesaid, (and that one moiety of the said forfeit may be adjudged to our said lord the King, and the other moiety thereof to be C. D. according to the form of the statute in that case made and provided); and of the said A. B. may be summoned to appear before me or some other justice, and on the premises, and make his defence thereeto.

J. P.

(No. 2.)

The like, stating several offences. (c)

[Proceed as in the above form to the asterisk, and then state the second subsequent offence, thus:] And also that the said A. B. on . at . [state the offence as directed in the above form to the asterisk, and conclude the information as in the above form,] wherefore the said C. D. &c.

(No. 3.)

General form of a summons.

County of . To the Constable of in the county of WHEREAS information and complaint have been made before me J. P. Exn. one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, that A. O. of the county aforesaid, [labourer,] on the day of now last past, at in the county aforesaid, did [here set forth the offence as charged in the information.] These are therefore requisite to appear forthwith to summon the said A. O. to appear before . in the said county, on the day of at the hour of the moon of the same day, to answer to the said information and complaint, and to be further dealt with according to law. And be you then there to certify what you have done in the premises. Herein fail you not. Given under my hand and seal this . day of in the year of our Lord .

J. P.

(a) See the observations as to the form of the information, ante, 818 to 825.

(b) If the penalty is given wholly to the informer, omit these words between brackets, and the other parts of the information not applicable to such a case.

(c) That several offences may be joined, see R. v. Swallow, 8 T. R. 296, ante, 849.
Forms.

(No. 4.)

County of ½ To the Constable

WHEREAS information hath been made before me J. P. Esquire, one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, that [here set forth the substance of the complaint]; and that A. W. of in the said county, [yeoman,] is a material witness to be examined concerning the same; these are therefore to require you to summon the said A. W. to appear before me at in the said county, on the day of at the hour of in the noon of the same day, to testify his knowledge concerning the premises. Herein fail you not. Given under my hand and seal, the day of in the year of the reign of . J. P.

(No. 5.)

County or as the case may be, of A. B. of in the county aforesaid [labourer,] personally came before me, J. P. one [or us two, &c.] of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, and informed [me, or us,] that C. D. of in the county of on the day of in the year aforesaid, at in the said did [here set forth the fact for which the information is laid, ante, 818 to 826,] contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided. Whereupon the said C. D. after being duly summoned [ante, 897,] to answer the said charge, appeared before me, [or us,] on the day of instant, at in the said and having heard the charge contained in the said information, [declared he was not guilty of the said offence, did neglect and refuse to make any defence against the said charge. Whereupon I, [or us,] the said justice, [or justices,] did proceed to examine into the truth of the charge contained in the said information: and on the day of aforesaid, at in the county of upon his oath deposeth and saith, in the presence of the said C. D. that [here state the evidence, and as nearly as possible in the words used by the witness, ante, 839 to 843; and if more than one witness be examined, state the evidence given by each, thus]: and one other credible witness, to wit, G. H. of in the county of upon his oath deposeth and saith, in the presence of the said C. D. that [&c. stating his evidence, as noted on, ante, 839 to 843]; and also a witness, produced and examined on the part of the said C. D. to wit, I. K. of in the county of upon his oath deposeth and saith, that, [&c. stating his evidence.] Therefore, it manifestly appearing to me, [or us,] that he the said C. D. is guilty of the offence charged upon him in the said information, I, [or us,] do hereby convict him of the offence aforesaid, [ante, 843,] and do declare and adjudge that he the said C. D. hath forfeited [ante, 843,] the sum of lawful money of Great Britain, for the offence aforesaid, to be distributed, [ante, 845,] [or paid, as the case may be,] according to the form of the statute in that case made and provided: and also that the said C. D. shall forthwith pay unto the said A. B. the further sum of five pounds and sixpence [ante, 845,] by him the said A. B. abouted in this behalf expended. Given under my hand and seal, [or, our hands and seals,] the day of in the year of our Lord . J. P.

(No. 6.)

[Proceed as directed in the above form (No. 5), and state the adjudication thus]:

do declare and adjudge that the said C. D. for his said offence be imprisoned in the [there to be kept to hard labour,] for the space of calendar months. Given under my hand, &c.

(No. 7.)

[Proceed as directed in the above form (No. 5), and state the adjudication thus]:

do declare and adjudge that the said C. D. hath forfeited for his said offence the sum of lawful money of Great Britain, the one moiety thereof to the use of the other moiety to [the informer, or as the statute directs,] according to the form of the statute in such case made and provided. And I the said justice, seeing cause to mitigate or lessen the said penalty, do at the request of the said defendant, according to the statute, mitigate and lessen the same to the sum of over and above the reasonable costs and charges of the said informer, by him laid out and expended in and about the said information, &c. to be distributed and go and be applied, one moiety thereof to, &c. [as before,] and the other moiety to, &c. and which costs and charges of the said A. B. the said

(a) The 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, s.1, ante, 836, prescribes this general form of conviction.

3 1 2
Conviction.

County [as the case may be] it remembered, that on the day of in the year of of our Lord at in the county of A. B. in the county aforesaid. [labourer,] personally came before me J. P. one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, and informed me that C. D. of the said county, did [here set forth the fact for which the information is laid]; contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided. Whereupon the said C. D. after being duly summoned to answer the said charge, appeared before me on the day of instant, at in the said county; and having heard the charge contained in the said information, acknowledged and voluntarily confessed the same to be true. Therefore, it manifestly appearing, &c. [as in the first form, from the * to the end.]

Copy of Conviction. See ante, p. 848.

Cordage for Shipping.

I. Cordage for Shipping, 852.
[26 Geo. III. c. 85.]

II. Stores of War. See post, Store, Vol. V.
Cordage for Shipping.

I. Cordage for Shipping.

By the 25 Geo. III. c. 56, s. 2, no person, after the 25th July, 1785, shall use, in the making of cables, hawser, or other ropes for the use of shipping, or knowingly sell the same, in the manufacturing whereof there shall be used any hemp, usually known by the names of short chucking, half clean, whale line, or other toppings, cordilla, damaged hemp bought at a public or other sales, or any hemp from which the staple part thereof shall have been taken away by the manufacturer; on pain of forfeiting (if he be the manufacturer thereof) such cable, hawser, or other rope, and treble the value thereof; and the vender thereof, knowingly, (and not being the manufacturer,) shall forfeit treble the value thereof.

By sect. 3 & 4. For better distinguishing the quality of such cables, &c. whenever the same shall be manufactured in whole or in part of any hemp, the use whereof is not prohibited by this act, and the quality whereof shall be inferior to clean Petersburg hemp, the same shall be deemed inferior cordage, and the maker shall distinguish the same by running from end to end of each cable three tarred mark-yarns, spun with turn contrary to that of rope yarn, and also one like tarred yarn in every other rope for the use of shipping; and shall mark or write on a tally to be affixed thereon the word staple or inferior (as the case shall be), and also his name signed by himself or his attorney, together with the name of the place where manufactured; and in default thereof every such manufacturer shall for every offence forfeit 10s. for every hundred weight.

Sect. 5. And if any rope-maker shall wilfully and knowingly permit or suffer his name to be put as aforesaid on the tally of any cable, &c. not being of his own proper manufacturing; or if the vender or proprietor of any such cable, &c. or any other person whomsoever wilfully and knowingly mark upon the tally affixed thereon the name of any person, not being the manufacturer thereof, he shall forfeit 20l.

Sect. 6. And if any person shall make any cables of any old or worn stuff, which shall contain above seven inches in compass, he shall forfeit four times the value thereof.

Sect. 8. And when any ship belonging to any of his Majesty's subjects resident in Great Britain or in the British colonies shall come into any port in this kingdom, the master at the time of making his entry at the custom-house shall make entry on oath of all foreign made cordage on board, for which no duties have been paid (standing and running rigging in use excepted); and such master shall, before such ship be cleared inwards, where any discharge shall be made of her lading, pay for such foreign made cordage, as shall be specified or mentioned in the said entry, the like duties as by the laws now in being are charged upon foreign made cordage imported into this kingdom; and if such master shall make default herein, such foreign made cordage on board such ship shall be forfeited, and he shall also forfeit 20s. for every hundred weight thereof.

Sect. 9 & 10. But the same shall not extend to cordage brought from the East Indies; nor to the materials at present in the use of any ship built abroad before the passing of this act, the property of any British subject.

Sect. 7. All pecuniary penalties or forfeitures by this act imposed exceeding 5l. are to be recovered in the courts of Westminster; if not exceeding 5l. the same may be levied by distress, by one justice, on the oaths of two witnesses; and if sufficient distress cannot be found, such justice shall commit the offender to the common gaol or house of correction for any time not exceeding three calendar months, nor less than seven days, or until such penalty and all costs and charges attending the same shall be paid. And all such penalties and forfeitures, and also all cordage which shall be forfeited, shall be paid and delivered to the person who shall sue, who may sell or otherwise dispose of such cordage (after being cut into lengths not exceeding twelve feet) to his own use.

Sect. 11. Provided, that if any person shall think himself aggrieved by any thing done in pursuance of this act, and for which no particular method of Cordage to be distinguished as staple and inferior.

And maker's name to be affixed.

Penalty on putting a false name on cordage.

Penalty on making cables of old stuff.

Importing cordage.

Penalties how to be recovered and applied.
Cordage for shipping. Proceedings not to be quashed, nor distress unlawful for want of form.

Stores of war.

Corn.

Relief is appointed, he may, within four months after such matter done, appeal to the sessions, giving fourteen days' notice, in writing, of his intention to appeal and the matter thereof to the person appealed against, and within four days after giving such notice entering into recognizance before some justice for the county, city, or place, with two sureties, to try such appeal, and abide the order, and pay such costs as shall be awarded at such sessions; and on due proof of such notice, the justices at such sessions shall hear and finally determine such appeal, and award such costs as they shall think proper.

Sect. 12. And no order, verdict, judgment, or other proceeding shall be quashed for want of form only, or be removed by certiorari, or any other writ or process whatsoever; and where any distress shall be made, it shall not be deemed unlawful, nor the party making the same trespassers ab initio for want of form or any irregularity; but the persons aggrieved may recover damages in an action on the case, provided sufficient amends have not been made before action brought.

As to stores of war, see post, Stores. Vol. V.

Corn.

I. The Measure of Corn: Corn Rents, 854.

II. Cutting Corn growing, or burning Stacks of Corn, 854.

III. Ascertaining the Price of Grain for regulating the Importation and Exportation, 855 to 870.

IV. Obstructing the free Passage of Corn, 870.

I. The Measure of Corn.—Corn Rents.

Buying corn in the sheaf without measuring. Measure of corn. 5 Geo. 4, c. 74. Corn rent. Cutting corn growing.

To buy or sell corn in the sheaf, before it is threshed and measured, is against the common law of England; and the reasons thereof seemeth to be for that by such sale the market is in effect forestalled. 3 Inst. 197.

The 22 Car. II. c. 8, a. 2, 3, and 22 Car. II. c. 12, (a) relating to the selling or buying of corn otherwise than by particular measure, are repealed by stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 74, a. 23. See stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 74, a. 23, tit. Rights &c., pointing out the law as to measures in general.

For the mode of ascertaining rents, &c., payable in grain, malt, or other commodity, in England and Ireland, see 5 Geo. IV. c. 74, a. 17, 18, tit. Rights and Measures, Vol. V.

II. Cutting Corn growing, or Burning Stacks of Corn.

By the 43 Eliz. c. 7, a. 1 & 2, it was enacted, that every person who should unlawfully cut or take away any corn or grain growing, being convicted thereof by confession, or oath of one witness before one justice, should for the first offence pay such damages as the justice should appoint; and if the justice should think him not able or sufficient, or if he did not pay such damages, he should commit him to the constable where the offence was committed, or where the party was apprehended, there to be whipped; and for every other offence he should in like manner be whipped. The constable refusing was to be committed by the justice till he conform. But this act was totally repealed by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, and though not re-enacted in express words, it is so in effect by the 24th section of 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30. See post, Malicious Injuries to Property, Vol. III. p. 741.

(a) In R. v. Mayer, 4 T. R. 750, decided before the passing of the 5 Geo. IV. it was held illegal to sell corn by any other measure than the Winchester bushel. In R. v. Arnold, 5 T. R. 358, Paley, 83, a conviction for buying a certain quantity of wheat, to wit, fifteen bushels, contrary to 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 12, was held sufficiently certain.

If a person feloniously cut it at one time, and then come again at another time and take it away, it may amount to a felony. 1 Hawk. c. 33, a. 21. See post, Retteng, Vol. III. p. 531 to 533.

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, a. 17, it is enacted, "that if any person shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any stack of corn, grain, pulse, straw, hay, or wood, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall suffer death as a felon; and if any person shall unlawfully and maliciously set fire to any crop of corn, grain, or pulse, whether standing or cut down, or to any part of a wood, coppice, or plantation of trees, or to any heath, gorze, furze, or fern, wheresoever the same may be growing; every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for the term of seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years; and, if a male, to be once, twice, or thrice publicly or privately whipped (if the court shall so think fit), in addition to such imprisonment."

See in general Burning, ante, 540, where this offence has already been treated of, and the general clauses, post, Malicious Injuries to Property, Vol. III. p. 722 to 727.

As to the liability of the hundred, see post, Hundred, Vol. III.

III. Ascertaining the Price of Corn for regulating the Importation and Exportation, &c.

The act now in force relative to this subject is the 9 Geo. IV. c. 60, intituled, "An Act to amend the laws relating to the importation of corn." This act being of so much general public importance, and containing many enactments which affect the office of magistrates, it is thought fit to insert the whole of it.

The first section, after reciting the 55 Geo. III. c. 26, 3 Geo. IV. c. 60, and 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 58, repeals the same, "provided nevertheless, that all acts or parts of acts, which by virtue of the above recited acts or either of them were repealed, shall still be deemed and taken to be and remain repealed: provided also, that all actions, suits, and prosecutions now depending or hereafter to be brought for or by reason of any breach or non-performance of any of the provisions of the said acts, or for the recovery of any duties or sums of money payable under and by virtue of the same, shall and may be proceeded with as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if this present act had not been made."

Sect. 2. "And whereas an act was passed in the sixth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled, 'An Act for granting duties of customs,' whereby certain duties were imposed on the importation of buck wheat and Indian corn, and it is expedient that the said duties should be repealed, it is enacted, that so much of the said act passed in the sixth year of his Majesty's reign, as imposes duties on the importation of buck wheat and Indian corn, shall be and the same is hereby repealed."

Sect. 3. "And whereas it is expedient that corn, grain, meal, and flour, the growth, produce, and manufacture of any foreign country, or of any British possession out of Europe, should be allowed to be imported into the United Kingdom for consumption, upon the payment of duties to be regulated from time to time according to the average price of British corn made

So much of 6 Geo. 4, c. 111, as imposes duties on buck wheat and Indian corn repealed.

Foreign corn may be imported on payment of the duties specified in the table to this act.
up and published in manner hereinafter required; it is enacted, that there shall be levied and paid to his Majesty upon all corn, grain, meal, or flour entered for home consumption in the United Kingdom from parts beyond the seas the several duties specified and set forth in the table annexed to this Act, and the said duties shall be raised, levied, collected, and paid in such and the same manner in all respects as the several duties of customs mentioned and enumerated in the table of duties of customs inwardly annexed to the said Act passed in the sixth year of the reign of his Majesty, and by virtue and in pursuance of the several powers and provisions in that Act contained, and not otherwise."

Sect. 4. "That no corn, grain, meal, or flour shall be shipped from any part in any British possession out of Europe, as being the produce of any such possession, until the owner or proprietor or shipper thereof shall have made and subscribed before the collector or other chief officer of customs at the port of shipment, a declaration in writing specifying the quantity of each sort of such corn, grain, meal or flour, and that the same was the produce of some British possession out of Europe to be named in such declaration, nor shall such owner or proprietor or shipper shall have obtained from the collector or other chief officer of the customs at the said port a certificate under the signature of the quantity of corn, grain, meal, or flour so declared to be shipped; and before any corn, grain, meal, or flour shall be entered at any port or place in the United Kingdom, as being the produce of any British possession out of Europe, the master of the ship importing the same shall produce and deliver to the collector or other chief officer of customs at the port or place of importation a copy of such declaration, certified to be true and accurate copy thereof under the hand of the collector or other chief officer of customs at the port of shipment before whom the same was made together with the certificate signed by the said collector or other chief officer of customs, of the quantity of corn so declared to be shipped; and such master shall also make and subscribe before the collector or other chief officer of customs at the port or place of importation a declaration in writing that the several quantities of corn, grain, meal or flour on board of said ship, and proposed to be entered under the authority of such declaration, are the same that were mentioned and referred to in the declaration and certificate produced by him, without any admixture or addition; and if any person shall in any such declaration wilfully and corruptly make any false statement respecting the place of which any such corn, grain, meal, or flour was the produce, or respecting the identity of any such corn, grain, meal, or flour, such person shall forfeit and become liable to pay to his Majesty the sum of 100L., and the corn, grain, meal, or flour to such person belonging, on board any such ship, shall also be forfeited, and such forfeitures shall and may be sued for, prosecuted, recovered, and applied in such and the same manner in all respects as any forfeiture incurred under and by virtue of the said Act passed in the sixth year of his Majesty's reign: provided always, that the declarations aforesaid shall not be required in respect of any corn, grain, meal or flour which shall have been shipped within three months next after the passing of this Act."

Sect. 5. "That it shall not be lawful to import from parts beyond the seas into the United Kingdom for consumption there any malt, or to import for consumption into Great Britain any corn ground, except wheat meal, wheat flour, and oatmeal, or to import for consumption any corn ground into Ireland; and that if any such article as aforesaid shall be imported contrary to the provisions aforesaid, the same shall be forfeited."

Sect. 6. "That the commissioners of his Majesty's customs shall cause in each calendar month cause to be published in the London Gazette an account of the total quantity of each sort of the corn, grain, meal, and flour respectively, which shall have been imported into the United Kingdom; and also an account of the total quantity of each sort of the corn, grain, meal, and flour respectively, upon which the duties of importation shall have been paid in the United Kingdom during the calendar month next preceding, together with an account of the total quantity of each sort of the said corn, III. Price, Importation and Exportation.

grain, meal, and flour respectively remaining in warehouse at the end of such next preceding calendar month."

Sect. 7. "That if it shall be made to appear to his Majesty in council that any foreign state or power hath subjected British vessels at any port within the dominions of such state or power to any other duties or charges whatever than are levied on national vessels at any such port, or hath subjected at any such port goods of the growth, produce, or manufacture of any of his Majesty’s dominions when imported from any of such dominions in British vessels, to any other or higher duties or charges whatever than are levied on such or the like goods of whatever growth, produce, or manufacture when so imported in national vessels, or hath subjected at any port or place within the dominions of such foreign state or power, any article of the growth, produce, or manufacture of his Majesty’s dominions when imported from any of such dominions in British or in national vessels to any duties or charges which would not be payable on the like article being of the growth, produce, or manufacture of any other country, and imported from such other country in national vessels; or that any such foreign state or power hath granted any bounties, drawbacks, or allowances upon the exportation from any port or place within the dominions thereof of any articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of the dominions of any other foreign state or power which hath not also been granted upon the exportation from such port or place of such or the like articles, being the growth, produce, or manufacture of his Majesty’s dominions; then and in any of the cases aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for his Majesty by any order or orders to be by him made, with the advice of his privy council, to prohibit the importation of all or of any sort of corn, grain, meal, or flour from the dominions of any such foreign state or power; and it shall also be lawful for his Majesty from time to time, with the advice of his privy council, to revoke and to renew any such orders or order as aforesaid, as there shall be occasion."

Sect. 8. "And whereas it is necessary for regulating the amount of such duties that effectual provision should be made for ascertaining from time to time the average prices of British corn, it is enacted, that weekly returns of the purchases and sales of British corn shall be made in the manner herein-afte directed in the following cities and towns; that is to say, London, Exeter, Birmingham, Leeds, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Morpeth, Alnwick, Berwick-upon-Tweed, Carlisle, Whitehaven, Cockermouth, Penrith, Egremont, Appleby, Kirkby-in-Kendal, Liverpool, Ulverston, Lancaster, Preston, Wigan, Warrington, Manchester, Bolton, Chester, Nantwich, Middlewich, Four Lane Ends, Denbigh, Wrexham, Carnarvon, Haverford West, Carnarthen, Cardiff, Gloucester, Cirencester, Tewbury, Stow-on-the-Wold, Tewkesbury, Bristol, Taunton, Wells, Bridgwater, Frome, Chard, Monmouth, Abergavenny, Cefn-towell, Pont-y-Pool, Exeter, Barnstaple, Plymouth, Totness, Tavistock, Kingsbridge, Truro, Bodmin, Launceston, Redruth, Helston, Saint Austel, Blandford, Bridport, Dorchester, Sherbourne, Shaston, Wareham, Winchester, Andover, Basingstoke, Fareham, Havant, Newport, Ringwood, Southampton, and Portsmouth; and for the purpose of duly collecting and transmitting such weekly returns as aforesaid, there shall be appointed in each of the said cities and towns, in manner hereinafter directed, a fit and proper person to be the inspector of corn returns."

Weekly returns of purchases and sales of corn to be made in the places herein mentioned.
Sect. 9. "That it shall be lawful for his Majesty to appoint a fit and proper person to be comptroller of corn returns, for the purposes hereinafter mentioned, and to grant to such comptroller of corn returns such salary or allowances as to his Majesty shall seem meet; provided always, that no person shall be appointed to and shall hold such his office during his Majesty's pleasure, and not otherwise; and shall at all times conform to and obey such lawful instructions, touching the execution of the duties of such his office, shall from time to time be given to him by the lords of the committee of privy council appointed for the consideration of all matters relating to trade and foreign plantations."

Sect. 10. "That the said comptroller of corn returns before he enter the execution of such his office shall, before some or one of the barons of his Majesty's Court of Exchequer at Westminster, or before one of the masters in ordinary of the High Court of Chancery, take and subscribe an oath in the following words; that is to say,

"I, A. B. do swear, that I will, to the best of my skill and knowledge, and the office of comptroller of corn returns, according to the provisions of an act now in the ninth year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Fourth, intituled, [here set forth the title of this act]."

So help me God."

Sect. 11. "That the said comptroller of corn returns shall at all times execute the duties of such his office in person, and not by deputy; but that it shall and may be lawful for his Majesty to appoint a fit and proper person who shall act as deputy comptroller of corn returns, in case of the sickness or other incapacity of the said comptroller, or in case he the said comptroller should, with the permission of the lords of the said committee of privy council, be absent from the duties of such his office; and all and every the powers hereby vested in the said comptroller of corn returns, and all and every the acts, matters, and things hereby directed to be done and performed by him, shall be vested in, and shall and may be done and performed by any such deputy as aforesaid, during the continuance of any such sickness, incapacity, or absence as aforesaid, of the said comptroller of corn returns; and such deputy shall hold such his office during his Majesty's pleasure, and not otherwise, and shall receive and be paid such salary and allowances as to his Majesty shall seem meet."

Sect. 12. "That it shall and may be lawful for the said comptroller of corn returns to send by the post to any part of the United Kingdom, and to receive by the post from any place whatever, any letters or packets relating exclusively to the duties of such his office, free from all duties of postage, provided that the words "on his Majesty's service" shall be written or printed on the outside of each of the said letters or packets so sent by the said comptroller of corn returns, and that such words shall be subscribed with the name of the said comptroller of corn returns in his handwriting; and also provided, that it shall be lawful for his Majesty's postmaster general, or for his secretary or other officer authorised by him in that behalf, to examine and search all such letters and packets, and to charge against the person or persons sending the same treble postage on any letter or packet which may be so sent, or by the said comptroller of corn returns contrary to the provisions of the act."

Sect. 13. "That it shall and may be lawful for the lord mayor and aldermen of the city of London, at a court to be holden for that purpose, and for or the majority of them present at such court are hereby authorised and required to nominate and appoint some fit and proper person to be inspector of corn returns for the city of London; and it shall be lawful for the said lord mayor and aldermen from time to time, as occasion may require, upon any misbehaviour or neglect of duty of any such inspector, to remove him from such his office by any order to be by them made at a court to be specially convened and holden for that purpose; and upon the death, resignation, permanent incapacity, or removal of any such inspector of corn returns for the city of London, it shall and may be lawful for the said lord mayor and aldermen, at a court to be holden for that purpose, and they or a majority of them present at any such court are hereby authorised and required, to nominate and appoint some fit and proper person to succeed to the said office."
III.]

Price, Importation and Exportation.

Sect. 14. "That the said inspector of corn returns for the city of London shall at all times execute the duties of such his office in person, and not by deputy; but that in case of the sickness or other temporary incapacity of the said inspector, it shall be lawful for the said lord mayor and aldermen of the city of London to appoint some fit and proper person to act as the deputy of the said inspector, during the continuance of any such sickness or incapacity as aforesaid of that officer, and no longer; and all and every the powers hereby vested in the said inspector of corn returns for the city of London, and all and every the acts, matters, and things hereby directed to be done and performed by him, shall and may be vested in, and be done and performed by any such deputy as aforesaid, during the continuance of such his appointment."

Sect. 15. "That no person shall be eligible or shall be appointed to the office of inspector or deputy inspector of corn returns for the city of London, who, within six months next preceding the time of any such appointment, shall have been engaged in trade or business as a miller, malster, or corn factor, or who during that period shall, as a merchant, clerk, agent, or otherwise, have bought corn for sale, or for the sale of meal, flour, malt, or bread made or to be made thereof; and if any inspector or deputy inspector of corn returns for the city of London shall, during his continuance in such his office, engage in trade or business as a miller, malster, or corn factor, or shall, as a merchant, clerk, agent, or otherwise, buy corn for sale, or for the sale of meal, flour, malt, or bread made or to be made thereof, he shall in manner aforesaid be removed from such his office, and from and after the time of such removal shall become incapable of acting as inspector of corn returns under this act."

Sect. 16. "That every inspector or deputy inspector of corn returns for the city of London shall, within one week after such his nomination and appointment, take and subscribe before the lord mayor, or one of the aldermen of the city of London, an oath, which oath the lord mayor or alderman is hereby authorised and required to administer, in the following words; (that is to say,)

"I, A. B. do swear, that I will at all times, as Inspector of corn returns for the city of London, [or, as deputy inspector of corn returns for the city of London, as the case may be,] make due and true returns to the comptroller of corn returns, appointed by virtue of an act passed in the ninth year of the reign of King George the fourth, intituled [here set forth the title of this act], and that I will in all things, to the best of my skill and judgment, conform myself to the directions of the said act. So help me God."

Sect. 17. "That every nomination and appointment so to be made as aforesaid, of any inspector of corn returns for the city of London, shall be enrolled at the next sessions of the peace to be holden in and for the said city, together with a certificate of the oath aforesaid having been taken, such certificate being signed by the lord mayor or aldermen before whom such oath shall have been so taken; and the said enrolment, or a copy thereof, certified under the hand of the clerk of the peace for the said city to be a true copy, shall for all intents and purposes be, and be deemed and taken to be good and conclusive evidence of any such appointment as aforesaid having been duly made.

Sect. 18. "That every person who shall carry on trade or business in the city of London, or within five miles from the Royal Exchange in the said city, as a corn factor, or as an agent employed in the sale of British corn, and every person who shall sell any British corn within the present corn exchange in Mark Lane in the said city, or within any other building or place which now is or may hereafter be used within the city of London, or within five miles from the Royal Exchange in the said city, for such and the like purposes for which the said corn exchange in Mark Lane hath been and is used, shall, before he or they shall carry on trade or business, or sell any corn in manner aforesaid, make and deliver to the lord mayor, or one of the aldermen of the city of London, a declaration in the following words:

(that is to say,

"I, A. B. do declare, that the returns to be by me made, conformably to enacted in the ninth year of the reign of King George the Fourth, intituled [here follow the title of this act], of the quantities and prices of British corn which hereafter shall be by or for me sold or delivered, shall, to the best of my knowledge and belief, contain the whole quantity, and no more, of the corn bought and delivered by or for me within the periods to which such returns respectively refer, with the prices of such corn, and the names of the buyers respectively, etc. the persons for whom such corn shall have been sold by me respectively; and in the best of my judgment the said returns shall in all respects be conformable to the provisions of the said act."

"Which declaration shall be in writing, and shall be subscribed with the hand of the person so making the same; and the lord mayor or such alderman as aforesaid of the city of London, for the time being, shall and he is hereby required to deliver a certificate thereof, under his hand, to the inspector of corn returns for the city of London, to be by him registered in a book to be by him provided and kept for that purpose."

Sect. 19. "That every such corn factor and other person as aforesaid, is hereinbefore required to make and who shall have made such declaration as aforesaid, shall and he or she is hereby required to return or cause to be returned, on Wednesday in each and every week, to the inspector of corn returns for the city of London, an account in writing, signed with his or her own name, or the name of his or her agent duly authorised in that behalf, of the quantities of each respective sort of British corn by him or her sold during the week ending on and including the next preceding Tuesday, with the prices thereof, and the amount of every parcel, with the total quantity and value of each sort of corn, and by what measure or weight the same was sold, and the names of the buyers thereof, and of the persons for and on behalf of whom such corn was sold; and it shall and may be lawful for such inspector of corn returns to deliver to any person making or tendering any such returns, a notice in writing, requiring him or her to declare and set forth therein where and by whom and in what manner any such British corn was delivered to the purchaser or purchasers thereof; and every person to whom any such notice shall be so delivered shall and he or she is hereby required to comply therewith, and to declare and set forth in such his or her return the several particulars aforesaid."

Sect. 20. "That the justices of the peace for the several and respective counties, ridings, or divisions thereof, in which the several cities and towns herein-before enumerated are situate, other than and except the city of London, shall and they are hereby authorised and required, at some quarter sessions held within or nearest to each of the said several cities and towns, to nominate and appoint some fit and proper person, residing within or near each and every of the said cities and towns respectively, to be the inspector of corn returns for such city or town, and from time to time, as occasion may require, upon the death, resignation, or removal of any such inspector of corn returns, to appoint a fit and proper person to succeed to such his office: and it shall be lawful for the said justices of the peace, by any order or orders to be by them made for that purpose at any such quarter sessions, or at any adjournment thereof, upon any misbehaviour or neglect of duty of any such inspector of corn returns as aforesaid, or for any other good and sufficient cause to them appearing, to remove from such his office any such officer; and in case of the sickness, absence, or temporary incapacity of any such inspector of corn returns, it shall be lawful for any two or more of the said justices, at any petty sessions of the peace to be holden at such city or town, or within the county, riding, or division thereof, in which the same is situate, to nominate and appoint a fit and proper person to act as and be inspector of corn returns for such city or town, until the next general quarter sessions of the peace to be holden as aforesaid, and no longer."
Sect. 21. "That within each and every of the cities and towns aforesaid, (other than the cities of London and Oxford, and town of Cambridge,) being a county of itself, or having an exempt jurisdiction, and not contributing to the rates of the county, riding, or division in which the same is situate, the mayor or other chief officer, and the justices of the peace assembled at the general quarter sessions of any such city or town, or at any adjournment thereof, shall have, enjoy, and exercise all and every the powers herein-before vested as aforesaid in the justices of the peace for the several and respective counties, and riding or divisions thereof aforesaid, assembled at their general quarter sessions; and such mayor or other chief officer shall, within such last mentioned cities and towns, have, enjoy, and exercise the powers herein-before vested as aforesaid in the justices of the peace for the said several and respective counties, ridings, or divisions thereof, assembled at any petty sessions; and that within the city of Oxford and the town of Cambridge, all and every the powers and authorities aforesaid shall be and the same are hereby vested in the chancellors, masters, and scholars, and their successors, of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge respectively, who shall have and enjoy, and are hereby authorised and required to exercise respectively, all and every such powers and authorities within the said city of Oxford and town of Cambridge respectively."

Sect. 22. "That no person shall be eligible or shall be appointed to the office of inspector of corn returns under this act, for any of the cities and towns aforesaid, who within twelve calendar months next preceding the time of any such appointment hath been engaged in trade or business as a miller, maltster, or corn factor, or who during that period hath, as a merchant, clerk, agent, or otherwise, bought corn for sale, or for the sale of meal, flour, malt, or bread made or to be made thereof; and if any person, who shall in manner aforesaid be nominated and appointed to be the inspector of corn returns for any such city or town, shall, during his continuance in such office, engage in trade or business as a miller, maltster, or corn factor, or shall, as a merchant, clerk, agent, or otherwise, buy corn for sale, or for the sale of meal, flour, malt, or bread made or to be made thereof, he shall in manner aforesaid be removed from such his office, and from and after the time of such removal shall become incapable of acting as an inspector of corn returns under this act."

Sect. 23. "That every person so appointed inspector of corn returns for any city or town, other than the city of London, shall, before he enters on the discharge of the duties of such his office, take and subscribe before some one justice of the peace for the county, riding, division, city, or town within which he shall reside, or oath, or being one of the people called Quakers, the affirmation following, (which oath or affirmation all such justices are hereby authorised and required to administer); that is to say,

"I A. B. do swear, [or affirm,] that I will at all times, as inspector of corn returns for the city [or town] of , make due and true returns to the comptroller of corn returns appointed by virtue of an act passed in the ninth year of the reign of King George the Fourth, intituled [here set forth the title of this act,] of the quantities and prices of British corn in the said city, [or town,] of according to the accounts to be delivered to me in pursuance of the said act; and that I will in all things, to the best of my skill and judgment, conform myself to the directions of the said act."

Sect. 24. "That every nomination and appointment, so to be made as aforesaid, of any inspector of corn returns for any of the cities and towns aforesaid, other than the city of London, shall be enrolled at some session of the peace to be held in such cities and towns respectively, or in the respective counties, ridings, or divisions thereof, in which such towns are situate, or at some adjournment of such sessions, together with a certificate of the oath aforesaid having been taken by such inspector of corn returns, such certificate being signed by the justice of the peace before whom such oath shall have been so taken; and the said enrolment, or a copy thereof, certified under the hand of the clerk of the peace for any such city or town, county, riding, or division, shall for all intents and purposes be and be deemed and taken to be good and conclusive evidence of any such appointment as aforesaid having been duly made."

Sect. 25. "That every person who shall deal in British corn at or within any such city or town as aforesaid, or who shall at or within any such other city or town engage in or carry on the trade or business of a corn factor, miller, malster, brewer, or distiller, or who shall be the owner or proprietor, or an agent, owner or proprietor, of any stage coaches, waggoners, carts, or other carriage carrying goods or passengers for hire to and from any such city or town, at each and every person who, as a merchant, clerk, agent, or otherwise, shall purchase at any such city or town any British corn for sale, or for the making of meal, flour, malt, or bread made or to be made thereof, shall, before he shall so deal in British corn at any such city or town, or shall engage in or carry on any such trade or business as aforesaid, or shall purchase any British corn for any such purpose as aforesaid, at or within any such city or town, make and deliver, in manner herein-after mentioned, a declaration in the following words; that is to say,

"I A. B. do declare that the returns to be by me made conformably to the law passed in the ninth year of the reign of King George the Fourth, intitled [here set forth the title of this act], of the quantities and prices of British corn hereinafter shall be by or for me be bought, shall, to the best of my knowledge and belief, contain the whole quantity, and no more, of the British corn bought or paid for or by me within the periods to which such returns respectively shall refer, or the prices of such corn, and the names of the sellers respectively; and to the best of my judgment the said returns shall in all respects be conformable to the provisions of the said act."

"Which declaration shall be in writing, and shall be subscribed with the hand of the person so making the same, and shall by him or her, or by his or her agent, be delivered to the mayor or chief magistrate, or to some justice of the peace for such city or town, or for the county, riding, or division in which the same is situate, who are hereby required to deliver a certificate thereof to the inspector of corn returns for any such city or town as aforesaid to be by him registered in a book to be by him provided and kept for the purpose."

Sect. 26. "That it shall and may be lawful for any inspector of corn returns for the city of London, or for any such other city or town as aforesaid, to serve upon and deliver to any person buying or selling corn in any such city or town, and who is not within the terms and meaning of this present act specially required to make any such declaration as aforesaid, a notice in writing under the hand of such inspector, requiring him to make such declaration as aforesaid; and any person upon whom such notice shall be served as aforesaid shall and he is hereby required to comply with such notice and to make such declaration in such and the same manner in all respects as if he or she had been specially required to make the same by the express provisions of this present act."

Sect. 27. "That all persons who are herein-before required to make, and who shall have made such declaration as aforesaid, shall and they are hereby required, on the first market day which shall be holden in each and every week within each and every such city or town as aforesaid at or within which they shall respectively deal in corn, or engage in or carry on any such trade or business as aforesaid, or purchase any corn for any such purpose as aforesaid, to return or cause to be returned, to the inspector of corn returns for such city or town, an account in writing, signed with their names respectively, of the amount of each and every parcel of each respective sort of British corn so by them respectively bought during the week ending on and including the day next preceding such first market day as aforesaid, with the price thereof, and by what weight or measure the same was so bought and sold: and it shall and may be lawful for any such inspector of corn returns to deliver, to any person making or tendering any such return, a notice in writing, requiring him or her to declare and set forth therein where and by whom and in what manner any such British corn was delivered to him or her; and every person to whom any such notice shall be so delivered shall and he or she is hereby required to comply therewith, and to declare and set forth in such his or her return, or in a separate statement in writing, the several particulars aforesaid."

Sect. 28. "That no inspector of corn returns in the city of London, nor in any of the towns aforesaid, shall include, in the return so to be made by them as aforesaid to the comptroller of corn returns, any account of sales or purchases of corn, unless such inspector shall have received satisfactory proof that the person or persons tendering such account hath made the declaration herein-before required, and hath delivered the same to the mayor or chief magistrate, or to some justice of the peace of the city or town for which such inspector shall be so appointed to act, or to some justice of the peace for the county, riding, or division in which such city or town is situate."

Sect. 29. "That every such inspector of corn returns for the city of London, and for the several other cities and towns aforesaid, shall duly and regularly enter, in a book to be by him provided and kept for that purpose, the several accounts of the quantities and prices of corn returned to him by such persons respectively as aforesaid; and every such inspector of corn returns for the city of London, and for the several other cities and towns aforesaid, shall in each and every week return to the comptroller of corn returns an account of the weekly quantities and prices of the several sorts of British corn sold in the city or town for which he is appointed inspector, according to the returns so made to him as aforesaid, and in such form as shall be from time to time prescribed and directed by the said comptroller of corn returns; and the said returns shall be so made to the said comptroller by the inspector of corn returns for the city of London on Friday in each week, and by the inspector of corn returns for the several other cities and towns as aforesaid within three days next after the first market day held in each and every week in any such city or town."

Sect. 30. "That the average prices of all British corn, by which the rate and amount of the said duties shall be regulated, shall be made up and computed on Thursday in each and every week in manner following; that is to say, the said comptroller of corn returns shall on such Thursday in each week, from the returns received by him during the week next preceding, ending on and including the Saturday in such preceding week, add together the total quantities of each sort of British corn respectively appearing by such returns to have been sold, and the total prices for which the same shall thereby appear to have been sold, and shall divide the amount of such total prices respectively by the amount of such total quantities of each sort of British corn respectively, and the sum produced thereby shall be added to the sums in like manner produced in the five weeks immediately preceding the same, and the amount of such sums so added shall be divided by six, and the sum thereby given shall be deemed and taken to be the aggregate average price of each such sort of British corn respectively, for the purpose of regulating and ascertaining the rate and amount of the said duties; and the said comptroller of corn returns shall cause such aggregate weekly averages to be published in the next succeeding Gazette, and shall on Thursday in each week transmit a certificate of such aggregate average prices of each sort of British corn to the collector or other chief officer of the customs at each of the several ports of the United Kingdom; and the rate and amount of the duties to be paid under the provisions of this act shall from time to time be regulated and governed at each of the ports of the United Kingdom respectively by the aggregate average prices of British corn at the time of the entry for home consumption of any corn, grain, meal, or flour chargeable with any such duty, as such aggregate average prices shall appear and be stated in the last of such certificates as aforesaid which shall have been received as aforesaid by the collector or other chief officer of customs at such port."

Sect. 31. "That in the returns so to be made as aforesaid to the comptroller of corn returns, and in the publications so to be made from time to time in the London Gazette, and in the certificate so to be transmitted by the said comptroller of corn returns to such collectors or other chief officers of the customs as aforesaid, the quantities of each sort of British corn respectively shall be computed and set forth by, according, and with refer-to the imperial standard gallon, as the same is declared and established by a certain act passed in the fifth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled 'An Act for ascertaining and establishing uniformity of weights and measures,' as the said act is amended by a certain other act passed in the sixth year of his Majesty's reign, intituled 'An Act to prolong the time of the commenc-ment of an act of the last session of parliament, for ascertaining and establishing uniformity of weights and measures, and to amend the said act.'

Sect. 32. 'That until a sufficient number of weekly returns shall have been received by the said comptroller of corn returns under this act, to assert such aggregate average prices of British corn as aforesaid, the weekly average prices of British corn published by him immediately before the passgo of this act shall by him be used and referred to in making such calculation as aforesaid, in such and the same manner as if the same had been made up and taken under and in pursuance of this act.'

Sect. 33. 'That all corn or grain, the produce of the United Kingdom, shall be deemed and taken to be British corn for the purposes of this act.'

Sect. 34. 'That for the purpose of ascertaining the average price of corn and grain sold within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, it shall and may be lawful for his Majesty, by any order or orders to be by him made, by and with the advice of his privy council, to direct that the provisions of this act, so far as regards the appointment of inspectors and the making of weekly returns, shall be applicable to any cities or towns within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland which shall be named in any such order or orders in council: provided always, that the returns received from such towns shall not be admitted into the averages made up for the purpose of regulating the duties payable upon foreign corn, grain, meal or flour.'

Sect. 35. 'That the comptrollers of corn returns, and each and every inspector of corn returns, or other person who at or immediately before the time when this act shall come into operation shall hold any office or appointment under and by virtue of the act so passed as aforesaid in the seventh and eighth year of his Majesty's reign, or who shall be discharging any duties required of him by such lastmentioned act, shall and he is hereby authorised and required forthwith to act in such his office or appointment under and by virtue of this present act, and to discharge the several duties and belonging to such his former office or appointment, in such and the same manner and as fully and effectually, to all intents and purposes, as if he had been appointed to such his office or appointment as aforesaid under and by virtue of this present act; and that the person appointed to act as inspectors of corn returns for the city of London, under the act so passed as aforesaid in the seventh and eighth year of his Majesty's reign, shall, without further appointment, continue to act as such inspector under this act; until he shall die or resign such his office, or be removed therefrom by the lord mayor and aldermen of the city of London in manner aforesaid.'

Sect. 36. 'That if the said comptroller of corn returns shall at any time see cause to believe that any return so to be made as aforesaid to any such inspector of corn returns for the city of London, or for any other such city or town as aforesaid, is fraudulent or untrue, the said comptroller shall and he is hereby required, with all convenient expedition, to lay before the lords of the said committee of privy council a statement of the grounds of such belief; and if, upon consideration of any such statement, the said lords of the said committee shall direct the said comptroller to omit any such return in the computation of such aggregate weekly average price as aforesaid, then and in that case, but not otherwise, the said comptroller of corn returns shall and he is hereby authorised to omit any such return in the computation of such aggregate weekly average price.'
III.]

Price, Importation and Exportation.

Sect. 37. "That any corn factor, dealer, or other person, who at or previously to the time when this present act shall come into operation shall have made the declaration required of him in and by the said act so passed as aforesaid in the seventh and eighth year of his Majesty's reign, shall and he or she is hereby further required to make all such returns to such several inspectors of corn returns as aforesaid, and to perform and do all such acts, matters, and things, and to comply with and observe all such rules and regulations as are hereby required or directed of or in regard to persons who have made any declaration required of them in and by the present act, although he or she may not have actually made such last-mentioned declaration."

Sect. 38. "That the comptroller of corn returns shall and he is hereby authorised from time to time, in pursuance of any instructions which he shall receive in that behalf from the lords of the said committee of privy council, to issue to the several inspectors of corn returns any general or special directions respecting the inspection by any person or persons of the books so directed as aforesaid to be kept by every such inspector of corn returns; and no such inspector as aforesaid shall permit or suffer any person to inspect any such book, or to peruse or transcribe any entry therein, except in compliance with some such general or special directions from the said comptroller of corn returns as aforesaid."

Sect. 39. "That each and every inspector of corn returns shall and he is hereby required on each and every market day to put up or cause to be put up in the market place of the city or town for which he shall be appointed inspector, or if there shall be no market place in such city or town, then in some other conspicuous place therein, a copy of the last return made by him to the comptroller of corn returns, omitting the names of the parties who may have sold and bought the said corn; and every such inspector shall also again put up such account on the market day immediately following that on which it shall first have been put up, in case the same shall from accident or any other cause have been removed, and shall take due care that the same shall remain up for public inspection until a new account for the ensuing week shall have been prepared and set up."

Sect. 40. "That it shall and may be lawful for the commissioners of his Majesty's treasury of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, by any warrant or warrants to be for that purpose from time to time made and issued, to settle and allow such reasonable and moderate salaries as shall be paid and payable to the said several inspectors of corn returns for the city of London, and for the several other cities and towns aforesaid, for and in consideration of the duties so to be performed by them; provided that the salary so to be allowed to the inspector of corn returns in and for the city of London shall not in any one year exceed the sum of 300l., in consideration of which salary he shall and is hereby required to keep and maintain a proper and convenient apartment or place of business at or near to the said corn exchange in Mark Lane, for transacting the duties of such his office, and to defray all incidental charges and expenses of and attendant upon such his office: provided also, that the salary to be granted to any inspector of corn returns of any other of the cities and towns aforesaid shall not exceed 50l. in any one year for such inspector."

Sect. 41. "That the salaries aforesaid shall be paid by the collector or other chief officer of the customs or of the excise in or for the city or town for which each and every of the said inspectors respectively may be so appointed, by four quarterly payments; provided that no such quarterly payments aforesaid shall be made, unless the inspector of corn returns claiming the same shall first produce and deliver to such collector, or other chief officer of the customs or excise, a certificate under the hand of the comptroller of corn returns, certifying that such inspector hath duly made the returns required of him by this present act during the period in respect of which any such payment is to be made, and which certificate such comptroller is hereby required, on the application of any such inspector as aforesaid, to grant, unless any such inspector shall, without good and sufficient cause, have neglected or omitted to make such returns as aforesaid, or some of them: provided also, that if the duties of the said office of inspector of corn returns for the city of London shall, during any such quarter of a year as aforesaid, have been discharged wholly or in part by a deputy, the complecte of corn returns shall in such certificate as aforesaid specify the length of time during which such deputy hath so acted, and the whole or a proportionate part, as the case may be, of any such quarterly payment, shall in that case be paid to the said deputy; and if the duties of inspector of corn returns for any other of the cities and towns aforesaid shall during any such quarter of a year be performed successively by two or more persons, the complecte of corn returns shall in like manner specify the length of time during which each such person hath so performed the said duties, and a proportionate part of any such quarterly payment shall in that case be paid to the several persons respectively performing the said duties.

Sect. 42. "That if any person who is hereby required to make and deliver the declaration or declarations herein-before particularly mentioned and set forth, or either of them, shall not make and deliver such declaration or declarations at the time, and in the form and manner, and to the person or persons, herein-before directed and prescribed in that behalf, every person offending shall forfeit and pay the sum of 20l. for each and every such neglect or delay in making and delivering any such declaration; and if any person who is herein-before required to make and deliver to any such inspector of corn returns as aforesaid shall not make such returns to such inspector, at the time and in the form and manner herein-before directed and prescribed, every such offender shall for such his default forfeit and pay the sum of 20l."

Sect. 43. "That all and every the penalties aforesaid shall and may be prosecuted, sued for and recovered by and to the use of any person who shall sue for the same, before any two justices of the peace acting in and for the city, town, county, riding, or division within which the offence shall have been committed; and upon conviction of any such offender before any of the justices of the peace, either by the confession of the party offending or by the oath of any credible witness or witnesses (which oath such justices are hereby authorized to administer), the amount of such penalties and forfeitures shall be levied, together with the costs attending the information and conviction, to be assessed and allowed by such justices, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the party or parties offending, by warrant under the hands and seals of such justices (which warrant such justices are hereby empowered and required to grant); and the overplus (if any), after such parties, forfeitures and fines, and the charges of such distress and sale, are deducted, shall be returned, upon demand, unto the owner or owners of such goods and chattels; and in case such fines, penalties and forfeitures shall so be forthwith paid upon conviction, then it shall be lawful for such justices to order the offender or offenders so convicted to be detained and kept in such custodial until return can be conveniently made to such warrant of distress unless the offender or offenders shall give sufficient security, to the satisfaction of such justices, for his or their appearance before such justices on some day or days as shall be appointed for the return of such warrant of distress such day or days not being more than seven days from the time of taking any such security, and which security the said justices are hereby empowered to take by way of recognizance or otherwise; but if upon the return of such warrant it shall appear that no sufficient distress can be had thereupon, then it shall be lawful for any such justices of the peace as aforesaid, and they or any of them, to order such offender or offenders to be committed to the common gaol or house of correction of the city, town, county, riding, or district, where the offender shall be or reside, there to remain, without bail or mercy, for any term not exceeding three calendar months, unless such penalties, forfeitures and fines, and all reasonable charges attending the same, shall be sooner paid and satisfied."
Sect. 44. "That it shall and may be lawful for the lords of the said committee of privy council, by any order to be made by them, and issued under the hands of one of the clerks of his Majesty’s most honourable privy council, to stay the proceedings upon any information before any such justices of the peace as aforesaid, for the penalties aforesaid, or any of them; and that it shall also be lawful for any justices of the peace, before whom any person shall be convicted of any offence against this act, if he or they shall think proper, to mitigate or reduce the penalty incurred by such person, so as such reduction or mitigation do not exceed two thirds of the penalty to which such person would be liable under this act."

Sect. 45. "That if any person who shall be summoned as a witness to give evidence before any justices of the peace, touching any matter of fact contained in any information or complaint for any offence against this act, either on the part of the prosecutor or of the person or persons accused, shall, after a reasonable sum of money for his or her charges and expenses shall have been paid or been tendered to him or her, refuse or neglect to appear at the time and place for that purpose appointed, without a reasonable excuse for his, her or their neglect, or appearing shall refuse to be examined on oath and give evidence before such justices of the peace, then and in either of such cases such person shall forfeit for every such offence any sum not exceeding 10s., to be recovered in the manner herein-before provided for the recovery of the several penalties aforesaid."

Sect. 46. "That if any person shall make any false and fraudulent statement in any such return as he is herein-before directed and required to make, or shall falsely and wilfully include or procure or cause to be included in any such return any British corn which was not truly and bona fide sold or bought to, by, or on behalf of the person or persons in any such return mentioned in that behalf, in the quantity and for the price therein stated and set forth, every such offender shall be and be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour."

Sect. 47. "That nothing in this act contained shall extend to alter the present practice of measuring corn, or any of the articles aforesaid, to be shipped from or to be landed in the port of London; but that the same shall be measured by the sworn meters appointed for that purpose, by whose certificate the searchers or other proper officers of his Majesty’s customs are hereby empowered and required to certify the quantity of corn or other articles as aforesaid so shipped or landed; and that nothing in this act contained shall extend to lessen or take away the rights and privileges of, or the tolls or duties due and payable to, the mayor and commonalty and citizens of the city of London, or to the mayor of the said city for the time being, or to take away the privileges of any persons lawfully deriving title from or under them."

Sect. 48. "That if any action or suit shall be brought or commenced against any person or persons for any thing by him, her, or them done, by virtue or in pursuance of this act, such action or suit shall be commenced within three months next after the matter or thing done, and shall be laid in the proper county; and the defendant or defendants in such action or suit shall and may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon; and if afterwards a verdict shall pass for the defendant or defendants, or the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall discontinue his, her, or their action or actions, or be nonsuited, or judgment shall be given against him, her, or them, upon demurrer or otherwise, then such defendant or defendants shall have treble costs awarded to him, her, or them, against such plaintiff or plaintiffs."

The act then gives the following table of duties:
TABLE OF DUTIES TO WHICH THIS ACT REFERS.

If imported from any foreign country:

Wheat:—
According to the average price of wheat, made up and published in manner required by law; videlicet,

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Price Range</th>
<th>Duty per Quarter</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>62s. and under 63s.</td>
<td>4s.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>63s. and under 64s.</td>
<td>3s.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>64s. and under 65s.</td>
<td>2s.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>65s. and under 66s.</td>
<td>1s.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>66s. and under 67s.</td>
<td>10d.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>67s. and under 68s.</td>
<td>0s.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>68s. and under 69s.</td>
<td>1s.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>69s. and under 70s.</td>
<td>13d.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>70s. and under 71s.</td>
<td>16d.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>71s. and under 72s.</td>
<td>18d.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>72s. and under 73s.</td>
<td>21d.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>At or above 73s.</td>
<td>2s.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

And in respect of each integral shilling, or any part of each integral shilling, by which such price shall be under 61s., such duty shall be increased by 1s.

Barley:—
Whenever the average price of barley, made up and published in manner required by law, shall be 33s. and under 34s. the quarter, the duty shall be for every quarter 0s. 12d.

And in respect of every integral shilling by which such price shall be above 33s., such duty shall be decreased by 1s. 6d., until such price shall be 41s.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Price Range</th>
<th>Duty per Quarter</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>At or above 41s.</td>
<td>0s.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Under 33s. and not</td>
<td>3s.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>above 32s.</td>
<td>0s.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>And in respect of</td>
<td>0s.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>each integral shilling, by which such price shall be</td>
<td>0s. 10d.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>under 32s., such</td>
<td>0s.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>duty shall be</td>
<td>0s.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>increased by 1s. 6d.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Oats:—
Whenever the average price of oats, made up and published in manner required by law, shall be 25s. and under 26s. the quarter, the duty shall be for every quarter 0s. 9d.

And in respect of every integral shilling by which such price shall be above 25s., such duty shall be decreased by 1s. 6d., until such price shall be 31s.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Price Range</th>
<th>Duty per Quarter</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>At or above 31s.</td>
<td>0s.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>And in respect of</td>
<td>0s.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>each integral shilling, by which such price shall be</td>
<td>0s. 10d.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>under 32s., such</td>
<td>0s.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>duty shall be</td>
<td>0s.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>increased by 1s. 6d.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
III.]

Table of Duties.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>OATS—(continued.)</th>
<th>£</th>
<th>s.</th>
<th>d.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Whenever such price shall be under 25s. and not under 24s., the duty shall be for every quarter</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>And in respect of each integral shilling, or any part of each integral shilling, by which such price shall be under 24s., such duty shall be increased by 1s. 6d.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>15</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>RYE, PEASE AND BEANS:—</th>
<th>£</th>
<th>s.</th>
<th>d.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Whenever the average price of rye, or of pease, or of beans, made up and published in manner required by law, shall be 36s. and under 37s. the quarter, the duty shall be for every quarter</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>And in respect of every integral shilling by which such price shall be above 36s., such duty shall be decreased by 1s. 6d., until such price shall be 46s. Whenever such price shall be at or above 46s., the duty shall be for every quarter</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>16</td>
<td>9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>And in respect of each integral shilling, or any part of each integral shilling, by which such price shall be under 35s., such duty shall be increased by 1s. 6d.</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>15</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>WHEAT MEAL AND FLOUR:—</th>
<th>£</th>
<th>s.</th>
<th>d.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>For every barrel, being 196 lbs.:—a duty equal in amount to the duty payable on 38½ gallons of wheat.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>OATMEAL:—</th>
<th>£</th>
<th>s.</th>
<th>d.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>For every quantity of 181½ lbs.:—a duty equal in amount to the duty payable on a quarter of oats.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>MAIZE OR INDIAN CORN, BUCK WHEAT, BEER OR BIGG:—</th>
<th>£</th>
<th>s.</th>
<th>d.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>For every quarter:—a duty equal in amount to the duty payable on a quarter of barley.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

—If the produce of and imported from any British possession in North America, or elsewhere out of Europe:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>WHEAT:—</th>
<th>£</th>
<th>s.</th>
<th>d.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>For every quarter</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>—Until the price of British wheat, made up and published in manner required by law, shall be 67s. per quarter. Whenever such price shall be at or above 67s., the duty shall be for every quarter</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>BARLEY:—</th>
<th>£</th>
<th>s.</th>
<th>d.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>For every quarter</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>—Until the price of British barley, made up and published in manner required by law, shall be 34s. per quarter. Whenever such price shall be at or above 34s., the duty shall be for every quarter</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>OATS:—</th>
<th>£</th>
<th>s.</th>
<th>d.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>For every quarter</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>—Until the price of British oats, made up and published in manner required by law, shall be 25s. per quarter. Whenever such price shall be at or above 25s., the duty shall be for every quarter</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>RYE, PEASE AND BEANS:—</th>
<th>£</th>
<th>s.</th>
<th>d.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>For every quarter</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>—Until the price of British rye, or of pease, or of beans, made up and published in manner required by law, shall be 41s. Whenever such price shall be at or above 41s., the duty shall be for every quarter</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
TABLE OF DUTIES.

Wheat Meal and Flour:—
For every barrel, being 196 lbs.: a duty equal in amount to the duty payable on 38½ gallons of wheat.

Oatmeal:—
For every quantity of 181½ lbs.: a duty equal in amount to the duty payable on a quarter of oats.

Maize or Indian Corn, Buck Wheat, Beer or Bigg:—
For every quarter: a duty equal in amount to the duty payable on a quarter of barley.

IV. Obstructing the Free Passage of Grain.

This offence is provided for by the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 26, and has been treated of, ante, 282, 283, title Assault, where precedents relating to the offence will be found. As to the liability of the hundred, see post, Mason Vol. III.

Coroner.(a)

Coroners are ancient officers by the common law, so called because they deal principally with the pleas of the crown, and were of old time the principal conservators of the peace. 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 1; see Jervis’s Cr. 1. 2, 3.

Concerning whom will be shown,

I. The different kinds of Coroners, 870.
II. Who may be a Coroner, 871.
III. Election of, 871.
IV. Duration of Office and removal of, 874.
V. Places where Coroner has Jurisdiction, 874,
VI. Power to appoint a Deputy, 874,
VII. Power and Duty in taking Inquisitions of Deaths: and how of the Forms of Inquisitions and other matters relating thereto, 875.
VIII. Power and Duty in other matters, 884.
IX. His Fees, 884.
X. Other Privileges, 885.
XI. Punishment, &c. for not doing his Duty, 885.
XII. Forms, 886.

I. Different kinds of Coroners.

Different kinds of. There are three kinds of coroners—viz. 1st. Those virtute officii, as the lord chief and puisne judges of the Court of King’s Bench; 4 Rep. 57 b; 4

(a) See the able and useful work of Mr. John Jervis on this subject. See 1 Chit. C. L. 163; 2 Hale’s P. C. index, Coroner, also Bac. Abr. Coroner; Com. Dig. Offic-
III. Election of.

The coroner (as of ancient time the sheriffs and conservators of the peace) shall be chosen in full bounty, that is, in the county court, by the commons of the same county. 28 Edw. III. c. 6.

And this must be in pursuance of the King's writ for that purpose, issuing out of and returnable into the Chancery: and none but freeholders have a voice at such election, for they only are suitors to the county court. 2 Hawk. c. 2, s. 5, 10.

The stat. 58 Geo. III. c. 95, after reciting, that "whereas there are no sufficient regulations for the election of coroners for counties," enacts, "that from and after the passing of this act, upon every election to be made of any coroner or coroners of any county in England and Wales, the sheriff of the county where such election shall be made shall hold his county court for the same election at the most usual place or places of election of coroners within the said county, and where the same have most usually been held for forty years last past, and shall there proceed to election at the next county court, unless the same fall out to be held within six days after the receipt of the writ de coronatore eligendo, or upon the same day; and then shall adjourn the same court to some convenient day, not exceeding fourteen days, giving ten days' notice of the time and place of election; and in case the said election be not determined upon the view, with the consent of the freeholders there present, but that a poll shall be demanded for determination thereof, then the said sheriff, or in his absence his under sheriff, with such others as shall be deputed by him, shall forthwith there proceed to take the said poll, in some public place, by the same sheriff, or his under sheriff as aforesaid in his absence, or others appointed for the taking thereof as aforesaid; and every such poll shall commence on the day upon which the same shall be demanded, and be duly and regularly proceeded in from day to day (Sunday excepted) until the same be finished; but so as that no poll for such election shall continue more than ten days at most (Sunday excepted), and the said poll shall be kept open seven hours at the least each day, between the hours of nine in the morning and five at night: and for the more due and orderly mode of proceeding.

To be chosen in the county court.

Commencement and duration of poll.

Election of.

Who may be coroner.

II. Who may be a Coroner.

Of ancient time this office was of great estimation; for none could have it under the degree of a knight. 3 Edw. I. c. 10; 4 Inst. 271; Jer. Cor. 2, (a).

And by stat. 14 Edw. III. st. 1, c. 8, no coroner shall be chosen unless he have land in fee sufficient in the same county whereof he may answer to all manner of people.

It is observable that no precise amount of estate is expressly required by this statute; but the coroner ought to have sufficient property to maintain the dignity of his office, and to answer any fine that may be set upon him for his misbehaviour. But if having an estate in fee within the county it be insufficient to answer his fines, that will not operate as a disqualification, or be a ground for his removal, if he be of sufficient estate to execute his office, for the county upon his default will be liable to the fine, as a punishment for having elected an insufficient officer. 2 H. P. C. 50; 2 Inst. 175; Jer. 9.
proceeding in the said poll, the said sheriff, or in his absence his under sherif, or such as he shall depute, shall appoint such number of clerks as shall seem meet or convenient for the taking thereof; which clerks shall take the said poll in the presence of the said sheriff, or his under sherif, such as he shall depute; and before they begin to take the said poll, each clerk so appointed shall by the said sheriff, or his under sherif, or such as he shall depute as aforesaid, be sworn truly and indifferently to take the said poll, and to set down the names of each freeholder, and the place of his abode and freehold, and the name of the occupier thereof, and for whom shall poll, and to poll no freeholder who is not sworn, if required to be sworn by the candidates or either of them, and which oaths of the said clerk, or the said sheriff, or his under sherif, or such as he shall depute, are hereby empowered to administer; and the sheriff, or in his absence his under sheriff, aforesaid, shall appoint for each candidate such one person as shall be nominated to him by each candidate, and be inspector of every clerk who shall be appointed for taking the poll; and every freeholder, before he is admitted to poll at the same election, shall, if required by the candidates, or any of them, first take the oath hereinafter mentioned, which oath the said sheriff or himself, or his under sheriff, or such sworn clerk by him appointed for taking the said poll as aforesaid, is hereby authorised to administer; videlicet,

"YOU swear or being one of the people called Quakers, you solemnly give that you are a freeholder of the county of , and have a freehold estate consisting of lying at within the said county; and that such freehold estate has not been granted to you fraudulently, or purpose to qualify you to be your vote at this election; and that the place of your abode is , and that it be a place consisting of more streets or places than one, specifying what such place, that you are twenty-one years of age, as you believe, and that you have been before polled at this election."

And in case any freeholder or other person taking the said oath or affirmation hereby appointed to be taken by him aforesaid shall thereby commit wilful and corrupt perjury, and be thereof convicted, and if any person do unlawfully or corruptly procure or suborn any freeholder or other person to take the said oath or affirmation in order to be polled, whereby he shall commit such wilful and corrupt perjury, and shall be thereof convicted, and they for every such offence shall incur such pains and penalties as are declared in and by two acts of parliament, the one made in the fifth year of the late Queen Elizabeth, intituled, 'An Act for punishment of such as shall procure or commit any wilful perjury;' and the other made in the second year of his late Majesty King George the Second, intituled, 'An Act for the more effectual preventing and further punishment of forgery, perjury, or subornation of perjury, and to make it felony to steal bonds, notes, or other securities for payment of money;' and by any other law or statute now in force for the punishment of perjury or subornation of perjury.

Sect. 2. "That no person or persons shall be allowed to have any vote at such elections for coroner or coroners of any county in England and Wales as aforesaid, for or by reason of any trust estate or mortgage, unless such trustee or mortgagee be in actual possession or receipt of the rents and profits of such estate; but that the mortgagee or custos trust in possession shall and may vote for the same estate, notwithstanding such mortgage or trust; and that all conveyances of any messuages, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, in order to multiply voices, or to split or divide the interest in any houses or lands among several persons, to enable them to vote at elections for a coroner of any county as aforesaid, are hereby declared to be void and of none effect."

Sect. 3. "That all the reasonable costs, charges, and expenses, the said sheriff, or his under sheriff, or other deputy, shall expend or be liable to, and about the providing of poll books, booths, and clerks, (such clerks to be paid not exceeding 11. in. each per diem,) for the purpose of taking the poll at any such election, shall be borne, sustained, and paid by the several candidates at such election, in equal proportions."
Mr. Jervis, in page 12 of his work, observes, that the sole and principal object of this act is to regulate the time and mode of electing coroners, and its provisions must be followed strictly. In the case of the Coroner of Stafford, in Ch. M. T. 1826, MS. cited, the writ de coronatore eligendo was received by the under-sheriff on the 1st of April, 1826. On the 5th of the same month the under-sheriff informed the candidates for the office that the sheriff had appointed the 27th of April then instant for the election; the next county court after the receipt of the writ being holden on the 13th of April, the sheriff did not proceed to the election, but gave notice that he would proceed to the election on the 27th. On that day the election was commenced, and proceeded in from day to day until it terminated. This was holden to be irregular by the Lord Chancellor, and the chief justices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas, the sheriff being bound by the statute to proceed to the election at the next county court after the receipt of the writ, unless it happened to be holden within six days, or upon the day of the receipt of the writ. When the writ is received within six days of the next county court, or upon the same day, the notice of adjournment is proclaimed at the rising of the court, and is usually affixed on the church doors.

We have already seen, ante, 871, that the electors must be freeholders; but as to the amount of their estate it seems, however small its value may be, it will suffice to confer the right of voting, provided it be not obtained fraudulently and colourably for the purpose of qualifying the elector. To confer a right to vote the elector must have a freehold interest in lands within the county. Thus tenants in fee simple, in fee tail, or for life, may vote at the election of coroners, but any thing short of a freehold interest, as a lease for years, will not confer that privilege. Jervis, 15. See further sect. 2 of 58 Geo. III. ante, 872.

Corporators sole have a freehold in lands which they enjoy in that character, but members of corporations aggregate are not entitled to vote in respect of lands belonging to the corporation. Purchasers of redeemed land tax, (after August, 1802,) after registry of the contract and certificate, are to be taken to be in the actual seisin and possession of a yearly rent or sum as a fee farm rent, equal in amount to the land tax purchased, free from all charges and deductions, to be issuing and payable out of the manors, messuages, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, whereon the land tax so purchased was charged, on the same days as such land tax was payable at the time of the purchase thereof. 42 Geo. 3, c. 116, s. 154.

All natural persons born within the dominions of the crown of England are capable of holding freehold estates, unless they be under some civil disability, and therefore incapable of possessing any real property.

Aliens are incapable of holding freehold estates for their own benefit, but if they be naturalized by act of parliament, or made denizens by the King's letters-patent, they may.

Women, infants, lunatics, and idiots, cannot vote at the election of coroners. Jervis, 16, 17.

After the election the sheriff should in open court administer to the coroner the oaths of allegiance, supremacy and abjuration, and also the oath of office. See post, Oaths, Vol. III. This being done the coroner is in full possession of his office, and the business of the election is terminated. Jervis, 19. The coroner should also within six months after his election make and subscribe the declaration required by statute 9 Geo. IV. c. 17, s. 2, 5, which may be done either in the courts of Chancery or King's Bench, or at the quarter sessions of the county. 9 Geo. IV. c. 17, s. 6. Jervis, 19.

The sheriff must make his return into Chancery into the Petty Bag Office of the election; if he refuse so to do, an action on the case lies against him. See 2 Vent. 27.

Being elected by the county, if he be insufficient, and not able to answer such fines and other duties in respect of his office, as he ought, the county, as his superior, shall answer for him. 2 Inst. 175, ante, 871.
IV. Duration of Office, and Removal of.

Being chosen by the county, his office continues, notwithstanding the demise of the King. 4 Inst. 271.

The coroner is chosen for life, but he may be removed either by his made sheriff or chosen verderer, which are offices incompatible with any other, or by the King’s writ de coronatore exonerando, for a cause therein assigned,—as that he is engaged in other business, is incapacitated by years or sickness, had not a sufficient estate in the county, or lives in an inconvenient part of it. Fitz. N. B. 163, 164; 1 Bla. Com. 348.

By 25 Geo. II. c. 29, extortion, neglect, or misbehaviour, are good cases for his removal, post. 885.

A coroner was removed where he used corrupt influence over the jury. R. v. Coates, cited Dick. J. 515.

Lying in prison for twelve months has been adjudged a good ground for removing a coroner, even though the duties of his office were during the time discharged by another coroner of the county. Ex parte Persell, 11 W. 451.

A common merchant who had been elected a coroner was removed upon the ground that he was commorans mercator. 2 Inst. 32.

The practice is where a coroner is and ought to be removed, to issue him the writ de coronatore exonerando and that de coronatore eligendo at the same time, though the former must be first executed, and no notice of the issue need be given to the party accused.

The party removed may have a commission to inquire whether the cause assigned for removal be true, but he cannot traverse it. 1 Jec. & W. 44.

V. Places where Coroner has Jurisdiction.

The jurisdiction of coroners is limited to the county, liberty, or precinct, and for which they are elected or appointed, and cannot be enlarged by any private act or delegation from the crown. Finch, 338. For this reason a coroner, even though he had a special commission from the King for that purpose, could take confession of high or petit treason, with respect to which he had originally no jurisdiction. 2 Inst. 629; Jervis, 42.

In many cases, as with the coroner of the admiralty, or verge of the King’s palace, a coroner has concurrent jurisdiction.

The doubt which formerly existed as to whether an offender could be proceeded against in either county, when the stroke and death were in different counties, was removed by the statute 2 & 3 Edw. VI. c. 24, s. 2; and now by 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, which repeals that act, it is enacted, sect. 15, “that where any felony or misdemeanor shall be committed on the boundary of two or more counties, or within the distance of five hundred yards of any such boundary or boundaries, or shall be begun in one county and completed in another, every such felony or misdemeanor may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, determined and punished in any of the said counties in the same manner as if it had been actually and wholly committed therein.”

If a party has been killed in one county, the coroner, super eos sumus corpora, may now, by virtue of the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 9, inquire, as he formerly might at common law, of all accessories and procurers before the fact, though the procurers were in another county. See Jervis, 59; 1 Hals, P.C. 427. The 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, repeals the 2 & 3 Edw. VI. c. 24. See the 9th section, ante, 27.

VI. Power to appoint a Deputy.

The judicial duties of the coroner, as holding inquests or the like, must be discharged by the coroner himself and cannot be deputed. Camp. Inst. 1.
In taking an Inquisition of Death.

227a; 2 H. P. C. 58; 1 E. P. C. 383; R. v. Farrant, 3 B. & Ald. 260; 1 Chit. Rep. 746, S. C.; Jervis, 54, 55. It has been contended that coroners of particular liberties and franchises may by prescription appoint a deputy. But it would seem that the general principles applicable to coroners by election would equally apply to coroners by appointment, and render such a custom bad. Jervis, 56. In R. v. Coroner, &c. of London, Jervis, Adda. 408, this point was raised, but not settled. The coroner of the Admiralty, by virtue of his patent, may appoint a deputy.

VII. Power and Duty in taking an Inquisition of Death.

In general it is the most important duty of a coroner to take inquests of unnatural or sudden deaths, and this whether they arise by accident, felon de se, or in prison.

When it happens that any person comes to an unnatural death, the township shall give notice thereof to the coroner. Otherwise if the body be interred before he come, the township shall be amerced. 4 MS. Sum. 333.

And by Holt, C. J. it is a matter indictable to bury a man that dies a violent death, before the coroner’s inquest have sat upon him. Id.; 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 23.

If the township shall suffer the body to lie till putrefaction, without sending for him, they shall be amerced. Id.

The Jury]—Power of summoning jury is given to the coroner; he is to issue a precept to the constable of the four, five, or six next townships to return a competent number of good and lawful men of their townships, to appear before him in such a place to make an inquisition touching that matter. 4 Edw. I. st. 2; 2 Hale, 59. Or he may send his precept to the constable of the hundred. Wood’s Inst. b. 4, c. 1.

It seems sufficient, and it is the practice, to summon the jury only from the neighbourhood. 1 Sid. 204; 1 Keble. 723; 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 22.

The 8 Hen. VI. c. 19, enacts, that the inquiry shall be made by persons having lands of the yearly value of 40s., but it is not usual to return a jury having such qualifications.

Inquests held by the coroner in virtue of his office without writ, are expressly excepted from the operation of the late jury act, 6 Geo. IV. c. 50, s. 32.

The jury must consist of twelve at the least, and twelve must agree in the verdict. See Cobet’s case, 1 H. P. C. 161, n.; Lambert v. Taylor, 6 D. & R. 196; 4 B. & Cres. 138, S. C.

A coroner’s inquisition ought to show upon the face of it of what place the party who took it was coroner; and that it was taken by the oath of “honest and lawful men.” 2 ld. Raym. 1305. As to who are such men, see post, Jurors, Vol. III. p. 403.

If the constables make not a return, or the jurors returned appear not, their defaults are to be returned to the coroner; and the constables or jurors in default shall be amerced before the judge of assize. 2 Hale, 59.

Coroners have no power to impose any fine or amercement. 2 Inst. 136; 2 H. P. C. 62; Jervis, 225.

If the coroner, after notice, be remiss in summoning the jury, or otherwise, he may be amerced by virtue of the statute de officio coronatoris, 1 Hale, P. C. 424, 2d ed. 58; and by the provisions of the 3 Hen. VII. c. 1, he may be fined 100s. for each default.

By whom Inquest taken]—An inquisition super visum corporis may be taken by one, although there be several coroners in the county; 2 H. P. C. 56; for wherever coroners are authorised to act as judges, the act of one who first proceeds in the inquiry, and perfects it, is of equal authority as if all had joined, but after the proceeding has been instituted, and concluded by one, Coroner.

Taking an inquisition of death.

When to be taken.

When to be taken]—The inquest must be taken within a reasonable time after the death of the party; hence seven months has been held to be 1 Stra. 22; Salk. 377.

The proceeding by inquisition being judicial, must not be conducted on Sunday. See 9 Co. 666.

Place of holding.

Place of holding]—It is not absolutely requisite that the inquest should be held at the same place where the body is viewed. 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 23.

Swearing and charge.

Swoaring of Jury and viewing Body]—The jury appearing to be sworn and charged by the coroner to inquire, upon the view of the body, how the party came by his death. 2 Hale, 60.

For he can take inquisition of death only upon view of the body, and not otherwise, therefore if the body be interred before he come, he must rise up. And this he may do lawfully within any convenient time, as is usually 16 days. 4 MS. Sum. 333, 1 sup.; 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 23.

And it has been lately held, that a coroner's duty is judicial, and that he can only take an inquest super viam corpus; and that an inquest in the jury were not sworn by the coroner himself, and super viam corpus absolutely void. The court, therefore, will not, after an adjournment by the coroner of such an inquest, grant any mandamus to compel him to proceed

If the body cannot be viewed, the coroner can do nothing; but the justice of the peace shall inquire thereof. Id. 4 MS. Sum. 334.

It seems the whole of the body should be inspected. R. v. Best 1 Stra. 22.

So essential is the view to the validity of the inquisition, that if the body be not found, or have lain so long before the view that no information can be obtained from the inspection of it, or if there be danger of infection by digging it up, the inquest ought not to be taken by the coroner, unless he have a special commission for that purpose; but as the proceeding before the coroner is one of several, application should be made, in such cases to the magistrates or justices authorised to inquire of felonies, &c., who, without viewing the body, shall take the inquest by the testimony of witnesses. 5 Rep. 110; 2 R. Abr. 96; 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 9, s. 23. Indeed it would seem that coroners may be amerced for taking up a body that has been buried so long, that, from its state of decomposition, no information can rest from the view; 2 Lev. 140; and that in such a case the court into which the inquisition is returned, may, upon affidavit of the circumstances, refuse to receive and file it. 1 Stra. 22; 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 24; Jervis, 29.

Of what inquest shall be where a person is slain.

Of what the Inquest shall be]—The jury being sworn, and the body upon view, he shall inquire upon the oaths of them, in this manner, by the name of 4 Edw. 1. stat. 2, called the statute de officio coronatoris, vis.

If they knew where the person was slain; whether it were in any house, field, bed, tavern, or company;

Who are culpable, either of the act, or of the force; and who were present, either men or women, and of what age soever they be, if they can speak, or have any discretion;

And how many soever be found culpable; they shall be taken and de-lined to the sheriff, and shall be committed to the gaol; and

And such as be found, and be not culpable, shall be attached until the coming of the judges of assizes.

And by the same statute, if it fortune any such man be slain, which is found in the fields, or in the woods, first it is to be inquired whether he was slain in the same place or not;

And if he were brought and laid there, they should do so much as they
In taking an Inquisition of Death.

VII. can to follow their steps that brought the body thither, whether he were brought upon a horse or in a cart.

It shall also be inquired if the dead person were known, or else a stranger, and where he lay the night before.

Also by the same statute, all wounds ought to be viewed the length, breadth, and depthness; and with what weapons; and in what part of the body the wound or hurt is; and how many be culpable; and how many wounds there be; and who gave the wound.

And they must hear evidence on all hands, if it be offered to them, and that upon oath, because it is not so much an accusation or an indictment as an inquisition or inquest of office. 2 Hale, 157; infra and post, 575.

And by the aforesaid statute if any be found culpable of the murder, the coroner shall immediately go to his house and shall inquire what goods he hath, and what corn he hath in his granary; and if he be a freeman, they shall inquire how much land he hath, and what it is worth yearly and above the service due to the lord of the fee; and the land shall remain in the King’s hands until the lords of the fee have made fine for it.

And when they have thus inquired upon every thing, they shall cause all the land, corn, and goods to be valued, in like manner as if they should be sold immediately; and thereupon they shall be delivered to the whole township, which shall be answerable before the judges for all.

In like manner, by the said statute, it is to be inquired of them that be drowned, or suddenly dead, whether they were so drowned or slain, or strangled by the sign of a cord tied straight about their necks, or about any of their members, or upon any other hurt found upon their bodies. And if they were not slain, then ought the coroner to attach the finders, and all other in the company.

He shall also inquire whether the persons found guilty fled; for which flight they forfeit goods and chattels. 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 27, 51.

And if any person be slain or murdered in the daytime, and the murderer escape untaken, the township shall be amerced. 3 Hen. VII. c. 1.

Concerning horses, boats, carts, and the like, whereby any are slain, which properly are called deodands, they also shall be valued, and delivered unto the towns as before. 4 Edw. I. st. 2; post, tit. Deodands, Vol. I.

By the express words of the 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 13, s. 5, he may inquire of accessories before the fact; but he cannot inquire of accessories after the fact. 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 26, 27.

He ought also to inquire of the death of all persons who die in prison, that it may be known, whether they died by violence, or any other unreasonable hardships; for if a prisoner, by the duress of the gaoler, come to an untimely death, it is murder in the gaoler, and the law implies malice in respect of the cruelty. 3 Inst. 52, 91.

And this inquest upon prisoners ought to consist of a party jury, that is, six of the prisoners (if so many there be), and six of the next vill or parish, not prisoners. Umfrville’s Coron. 212.

The above statute of 4 Edw. I. st. 2, is merely directory, and in affirinance of the common law; and does not restrain the coroner from any branch of his power, nor excuse him from the execution of any part of his duty not mentioned in the statute, and which was incident to his office at common law. 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 21; 3 Inst. 52.

Coroners ought not, in general, where a party dies by the visitation of God, as from apoplexy or the like, nor in any case, unless a very doubtful one, unnecessarily to obtrude themselves into private families for the purpose of instituting inquiry. 11 East, 229. They should in general wait until they are sent for by the peace officers of the place where the violent or unnatural death occurred before holding an inquest.

Evidence and Witnesses.—The coroner must hear evidence on all hands, if it be offered to him, and that upon oath, because it is not so much an accusation or an indictment, as an inquisition or inquest of office. 2 Hale, 157, supra.
Coroner.

In R. v. Scory, 1 Leach, 43, the Court of K. B. granted a rule against the coroner, to show cause why a criminal information should not be filed against him for refusing, on taking an inquisition super visum corporis, to receive evidence on the part of the person accused.

The coroner, as an incident to his office, has authority, and it is his duty, issue a summons to compel the appearance of witnesses, and to commit them for their contempt should they refuse to appear, or having appeared, to give evidence upon the subject of the inquiry. 1 Chit. C. L. 164.

On the appearance of each witness the coroner should take down his name, abode, and occupation, and then administer the oath that he shall speak the truth, &c. Umsf. Cor. 177. In case an interpreter is necessary, the oath must be administered to him. Id. 182. As to witnesses in general, see post, Evidence, Vol. II. See further, post, Examination, Vol. II.

The jurors at any time during the investigation may call back the any witness who has been examined, and ask any question that may suggest itself to their minds as elucidatory of their inquiry.

The 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 4, which repeals the 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 13, enacts, "that every coroner, upon any inquisition before him taken, whereby any person shall be indicted for manslaughter or murder, or as an accessory to murder before the fact, shall put in writing the evidence given to the jury before him, or as much thereof as shall be material; and shall have authority to bind by recognizance all such persons as know or declare any thing material touching the said manslaughter or murder, or the said offence of being accessory to murder, to appear at the next court of oyer and terminer, or grand jury, or superior criminal court of a county palatine, or great sessions, to which the trial is to be, and then there to prosecute or give evidence against the party charged; and every such coroner shall certify and subscribe the same evidence, and all such recognizances, and also the inquisition before him taken, and shall deliver the same to the proper officer of the court to which the trial is to be, before or at the opening of the court." By section 5 of the same act, if they offend in any thing contrary to the intent and meaning of these provisions, the court to whose officer any such examination, information, evidence, bailment, recognizance, or inquests ought to have been delivered, shall, upon examination and proof of the offence, in a summary manner set such fine upon them as the court shall think fit.

Post, 882.

This provision applies to coroners of all jurisdictions, as well of the court as of exempt franchises and liberties. Sect. 6, post, 882.

The examination should be taken down, as near as possible, in the words of the party examined. See post, Vol. II. p. 98.

The depositions ought regularly to be returned to the clerk of assize at the opening of the commission, or if possible before, so as to enable the jury who presides to examine the facts of each case, that he may explain to the grand jury in his charge any difficulty that may exist, and state to them the law as applicable to the facts. Coroners have frequently been censured for remissness in this respect. But they are not bound to return the depositions unless there be something depending before the court to make it necessary.

2 Stra. 1073.

As to depositions being evidence on other trials, see post, Evidence, Vol. II. p. 54.

Who may be present at inquest.

Who may of right be present]—Much doubt and discussion have arisen as to the power of the coroner to exclude individuals from the inquest. It may now, however, be fairly inferred from the late case of Garnett v. Forrest & Cres. 611, that the coroner has the power of excluding not only particular individuals, attorneys and counsel, &c. but the public generally. It was held in that case, that no action would lie against a coroner for excluding a party from an inquest. The coroner should exercise his own discretion fairly and not arbitrarily. See Dombey v. Cooper, 10 B. & Cres. 237, ante, 82

Adjourning Inquest]—If the place where the body is be an inconvenience for the purpose of holding the inquest, or if any of the witnesses &c—sent, or affected by undue influence, or unwilling to attend, or there be any other good cause why the inquest cannot be properly completed, the coroner may adjourn it to another time or place, informing the jury when and where they are again to meet, and first taking the jurors' recognizance for their appearance at the adjournment time or place. See Umfr. Cor. 179; 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 25.

The verdict]—It is peculiarly the province of the jury to investigate and determine the facts of the case, they are neither to expect nor should they be bound by any specific or direct opinion of the coroner upon the whole of the case, except so far as regards the verdict, which, in point of law, they ought to find as dependent and contingent upon their conclusions in point of fact. But in questions of law, juries ought to ask and show the most respectful deference to the advice and recommendation of the coroner; ad questionem factis non respondent judices, ad questionem legis non respondent juratores. Vaugh. Rep. 160. The verdict should be compounded of the facts as detailed to the jury by the witnesses, and of the law as stated to them by the court. See Jervis, 225, 226.

Formerly the jury might from their own cognizance of the fact have returned a verdict without any evidence being adduced before them. 1 Vent. 67. But this is not so now, and if a jurymen cannot give evidence, he should be sworn, and give it in the ordinary way as other witnesses. 1 Salk. 405.

If twelve of the jury cannot agree in their verdict, the jury are to be kept without meat, drink, or fire, until they return their verdict. Even this may sometimes be ineffectual, and in such cases they should be adjourned to the next assizes, when they may have the benefit of the opinion and direction of the judge who presides. Comb. 386; Jerv. 229.

Form of the inquisition]—Immediately after the jury have pronounced their verdict, the same should, together with all the material proceedings at the inquest, be put into writing, and engrossed on parchment indented. The coroner with his name and style of office, and all of the jurors to the number of twelve or more, who found the verdict, should sign the inquisition. The signatures should be in full, stating both the Christian and surnames of each juror. The mere initials would not suffice, unless perhaps in the case of the Christian name appearing in full in the caption. See 1 Nol. 141; R. v. Emett, 6 B. & C. 247; 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 4, ante, 878. It seems unnecessary to seal the inquisition, though usual so to do. See Jerv. 271.

It does not appear when this formal inquisition should be drawn up, but it is usual and best it should be so before the jury are dispersed.

The general requisites of this inquisition are the same as those of an indictment. See post, Indictment, Vol. III. p. 324.

The statement of the facts therein must be with legal certainty and precision, with no repugnancy or inconsistency, and be direct and positive. Mere superfluous statements may be rejected.

The formal parts of an inquisition in general consist in the statement of the venue, the place where the death took place and inquisition was held, so as to show the coroner has jurisdiction, the time of the death and holding the inquisition, the coroner's name and title of office, the view of the body, the name of the deceased if known, the taking of the oath by all the jurors, the jurors being good and lawful men, their verdict or finding, and lastly, the attestation.

The venue and place at which the inquisition is held must appear on the face of the inquisition. 2 H. P. C. 166. If the inquisition do not state any place at all at which the inquisition is held; (Dyer, 69;) or do not show with sufficient certainty that the place stated is within the jurisdiction of the coroner; (Cro. Jac. 276, 277;) as if it state that the inquisition was held at B. without showing in what county B. is, otherwise than by putting the county in the margin, it is insufficient, and the inquisition may be quashed. 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 25, s. 128. But it is not necessary again to name the county in the margin, if it be referred to by the words "county aforesaid," and it has been adjudged that the caption of an inquisition as taken before J. S. coroner of the King's liberty of B. aforesaid, is good, viz: expressly showing that B. is within the liberty of B. for that cannot be intended. 5 Rep. 120, 121; Jerv. 248; post, Indictment, Vol. III. p. 320, ante, 835. We have seen when the inquisition should be held, so that it should not be on a Sunday, ante, 876; as to the mode of stating in general, see ante, Constiition, p. 819; post, Indictment, Vol. III. p. 320.

TAKING AN INQUESTION OF DEATH.

The name and style of office of the coroner must be stated in order that it may appear that the inquisition was taken before a court of competent jurisdiction. 22 Edw. IV. c. 13; Sum. 207; Stat. 3 Edw. IV. c. 96.

Although the style of office be added, yet the inquisition will be insufficient unless it appear that he was coroner for the district in which the disposition is taken. Cro. Eliz. 193; 2 Roll. 82; 22 Edw. IV. c. 16. Before inquisition before J. S. coroner in the county, has been adjudged to be sufficient, without showing that he was coroner for the county, for that can but be intended. 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 25, s. 119; Plowd. 76, 77; 4 Rep. 11 Jerv. 250.

It must be stated that the inquisition was taken on view of the body which we have seen, ante, 876, is requisite to give the coroner jurisdiction if not so stated the inquisition is bad, and may be quashed.

The name of the deceased should be described accurately, or a variance will be fatal. If his name be unknown he may be described as a person the jurors unknown; but such a description would it seems be bad if known. See 3 Camp. 264; Holt, C. N. P. 595; 2 H. P. C. 281; post, Indictment, Vol. III. p. 340.

The inquisition should show that all the jurors took the oath; also such jurors are, by name, and therefore it is insufficient to allege that as taken by the oaths of the several persons underwritten; (6 B. & C. 267; 22 B. & C. 267; of A. B., C. D., and others; (2 H. P. C. 168;) so although it is not necessary that the jury should come from the next adjoining townships, ante, 875; it must expressly appear that they are from the county or jurisdiction within which the inquiry is held, that they are at least twelve in number, at 875; but see Lambert v. Taylor, 6 D. & R. 188; 4 B. & C. 138; and see that they present the inquisition upon their oaths. 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 25, s. 126. Lord Hale (2 H. P. C. 167;) was of opinion that the inquest should appear to have been taken by the oaths of honest and lawful men well in the case of coroners’ inquests, as in that of other indictments on presentments; but this is said to be unnecessary, and has been so held in the case of indictments in the superior courts, because, until the contrary is proved, all men shall be intended to be probi et legales. 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 25, s. 17, 126. Care should also be taken to insert the names of the jurors accurately, for if there be a variance between the names of the jurors in the caption and those in the attestation, it will be fatal. 3 C. & P. 414; 252, 253.

The party charged. If the inquisition contain matter of accusation against a party, such party should be described as accurately as a party should in an indictment against him; and see title Indictment, Vol. III. p. 335, 336, for further information on this head.

The time and place when and where the party is charged with having committed the offence, should be also specified as accurately and properly in an indictment. In R. v. Esctt, 6 B. & C. 247, an inquisition was quashed because it did not state where the party died. The day and year when the alleged crime took place should be stated. 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 17.
VII.]

Taking an Inquisition of Death.

2 H. P. C. 177. The hour need not be stated. 3 Burr. 1434. See further as to the statement of time and place, ante, Conviction, p. 819, 820; post, Indictment, Vol. III. p. 344, 345, 330.

The act causing the death must be stated accurately as in an indictment, see Indictment, Vol. III. otherwise the inquisition may be quashed. See Jerr. 263. With a view to the deodand, the inquisition should distinctly show what caused the death, and its value; and in case of death caused by the falling of a building, it should state what part of the materials caused such death, and their value. R. v. Coroner, &c. of London, Exp. Assigns of Caruthers, a bankrupt, cited Jerr. Add. 406.

Where the jury found that they believed a post to be the only cause of the death, the inquisition was quashed. 12 Mod. 112. So an inquisition has been quashed for not setting forth the wound, and that it was mortal. 1 Salk. 377; 7 Mod. 16. An inquisition may be good in part, and bad for the residue, if such residue can be separated from the other part. See R. v. Coroner of London, Jerr. Add. 406.

Enrolling Proceedings.—All which things must be enrolled in the rolls of the coroner. 4 Edw. I. st. 2.

And the sheriff shall have counter rolls with the coroner of things belonging to their office. 3 Edw. I. c. 10.

Binding Witnesses to Prosecute, &c. and issuing Warrant against Offender] If the verdict be of that description that future proceedings will be necessary, the coroner must bind by recognizance all such persons as know anything material touching the offence to appear at the court into which the inquisition is to be returned, then and there to prosecute and give evidence against the party charged. 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 4. infra, Umfr. 188.

The coroner must, where the verdict charges a person with having murdered the deceased, or manslaughtered him, issue his warrant to apprehend the offender, and commit him to prison; (1 Chit. C. L. 164;) or if he be already in prison, the coroner should issue a detainer to the gaoler.

Burial of Deceased.—After the proceedings are closed, or before, if it be necessary, the coroner should issue his warrant for the burial of the body or bodies upon which the inquest has been taken, and the burial must take place accordingly. 4 Edw. I. st. 2.

As to the burial of a feto de se, see 4 Geo. IV. c. 52, post, Hosmer, Vol. III. p. 258.

Publishing Proceedings]—It is illegal to publish a statement of the evidence given before the coroner’s jury, even though it be correct, and the party publishing it be not actuated by any malicious motives. 1 B. & A. 379; and see 2 Camp. 563; 3 B. & Cres. 556; 3 D. & R. 447, S.C.; 4 B. & A. 218.

Return of Inquisition, Evidence, and Recognisances, &c.—The stat. 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 4, which repeals the stat. 1 & 2 Phill. & Mary, c. 13, as we have already seen, ante, p. 878, enacts, “that the coroner, upon any inquisition before him taken, whereby any person shall be indicted for manslaughter or murder, or as an accessory to murder before the fact, shall put in writing the evidence given to the jury before him, or as much thereof as shall be material, and shall have authority to bind by recognizance all such persons as know or declare any thing material touching the said manslaughter or murder, or the said offence of being accessory to murder, to appear at the next court of oyer and terminer, or gaol delivery, or superior criminal court of a county palatine, or great sessions, at which the trial is to be, then and there to prosecute or give evidence against the party charged; and every such coroner shall certify and subscribe the same evidence, and all such recognizances, and also the inquisition before him taken, and shall deliver the same to the proper officer of the court in which the trial is to be, before the opening of the court."

By the same statute, sect. 5, it is enacted, "that if any justice or coroner shall offend in any thing contrary to the true intent and meaning of these provisions, the court, to whose officer any such examination, information, evidence, baillment, recognizance, or inquisition, ought to have been delivered shall upon examination and proof of the offence in a summary manner, as such fine upon every such justice or coroner as the court shall think meet."

And by sect. 6, it is enacted, "that all these provisions relating to justices and coroners shall apply to the justices and coroners, not only of counties large, but also of all other jurisdictions."

Coroners ought also to attend personally upon the court, and to deliver the proper officer all inquisitions of felo de se, and those in which any de- dands are found, in order that they may be transmitted to the attorney of his Majesty's Court of King's Bench, from which court process is issued to bring in the deodand. Jervis, 41.

It is the duty of a coroner to be present at the assizes or the gaol deliver at the Old Bailey when any case is tried on an inquisition taken before him, and if he be not present, the court might fine him. In re Uxam, 0 & 12 S. & M. 1927, Carr. C. L. 17.

Defects in inquisition how taken advantage of.
If the inquisition be defective in any of the particulars before pointed out as requisite therein: a party be accused by the inquisition and appear in the Court of King's Bench, on the return of such inquisition into such court, he may demurr or move in arrest of judgment, or, what is more usual, may apply to the Court of King's Bench to get it quashed. And the latter course is not unusual: adopted where a party interested in the deodand (if any) is desirous of getting rid of such deodand, the record of the inquisition being removed to the court by certiorari.

Where the inquisition is so defective that no judgment can be given upon it, the court will in general quash it, and where it contains the substance of accusation, this is done by the court before which the party is accused: and the application, if made upon the part of the defendant, ought rather to be made before the plea pleaded; (Post. C. L. 231; hos. 684; 1 S. & M. 677;) although, if the defect be manifest, the court will in general make the application at any time before the verdict is delivered. Jervis, 253.

The inquisition may be good in part and bad for the residue, and quash accordingly as to the bad part; (R. v. Coroner, &c. of London, cit. in Add. 408;) as where it is bad so far as relates to the deodand, or where there are two substantial findings, and one of them bad.

In addition to the objections arising upon the face of the inquisition, may be quashed for the misconduct of either the coroner or the jury: Mod. 80; Jerv. 287;) as where the coroner fraudulently directed the jury to find a verdict of felo de se, telling them that it was in effect the same as finding of lunacy, the court quashed the inquisition; (1 S. & M. 89; 12 Mod. 493;) so the court will quash an inquisition taken without a view of the body, for the view ascertains the cause of the death, and is an essential part of the evidence, ante, p. 876; and, in like manner, where, from decomposition of the body, no information can be derived from the view, the inquisition may be quashed upon an affidavit of the circumstances. 1 N. & J. 22; 2 Hume, P. C. c. 9, s. 24; Jerv. 287.

Defects not aided by statute.

Defects in Inquisition not aided by Statute]—It should be observed that the statute of jeofails, and the late act 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 20, which states many trifling defects in indictments, do not extend to coroner's inquisitions.

Amending Inquisitions.
Amending Inquisitions]—The Court of King's Bench have a discretion power to amend coroner's inquisitions in furtherance of justice. This power is exercised according to the circumstances of each particular case. Dec.
Taking an Inquisition of Death.

in substance cannot, it seems, be amended, but formal defects can. See 6 B. & Cmns. 251; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 97; 1 Sid. 225, 259; 3 Mod. 101; 1 Sound. 356. Where a coroner’s inquisition omitted to state the place where the death happened and where the body was found, and in the body of the inquisition the names of the jurors were not inserted, and the jurors had only signed with initials, so that the exact names of the jurors nowhere appeared: it was held, that these were all defects of substance, and not amenable in the Court of King’s Bench. R. v. Evett, 6 B. & Cmns. 247.

It should be observed also, that the 20th section of the statute 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, does not apply to coroner’s inquisitions. See this section, post, Inst. inmcmt, Vol. III. p. 352.

Before the amendment can be made the inquisition must be in court, for which purpose a certiorari must be issued to the coroner to return the inquisition to the Crown Office, where it is filed. After this a venire facias is issued to bring the coroner into court to make the amendment, in obedience to which he attends personally at the Crown Office, where the amendment is made. Comb. 58. As to the mode of obtaining this venire facias, Mr. Jervey says, (p. 281,) the best course is to apply in term to the Court of King’s Bench for a rule, or in vacation to a judge at chambers, for a summons to show cause why the amendment should not be made, and why the venire facias should not issue to bring the coroner into court, and the rule or summons should be served on the coroner or parties interested, upon the discussion of which the propriety of the amendment may be entertained, and if allowed, the venire facias will be issued.

Proceedings where Inquisition quashed)—Where an inquisition is quashed a new inquiry may by leave of the court (1 Stra. 167,) be instituted by the coroner, (3 Mod. 60,) the body being disinterred by order of the Court of King’s Bench, which will exercise a discretion in making or refusing the order, according to the circumstances of the case and the length of time the body has been buried; (Salk. 377; 1 Stra. 22, 533, ante, p. 876;) but where there is any imputation upon the coroner he shall not again interfere in the inquiry, but a nulius inquiritum may be awarded to take a new inquisition by special commissioners, who shall proceed by the testimony of witnesses, without viewing the body. 1 Salk. 190; ante, p. 876; Jervey 287.

Effect of Inquisition)—It appears by the best authorities, that the inquests of the coroner are in no case conclusive, and that one affected by them, either collaterally or otherwise, may deny their authority and put them in issue. 3 Kebr. 489; see 6 B. & Cmns. 616, 627, 247. Doubts have been entertained whether inquisitions of flight and julo de se are traversable, but it seems they are. See Jervey 282 to 284; see 1 Sound. 362, n.

Where the inquisition contains the subject-matter of accusation of any person, it is equivalent to the finding of a grand jury, and such person may be tried and convicted on it. 2 Hale, 61. And if an indictment be found or the same offence, and the defendant be acquitted on the one, he must be reaigned on the other, to which he may, however, effectually plead his former acquittal. 2 Hale, 61; 1 Salk. 382.

The finding of a grand jury is regarded as of more weight than an inquisition taken before the coroner; as the court will, in their discretion, bail after the latter, but always refuse after the former; the reason of which may be, that in one case they can look into the depositions, to see if the evidence supports the charge of murder, whereas in the other, the investigation is secret, and does not admit of a summary revision. 2 Stra. 911, 1242.

It is the practice to prefer an indictment to the grand jury, and to try the party accused, upon both proceedings at the same time, by which means the form of a second trial is rendered unnecessary. 1 Salk. 382.

When a coroner’s jury have found that a party has murdered the deceased, he coroner may issue his warrant to apprehend him, and may commit him to prison; he has also power to summon witnesses, and bind over persons to prosecute and give evidence. 1 Chit. C. L. 163, 164.

3 L 2
VIII. His Power and Duty in other Matters.

By stat. 4 Edw. I. st. 2, he ought to inquire of treasure that is lost, who were the finders, and likewise who is suspected thereof; and that as well be perceived, where one liveth riotously, haunting taverns, and has done so of long time: hereupon he may be attached for this suspicion, four or six more or pledges, if they may be found. See 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 7.

Coroners may inquire of wrecks, and royal fishes, as sturgeon, whales, as the like. Standif. 51; Bract. 120; Brit. s. 42; Jerv. 34.

Besides his judicial place, he hath also an authority ministerial as sheweth, namely, that there is a general power taken to the sheriff, and judicial process be awarded to the coroner, for the execution of the King's writs; and in some special cases, the King's original writ shall be immediately directed to him. 4 Inst. 271; see Tidd, 9th ed.

He is bound to be present in the county court, to pronounce judgment outlawry or excommunication, as he shall think meet, after &ynto exactus, at the fifth court, if the defendant doth not appear. Wood's Inst. b. 4, c. 1; Watson's Sheriff, c. 8.

As to his duty in returning inquiries and being present at trials, ante, p. 881, 882.

As to his power and duty as conservator of the peace, to arrest, and suppress affrays, &c. see ante, Arrest, p. 261.

We have already seen that the coroner cannot in general proceed by deputy, ante, p. 874, 875.

IX. His Fees.

Anciently the coroner had no fees. 1 Com. 347.

By the statute of 3 Hen. VII. c. 1, the coroner shall have for his fee upon every inquiry taken upon the view of the body slain, 13s. 4d. of the goods and chattels of him that is the slayer or murderer, if he have any goods; or if he have not, he shall have for his said fee of such amerciaments as shall be found necessary for the township to be amerced for escape of such murderers. So also stat. 25 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 3, 4.

Moreover, by stat. 25 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 1, for every inquiry (not taken upon view of a body dying in gaol) which shall be duly taken in any township or place contributing to the rates directed by stat. 12 Geo. II. c. 3 (the County Rate Act,) he shall have 20s. and also 9d. for every mile he shall be compelled to travel from his usual place of abode to take such inquiry; to be paid by order of the justices in sessions out of the county rates for which order no fee shall be paid. See post, County Rate, 919.

Sect. 2. And for every inquiry taken on view of a body dying in prison, he shall be paid so much, not exceeding 20s., as the justices in sessions shall allow, to be paid in like manner.

Sect. 5. But no coroner of the King's household, and of the verge of the King's palaces, nor any coroner of the admiralty, nor of the county palaces of Durham, nor of the town of London and borough of Southwark, or of any franchises belonging to the said city, nor of any city, town, or franchise as contributory to the county rates, or within which such rates have not been usually assessed, shall be entitled to any benefit by this act; but they shall have such fees and salaries as they were allowed before this act, or as shall be allowed by the persons by whom they have been appointed. See R. v. Js. of W. R. of Yorkshire, 7 T. R. 52.

A coroner under this statute is not entitled to any compensation for the miles travelled by him in returning to his usual place of abode from taking an inquiry. R. v. Js. of Oxfordshire, 2 B. & A. 203. W. E. T. had obtained a rule nisi for a mandamus to the defendants to make an order for paying one Cecil, a coroner for that county, a certain sum of money out of the county rates, being a compensation, at the rate of 9d. per mile for the several miles travelled by him as coroner in returning to his usual place of abode, from taking several inquisitions set forth in his affidavits.
His Fees.

After argument of the case, per Curiam, The words are, that the coroner shall be allowed 9d. per mile for every mile he is compelled to travel from the place of his abode to take the inquisition. The two termini are therefore clearly pointed out, and the coroner can only charge for the miles between them. Now the miles he travels in returning are obviously not from his usual place of abode, and therefore there is no pretence for this charge. Besides, at the time of the passing of the act (which is the proper period to be considered) this was an ample compensation. Rule discharged with costs.

In R. v. Js. of Kent, 11 East, 229, it was held discretionary in the justices whether they will allow the fee under stat. 25 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 1; they are judges whether the inquisition was duly taken; and the coroner has not necessarily a right to inquire of all such deaths as are not natural.

A coroner cannot have a fee for taking an inquest on a dead body manifestly drowned on the high seas and cast on shore. 7 T. R. 52.

The coroner is allowed only for every mile which he is compelled to travel from the usual place of his abode to take the inquisition. Therefore, where here are several inquisitions taken at the same place, and upon one journey, he cannot claim mileage for his travelling expenses for more than one inquisition. R. v. Js. of Warwick, 8 D. & R. 147; 5 B. & C. C. 430, 5. C.

On a recent inquest on a dead body, under 25 Geo. II. c. 29, the inquisition must, in order to entitle the coroner to his fee, be signed by all the jurors. R. v. Js. of Norfolk, 1 Nolan, 14.

Coroners of such places and franchises as do not contribute to the county rates cannot claim fees under the 25 Geo. II. 7 T. R. 52.

Should the justices improperly refuse to allow fees to a coroner, his only mode of compelling them to make the allowance, or of trying his right to such as may be questionable, is to apply to the Court of King’s Bench for a mandamus. In which case the writ must allege all the circumstances of the case, must show that he is entitled to the relief prayed, and that he had a right to call upon the magistrates to do that, for the non-performance of the writ was sued out. 7 T. R. 52. If there be any thing criminal in the refusal, the magistrate might be indicted, or have a criminal information filed against him.

X. Other Privileges.

Coroners are exempted from serving offices which are inconsistent with the duties of coroner, and are privileged from being summoned on juries. 2 Rot. Abr. 632, s. 4; F. N. B. 167; Jerv. 63.

They are privileged from arrest while in the execution of their judicial duties, and consequently whilst going to, being at, and returning from an inquest. See Jerv. 63.

XI. His Punishment for not doing his Duty.

Coroners concealing felonies, or not doing their duty through favour of the nudzdoers, shall be imprisoned a year, and fined at the King’s pleasure. 3 Edw. I. c. 9.

And by stat. 3 Hem. VII. c. 1, if any coroner be remiss, and make not inquisitions upon view of the body dead, and certify the same to the gaol delivery, he shall forfeit to the King 100s.

And by stat. 25 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 6, if any coroner, not appointed by an annual election or nomination, or whose office is not annexed to any other office, shall be convicted of extortion or wilful neglect of his duty, or misdemeanor in his office, the court before whom he shall be so convicted may adjudicate him to be removed from his office; and thereupon, if he shall have been elected by the freeholders, a writ shall issue for removing him, and electing another in his stead; and if he hath been appointed by the lord of any Coroner.

PUNISHMENT FOR NOT DOING HIS DUTY.

liberty or franchise, or in any other manner than by the freeholder, the person entitled to nomination shall, on notice of such judgment, nominate another person in his stead.

If a coroner do not return the depositions and recognizances pursuant to statute 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 4, 5, (ante, 881, 882,) the court may, in a sum which may be removed, ante, 874.

At common law, if a coroner be guilty of misconduct, an action (2 Bla. Rep. 911, 1218), or an information or indictment (R. v. Smith, Leach, 43), lies against him: as where he told the jury that a verdict of de se and lunacy were the same. R. v. Wakefield, 1 Str. 68. So where he excluded some of the jurors, in order to find the deceased sane. R. v. Stukeley, 12 Mod. 493. In R. v. Scory, (1 Leach, C.L.) the coroner charged the jury to find the prisoner guilty of murder; but, however, returned a verdict of accidental death, which the coroner receded to but committed the prisoner to gaol for murder: upon which the Court of King's Bench granted a rule nisi for a criminal information against the coroner.

Where a coroner inserted in the verdict that the jury had found the prisoner guilty of murder, instead of one only, he was held to have committed forgery. R. v. Marsh, 3 Salk. 172.

If a coroner take an inquisition without viewing the body, he is criminated to blame; for the view ascertains the cause of the death, and an inquest can be taken super viasum corporis only.

In 3 Inst. 149, it is stated that a coroner was committed to prison, an fined 40s., because he refused to view a body, unless he was paid for himself 6s. 8d., and for his clerk 2s. But if the body has been exposed to view, and no information can be obtained from the view, the coroner will be justified in causing it to be disinterred; and if he do so, it would seem that he may be fined. 2 Lev. 140; Jer. 65.

One coroner is answerable, civilly, for the acts of his co-coroner. 1 Mod. 198; 2 Mod. 23. But no criminal responsibility can attach upon one is constructively only a participator in the abuse; and therefore when a coroner gave to another a general authority to act in his name, it was lest that he was not responsible, criminally, for an abuse of that authority, committed without his concurrence or participation. 8 Mod. 193. See Raymond, 1574; Stand. 53 a.; 2 Hale, 59.

No action lies against a coroner for any act done by him when acting judicelly and within the scope of his jurisdiction. 6 Bl. & L. 611; 12 Eq. 24; Lat. 935, 1560; 1 Ld. Raym. 454; 1 Mod. 184; 2 Mod. 218.

XII. Forms. (a)

Coroner's Precept to Summons a Jury. (No. 1.)
Juror's Oath on the Coroner's Inquest. (No. 2.)
Witness's Oath. (No. 3.)
Summons for Witness. (No. 4.)
Warrant against a Witness for Contempt of Summons. (No. 5.)
Commitment of a Witness for refusing to give Evidence. (No. 6.)
Inquisition of Murder. (No. 7.)
The like against Accessaries. (No. 8.)
Inquisition where one Hangs himself. (No. 9.)

(a) See a great variety of useful and valuable Forms collected in Mr. Jerrold's late work on Coroners, 295 to 405.
Forms.

Inquisition where one Drowns himself, (No. 10.)
Inquisition on one Drowned by Accident, (No. 11.)
Inquisition where one Dies a natural Death, (No. 12.)
Inquisition on one who Dies in Gaol, (No. 13.)
Inquisition on one not Compos mentis, (No. 14.)
Inquisition on one for Cutting his Throat, (No. 15.)
Inquisition for Killing another in his own Defence, (No. 16.)
Inquisition when the Murderer is unknown, (No. 17.)
Proclamation of Adjournment, (No. 18.)
Proclamation at Adjourned Meeting, (No. 19.)
Oath of Officer to keep the Jury until they are agreed in their verdict, (No. 21.)
Reconnaissance to Prosecute, (No. 22.)
Reconnaissance to give Evidence, (No. 23.)
Warrant to Bury after a View, (No. 24.)
Warrant to Bury a Felo de se, (No. 25.)
Warrant to Take Up a Body Interred, (No. 26.)
Warrant of Apprehension of a Person accused by a Coroner's Inquisition, (No. 27.)
Commitment thereon, (No. 28.)
Certiorari to return Inquisition, (No. 29.)
Return thereon, (No. 30.)
Veniere Facias to amend Inquisition, (No. 31.)
Inquisition of Treasure Trove, (No. 32.)

County of [\text{County of}] To the Constable of \text{in the said county.}

BY virtue of my office, these are in his Majesty's name to require and command you, immediately upon sight hereof, to summon and warn twenty-four good and lawful men of the four next townships to appear before me A. C., gentleman, one of the coroners of the county aforesaid, at aforesaid, in the said county, on the day of \text{day of}, at \text{clock in the} noon, then and there to inquire of, do and execute all such things as on his Majesty's behalf shall be lawfully given them in charge, touching the death of A. D. And be you then there to certify what you shall have done in the premises, and further to do and execute what in behalf of our said Lord the King shall be then and there enjoined you. Given under my hand and seal the day of \text{day of}.

(No. 2.)

YOU shall diligently enquire and true presentment make on the behalf of our sovereign Lord the King how and in what manner A. D. [or, a person unknown, as the case is] here lying dead, came to his death; and of such other matters relating to the same as shall be lawfully required of you, according to your evidence. So help you God.

After the foreman is sworn, the rest may be sworn, three or four together, as follows:

Such oath as A. F. the foreman of this inquest hath for his part taken, you and every of you shall well and truly observe and keep on your parts respectively. So help you God.

(No. 3.)

THE evidence which you shall give to this inquest, on the behalf of our sovereign Lord the King, touching the death of A. D., shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. So help you God.

(No. 4.)

WHEREAS I am credibly informed that you can give evidence on behalf to wit. of our sovereign Lord the King, touching the death of R. F., now lying dead in the parish of , in the said county of ; these are, therefore, Coroner.

Form.

by virtue of my office, in his Majesty’s name, to charge and command you presently to be and appear before me, at the dwellinghouse of , known by the name of , in the said parish of , at of the clock in the town on the day of instant, then and there to give evidence and examined on his Majesty’s behalf, before me and my inquest, touching the present hereof fail not, as you will answer the contrary at your peril. Given under my hand and seal this day of , &c.

To A. B., C. D. &c.

A. C. Coroner. (L.S.)

(No. 5.)

WHEREAS I have received credible information that , of , in the said county of , surgeon, under a warrant for evidence on behalf of our sovereign Lord the King, touching the death of , now lying dead in the said parish of , in the county aforesaid; and where the said A. B. (having been duly summoned to appear and to give evidence before me and my inquest touching the premises, at the time and place in the said warrant specified, of which oath hath been duly made before me), hath refused and neglected to do, to the great hindrance and delay of justice: these are therefore, by virtue of my office, in his Majesty’s name, to charge and command you, or one of you, without delay, to apprehend and bring before me, one of his Majesty’s coroners for the said county, now sitting at the parish aforesaid, by virtue of my said office, the body of the said A. B., that he may be dealt with according to law; and for your doing this is your warrant. Given under my hand and seal this day of , &c.

A. C. Coroner. (L.S.)

To all constables, headboroughs, and other his Majesty’s officers of the peace in and for the county of , and also to E. F. my special officer.

(No. 6.)

WHEREAS I heretofore issued my summons under my hand, directed to , A. B., requiring his personal appearance before me, then and there, as his Majesty’s coroner for the said county of , at the time and place mentioned, to give evidence and be examined on his Majesty’s behalf, touching the death of , then and there lying dead; of the personal service of which said summons hath been duly made before me; and whereas the said A. B. being neglected and refused to appear, pursuant to the contents of the said summons, thereupon afterwards issued my warrant, under my hand and seal, in order that the said A. B. by virtue thereof might be apprehended and brought before me, to examine the premises; and whereas the said A. B., in pursuance thereof, hath been apprehended and brought before me, now duly sitting by virtue of my office, and hath been duly required to give evidence and be examined before me and my inquest, or his Majesty’s behalf, touching the death of the said R. F.; yet the said A. B. not standing hath wilfully and absolutely refused, and still doth wilfully and absolutely refuse, to give evidence and be examined touching the premises, or to give sufficient reason for his refusal, in wilful and open violation and delay of justice: these are therefore, by virtue of my office, in his Majesty’s name, to charge and command you, or one of you, the said constables, headboroughs, and others his Majesty’s officers of the peace, in and for the said county of , forthwith to convey the body of the said A. B. to the gaol of , in the said county, and safely to deliver the same to the keeper of the said prison there; and these are likewise, by virtue of my said office, in his Majesty’s name, to will and require you, the said keeper, to receive the body of the said A. B. into your custody, and him safely to keep in the same until he shall consent to give his evidence, and be examined before me and my inquest, on his Majesty’s behalf, touching the death of the said R. F., or until he shall be from hence discharged by due course of law. And for your so doing this is your warrant. Given under my hand and seal this day of , &c.

A. C. Coroner. (L.S.)

To the constables, headboroughs, and others his Majesty’s officers of the peace in and for the said county of , and also to the keeper of the prison at , in the said county.
Forms.

(No. 7.)

County of [AN] inquisition indented, taken at [aforesaid], in the county of [mentioned], in the year of [omitted], before me, A. C., gentleman, one of the coroners of our Lord the King, for the county aforesaid, upon the view of the body of A. D., then and there lying dead, upon the oaths of A. B., C. D., E. F., &c., good and lawful men of [aforesaid], and of three other of the next towns, to wit, K., L., and M., in the said county, who being sworn and charged to enquire on the part of our said Lord the King, where, how, and after what manner, the said A. D. came to his death, do say, upon their oaths, that one A. M., late of [aforesaid], gentleman, by not having the fear of God before his eyes, but being moved and seduced by the instigation of the devil, on the day of [omitted], in the year of [omitted], at the first hour in the night of the same day, with force and arms, in the county aforesaid, in and upon the aforesaid A. D., then and there being in the peace of God and of the said Lord the King, feloniously, voluntarily, and of his malice aforethought, made an assault; and that the aforesaid A. M. then and there with a certain sword made of iron and steel, of the value of 5s., which he had A. M. then and there held in his right hand, the aforesaid A. D. in and upon the left part of the belly of the said A. D., a little above the navel of the said A. D., then and there violently, feloniously, voluntarily, and of his malice aforethought, struck and pierced, and gave to the said A. D. then and there with the sword aforesaid, in and upon the aforesaid left part of the belly of the said A. D., a little above the navel of the said A. D. one mortal wound of the breadth of half an inch and of the depth of three inches, of which said mortal wound the aforesaid A. D. died, and there instantly died; and so the said A. M. then and there feloniously killed and murdered the said A. D. against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity. And moreover, &c. [conclude from these words in the next form, mutatis mutandis.]

---

(No. 8.)

[Proceed as in the above form to the conclusion of the words crown and dignity, and then thus]: and the said jurors further say upon their oath aforesaid, that A. A. of [yeoman], and B. A. of [yeoman], were feloniously present with drawn swords at the time of the felony and murder aforesaid, in form aforesaid committed, that is to say, on the said day of [omitted] in the year aforesaid, at [omitted] in the county aforesaid, at the first hour in the night of the same day, and there comforting, abetting, and aiding the said A. M. to do and commit the felony and murder aforesaid in manner aforesaid, against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity.

And moreover the jurors aforesaid upon their oath aforesaid do say, that the said A. M. [A. A., and B. A.] had not [nor any of them had] nor as yet [have or] hath any goods or chattels, lands or tenements within the county aforesaid or elsewhere, to the knowledge of the said jurors; for, and the jurors aforesaid upon their oath aforesaid do say, that the said A. B. at the time of the doing and committing of the felony and murder aforesaid, had goods and chattels contained in the inventory to this inquisition annexed, which remain in the custody of B. C.]

In witness whereof, as well the aforesaid coroner as the jurors aforesaid, have to this inquisition put their seals on the day and year, and at the place first above mentioned.

A. B.
C. D.
E. F. &c., jurors.

---

(No. 9.)

[As in the form (No. 7) to the asterisk, and then thus]: not having God before his eyes, but being seduced and moved by the instigation of the devil, at [omitted], in a certain wood at [omitted] aforesaid, standing and being, the said A. D. being therewith alone without a certain hempen cord of the value of [omitted] which he then and there held and held in his hands, and one end thereof then and there put about his neck, and the other end thereof passed about a [hough] of a certain [animal] himself, and then and there with the [cord] aforesaid voluntarily and feloniously and of his malice aforethought hanged and suffocated: and so the jurors aforesaid upon their oath aforesaid say, that the said A. D. then and there in manner and form aforesaid as a felon, of himself feloniously, voluntarily, and of his malice aforethought himself killed, strangled, and murdered; against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity.

In witness, &c. [conclude as in (No. 8) from these words.]
Forms.

Inquisition where one drowns himself.

AT the aforesaid in the county aforesaid, then and there being one common [river] there called himself voluntarily and feloniously drown'd, so the jurors aforesaid upon their oath aforesaid say, that the aforesaid A. D. is now and form aforesaid, then and there himself voluntarily and feloniously aforesaid himself killed and murdered; against the peace of our said Lord the King his own and dignity. In witness, &c. [as in form (No. 8)].

Inquisition on one drowned by accident.

THAT the said A. D. on the day of in the year aforesaid, at the parish and in the county aforesaid, going into the river there to fish himself, so happened that accidentally, casually, and by misfortune he the said A. D. was in the water of the said river then and there suffocated and drown'd, of which said suffocation and drowning he the said A. D. then and there instantly died: and so the jurors aforesaid say, that the said A. D. in manner and by the means aforesaid died a natural death, casually, and by misfortune came to his death, and not otherwise. In witness, &c. [as in form (No. 8)].

Inquisition where one dies a natural death.

THAT the said A. D. on the day of in the year aforesaid, at the parish and in the county aforesaid, to wit, in a certain place called was instantly dead: that he had no marks of violence appearing on his body, and died by the violence of God in a natural way and not otherwise. In witness, &c. [as in form (No. 8)].

Inquisition upon one who dies in a goal.

WHO say upon their oath that the aforesaid A. D. on the day of this inquisition, being a prisoner in the gaol at the county aforesaid, then and there did die of the visitation of God, and then and there in manner and form aforesaid came to his death, and not otherwise. In witness, &c. [as in form (No. 8)].

Inquisition on one not comopersentia.

WHO say upon their oath, that the aforesaid A. D. on the day and year aforesaid, and at the time of his death, to wit, from the day of to the day of his death, and at the time of his death aforesaid, was a lunatic and a person of unsound mind; and that the said A. D. being a lunatic and a person of insane mind aforesaid, did on the day of come alone to a certain [river] called in the said county, and did then and there cast himself into the said [river] and drowned himself in the water of the said [river]: and so the jurors aforesaid upon their oath aforesaid say, that the aforesaid A. D. from the cause aforesaid in manner and form aforesaid came to his death, and not otherwise. In witness, &c. [as in form (No. 9)].

Inquisition on one for cutting his throat.

BY the instigation of the devil, at the aforesaid in the county aforesaid, and upon himself then and there being in the peace of God and of the said Lord the King, from himself voluntarily, and of his malice aforethought, said an enem; so that the aforesaid A. D. then and there with a certain [knife] of the value of one penny which he the said A. D. then and there had in his [right] hand, himself upon his own then and there feloniously, voluntarily, and of his malice aforethought did strike and go to himself then and there with the [knife] aforesaid upon his throat aforesaid, mortal wound of the breadth of [four inches] and the depth of [one inch] of one said mortal wound the said A. D. at the aforesaid in the county aforesaid, languish and lingering lived from the said day of to the day of in the year aforesaid, and that the said A. D. on the day of in the year aforesaid, at the aforesaid in the county aforesaid, of that mort mortal wound died: and so the jurors aforesaid, &c. [as in form (No. 9)].

Inquisition on one for killing another in his own defence.

UPON their oaths say, that A. K. late of in the said county, on the day of in the year aforesaid, at the aforesaid in the county aforesaid, and upon himself then and there being in the peace of God and of the said Lord the King, from himself voluntarily, and of his malice aforethought, and with a certain [knife] of the value of one penny did strike and go to himself then and there with the [knife] aforesaid upon his throat aforesaid, and mortally wounded the said A. D. and upon himself then and there being in the peace of God and of the said Lord the King, from himself voluntarily, and of his malice aforethought, said an enem; so that the aforesaid A. D. then and there with a certain [knife] of the value of one penny which he the said A. D. then and there had in his [right] hand, himself upon his own then and there feloniously, voluntarily, and of his malice aforethought did strike and go to himself then and there with the [knife] aforesaid upon his throat aforesaid, mortal wound of the breadth of [four inches] and the depth of [one inch] of one said mortal wound the said A. D. at the aforesaid in the county aforesaid, languish and lingering lived from the said day of to the day of in the year aforesaid, and that the said A. D. on the day of in the year aforesaid, at the aforesaid in the county aforesaid, of that mort mortal wound died: and so the jurors aforesaid, &c. [as in form (No. 9)].
Forms.

of God and of our said Lord the King then being, A. M. late of in the county of at the hour of in the [afternoon] of the same day, did come and upon him the said A. K. then and there of his malice aforethought did make an assault, and him the said A. K. did then and there endeavoured to beat and kill by continuing the assault aforesaid, from the house of one W. H. in aforesaid, to a certain place called in the county aforesaid, and the said A. K. seeing that the said A. M. was so maliciously disposed, to a certain wall in the said place called did flee, and from thence for fear of death could not escape, and so the said A. K. himself in preservation of his life against the said A. M. continued to defend, and in his own defence him the said A. K. upon the [right] part of the [breast] of him the said A. M. with a certain [sword] of the price of [one shilling] which the said A. K. then and there held in his [right] hand did strike, and then and there giving to the said A. M. one mortal wound of the breadth of [one] inch and of the depth of [three] inches, of which said mortal wound the said A. M. at aforesaid in the county aforesaid, languished, and languishing lived from the said day of to the day of from thence next evening, and that the said A. M. on the said day of in the year aforesaid, at aforesaid in the said county, of that mortal wound he died; and so the said A. K. did then and there kill him the said A. M. in his own defence.

(No. 17.)

The same as before, only say, that a certain person unknown, &c. and add, and the said jurors upon their oath aforesaid further say, that the said person unknown, after he had committed the said felonies and murder in manner aforesaid, did flee away; against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity. In witness, &c. [as in form (No. 8)].

(No. 18.)

YOU acknowledge yourselves severally to owe to our sovereign Lord the King the sum of ten pounds, to be levied upon your goods and chattels, lands and tenements, for his Majesty's use, upon condition that if you, and each of you, do personally appear here again [or at an adjourned place] on next, being the day of instant, at ten of the clock in the forenoon precisely, then and there to make further inquiry on behalf of our said sovereign Lord the King, touching the death of the said R. F. of whose body you have had the view; then this recognizance to be void, or else to remain in full force. Are you content?

(No. 19.)

ALL manner of persons who have any thing more to do at this court before the King's coroner for this county, may depart home at this time, and give their attendance here again [or at the adjourned place] on next, being the day of instant, at ten of the clock in the forenoon precisely. God save the King.

(No. 20.)

ALL manner of persons who have any thing more to do at this court before the King's coroner for this county, on this inquest now to be taken, and adjourned over to this time and place, draw near and give your attendance; and you gentlemen of the jury who have been impummeled and sworn upon this inquest to inquire touching the death of R. F. severally answer to your names and save your recognizances.

(No. 21.)

YOU shall well and truly keep the jury upon this inquiry, without meat, drink, or fire; you shall not suffer any person to speak to them, nor you yourself, unless it be to ask them if they have agreed on their verdict, until they shall be agreed. So help you God.

(No. 22.)

BE it remembered, that on the day of in the year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord William the Fourth, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, defender of the faith, A. B. of the parish of C. in the county of [baker] C. G. of the same place, [victualler] E. F. of the recognize (p. 892)

same place, (laborer,)

and so insert the names of all bound over, do hereby acknowledge to owe to our sovereign Lord the King the sum of forty pounds lawful money of Great Britain, to be levied on their several goods and chattels and tenements, by way of recognizance to his Majesty’s use, in case default shall be made in the conditions following:

The condition of this recognizance is such, that if the above bounden shall severally personally appear at the grand jury, and there swear or refuse to be present, the grand jury a bill of indictment against G. H. late of the parish of ___, in the county of ___, and now in custody for the wilful murder of R. F. in the wife of the said E. F. and that the said A. B., C. G., and E. F. do then and there severally personally appear to give evidence on such bill of indictment as said grand jury shall return; and in case the said bill of indictment shall be returned by the grand jury a true bill, that then the said A. B., C. G., and E. F. do severally personally appear at the next court holden for the said county of ___, and there give evidence as shall be directed by the grand jury; and the said A. B., C. G., and E. F. do then and there severally give evidence to the jury, that shall pass on the trial of the said G. H. touching the premises, and in case the said bill of indictment shall be returned by the grand jury not found, that then they do severally personally appear at the next court to be holden for the said county, and then and there prove and give evidence to the jury that shall pass on the trial of the said S. D. upon an inquisition taken before me, one of his Majesty’s coroners for the said county of ___, on view of the body of the said S. D. and not depart the court without leave; then this recognizance to be void, otherwise to remain in full force.

Taken and acknowledged this ___ day of, &c. before me, A. C. Cerver.

(No. 23.)

Recognition to give evidence.

if it remembered, [as in the form (No. 22,)] J. P. of the parish of ___, in the county of ___, [blacksmith,] T. P. of the same place, [vintner,] J. R. of the same place, [whitesmith,] the husband of S. R.; J. B. of the same place, [haberdasher,] the master or G. S. his son, an infant; J. S. of the same place, [sword-cutter,] the master or G. S. his son, an infant; do severally acknowledge to owe to our sovereign Lord the King the sum of forty pounds lawful money of Great Britain, to be levied on their several goods and chattels and tenements, by way of recognizance, to his Majesty’s use, in case default shall be made in the conditions following:

The condition of this recognizance is such, that if the above bounden J. P., T. P., S. R. the wife of the said J. R., J. J., G. S., and S. P. do severally personally appear at the next court to be holden for the said county of ___, and then and there give evidence on a bill of indictment to be preferred to the grand jury against C. D. now at large, for the wilful murder of S. D. his wife; and in case the said bill of indictment shall be returned by the grand jury a true bill, then they do severally personally appear at the session of gaol delivery, to be held for the said county of ___, next after the apprehending or surrender of the said C. D. and then and there severally give evidence to the jury that shall pass on the trial of the said C. D. touching the premises; and in case the said bill of indictment shall be returned by the grand jury not found, that then they do severally personally appear at such sessions of gaol delivery to be held and there holden for the said county, and then and there give evidence to the jury that shall pass on the trial of the said C. D. upon an inquisition taken before me, one of his Majesty’s coroners for the said county of ___, on view of the body of the said S. D. and not depart the court without leave; then this recognizance to be void, otherwise to remain in full force.

Taken and acknowledged this ___ day of, &c. before me, A. C. Cerver.

(No. 24.)

Warrant to bury after a view.

WHEREAS an inquisition hath this day been held upon view of the body to wit, of R. F. who (not being of sound mind, memory, and understanding, being lunatic and distracted, shot himself, and,) now lies dead in your parish, that ye therefore, to certify that you may lawfully permit the body of the said R. F. to be buried; and for your so doing this is your warrant. Given under my hand and seal this day of, &c.
Forms.

A. C. Coroner. (L. S.)

To the minister and churchwardens of the parish of in the said city of and to all others whom it may concern.

(No. 25.)

WHEREAS by an inquisition taken before me one of his Majesty's coroners for the said county of this day of in the year of the reign of his present Majesty King William the Fourth, at the parish of in the said county of on view of the body of R. F. then and there lying dead, the jurors in the said inquisition named have found that the said R. F. feloniously, wilfully, and of his own malice aforethought, did kill and murder himself: these are therefore, by virtue of my office, to you forthwith to cause the body of the said R. F. to be buried privately in the churchyard or other burial ground of your parish, between the hours of nine and twelve at night, within after the receipt of this warrant; and for your so doing this is your warrant. Given under my hand and seal this day of, &c.

A. C. Coroner. (L. S.)

To the churchwardens and constables of the parish of in the county of .

(No. 26.)

WHEREAS complaint hath been made to me, one of his Majesty's coroners for the said county of that on the day of this instant the body of one R. F. was privately and secretly buried in your parish, in the said county, and that the said R. F. died not of a natural but violent death, and whereas no notice of the violent death of the said R. F. hath been given to either of his Majesty's coroners for the said county, whereby, on his Majesty's behalf, an inquisition might have been taken on view of the body of the said R. F. before his interment, as by law is required, these are, therefore, by virtue of my office, in his Majesty's name, to you forthwith to cause the body of the said R. F. to be taken up and safely conveyed to in the said parish, that I may proceed therein according to law. Hereof fail not, as you will answer the contrary at your peril. Given under my hand and seal this day of, &c.

A. C. Coroner. (L. S.)

To the minister, churchwardens, and overseers of the parish of in the said county of .

(No. 27.)

To all Constables and Headboroughs of the parish of in the county of and to all others his Majesty's officers of the peace within the said county.

WHEREAS by an inquisition taken before me, one of his Majesty's coroners for the said county of this day of , at the parish of in the said county of on view of the body of R. F. then and there lying dead, one of the said parish of in the said county, stands charged with the wilful murder of the said R. F. These are therefore, by virtue of my office, in his Majesty's name, to you forthwith to cause the body of the said R. F. to be buried privately in the churchyard of your parish, between the hours of nine and twelve at night, within after the receipt of this warrant; and for your so doing this is your warrant. Given under my hand and seal this day of, &c.

A. C. Coroner. (L. S.)

(No. 28.)

To the Constables, Headboroughs, and other his Majesty's officers of the peace for the county of and to the keeper of his Majesty's gaol of .

WHEREAS by an inquisition taken before me, one of his Majesty's coroners for the said county of the day and year hereunder men-WILLIAM the Fourth, &c. to A. coroner for our county of

We being willing, for certain reasons, that all and singular the inquisitions, informations and depositions taken by or before you, touching the custody of the keeper of our gaol at in and for our county for murder, [or manslaughter,] as is said, be sent by you before our trusty and well beloved Charles Lord Tenterden, our Chief Justice, unto us, to know how the same was committed before you, and deliver the same to the keeper of the said gaol; and that these be therein, before the said coroner, to will and require you, the said keeper, to deliver the body of the said A. C. Coron. (L.S.)

(No. 29.)

Return thereunto.

THE execution of this writ appears by the schedule hereunto annexed, to answer of A. C. one of the coroners of our Lord the King for the county of within named, with the seal affixed.

(No. 30.)

Fenler facit to answer inquisition.

WILLIAM the Fourth, &c. to the sheriff of the county of

We commend to you that you do not forborne by reason of any liberty in your bailiwick, but that you cause to come before us on whatsoever, &c. A. C. gentlemen, as the coroners of your county, to answer to us touching several defects in a certain inquisition lately taken before him, upon view of the body of the said R. F. then dead. Witness, &c.

(No. 31.)

Inquisition of treasure trove.

Town of Cambridge, AN inquisition indented, taken at the house commonly called the Inn, situate in the town of Cambridge, in the county of Cambridge, the fourth day of January, in the year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord William the Fourth, by the great seal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, defender of the faith, and in the year of our Lord, 1830, before me, A. C. gentlemen, one of the coroners of our Lord the King, for the town aforesaid, upon the oath of A. B., C. D., E., &c. naming the jurors, good and lawful men of the town of Cambridge sworn, who, being sworn and charged to inquire on the part of our said Lord the king and concerning certain treasure, lately said to be found within the said town, upon their oath say, that, on the third day of June last, one hundred and ninety-five pieces of gold coin, in all weighing thirty-four ounces five pennyweights, and the value of one hundred and thirty pounds and three shillings, of lawful money of Great Britain; and three thousand five hundred and ten pieces of silver coin, in all weighing two hundred and eighty-nine ounces and fifteen pennyweights, and the value of seventy pounds and five-pence halfpenny, of lawful money, were lost by W. S. and S. W. being labourers then in the employ of J. H. of the said town, bricklayer, hidden in the ground under the site of an ancient house or building situate in street in the said town; and which said pieces of gold and silver coin were of ancient time hidden as aforesaid, and the owner whereof cannot be

(No. 32.)
I.] Costs—(Of Prosecutor and Witnesses.)

known: and the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do further say, that the said pieces of gold and silver coin were deposited, and now remain in the custody of T. M. of the said town, banker; which said pieces of gold and silver coin, I the said coroner have taken and seised into his Majesty’s hands: in witness whereof, as well the aforesaid coroner as the said jurors have to this inquisition put their hands and seals on the day and year, at the place first above written.

Correction, House of. See post, Gaol, Vol. II.

As to how far a correction is justified in battery, ante, 270.

Corruption of Blood, see ante, Attainder.

Costs. (a)

I. Of Prosecutor and Witnesses, 895 to 901.

[13 Geo. III. c. 78, s. 64; 32 Geo. III. c. 57, s. 11; 58 Geo. III. c. 3, s. 7; 60 Geo. III. c. 14, s. 3; 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 41; 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27.]

II. Of Defendant, 901.

[14 Geo. III. c. 20; 55 Geo. III. c. 50, s. 4.]

III. Of Carrying a Prisoner to Gaol, 902.

[3 Jac. I. c. 10; 27 Geo. II. c. 3.]

IV. On Convictions and Summary Proceedings before Justices, 903.

[18 Geo. III. c. 19.]

V. Of Constables, 904.

VI. Forms, 904.

I. Of Prosecutor and Witnesses.

At common law, as it is a general principle that the King neither pays nor receives costs, and as an indictment, though carried on by an individual, is always considered as his suit, no costs are payable, whatever may be the event of the prosecution; Hullock, 557; and therefore even in cases where the costs are afterwards allowed, throughout the whole of the proceedings the prosecutor must defray his own expenses, and the

(a) As to costs in general, in criminal cases, see 1 Chit. C. L. 2d ed. 835; Hullock on Costs, 601 to 607.
Costs.

OF PROSECUTOR

AND WITNESSES.

Of witnesses.

It seems that in civil proceedings a witness is not obliged to attend if his expenses are tendered to him, pursuant to stat. 5 Eliz. c. 9; and if he neglect to appear, he may be fined according to the dictates of that statute, or punished by attachment for a contempt of the court. In circumstances of the case shall appear to be. 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 173; 2 Raum. 1529; 2 Stra. 1054, 1150; Tidd, 9 ed.

But in criminal proceedings the demands of public justice supersede consideration of private inconvenience, and witnesses are bound unconditionally to attend the trial upon which they may be summoned, and be held over to give their evidence; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 173; R. v. Cooke, 1 C & G. 321. To persons of opulence and public spirit this obligation cannot be hard or onerous, but indigent witnesses grew weary of expenses and frequently bore their own charges to their great hindrance and loss; and Lord Hale complains of the want of power in judges to allow witnesses their charges as a great defect in this part of judicial administration. 2 Hale, 282. See Chitty, Vol. II. p. 83.

But now, by the stat. 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, costs are allowed in criminal proceedings.

By statute.

In Felonies.

Courts may order payment of the expenses of prosecutions for felony, by the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 32, it is enacted, "that the court shall be always seized and empowered, at the request of the prosecutor or of any other person who shall appear on recognizance or subpoena to prosecute or give evidence against any person accused of any felony, to order payment unto the prosecutor of the costs and expenses which such prosecutor shall incur in preparing the indictment, and also payment to the prosecutor and witnesses for his prosecution, of such sums of money as shall reasonably be sufficient to reimburse such prosecutor and witnesses for the expense so shall have severally incurred in attending before the examining magistrates, the grand jury, and in otherwise carrying on such prosecution, and also to compensate them for their trouble and loss of time thereon, and although no bill of indictment be preferred, it shall be lawful for the court, where any person shall, in the opinion of the court, bond fide have attended the court in obedience to any such recognizance or subpoena, order payment unto such person of such sum of money as to the court shall seem reasonable and sufficient to reimburse such person for the expense which he or she shall have bond fide incurred by reason of attending before the examining magistrate or magistrates, and by reason of such recognizance or subpoena, and also to compensate such person for their trouble and loss of time, and the amount of expenses of attending before the examining magistrate or magistrates, and the compensation for trouble and loss of time therein shall be ascertained by the certificate of such magistrate or magistrates, grant before the trial or attendance in court, if such magistrate or magistrates do think fit to grant the same; and the amount of all the other expenses and compensation shall be ascertained by the proper officer of the court, subject nevertheless to the regulations to be established in the manner hereinafter mentioned." See these regulations, post, 899, 900.

This act repeals the stat. 25 Geo. II. c. 36, s. 11, the stat. 27 Geo. II. c. 3, s. 3, and the stat. 18 Geo. III. c. 19, s. 7, 8, and also the stat. 58 Geo. III. c. 70, with the exception of the 7th section, which is still in force, in section relating only to the mode of prosecuting disorderly house, post, 44 ed. 113. 1 Geo. IV. 292.

It will be observed that this section does not allow the expenses of apprehending the prisoner, as was the case under the 58 Geo. III. but only the expenses, loss of time, &c. "in attending before the examining magistrate or magistrates, and the grand jury, and in otherwise carrying on such process".
Of Prosecutor and Witnesses.

The 28th section of the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, in some respects supplies this omission by allowing superior courts to grant rewards to parties active in apprehending offenders. See this, post, Richard., Vol. V.

One of the provisions in the above 22d section, viz. "that the compensation for trouble and loss of time in attending before the magistrate, and also the expenses before him, are to be ascertained by his certificate, granted before the time of the trial, if he shall think fit to grant such certificate," is new.

It should seem that this section does not apply where the indictment has been removed into King's Bench by certiorari. R. v. Richards, 8 B. & Cret. 420; 1 B. & Cret. 143; R. v. Johnson, infra.

If the trial be postponed at the instance of the prosecutor, in an indictment for felony, on account of the illness of a witness, the prisoner is never required to pay the costs of the prosecutor; R. v. Hunter, 3 C. & P. 591; and see R. v. Crowe, 4 C. & P. 251, post, 901; aliter in misdemeanors.

Where the trial of such an indictment is postponed, the court will not make any order for the expenses until after the trial has actually taken place. Id.

In Misdemeanors]—By the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 23, after reciting that "for want of power in the court to order payment of the expenses of any prosecution for a misdemeanor, many individuals are deterred, by the expense, from prosecuting persons guilty of misdemeanors, who thereby escape the punishment due to their offences; it is enacted, that where any prosecutor or other person shall appear before any court on recognition or subpoena, to prosecute or give evidence, against any person indicted of any assault with intent to commit felony, or of any attempt to commit felony, or of any riot, of any misdemeanor, for receiving any stolen property, knowing the same to have been stolen, of any assault upon a peace officer in the execution of his duty, or upon any person acting in aid of such officer, of any neglect or breach of duty as a peace officer, of any assault committed in pursuance of any conspiracy to raise the rate of wages, of knowingly and designedly obtaining any property by false pretences, of willful and indecent exposure of the person, of willful and corrupt perjury, or of subornation of perjury, every such court is hereby authorized and empowered to order payment of the costs and expenses of the prosecutor and witnesses for the prosecution, together with a compensation for their trouble and loss of time, in the same manner as courts are herein-before authorized and empowered to order the same in cases of felony; and although no bill of indictment be preferred, it shall still be lawful for the court where any person shall have bond fide attended the court, in obedience to any such recognition, to order payment of the expenses of such person, together with a compensation for his or her trouble and loss of time, in the same manner as in cases of felony; provided, that in cases of misdemeanor, the power of ordering the payment of expenses and compensation shall not extend to the attendance before the examining magistrate."

This provision is wholly new. It will be observed it is not unlike the enactment, ante, 896, relating to costs, &c. in felonies, except that there is no power of allowing expenses or compensation for the attendance before the magistrate.

An indictment for a riot was preferred at the quarter sessions, and removed by certiorari at the instance of the prosecutor, and the case was tried at nisi prius. The prosecutor was under no recognizance, and he caused himself and his witnesses to be subpoenaed, and defrayed all their and his own expenses: held, that neither the Court of Nisi Prius nor the Court of King's Bench alone could award costs under the stat. 7 Geo. IV. c. 64. R. v. Johnson, 1827, Carr. C. L. 110; R. & M. C. C. 173, S. C.; R. v. Richards, 8 B. & C. 420, S. P.

But if an indictment for a misdemeanor be postponed on the motion of the defendant, he must pay the costs; but the prosecutor, unless a witness, will not be entitled to any remuneration for his loss of time or attendance. R. v. Doyle, 1 Esp. Rep. 125.

In misdemeanors, not included in the 23d section of the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, Vol. I.
Costs.

If the defendant, having been bound to appear and answer, does not appear, the court may be satisfied that the defendant is in default, and may be heard in default, in which case the defendant shall be held to have consented to the entry of judgment and the payment of all costs. R. v. Rayner, 2 B. & C. 423, 5 R. 124, S. C.

Nuisances.—Costs in the prosecution of nuisances arising from the proper construction, as well as from the negligent use of furnaces used in the working of engines by steam, are provided for by the 1 & 2 Geo. c. 41, by which act, after reciting that the expense of prosecution devolves on the parties from seeking the remedy given by law, it is enacted that it shall and may be lawful for the court by which judgment ought to be pronounced in case of conviction on any such indictment to award such costs to be deemed proper and reasonable to the prosecutor or prosecutor to the party paying by the party or parties so convicted as aforesaid, such award to be entered before or at the time of pronouncing final judgment, as so may seem fit.

But by the 3d section it is provided, that this provision shall not extend or be extended to extend to the owners or proprietors, or occupiers of furnaces of steam engines erected solely for the purpose of working on different descriptions of property or employed solely in the smelting of ores and minerals or in the manufacturing of the produce of such ores or minerals, or in any other employ of the premises where they are raised.

Non-repair of Highways.—The 13 Geo. III. c. 78, & 64, enacted the court before which any cause of this description shall be tried, shall have power to award costs to the prosecutor, to be paid by the defendant as the defence is set up as frivolous and to be paid by the former as the indictment appears to be vexatious. Under this act, no form of words is necessary in the judge's certificate, nor is any amount of costs requisite: R. v. Cotton, 6 T. R. 344. The grant or refusal of a certificate under this act is wholly in the discretion of the court or before whom the indictment or presentment was tried, and on a remand certiorari, the court above cannot interfere to supply what has been omitted.

R. v. Cotton, 5 T. R. 272. And where an individual, indicted for repairing, when bound to do so refuse tenure, applies to the court to set a small fine on a certificate that the road is put in good repair, the refusal, and afterwards, on the trial, it appears that the repair has not been effected between the former request and the trial, the court must set a nominal fine, unless the costs of the prosecutor are paid as aforesaid.

As to who is a party grievous under the 5 & 6 W. & M. c. 11, 13, respect to indictments for non-repairs of highways, removed into the King's Bench by certiorari, see ante, Certiorari, p. 386.

Disorderly Houses.—By the 58 Geo. III. c. 3, s. 7, which section remains unaltered, after reciting that by 25 Geo. III. c. 36, "it is enacted that the other peace officer of the like nature where there is no constable of such place or place, of any person keeping a bawdy house, gaming house or any disorderly house in such parish or place, the constable or such officer shall on the giving of such notice shall forthwith go with such inhabitants of his Majesty's justices of the peace of the county, city, town, district or liberty in which such parish or place does lie, and shall, upon such inhabitants making oath before such justice that they do believe the contents of such notice to be true, and entering into a recognizance in the penal sum of twenty pounds each to give or produce material evidence against such person or persons thereby, enter into a recognizance in the penal sum of thirty pounds to prosecute with effect such person for such offence at the next general quarter sessions of the peace, or at the next assizes to be held for the county in which such parish or place does lie, as to the said justice shall seem meet: and whereas it is expedient, when any two inhabitants of such parish or place, paying scot and bearing lot therein, shall give notice in writing to any constable of such parish or place of any person keeping a bawdy house, gaming house or any other disorderly house, in such parish or place, that the overseers of the poor of such parish or place shall have notice thereof: " it is enacted, "that a copy of the notice which shall be given to such constable shall also be served on or left at the places of abode of the overseers of the poor of such parish or place, or one of them, and such overseer or overseer of the poor shall be summoned or have reasonable notice to attend before such justice of the peace before whom such constable shall have notice to attend; and if such overseer or overseer of the poor shall then and there enter into such recognizance to prosecute such offender as the constable is in and by the said act required to enter into, then it shall not be necessary for, nor shall such constable be required to enter into such recognizance; but if such overseer or overseer of the poor shall neglect to attend such justice on having such notice, or shall attend, and shall decline or refuse to enter into such recognizance to prosecute, then such constable shall enter into the same, and shall prosecute, and shall be entitled to his expenses, to be allowed as in and by the said act is directed."
Of Prosecutor and Witnesses.

VAGRANTS]—As to costs in the prosecution of vagrants, see Vagrants, Vagrants. post, Vol. V.

Apprentices]—By 32 Geo. III. c. 57, s. 11, one moiety of the expenses Apprentices. of prosecuting a master for ill treating his parish apprentice may be paid out of the county rates. Vide ante, tit. Apprentices, p. 214.

On Certiorari]—As to the costs of a party grieved, and officers, &c. on prosecutions removed into K. B. by certiorari, see ante, Certiorari, p. 586.

Mode of procuring Order for Costs under the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64,—

Payment by Treasurer, &c. of County]—By the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 24, it is enated, "that every order for payment to any prosecutor or other person as aforesaid (ante, 896, 897,) shall be forthwith made out and delivered by the proper officer of the court unto such prosecutor or other person, upon being paid for the same the sum of one shilling for the prosecutor, and sixpence for each other person, and no more; and, except in the cases hereinafter provided for, shall be made upon the treasurer of the county, riding, or division in which the offence shall have been committed, or shall be supposed to have been committed, who is hereby authorised and required, upon sight of every such order, forthwith to pay to the person named therein, or to any one duly authorised to receive the same on his or her behalf, the money in such order mentioned, and shall be allowed the same in his accounts."

This provision is a re-enactment of the 58 Geo. III. c. 70, s. 6, which, together with the 18 Geo. III. c. 19, s. 8, are repealed by the 7 Geo. IV.

If the treasurer refuse to obey the order, an attachment or indictment may be preferred against him, but a mandamus will not lie. R. v. Treasurer of Surrey, 1 Chit. Rep. 650. A motion was made for a rule to show cause why a mandamus should not issue to the defendant to command him to pay the sum of 5s. to one Kinsey, pursuant to an order of the borough sessions, as an allowance for his expenses as a witness in attending a prosecution for felony carried on in that court. The application was founded on the 58 Geo. III. c. 70. But the court said that they could not interfere by mandamus. The proper remedy was either by attachment against the treasurer in the borough court, or by indictment at common law for disobeying the order. This latter remedy was the most proper, and they referred to R. v. Johnson, 4 M. & S. 515, as a case in point. Rule refused.

In Places not contributing to County Rate]—By the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 25, after reciting that "whereas felonies and such misdemeanors as are enumerated (ante, 897) enumerated may be committed in liberties, franchises, cities, towns, and places which do not contribute to the payment of 3 M 2 any county rate, some of which raise a rate in the nature of a common rate, and others have neither any such rate, nor any fund applicable to such purposes; and it is just that such liberties, franchises, cities, towns, or places should be charged with all costs, expenses, and compensations which by virtue of this act, in respect of felonies and such misdemeanors committed therein respectively; " it is enacted, "that all sums directed to be paid virtue of this act, in respect of felonies and of such misdemeanors as are said, (ante, 897,) committed or supposed to have been committed in such liberties, franchises, cities, towns, and places, shall be paid out of the rate of the nature of a county rate, or out of any fund applicable to similar purposes where there is such a rate or fund, by the treasurer or other officer having the collection or disbursement of such rate or fund; and where there is such rate or fund in such liberties, franchises, cities, towns, or places, shall be paid out of the rate or fund for the relief of the poor of the parish, township, district, or precinct therein, where the offence was committed, or supposed to have been committed, by the overseers or other officers having the collection or disbursement of such last-mentioned rate or fund; and the order of the court in every such case be directed to such treasurer, overseer, or other officers respectively, instead of the treasurer of the county, riding, or district, or even where as the case may require."

The provision is nearly the same as those of the 9th and 10th sects of the 58 Geo. III. c. 70, now repealed. It should seem that this provision virtually repeals the 60 Geo. III. c. 14, s. 3. (a)

In R. v. Johnson, 4 M. & S. 515, it was held that the costs of a prosecution, in the borough court of Liverpool, for a felony committed within such borough, may be ordered by the court to be paid by the treasurer of the county of Lancashire, the borough of Liverpool not having exclusive jurisdiction, nor any treasurer like a county treasurer, nor any rate in the nature of a county rate, but contributing as a part of the county to the county rate.

Regulation of Rate of Allowance]—By the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 26, "by the better regulation of costs and expenses in the cases aforesaid, and for preventing abuses in respect thereof," it is enacted, "that it shall be lawful to the justices of the peace of any county, riding, or division, or of any borough, franchise, city, town, or place chargeable with costs and expenses under a provision aforesaid, in quarter sessions assembled, to establish, and from time to time to alter, such regulations as to the rate of any costs and expenses thereafter to be allowed by virtue of this act, as to them shall seem just and reasonable; which regulations having received the approbation and assent of one justice of gaol delivery or of great sessions for the county where such regulations shall have been established, shall be binding on all persons whatsoever."

This provision is new. It has been observed by Mr. Carrington that this enactment, if followed up by the justices at the sessions, might

(a) By the stat. 60 Geo. III. c. 14, s. 3, it is provided, "That in all cases of any commitment to the county gaol, under the authority of this act, all the expenses to which the county may be put by reason of such commitment, together with all such expenses of the prosecution and witnesses as the judge shall be pleased to allow by virtue of any law now in force, shall be borne and paid by the said town, liberty, town, or place within which such offence shall have been committed, in like manner, and to be raised by the same means whereby such expenses would have been raised and paid if the offender had been prosecuted and tried within the limits of such exclusive jurisdiction; and that the judge or court of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, shall have full power and authority to make such orders touching such costs and expenses as such judge or court shall deem proper; and that the same shall be paid and borne by the county, town, or place to which the act extends."

In case there be no treasurer or other officer within the same, who by the act and usage of such place ought to pay the same in the first instance."
Mode of getting Order for.

scale of allowances, as proposed, might produce inconvenience, and this on two grounds:—1st, because the justices at sessions can know very little about what a criminal prosecution ought to cost, and the allowance in no two counties would be similar: and, 2d, because nothing can vary more than the expenses different cases; and therefore each must stand on its own peculiar circumstances. What scale of allowances could meet at all equally a case of stealing a pocket handkerchief and an important case of burglary against several pris-

MOODE OF GETTING ORDER FOR.

ers, founded on circumstantial evidence, to be deposed to by forty or fifty witnesses, and explained to the counsel in a brief of twenty sheets? Any scale of allowances fairly applicable to the one, would be absurd if applied to the other; and therefore there ought, from the nature of things, to be a discretion, vested somewhere, in allowing the expenses in each particular case; and it may be said, (no doubt very unjustly,) that as the justices are all payers of the county rate, they will fix the most niggardly scale of allowances; and therefore, in all cases of real importance to the justice of the country, in cases where a great crime has been committed, and the guilt of the parties is difficult to be traced, the prosecutor, after receiving an order for his ex-spenses, and the thanks of the court for having done his duty to the country, will find that he has not only been robbed to a large amount, but that the allowances of expenses is so small as to leave him 30l. or 40l. out of pocket for his public spirit.

Carr. C. L. 114.

Admiralty Prosecutions]—By the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 27, “for enablin AHigh Court of Admiralty to order the payment of the costs and expenses of prosecutors and witnesses, and compensation for their trouble and loss of time, in cases in which other courts have a like power under this act,” it is enacted, “that it shall be lawful for the judge of the said Court of Admiralty, in every case of felony, and in every case of misdemeanor of the denominations hereinbefore enumerated, committed upon the high seas, to order the assistant to the counsel for the affairs of the Admiralty and navy to pay such costs, expenses, and compensation to prosecutors and witnesses, in like manner as other courts may order the treasurer of the county to pay the same; and such assistant is hereby authorised and required, upon sight of every such order, forthwith to pay to the person named therein, or to any one duly authorised to receive the same on his or her behalf, the money in such order mentioned, and shall be allowed the same in his accounts.” See ante, Admiralty.

II. Of Defendant.

A defendant, although acquitted, must in general bear his own expenses, and costs are in no cases paid to prisoners charged with felony. (a) This certainly appears a defect in the law in many cases. Besides this, as we shall see post, 902, by 3 Jac. I. c. 10, s. 1, a defendant committed by a justice to the county gaol to take his trial for any felony, or inferior offence, is to bear the reasonable costs of his own conveyance, and if he refuse to pay them they are to be levied by warrant of distress on his personal estate, or by a rate if he have no property.

As to the provisions of the highway act, giving defendants costs in some cases where the prosecution for the non-repair is certified by the judge to be vexatious, see ante, 898; post, Rights, Vol. III. p. 85.

By stat. 14 Geo. III. c. 20, it is enacted, “that every prisoner who now is, or hereafter shall be, charged with any felony or other crime, or as an accessory thereto, before any court holding criminal jurisdiction, within that part of Great Britain called England and Wales, against whom no bill of indict-

(a) In a late case it was considered that if the trial of a prisoner indicted for felony be postponed, on the ground of

The prisoner will not be allowed his costs, but the judge will discharge him on his own recognizance. R. v. Cross, 4 C. &

P. 251.

Prisoners charged with crimes in f England for want of prosecution to be set at large.

Costs of carrying a prisoner to gaol.

By the 3 Jac. I. c. 10, it is enacted, "that all and every person and persons whatsoever, that from and after the end of this present session of parliament shall be committed to the common or usual gaol within any county or liberty within this realm, by any justice or justices of the peace for any offence or misdemeanor, to such gaol, that the said person or persons so to be committed as aforesaid, having means or ability therefor, shall bear their own reasonable charges for so conveying or sending them to the said gaol, and the charges also of such as shall be appointed to guard them to such gaol, and shall so guard them thither; and if any such person or persons so to be committed as aforesaid, shall refuse, at the time of their commitment and sending to the said gaol, to defray the said charges, or shall not then pay or bear the same, that then such justice or justices of the peace shall and may, by writing under his or their hand and seal, or hands and seals, give warrant to the constable or constables of the hundred, or constable or tithing man of the tithing or township, where such person or persons shall be dwelling and inhabit, or from whence he or they shall be committed aforesaid, or where he or they shall have any goods within the county or liberty, to sell such and so much of the goods and chattels of the said persons so to be committed as by the discretion of the said justice or justices of the peace shall satisfy and pay the charges of such his or their conveying and sending to the said gaol, the appraisement to be made by four of the honest inhabitants of the parish or tithing where such goods or chattels shall remain and be, and the overplus of the money which shall be made thereof to be delivered to the party to whom the said goods may belong."

By this act, if the offender had no goods, the parishioners were liable to

How the charges shall be levied if the prisoner refuse to pay them.
the costs. But this regulation was abolished by the following statute of 27 Geo. II. which repeals the act of James in this respect.

By the 27 Geo. II. c. 3, after repealing the 3 Jac. I. c. 10, it is enacted, "that from and after the 24th day of June, 1754, when any person, not having goods or money within the county where he is taken sufficient to bear the charges of himself, and of those who convey him, is committed to gaol or the house of correction by warrant from any justice or justices of the peace, then, on application, by any constable or other officer who conveyed him, to any justice of the peace for the same county or place, he shall upon oath examine into and ascertain the reasonable expenses to be allowed such constable or other officer, and shall forthwith, without fee or reward, by warrant under his hand and seal, order the treasurer of the county or place to pay the same, which the said treasurer is hereby required to do as soon as he receives such warrant; and any sum so paid shall be allowed in his accounts."

Sect. 4. "That nothing in this act contained shall extend to empower such court, or any justice or justices of the peace, to make warrants or orders on the treasurer of the county of Middlesex for the payment of the expenses of the constable or other officer in conveying any person to gaol, [the words here omitted are repealed.] but that within the said county of Middlesex the expenses of the constable or other officer, occasioned by his conveying of any person to gaol by virtue of a warrant from any justice or justices of the peace, shall (after such expenses have been examined into upon oath, and allowed by such justice or justices, and for which no fee or reward shall be taken,) be paid by the overseer or overseers of the poor of the parish or place where the said person was apprehended, who is and are hereby authorised and required to pay the same; and the sum or sums so paid shall be allowed in his or their accounts."

IV. On Convictions and Summary Proceedings before Justices.

By stat. 18 Geo. III. c. 19, s. 1, "Whereas by the laws now in being, his Majesty's justices of the peace are not sufficiently authorised, on complaints that come before them out of sessions, to award costs against either the person or persons complaining, or the person or persons against whom any complaint is made, as to justice may appertain, it is therefore enacted, that where any complaint shall be made before any of his Majesty's justices of the peace for any county, riding, division, city, town corporate, franchise, or liberty, and any warrant or summons shall issue in consequence of such complaint, that then it shall and may be lawful to and for any justice or justices of the peace, who shall have heard and determined the matter of the said complaint, to award (a) such costs to be paid by either of the parties, and in manner and form as to him or them shall seem fit, to the party injured; and in case any person, so ordered by the said justice or justices of the peace to pay such sums of money as aforesaid, shall not forthwith pay down or give security for the same to the satisfaction of the justice or justices, it shall and may be lawful for the said justice or justices, by warrant under his hand and seal, or their hands and seals, to levy the said sum or sums by distress (b) and sale of the goods and chattels of such person so refusing or neglecting; and where goods and chattels of such person cannot be found, (c) to commit (d) such person to the house of correction for the county, riding, division, city, town corporate, franchise, or liberty, wherein such person shall reside, there to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding one month, nor less than ten days, or until such sum or sums of money, together with the expenses attending the commitment of such person to such house of correction, be first paid."

(a) See form, (No. 2), post. (b) See form, (No. 3), post. (c) See form, (No. 4), post. (d) See form, (No. 5), post.
Sect. 2. "That upon the conviction of any person or persons upon a penal statute or statutes, where the penalty or penalties shall amount to exceed the sum of five pounds, the said costs shall be deducted by the justice or justices, according to his or their discretion, out of the said penalty or penalties, so that the said deduction shall not exceed one-fifth part of the said penalty or penalties; and the remainder of the said penalty or penalties shall be paid to, or divided among, the person or persons who would have been entitled to the whole of the penalty or penalties in case this act has not been made."

But in several instances, even where the penalty exceeds £5, the said parliament creating the penalty also gives costs.

Sect. 9. "That it shall and may be lawful for his Majesty's justices of the peace, in and for any county, riding, division, city, town corporate, franchise or liberty, in quarter sessions assembled, to lay down or alter, from time to time, such rules and regulations, as to any costs or charges thereafter is allowed to any person whatsoever by virtue of any part of this act, for better carrying the intent of any part of this act into execution, and for preventing any unnecessary expense, as to them shall seem most just and reasonable; which rules and regulations, having received the approbation and signature of one or more of his Majesty's judges of oyer and terminer, a general gaol delivery, at the assizes for the county wherein such rules and regulations shall have been made, shall be binding, and not otherwise, on persons whatsoever; and no person whatsoever shall be allowed any greater sum of money, by virtue of this act, than according to the said rules and regulations so approved of as aforesaid, any thing herein contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

As to the meaning of the words heard and determined, see ante, Appeal p. 140, and R. v. Cowston, 4 D. & R. 134.

As to the mode of deciding on and fixing those costs on a conviction, see ante, Commissions, p. 845, 846.

As to the costs of distresses for penalties, see post, Distress, Vol. 1.

Of distress for rent, rates, &c. id. and ante, Church Rates, p. 630.

V. Of Constables, &c. in Other Cases.

As to the costs and expenses of constables, see ante, Constables, p. 80:

on prosecutions for third breach of alehouse licenses, ante, Alehouses, p. 81.

As to costs on certiorari, ante, Certiorari, p. 584; on appeal ante, Appeals, p. 151; on appeals against poor rates, title Poor Rates, Vol. IV.; on appeals against orders of removal, title Poor, Vol. IV.; on appeals against overseers' accounts, title Poor, Vol. IV.; in distresses, post, Distress, Vol. 1.

As to rewards, title Rewards, Vol. V.

Forms.

(No. 1.)

To the Treasurer of the county of or his deputy.

WHEREAS by my warrant of commitment dated this day, I have committed one [etc.] to the said county, to be prosecuted at the ensuing assizes at [etc.], where the said prisoners have incurs, [etc.], from the said public office, Bow Street, and I have caused them to pay to such and for so doing the said prisoner as aforesaid, the said sum of Forms.

be your sufficient warrant. Given under my hand and seal at [the public office, Bow Street,] the day of in the year of our Lord J. P. (L. S.)

______

(No. 2.)

County or Borough, &c. I A. J. one of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the aforesaid, in pursuance of an act made in the eighteenth year of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act for the payment (to wit.) of costs to parties, on complaints determined before justices of the peace out of sessions, for the payment of the charges of constables in certain cases, and for the more effectual payment of charges to witnesses and prosecutors of any larceny or other felony," on the complaint of [here state the names of the parties, and the offence generally, and the date,] against for which said complaint was heard and determined by me, on the day of do award the following costs to be paid by [here state the costs.] Given under my hand and seal this day of in the year of our Lord

______

(No. 3.)

To the Constable of and to all other his Majesty's Constables in and for in aforesaid.

WHEREAS I, J. P. Esquire, one of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the aforesaid, in pursuance of an act made in the eighteenth year of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act for the payment of costs to parties, on complaints determined before justices of the peace out of sessions, for the payment of the charges of constables in certain cases, and for the more effectual payment of charges to witnesses and prosecutors of any larceny or other felony," have awarded on the day of new last past, on the complaint of against for the following costs to be paid by [here state the sum]: and whereas the said being ordered by me the said justice to pay such sum as aforesaid, hath not paid down or given security for the same to the satisfaction of me the said justice; these are therefore to command you, and each and every of you, to levy the said sum of by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the said , and I do hereby order and direct the goods and chattels so to be distrained to be sold and disposed of within days, unless the said sum of for which such distress shall be made, together with the reasonable charges of taking and keeping such distress, shall be sooner paid; and you are hereby also commanded to certify unto me what you shall have done by virtue of this my warrant. Given under my hand and seal at the day of in the year of our Lord

______

(No. 4.)

I constable of do hereby certify to justice of the peace of that I have made diligent search for, but do not know, nor can find any goods and chattels of by distress and sale whereof I may levy the sum of pursuant to his warrant for that purpose, dated the day of Given under my hand, this day of in

______

(No. 5.)

To the Constable of and also to the Keeper of the House of Correction at

WHEREAS, in pursuance of an act made in the eighteenth year of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An Act for the payment of costs to parties, on complaints determined before justices of the peace out of sessions, for the payment of the charges of constables in certain cases, and for the more effectual payment of charges to witnesses and prosecutors of any larceny or other felony," of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said did issue warrants of distress and sale, directed to of constable of the said of ordering the said constable to levy the said sum of of the goods and chattels of the said in manner and form as therein is mentioned; and whereas it appears to by the return of of constable of dated the day of that he hath made diligent search, but doth not know of, nor can find any goods and chattels of the said

(a) The 18 Geo. IIII. c. 19, gives this form.
Cottages.

COTTAGE (Sax. Cot.) is a small house for habitation, without any belonging to it. By Stat. 31 Eliz. c. 7, cottages were prohibited to be without laying at least four acres of land to the same, and divers restrictions were thereby enjoined; but the same was repealed by 13 Geo. III. c. 32, setting forth that the said statute of 31 Eliz. had been injurious to many under great difficulties to procure habitations, and to very much lessen population, and in divers other respects was injurious to the labouring part of the nation in general.

Cotton and Woollen Mills.

[42 Geo. III. c. 73; 59 Geo. III. c. 65; 60 Geo. III. c. 5; 6 Geo. IV. c. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30; 10 Geo. IV. c. 51, 63.]

The Stat. 42 Geo. III. c. 73, (a) intitled “An Act for the preservation of the health and morals of apprentices and others employed in cotton and woollen mills, and cotton and other factories,” enacts, s. 1, that from 2d of Decem. 1802, all cotton and woollen mills, and cotton and woollen factories that three or more apprentices or twenty or more other persons shall at any time be employed, shall be subject to the several rules and regulations contained in this act, and the master or mistress of every such mill or factory strictly enjoined to act in strict conformity to the said rules and regulations.

Every room and apartment belonging to such mill or factory shall, at least in every year, be sufficiently washed with quick lime and water, and every part of the walls and ceiling thereof, and due care shall be paid by the master or mistress of such mills or factories to provide a sufficient number of windows and openings in such rooms or apartments, to insure a proper supply of fresh air in and through the same. Sect. 2. And see the 6 Geo. IV. c. 63, s. 6, post, 910.

The room or apartment in which any male apprentice shall sleep shall be entirely separate and distinct from that in which any female apprentice sleeps; and not more than two apprentices shall in any case sleep in the same bed. Sect. 7.

Every master or mistress shall constantly supply every apprentice with

(a) This act and the 59 Geo. III. consolidating the provisions and by law c. 65, are improved on by the 6 Geo. IV. c. 63, post, 910, but from want of a con-
Cotton and Woollen Mills.

907

the apprenticeship with two complete suits of clothing, with suitable linen, stockings, hats, and shoes; one new complete suit being delivered to such apprentice once at least in every year. Sect. 3.

No apprentice to any such master or mistress shall be employed or compelled to work for more than twelve hours in any one day (reckoning from six of the clock in the morning to nine of the clock at night), exclusive of the time that may be occupied by such apprentice in eating the necessary meals; provided that from the 1st of June, 1803, no apprentice shall be employed or compelled to work upon any occasion whatever between nine at night and six in the morning. Sect. 4. And see 6 Geo. IV. c. 63, s. 3, post, 918; and as to working on Saturday, 6 Geo. IV. c. 63, s. 2, post, 910.

Every such apprentice shall be instructed in some part of every working day, for the first four years at least of his or her apprenticeship, in the usual hours of work, in reading, writing, and arithmetic, or either of them, according to the age and abilities of such apprentice, in some room or place in such mill or factory to be set apart for that purpose; and the time so allotted shall be deemed part of the respective periods limited by this act during which any such apprentice shall be employed or compelled to work. Sect. 6.

Every apprentice (or in case the apprentices shall attend in classes, every such class,) shall, for one hour at least every Sunday, be instructed and examined in the principles of the Christian religion by some proper person, to be provided and paid by the master or mistress of such apprentice; and if the parents of such apprentice shall be members of the church of England, then such apprentice shall once a year at least be examined by the rector, vicar, or curate of the parish in which such mill or factory is situate; and shall also, after such apprentice is fourteen years old and before his eighteenth year, be prepared for confirmation, and be brought or sent to the bishop to be confirmed, in case any confirmation shall during such period take place in or for such parish, and such master or mistress shall send their apprentices under proper care once in a month at least to attend divine service in the church of the parish or place in which the mill or factory shall be situated, or in some convenient church or chapel according to the established church, or in some licensed place of public worship; and in case the apprentices cannot conveniently attend service every Sunday, the master or mistress shall cause divine service to be performed in some convenient room or place in or adjoining to the mill or factory, once at least every such Sunday. Sect. 8.

The justices for every county, riding, division, or place in which any such mill or factory shall be situate, shall at the Midsummer sessions appoint two persons not connected with such mills or factories to be visitors thereof, one of whom shall be a justice of the peace for such county, &c. and the other a clergyman of the established church; and if such appointment be found inconvenient, such justices shall appoint two such justices or two such clergymen; and the said visitors or either of them may from time to time throughout the year enter and inspect any such mill or factory during daytime or the hours of employment; and shall report from time to time, in writing, to the sessions the state and condition of such mills and factories, and the apprentices therein, such report to be entered by the clerk of the peace among the records of the sessions in a book kept for that purpose; provided, that if six or more mills or factories be within any one such county, &c. then such justices may divide such county, &c. into two or more districts or parts, and appoint two such visitors as aforesaid for each of such districts or parts. Sect. 9.

And if the said visitors or either of them shall find that any infectious disorder prevails in any mill or factory as aforesaid, they or he may require the master or mistress of such mill or factory to call in some physician or other competent medical person to ascertain the nature, &c. of such disorder, and apply such remedies and recommend such regulations as he shall think proper on the occasion; and such medical person shall report to the visitors or either of them, as often as required, his opinion in writing of the nature, progress, and present state of the disorder, together with its probable effects.
and any expenses incurred in consequence thereof shall be discharged by the master or mistress of such mill or factory. Sect. 10.

If any one shall oppose or molest any of the said visitors in the exercise of the powers of this act, every such person shall for every offence forfeit to the crown more than 10l. nor less than 5l. Sect. 10.

And every master or mistress of such mill or factory who shall offer resistance to any of the provisions of this act shall for such offence (except in cases of resistance otherwise directed) forfeit not more than 5l. nor less than 40s. at the discretion of the justices before whom such offender shall be convicted, as more fully mentioned; one half to the informer, and the other to the poor: such information to be laid within one calendar month after the offence is committed. Sect. 13.

All offences for which any penalty is hereby imposed shall be heard by two justices acting in and for the place where the offence shall be committed and all penalties, and costs, and charges attending the conviction may be levied by distress by warrant of two justices acting for the county, &c., ordering the overplus (if any) to the party offending; which warrant shall be required to grant on conviction, either upon confession or upon the oath of one witness, and in case no distress can be found, or such penalties, &c., be not paid, such justices shall by warrant commit the offender to the common gaol or house of correction of the county, &c., where the offence shall be committed, for any time not exceeding two calendar months, unless the party &c., be sooner paid; provided that no warrant of distress shall be issued in such penalty, &c., until six days after conviction, and an order made of the offender for payment thereof; and no such conviction shall be removable by certiorari into any court. Sect. 15.

The master or mistress of every such mill or factory shall cause printed or written copies of this act to be hung up and affixed in two or more conspicuous places in such mill or factory; the same to be constantly kept as renewed so as to be at all times legible and accessible to all persons employed therein. Sect. 12. And see 6 Geo. IV. c. 63, s. 7, post, 910.

Every such master or mistress shall, at the Epiphany sessions yearly, make or cause to be made an entry in a book, to be kept for that purpose in the clerk of the peace of every county, &c. in which such mill or factory shall be situate, of every such mill or factory occupied by him or her, wherein three or more apprentices, or twenty or more other persons, shall be employed, and the said clerk shall receive for every such entry 2s. and no more. Sect. 14.

Every such conviction before such justices may be made in the following form: (to wit,

County of... BE it remembered, that on the day of... in the year... the justices of the peace for the said county of... [or, for the county of... as the case shall happen to be,] in pursuance of an act passed in the forty-second year of the reign of... His Majesty King George the Third, for... (or as the case may be). Given under our hands and seals, the day and year above written.

Which conviction shall be certified to the next general quarter sessions, there to be filed amongst the records of the county, riding, or division. Sect. 16.

And the act is a public act. Sect. 17.

The 59 Geo. III. c. 66, reciting stat. 42 Geo. III. c. 72, and that it is expedient that some further provision should be made for the regulation of mills, manufactories, and buildings employed in the preparation and spinning of cotton wool; enacts, “That from and after the 1st of January, 1820, no child shall be employed in any description of work, for the spinning of cotton wool into yarn, or in any previous preparation of such wool, until he or she shall have attained the full age of nine years.” Sect. 2.

“That no person, being under the age of sixteen years, shall be employed in any description of work whatsoever, in spinning cotton wool into yarn, or in the previous preparation of such wool, or in the cleaning or repairing of any mill, manufactury or building, or any millwork or machinery...”
Cotton and Woollen Mills.

909 toilets therein, for more than twelve hours in any one day, exclusive of the necessary time for meals; such twelve hours to be between the hours of five o'clock in the morning and nine o'clock in the evening." See further the 6 Geo. IV.
c. 63, s. 1, post, 910.

Sect. 3. "That there shall be allowed to every such person, in the course of every day, not less than half an hour to breakfast, and not less than one full hour for dinner; such hour for dinner to be between the hours of eleven o'clock in the forenoon and two o'clock in the afternoon." And see further 6 Geo. IV. c. 63, s. 3, post, 910.

Sect. 4. "That if at any time, in any such mill, manufactury or building as are situated upon streams of water, time shall be lost in consequence of the want of a due supply, or of an excess of water, then and in every such case, and so often as the same shall happen, it shall be lawful for the pro-prieters of any such mill, manufactury or building, to extend the before mentioned time of daily labour, after the rate of one additional hour per day, until such lost time shall have been made good, but no longer." And see 6 Geo. IV.
c. 63, s. 4, post, 910.

Sect. 5. "That the ceilings and interior walls of every such mill, manufac-tuary or building shall be washed with quick lime and water twice in every year." And see 6 Geo. IV. c. 63, s. 6, post, 910.

Sect. 6. "That in a conspicuous part of every such mill, manufactury or building, a copy of this act, or a full and true abstract of the regulations provided thereby, shall be hung up and affixed, and signed by the proprietors, manager or overseer of such mill, manufactury or building; and that such copy or abstract shall be kept and renewed, so that the same shall be at all times legible." And see 6 Geo. IV. c. 63, s. 7, post, 910.

Sect. 7. "That every master or mistress of any such cotton mill, manufac-tuary or building, who shall wilfully act contrary to or offend against any of the provisions of this act, or any of the provisions of the above recited act, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding £20; nor less than £10; at the discretion of the justices before whom such offender shall be convicted; one-half whereof shall be paid to the informer, and the other half to the overseers of the poor in England, to the churchwardens in Ireland, and to the ministers and elders in Scotland, of the parish or place where such offence shall be committed; to be by them applied in aid of the poor rate in England, and for the benefit of the poor in Ireland and Scotland, of such parish or place: provided always, that all informations for offences against the said recited act or this act, shall be laid within three calendar months subsequently to the offence being committed, and not after the expiration of such three calendar months: provided also, that all penalties inflicted by this act shall be levied, recovered and applied in manner directed by the said recited act."

Sect. 8. "That this act shall be deemed and taken to be a public act, and shall be judicially taken notice of as such by all judges, justices and others, without specially pleading the same."

The stat. 60 Geo. III. c. 5; reciting stat. 59 Geo. III. c. 66, "and whereas it is expedient to provide for accidents by fire or otherwise, which may arise in the working of such mills or factories, by which many persons may be suddenly deprived of employment, and to alter the said act:" enacts, "that on the event of one or more mills being suddenly destroyed by fire or other accident, the proprietors thereof, possessing other mills which are kept at work during the day, shall, for eighteen months from the day on which any such fire or other accident shall happen, be allowed to employ the persons who were previously at work on the mill or mills so destroyed, and employ them in the night time in any other mill or mills, for any period not exceeding ten hours in any one night." See the 6 Geo. IV. c. 63, s. 4, post, 910.

Sect. 2. "And whereas it is by the said act enacted, that there shall be allowed to every person, in the course of every day, not less than half an hour to breakfast, and not less than one full hour for dinner; such hour for dinner to be between eleven of the clock in the forenoon and two of

COTTON AND WOOLLEN MILLS.

59 Geo. 3, c. 66.
Hours of meals and time appointed.

Time to be made up by accidental intermission after the rate of an additional hour per day.

Ceilings and walls to be cleansed twice a year.

Publication of this act in every cotton mill, &c.

Penalty on acting contrary to the provisions of this act.

Application of penalties.

Limitation of actions.

Public act.
Cotton and Woollen Mills.

60 Geo. 3, c. 5.

Public act.

6 Geo. 4, c. 63.

43 Geo. 3, c. 73.

50 Geo. 3, c. 66.

Age and hours of young persons working in cotton mills and factories.

Hours of work on Saturday.

Hour and time for breakfast and dinner.

No labour during such times.

Proviso for unavoidable loss of time in case of accidents happening to engines, &c.

and of a want of water.

Ceilings and walls to be washed.

Copy of act hung up in every manufactory, &c.

Occupier or foreman offending.

Penalty.

How applied.

the clock in the afternoon: and whereas it is expedient that the said thereby specified for the hour of dinner should be altered; be it enacted, that such hour for dinner shall be between the hours of one and the clock in the forenoon and four of the clock in the afternoon:
yet in the said act to the contrary notwithstanding;"’

Sect. 3 declares it a public act.

By the 6 Geo. IV, c. 63, intituled An Act to make further provision the regulation of cotton mills and factories, and for the better preservation the health of young persons employed therein, after reciting the 42 Geo. III.
c. 73, and 59 Geo. III. c. 66, it is enacted, ‘that from and after the 1st day of August, 1825, no person being under the age of sixteen years who employed in any description of works whatsoever, in spinning cotton, weaving into yarn, or in the previous preparation of such wool, or in cleaning cotton mill, manufactory or building, or any millwork or machinery therein, more than twelve hours in any one day, exclusive of the necessary daily meals, such twelve hours to be between the hours of five of the clock in morning and eight of the clock in the evening;”

Sect. 2. “That no person under the age aforementioned shall be set in any cotton mill or factory more than nine hours on a Saturday: such hours to be completed between the hours of five of the clock in the morning and half past four of the clock in the afternoon.

Sect. 3. “That there shall be allowed to every such person, in the rest every day, not less than half an hour to breakfast, and not less than an hour for dinner; such half hour for breakfast to be between the hours of past six of the clock and ten of the clock in the morning, and such hour for dinner to be between the hours of eleven of the clock in the forenoon, three of the clock in the afternoon; and during such before-mentioned half for breakfast, and such one hour for dinner, no such person shall be requir to perform any labour or work of the nature or description above-mentioned in any such mill, manufactory, or building;”

Sect. 4. “That if at any time, in any such mill, manufactory or building hours shall be lost in consequence of any accident happening to the engine, water-wheels, or mill-gearing, then and in every such case, and often as the same shall happen, it shall be lawful for the occupier of any mill, manufactory or building, to extend the before-mentioned time of daily labour after the rate of one additional hour in any one day, until such time shall have been worked up during the six following days (Saturday excepted), but no longer.”

Sect 5. “That if at any time in any such mill, manufactory or building as are situated upon streams of water, time shall be lost in consequence the want of a due supply or of an excess of water, then and in every such case, and so often as the same shall happen, it shall be lawful for the occu pier of any such mill, manufactory or building, to extend the before-men tioned time of daily labour after the rate of half an hour per day, until such lost time shall have been made good, but no longer.”

Sect. 6. “That the ceilings and interior walls of every such mill, manufactory or building, shall be washed with quick lime and water once in ever year.”

Sect. 7. “That in a conspicuous part of every such mill, manufactory or building, a copy of this act, or a full and true abstract of the regulations provided hereby, shall be hung up and affixed and signed by the proper manager or overseer of such mill, manufactory, or building; and such cop or abstract shall be kept and renewed, so that the same shall be at all time legible.”

Sect. 8. “That every occupier or foreman of any such cotton mill, manufactory or building, who shall knowingly act contrary to or offend against any of the provisions of this act, or any of the provisions of the above-mentioned acts, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding £10, or less than £10., at the discretion of the justices before whom such occu pier shall be convicted; one half whereof shall be paid to the informer, and th
Cotton and Woollen Mills.

other half to the overseers of the poor in England, to the churchwardens in Ireland, and to the ministers and elders in Scotland, of the parish or place where such offence shall be committed, to be by them applied in aid of the poor rate in England, and for the benefit of the poor in Ireland and Scotland of such parish or place: provided always, that no sum exceeding 100l. in the whole shall be levied for any number of offences under this act committed in the same day in any one mill or establishment; and that all informations for offences against the said recited acts or this act shall be laid within two calendar months subsequently to the offence being committed, and not afterwards: provided also, that no person shall be prosecuted for more than one offence committed on the same day in any one mill or establishment, without the sanction and authority of the justices at quarter sessions assembled; and that all penalties inflicted by this act shall be levied and recovered in manner directed by the said first-recited act.”

Sect. 9. “That every proprietor or occupier of any mill, manufactory or building herebefore described, wherein children under the age above-mentioned, that is to say, sixteen years of age, are or shall be employed in spinning cotton wool into yarn, or in the previous preparation thereof, shall provide or cause to be provided a book or books, to be kept by himself or herself, or by some person appointed by him or her, for the entry of the name of every child previous to his or her being employed in any such mill, manufactory or building, for the purpose aforesaid, whom any such proprietor or occupier may consider under the age of nine years, together with the names of the parents or guardians of any such child; and that the signature of such parents or guardians, or one of them, when so entered in the said book or books, specifying the date of such entry, and that the said child or children is or are of or above the age of nine years, shall in all such cases exempt such proprietor or occupier of such mill, manufactory or building, from any prosecution under the provisions of this act, in so far as relates to the penalties imposed on persons employing children under the aforesaid age of nine years for any of the purposes aforesaid.”

Sect. 10. “That no justice of the peace, being also a proprietor or master of any cotton mill or factory, or the father or son of any such proprietor or master, shall act as such justice under this act.”

Sect. 11. “That it shall be lawful for any one or more justices of the peace, before whom any such complaint and information shall be made as aforesaid, and he and they are hereby authorised and required, at the request in writing of any of the parties, to issue his or their summons to any witness or witnesses to appear and give evidence before any two justices at the time and place appointed for hearing and determining such complaint, and which time and place shall be specified in such summons; or offer some reasonable excuse for the default, or appearing according to such summons, shall not submit to be examined as a witness, and give his or her evidence before such justices touching the matter of such complaint, then and in every such case it shall be lawful for such justices, and they are hereby authorised (proof on oath, which oath either of such justices are hereby empowered to administer, in the case of any person not appearing according to such summons, having been first made before such justices of the due service of such summons on every such person, by delivering the same to him or her, or by leaving the same forty-eight hours before the time appointed for such person to appear before such justices, at the usual place of abode of such person) by warrant under the hands of such justices, in the form and to the effect of the form in the schedule to this act annexed, to commit such person so making default in appearing, or appearing and refusing to give evidence, to some prison within the jurisdiction of such justices, there to remain without bail or mainprice, for any time not exceeding two calendar months, or until such person shall submit himself or herself to be examined, and give his or her evidence before such justices as aforesaid: provided always, that in case such complaint shall be heard and determined before such offender shall submit to be examined and give evidence as aforesaid, then and in every such case he. she, or they shall be imprisoned the full term of said

Sect. 12. That the justices before whom any person shall be convicted Sect. 13. That no appeal shall be allowed against any conviction for Sect. 14. That if any action shall be brought against any person for Sect. 15. That all and every the powers, provisions, exceptions,

SCHEDULE to which this Act refers.

WHEREAS C. D. hath been duly summoned to appear and give evidence

In the time and place aforesaid specified for that purpose, offer any reasonable excuse for his defence [or, and whereas the said C. D. has not appeared before us, at the time and place aforesaid specified for that purpose, has not appeared before the court, in the time and place aforesaid specified for that purpose, has not appeared to be examined as a witness and give his evidence before us, unless the matter of the said complaint, but hath refused as he doth], therefore we the minister or his deputy, in pursuance of the statute, commit the said C. D. to the [described] prison... there to remain without him or without his consent at any time, until the court shall order otherwise.

10 Gen. 4. c. 53.

By the 10 Gen. IV. c. 51, after reciting the 6 Gen. IV. c. 53, and in the provisions of the said act have been defeated and set aside as unreasonable, it is enacted, that it shall not be deemed necessary in any information, summons, or warrant, issued in pursuance of the said act, to state the name or other designation of such and every person so examined or carried to the said prison, or made to give his evidence before us, unless by order of the court, in the time and place aforesaid specified for that purpose, has not appeared before the court, in the time and place aforesaid specified for that purpose, has not appeared to be examined as a witness and give his evidence before us, unless the matter of the said complaint, but hath refused as he doth, therefore we the minister or his deputy, in pursuance of the statute, commit the said C. D. to the [described] prison... there to remain without him or without his consent at any time, until the court shall order otherwise.

In the time and place aforesaid specified for that purpose, has not appeared before the court, in the time and place aforesaid specified for that purpose, has not appeared to be examined as a witness and give his evidence before us, unless the matter of the said complaint, but hath refused as he doth, therefore we the minister or his deputy, in pursuance of the statute, commit the said C. D. to the [described] prison... there to remain without him or without his consent at any time, until the court shall order otherwise.
Cotton and Woollen Mills.

Sect. 2. "That the service of such summons or warrant on any principal manager, conductor, or clerk of any cotton mill or factory, during the usual hours of working such cotton mill or factory, shall be good and lawful service."

Sect. 3. "That no information filed, nor any summons or warrant served, as directed by the said recited act, or by this act, shall be quashed for informality or want of form."

The 10 Geo. IV. c. 63, confirms this act of 10 Geo. IV. c. 51.

As to disputes between masters and workmen in cotton factories, see post, Servants, Vol. V. p. 376, 382.

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 3, wilfully destroying or injuring manufactured cotton goods in the loom, &c. or machinery, or forcibly entering buildings for that purpose, subjects the offender to transportation for life, or imprisonment and whipping, &c. See generally, post, Malicious Injuries to Property, Vol. III. p. 727.

Counsel.

As to his right of attendance on summary proceedings, see ante, Conviction, p. 829, Justices, Vol. III. p. 471; as to his rights and duties at sessions, see post, Sessions, Vol. V. p. 463, 464; counsel not allowed to prisoner in treason or felony, Vol. V. p. 462; as to what confidential communications made to counsel are privileged in evidence, see Evidence, Vol. II. p. 87, 88.

County.

[9 Geo. IV. c. 43.]

As to the meaning of the term county, see post, 917.

As to what is a county, see post, 917.

See as to the venue in indictments, post, Indictment, Vol. III. p. 330 to 335; as to the venue in convictions, see ante, 818, 820.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 43, intituled, "An Act for the better regulation of divisions in the several counties in England and Wales," after reciting, that "whereas by divers acts now in force it is enacted, that certain matters and things, in the same respectively mentioned, shall be transacted and determined within the divisions or limits within which the same shall arise, or the parties therein concerned inhabit or exercise their trade or calling, and by or before one, two, or more justices of the peace dwelling within or near to, or usually acting within, such divisions or limits respectively: and whereas the boundaries of such divisions or limits are in some instances uncertain, and in many have become inconvenient to the inhabitants within the same, from the change or increase of trade or population, or from other causes: and whereas doubts have arisen as to the authority by which such divisions or limits may from time to time be constituted, defined, or altered; and it is expedient that such doubts should be removed, and due provision made for the constituting, defining, and regulating from time to time such divisions or limits, as the convenience of the inhabitants within the same may require;" it is enacted, "that at any time or times after the Michaelmas quarter sessions next following the passing of this act, it shall be lawful for any two or more justices of the peace for any county, riding, or division in England or Wales, having a separate commission of the peace, to transmit to the clerk of the

Vol. I.

3 N peace a statement in writing, signed by such justices, of the parish, the townships, and places within the same, which, in the opinion of such justices, would form a proper division for which special sessions should then be held; or of any parish, the townships, or places, which, in the opinion of such justices, ought to be annexed, for the same purposes, to any other division in the said county, those or that of which at the time of making such statement they fore see that every such statement shall, among other things, set forth what existing divisions or division, limits or limit, the several plas tishments, townships, and places enumerated in the same, are still deemed to be; and also whether one or more and what existing division limits will be altered by such proposed new divisions, or by the doing any place or places from one division to another; and also the name of justices of the peace as at the date of such statement are usually re acting as such within the boundaries of such proposed new division.

Sect. 2. "That at the quarter sessions next following the receipt of such statement, setting forth such particulars as are above mentioned; not otherwise, the clerk of the peace shall and he is hereby required to publish the same before such justices of the peace in such sessions assembled the justices of the peace for such county, riding, or division, having separate commission of the peace, shall and they are hereby required to, the cases hereinafter provided for) to proceed, at the quarter sessions following the laying of such statement before them as aforesaid, to consideration thereof, and at their discretion to adopt the same whole part, or to reject the same altogether, or to adjourn their determina thereupon to the next or any succeeding quarter sessions."

Sect. 3. "That immediately after the quarter sessions at which such statement shall have been first laid before the justices of the peace, the clerk of the peace shall cause to be published a copy of such statement in three successive numbers of one or more weekly newspapers usually published within the county, riding, or division, and in the notice of the sessions of county business are usually inserted; and at the foot of such copy shall also cause notice to be given that such statement has been before such justices in pursuance of the directions of this act, and that same will be taken into consideration by the court at the then next quarter sessions."

Sect. 4. "That when and so often as the justices of the peace of such county, riding, or division, having a separate commission of the peace, shall adopt wholly or in part any such statement so laid before them, and determine to change any parish, tithing, township, or place, from one to another, or to constitute any new division, within which speci sions then to be held, the said justices of the peace thereupon make an order for such alteration, or for the constitution of such new division, and in such last-mentioned order shall par cularly enumerate the several parishes, tithings, townships, and places comprised within such new division, and shall also specify the division within which respectively any parishes, tithings, townships, or places, disannexed by such order from any former division, and not part of such new division, shall then be annexed to be taken to, and shall affix to such new division the name of some principal and convenient part of such township, or place within the same, and also shall, in either of such cases as the case may be, particularly set down the day from which such alteration shall take effect; and the clerk of the peace for such county, riding, or division, shall forthwith publish a copy of such order in three successive numbers of one or more such weekly newspapers as aforesaid, and shall insert a copy of such order to every high constable within the limits of such new division or divisions."

Sect. 5. "That nothing in this act shall be taken to authorize, and shall not be lawful for any justices in any court of quarter sessions to make any order constituting such new division, unless upon due proof before the making in open court upon oath, that for two years next before the making

No new division to be constituted under five justices at least shall be proven to be resi dent therein.
such proof there have been, and at the time of making the same, there are, at the least, five justices of the peace residing in or usually acting within the boundary line proposed to be the limits of any such new division."

Sect. 6. "That from and after the day so specified in such order, for the term of twenty-one years, and until further order of sessions after the expiration of that time, and subject to no alteration or revision during such term, except as hereinafter provided, all matters and things which by law are now or hereafter may be required to be, or which now are, usually transacted or determined within the division within which the same shall have arisen, or the parties therein concerned inhabit or exercise their trade or calling, and by or before one, two, or more justices of the peace dwelling or usually acting within the same, shall be transacted and determined, so far as the same matters and things arise within or concern the inhabitants of such new or altered division, or any of them, or the persons exercising their trade or calling therein, within the boundaries of such new or altered division; and such new or altered division shall thenceforward be, and be reputed and taken to be, for all purposes, and in the construction of all statutes now in force or hereafter to be made, and containing no special provision to the contrary, a lawful division for the holding of special sessions; and all bailiffs, constables, tithingmen, surveyors, overseers of the poor, and other officers, publicans, keepers of taverns, coffee houses, and victualling houses, and other persons, shall and they are hereby thenceforward required to give their attendance to and upon such justices of the peace at any time assembled in such special sessions, within the same division, as fully and effectually as by law they had been bound to do within any division reputed or taken before the passing of this act to be a lawful and accustomed division of justices for the purposes aforesaid."

Sect. 7. "That at the quarter sessions next after the laying of any such statement before the justices in such sessions assembled, it shall and may be lawful for such justices, if they shall deem it expedient and proper, not to proceed to the single consideration of such statement, but instead thereof to cause to be made an inquiry and examination into the boundary lines, extent, and other local circumstances, of all the existing and accustomed divisions for the holding of special sessions within the commission of such justices; and at such or any succeeding quarter sessions, to which the conclusion of such inquiry and examination may from time to time be adjourned, by order of sessions, to regulate, alter, new model, and subdivide all or any of such divisions, in such manner as shall appear to them proper and convenient, particularly specifying in such order the names of all such divisions, whether newly constituted, altered, or unaltered, the several parishes, tithings, townships, and places to be comprised in each, and affixing or continuing to each the name of some principal and convenient parish, township, or place within the same."

Sect. 8. "That the clerk of the peace for any county, riding, or division in which such order shall have been made as last aforesaid, shall forthwith publish a copy of the same in three successive numbers of one or more such weekly newspapers as aforesaid, and shall also forthwith transmit, by the post, a copy of the same to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of each parish within the said county, riding, or division, to be by them affixed on the principal door of the church of such parish; and at the foot of every such copy so published or transmitted shall add a notice specifying at what time such order will be enrolled as hereinafter provided, and at what time and in what manner any person or persons, or body corporate, aggrieved by such order, may petition against the same, or any part thereof, as hereinafter provided."

Sect. 9. "That in every such order, some time, not earlier than the fourth quarter sessions next after the making thereof, shall be provisionally specified, in which the same shall be enrolled as hereinafter provided, subject to such alteration as may thereafter be made either in the particulars of the said order, or in the time of its enrolment; and that at any court of quarter sessions preceding such time, it shall and may be lawful for any one or more justices at sessions to cause inquiry into the extent of divisions, and alter the same, and affix names thereto.

Clerk of the peace to publish a copy of such order.

Order to specify time when it shall be enrolled.

Parties allowed to petition against such order.
person or persons, or body corporate, jointly or severally, to present petition in writing to such court, against all or any part of such order, to produce witnesses in support of such petition; and the justices at such assembled shall and they are hereby required to hear and determine in summary way, the merits of such petition, and to amend such order as in their judgment may upon such hearing appear proper and convenient: provided always that no such petition shall be received or examined into, unless and proof that a notice in writing, specifying the grounds thereof, which shall hearing shall alone be inquired into, hath been served, ten days before the commencement of such sessions, upon one of the overseers of the poor or the tithingman or constable, or two substantial housekeepers of the parishes of the sessioning, township, or place respectively, as the case may be, wherein the petitioner or petitioners shall be resident at the time of presenting such petition, and also lodged, twenty clear days before such commencement and office of the clerk of the peace, who shall and he is hereby required before to transmit a copy thereof to each of the justices usually acting within the district or places or places named in such notice."

Sect. 10. "That so soon as all such petitions against such order shall have been determined, and such amendments made therein as shall have appeared necessary or proper, the justices at such quarter sessions shall cause to be inserted therein some day not earlier than one month after such sessions on which the same shall take effect, and shall cause the same order to be enrolled, and the same shall remain an order of sessions, controlling such or orders of sessions heretofore made for the separate constitution of any division, or the partial alteration of any accustomed divisions under former provisions of this act, and not subject itself to revocation or annulment or any kind for the space of ten years thence next ensuing; and during ten years no such statement shall be received or proceedings had thereupon, but during all that time, and until further order of session after the expiration of that time, the several divisions, as limited, made or constituted in and by such order, shall be and be taken to be, for all purposes in this act mentioned, the lawful divisions of such county, or division, having such separate commission of the peace, for the conduct of justices in special sessions, under any statute now in force, or hereinafter to be made, and containing no special provision to the contrary; and all bass constables, tithingmen, surveyors, overseers of the poor, and other officers, publicans, keepers of taverns, coffee houses, and victualling houses, and any persons, shall and they are hereby required thenceforward, during the last above limited, to give their attendance to and upon the justice of the peace at any time assembled in such special sessions, within the same sessions respectively, as fully and effectually as by law they have been bound to do within any division reputed and taken before the passing of this act by a lawful and accustomed division for the meetings of justices for any of the purposes aforesaid."

Sect. 11. "That immediately after the enrolment of such order, the clerk of the peace shall and he is hereby required to cause to be published a copy of the same in three successive numbers of one or more such weekly newspapers as aforesaid, and shall also transmit one copy thereof to each justice of the peace dwelling within or usually acting within and for such county, riding, or division, having such separate commission of the peace."

Sect. 12. "That no order to be made, nor any proceeding to be had or taken, in pursuance of this act, shall be quashed or vacated for want of form, or removed by certiorari, or any other writ or process whatever, into any his Majesty's courts of record at Westminster; any law or statute to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 13. "That nothing in this act contained shall extend, or be construed or taken to extend, to the county of Middlesex in England, or Scotland or Ireland."
County Court. (a)

ANCIENTLY, the comites, counts, or earls, had the government of the counties; and afterwards the vice-comites, or sheriffs. And the county seemeth to be nothing else but the district of the comes or count. Shire is a Saxon word, from scyran, to share or divide, for that the shires and counties are divided by certain metes and bounds from each other. And the sheriff, in Saxon mercur, is the reve, grave, or governor of the shire; wherein he hath great power, being therein the chief officer under the King.

The sheriff holdeth in his county two courts, the coron and the county court. The coron is the King’s court of record for criminal causes, and for redressing of common grievances within the county; the county court is not a court of record, but only a court-baron, for civil causes, and this is the court of the sheriff himself.

By stat. 2 & 3 Edw. VI. c. 25, no county court shall be longer deferred than one month from court to court, so that the county court shall be kept every month, and not otherwise.

And this is to be accounted twenty-eight days to the month, and not according to the month of the calendar. 2 Inst. 71.

It may be kept at any place within the county, unless restrained by statute. Wood’s Inst. b. 4, c. 1.

The suitors, that is, the freeholders, are the judges in this court; except that in re-dissesin, by the statute of Merton, the sheriff is judge. And by the statutes concerning parliamentary elections, he is judge at the election of knights; for he must make a true return at his peril. Barl. County Court.

This court shall hold pleas betwixt party and party, where the debt or damage is under 40s. 4 Inst. 266.

But in a replevins, the sum may be above 40s. 4 Inst. 266.

Also it hath not cognisance of trespass vi et armis, because a fine is thereby due to the king, which it cannot impose. 4 Inst. 266.

And by virtue of a writ of justicic the court may hold plea of trespass vi et armis, and of any sum, or of all actions personal above 40s. For this writ is in the nature of a commission to the sheriff, for the sake of dispatch, to do the same justice in this county court, as might otherwise be had in the courts at Westminster. 4 Inst. 266.

By looking into any of the treatises on the county court, it will be seen that that court is considered in the nature of a court-baron. The writ of justicic, giving power to this court to hold pleas above 40s. in some instances does not alter the nature of this court. This is not a court proprio vigore holding pleas of above 40s. and therefore is not within the meaning of stat. 25 Geo. III. c. 80, which gives a penalty against attorneys prosecuting or defending without a certificate any suit in any court holding pleas where the debt or damage shall amount to 40s. or more. Cruse v. Kaye, 6 T. R. 663.

But no action can be brought in the county court, unless the cause of action arise, and the defendant reside within the county; and where that is not the case, the action may be brought in the courts above, although for a less sum than 40s. For if the action cannot be brought in the inferior jurisdiction, the plaintiff is not therefore to lose his debt; but he must sue in the superior courts. Welch v. Troyte, 2 H. Black. 29; Tubb v. Woodward, 6 T. R. 175.

Matters merely in aggravation of damages are inquirable of in this court, though arising out of the county. 1 Saund. 74 a. n.; 3 B. & B. 309.

By stat. 11 Hen. VII. c. 15, no plaint shall be entered in the county court, but where the plaintiff or his attorney is present, and the plaintiff shall find pledges to pursue his plaint, and he shall have but one plaint for one trespass or contract; on pain of 40s. half to the king, and half to the procurator. And one justice may examine the sheriff, or other making default, and shall, within a quarter of a year, certify the cause to the Exchequer.

(a) As to county courts, see Watson’s Office of Sheriff, 286 to 295; Com. Dig. County, (C. 8); Greenwood on Courts; over criminal matters.

But as to the pledges above mentioned they are now deemed in the exchequer and were formerly used only in cases where the plaintiff lived in the county. Greene 11; Read's County Court.

By stat. 12 Geo. II. c. 13. s. 7, if any person shall commence any action, or sue out any writ, process, or summons, or carry on proceedings in the county court, who shall not be admitted attorney or solicitor according to the act of 2 Geo. II. c. 23, he shall forfeit 20l. with costs, to him who shall sue in any court of record.

The plaintiff in this court first takes out a summons, returnable to the next county court; and if the defendant do not appear, an attachement distinguendum is to be made out; but if the defendant appear, the plaintiff shall file his declaration, showing his cause of action, or matter of complaint, what manner the action accrued, at what time and place the wrong was done, and the damage he had sustained. Greene 11; Read's County Court.

No copias lies. Com. Dig. County (C. 9); Watts 291.

If the defendant do not appear, and the next county court after gives a rule to declare, and the plaintiff do not file his declaration within the time, he shall be nonsuited. Greene 11; Read's County Court.

The entering of the plaintiff is the act of the party; and in a replication or answer to the county court if no plaintiff be entered the bond is forfeited. Epb 2 D. 1 R. 13.

In the same case it was held, that where a sheriff, or his deputy, or clerk to enter a plaintiff in the county court for damage etc. against the Bench will not compel him to do so on motion. Id. The plaintiff in that case would be to apply for a mandamus to enter the plaintiff for the court to be nonsuited. See Id.

When the plaintiff hath declared, he must continue his suit from court to court; otherwise the defendant may take advantage of it; and the called a continuance, being an adjournment of the suit from time to time, keep it on foot. Greene 11; Read's County Court.

The rule, or dies datum, is when farther day is given to the plaintiff to declare, or to the defendant to plead, and the time given is usually next court day, but upon occasion it may be enlarged. Id.

The next court after filing the declaration, and in the meantime the defendant is to put in his answer or plea, and if the plaintiff join issue, may proceed to try the next court day, if they proceed not farther by replication, rejoinder, surrejoinder, and the like. Id.

But if freehold be pleaded by the defendant, this court can proceed farther, for freehold shall never be tried without writ; therefore the case must be removed: as when a defendant avoweth for damage feasant the plaintiff justifieth by reason of common of pasture. Wood's Inst. 3 c. 1.

Where a verdict is given for the plaintiff, and judgment entered upon, a fieri facias may be awarded against the defendant's goods, or may be taken by virtue thereof and appraised and sold, to satisfy the plaintiff, but if the defendant hath no goods whereupon to levy, the plaintiff remains without remedy in this court, for it being no court of record: copias lies there; but an action may be brought at common law upon the judgment entered. Greene 22; Read's County Court; Watts Sheriff.

Causes are removed out of this court by a writ of recordari, which issue out of the Chancery, directed to the sheriff, commanding him to send the plaintiff that is before him in his county court, (without writ of justiciary) to the Court of King's Bench or Common Pleas, to the end the cause may be there determined. And the sheriff is hereupon to summon the other part to be in that court (into which the plaintiff is to be sent) at a day certain. And of all this he is to make certificate under his own seal, and the seal of the four suitors of the same court. Id.; see Watts Sheriff, 293.

Causes are also removed by pone, which differs in nothing from a recordari.
but that it removes such suits as are before the sheriff by writ of justices, and a recordari is to remove the suit that is by plaint only, without writ. Id.; see Wats. Sheriff, 293.

And although the pleas be discontinued in the county, yet the plaintiff or defendant may remove the plaint into the Common Pleas or King’s Bench, and it shall be good, and he shall declare upon the same. Greenev. 22; Read’s County Court.

In this court, after the quinto exactus, the coroner gives judgment of outlawry. 4 Inst. 266.

If the judgment be bad, as if the proceedings do not properly allege that the cause of action accrued within the jurisdiction, the defendant may upset the proceedings by removing them into the King’s Bench by writ of false judgment. See Wats. Sheriff, 294; 1 T. R. 151.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.

Outlawry pronounced.
False judgment.
County Rate.

The fees of clerks of assize, clerks of the peace, clerks of crown deputies, upon the acquittal or discharge of prisoners, 55 Geo. III. c. 50; 56 Geo. III. c. 116; ante, 655.

The expenses of building, enlarging, and repairing county gaols, 2 Will. III. c. 19; 24 Geo. III. sess. 2, c. 54; 4 Geo. IV. c. 64; see Gaols, Vol. II.

The expenses of building, repairing, and fitting up houses of correction, employing the persons sent thither, 4 Geo. IV. c. 64. See Gaols, Vol. II.

The salary of the master of the house of correction, and for relieving weak and sick in his custody, 7 Jac. I. c. 4. See Gaols, Vol. II.

The relief of the prisoners in the King's Bench and Marshalsea prisons, and of poor hospitals, in the county, and of those that shall sustain loss by fire, water, the sea, or other casualties, and other charitable purposes for the relief of the poor, as the justices in sessions shall think fit, 42 Eliz. c. 2; 53 Geo. III. c. 113; post, Gaols, Vol. II.

The expenses of bringing insolvent debtors before the travelling sessions, in order to their discharge, if the prisoners are not able to pay, ante, 470; 57; post, Insolvent, Vol. III. p. 390.

The expenses of providing, &c. county lunatic asylums reported near by visiting justices, 9 Geo. IV. c. 40; post, Lunatics, Vol. III. p. 649; 673, 674.

The expenses of prosecuting and convicting felons, 7 Geo. IV. c. 32; ante, Costs, p. 899.

The expenses of repairing shire halls, by 7 Geo. IV. c. 63; post, Halls, Vol. V. p. 827, 828.

The expenses of the soldiers' carriages, over and above the officers' pay, the same, by the several yearly acts against mutiny and desertion, and the militia act, 42 Geo. III. c. 90, s. 95; post, Military Law, Vol. III. p. 775.

The expenses of transporting felons, or conveying them to the places of labour and confinement, 7 Geo. IV. c. 64; ante, 899; post, Transportation.

The treasurer's salary, 12 Geo. II. c. 29, and 55 Geo. III. c. 31; see County Treasurer, post, 945.

The expenses of prosecuting vagrants or incorrigible rogues at the sessions or on appeals against their convictions, and of prosecuting constables for neglect of duty, 5 Geo. IV. c. 83, s. 9, 12, post, Vagrants, Vol. V.

The expenses of procuring and transmitting models and copies of standard weights and measures established, 5 Geo. IV. c. 74, xiii; post, Weights and Measures, Vol. V.

Allotments to persons appointed to examine measures, 55 Geo. III. c. 5, s. 5; id.

The expenses of prosecuting and convicting persons plundering the wrecked goods, 26 Geo. II. c. 19; post, Wrecks, Vol. V.

If a fine be imposed on a county, which the justices at sessions think illegal, they may order the expense of litigating the question to be defrayed out of the county stock. R. v. Essex, 4 T. R. 591. The session had ordered money to be advanced by the treasurer to defend the county in a litigation respecting a fine of 500l. imposed on them by Lord Loughborough at the assizes, for not repairing the county gaol, and which had been entered into the exchequer. On being removed by certiorari, it was objected that the magistrates could apply the public money to such purposes only as are specifically provided for by act of parliament, or sanctioned by long usage. But the court held, that the order was good; for wherever a duty is imposed on a county, and where costs necessarily and incidentally arise in questioning the propriety of acts done to enforce that duty, the magistrates, who have the superintendence over the county purse, have necessarily a right to defray such expenses out of the county stock. And Buller, J. said, in his opinion, the true construction of the act is, that the necessary expenses of every thing relating to the subjects therein mentioned must be borne by the county, and paid out of the county stock. If it were otherwise, the active
County Rate.

Magistrates of a county would be put in a perilous situation in a variety of cases that might happen.

But the sessions cannot order the costs of a prosecution for a misdemeanor, though carried on under the order and direction of a magistrate, to be defrayed out of the county rate. R. v. W. R. of Yorkshire, 7 T. R. 377; ante, 376, p. 587, 588, 589.

The justices have no right, except by following the provisions of particular acts of parliament, to anticipate the county rates, and so as to make the expense of public county works ultimately fall on different persons from those who are by law liable at the time it is incurred. An order of sessions, therefore, for levying and paying to the treasurer of the county a sum to enable him to reimburse certain persons for an antecedent debt, although such debt had been incurred for county purposes, is bad; and justices have no right to anticipate the county rates. R. v. J. S. Flintshire, 5 B. & A. 761; 1 D. & R. 470, S. C. Parke had obtained a rule nisi in Michaelmas Term, 1824, for a certiorari to remove an order of sessions of the county of Flint, dated 12th July, 1824, for levying and paying into the hands of the treasurer of that county 200l. 5s., to enable him to pay that sum, in part payment of the claim of Messrs. Sankey. It appeared that, by a former order of sessions, the treasurer had been empowered to borrow from Messrs. Sankey, who were bankers, the sum of 1000l. for carrying on the public works within the county, to be repaid by instalments. This money had been advanced, from time to time, in 1817 and 1818, and repaid in account, but further advances being made, the balance remaining due to the bank was 47l. in part payment of which this order was made. The affidavit on the other side stated, that the whole money had been, in fact, laid out for county purposes. The court (after hearing Scarlett, Littledale, and D. F. Jones against, and Parke in support of the rule,) made the rule absolute; observing, that this was a rate to reimburse persons for a debt previously contracted, which was clearly bad, inasmuch as the justices had no right, except by following the provision of particular acts of parliament, which had not been done here, to anticipate the county rates, and so to make the expense ultimately fall on different persons from those who were by law liable at the time it was incurred. Writ of certiorari granted. And see ante, 627, as to church rates.

And where such treasurer, being authorised by an order of sessions to raise money on the credit of the county rates, obtained advances from time to time from his bankers, and died in their debt: the sessions being satisfied that the money so advanced had been bond fide applied to county purposes, made an order for assessing and levying a sum of money towards the repayment of the debt; the court held such order to have been improperly made, and quashed it. R. v. J. S. Flintshire, 2 D. & R. 843.

By an act for building a gaol, the justices at sessions were authorised to assess a special county rate upon every parish in the county, for the payment of the expenses of building such gaol, and that rate was made payable out of the monies collected in the parishes for the relief of the poor; and there was a proviso, that every tenant might deduct out of his rent one half the amount of the rate: it was held, that commissioners under a local act for paving and lighting the town and managing the poor, could not make a retrospective rate in order to reimburse themselves in one year money which they had paid in a former year on account of such special county rate for building the gaol. Cortis v. Kent Water Works Company, 7 B. & C. 314.

Formerly all county rates were assessed and collected by separate rates, which was not only extremely troublesome and inconvenient, but so expensive that the charge of collecting and assessing frequently exceeded the sum rated; for remedying this, a statute (12 Geo. Ill. c. 29,) was passed, intituled, "An Act for the more easy assessing, collecting, and levying of county rates," whereby the different purposes for which these separate rates had used to be collected are enumerated, and it is there by section I directed that the justices of the peace within their respective limits throughout England, at their general or quarter sessions, or the greater part of them, shall have power to make, from time to time, one general rate instead of the several separate and distinct rates directed thereby to be made, levied as collected."
County Rate.

Which rate shall be assessed in such proportions in every parish or place, as any of the rates by the said several former acts have been usually assessed, 12 Geo. II. c. 29.

By the 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 1, post, 926, this is now to be understood: fair and equal proportionable rate upon every division, though indeed the passing of this latter act, notwithstanding changes of circumstances and inequalities, the sessions had no power to vary the proportions in which county rate had usually been assessed on the several parishes. R. v. A. Paul's, Covent Garden, Cald. 158.

By the 12 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 5, where any person, liberty, division, place hath usually contributed, or is liable to pay, only to one or more and not to all the rates hereby intended to be raised and thrown into the general rate, the justices at their general or quarter sessions may ascertain what proportion thereof shall be assessed on, and paid by such person, liberty, division, or place.

As for instance, where by stat. 22 Hen. VIII. c. 5, towns corporate are charged for the repairing of bridges within their respective liberties, and counties for the bridges out of such liberties; in such a case, a town must not be charged towards the bridges in the county at large; as consequently ought to have an abatement in the rate charged upon them; such proportion as the expense of bridges is to the whole expense of several articles charged upon the said general county rate: as if the expense of bridges be the tenth part of the whole expense, chargeable upon the county rate, then such town corporate shall have an abatement of one shilling in every ten, which it would otherwise be charged with in such rate.

And by stat. 13 Geo. II. c. 18, s. 7, where any liberties or franchises have commissions within themselves, and are not subject to the county justices, and do not nor did before the 12 Geo. II. contribute to the county rate, the justices within such liberties may exercise the same powers within their liberties as justices in their counties.

A county rate may be levied for a town erected into a county of itself, though no such rate has been ever levied before. The quarter sessions for the town and county of the town of Nottingham, appointed a high constable for the ensuing year for the special purpose of collecting and raising from the overseers, &c. of each parish within the town the rates, &c. in the nature of a county rate. They appointed a treasurer to receive the said collections, subject to the order of the session. The application of the sum collected was directed to the relief of prisoners in prison, the repair of the house of correction, keeper's salary, soldiers' carriages, transporting felons, and other charges to which the same was by law applicable within the said town.

The town of Nottingham was formerly part of the county; Henry VI. made it a county of itself, and confirmed the charters of its corporation, which had by prescription. Two questions arose, viz. whether the justices had power to levy any such rate; and secondly, whether the present rate was good. Per curiam. "By the common law, as also by the statutes of Winchester, officers of this nature are incident to districts, having separate jurisdiction: and in many cases a mandamus will lie to appoint officers in the first time where the exigency of circumstances require it. While the expenses here were very small, the corporation might submit to pay them without a rate; but having become heavier, that previous payment does not preclude them from making this rate, or discharge other persons from liability." James v. Green, 12 East's Rep. 117.

In the case of Weatherhead v. Drewry and others (11 East, 168; ante. tis. Countable, 797), it was held that the words "liberties and franchises having commissions of the peace within themselves," contained in stat. 13 Geo. II. c. 18, include "charter justices;" and that by consequence a borough having such justices, may make a rate in the nature of a county rate.

In Bates v. Winstenley, 4 M. & S. 429, it was decided that a charter giving jurisdiction to borough justices over a district not within the borough, without words of exclusive jurisdiction, does not exclude the county justices from rating the district to a county rate.

The proviso in the 50 Geo. Ill. c. 51, s. 1, post, 926, stating that that act shall not give any jurisdiction to the justices of the county over any places situate within the limits of any liberties or franchises having a separate jurisdiction, is confined to franchises having a separate jurisdiction co-extensive with that possessed by the county justices; and, therefore, where the justices of the city of B. had no jurisdiction by charter to try felons, it was held that the city of B. was liable to the county rate. R. v. Clarke, 5 B. & Ald. 665; 1 D. & R. 316, S. C.; more fully noticed, post, 927, n.

Which said rates the high constable shall, at such times as the said justices, by their order in sessions (a), shall direct, demand of the churchwardens and overseers; which demand shall be made in writing (b), and given to them or any of them, or left at their dwelling houses, or affixed on the church doors by the said high constables. 12 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 2.

Whereupon the said churchwardens and overseers shall, in thirty days after such demand made, or the money collected for the relief of the poor, pay the sums so assessed on each parish or place. Id.

R. v. Justices, Yorkshire, 12 East, 117. In this case there were two questions directed to be tried:—1. Whether the said two townships of Hartlepool and Clifton, in the West Riding, did or did not before and since stat. 12 Geo. II. c. 29, form one constabulary, known by the name of H. cum C., for the purpose of raising such rates? 2. Whether H. and C. were or were not before and since that statute two separate townships, for the purpose of raising such rates? And it was admitted that before the statute these two townships usually contributed between themselves in a certain proportion to the county rate imposed upon the two separately. The jury found that there was an union of the two townships in one joint constabulary. And upon this motion was made for a mandamus to the defendants, to make at the next quarter sessions an order upon the constabulary of H. cum C. to levy a sum, by an equal rate, for the proportion of the said constabulary towards the county rates. And this application was granted by the court. And per Lord Ellenborough, C. J.—By stat. 12 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 1, the proportions of the general rate as between the several towns, parishes and places which had before been separately assessed, were to be preserved; but the money was to be raised upon each by one aggregate rate, instead of by the several distinct rates before leviable under different acts of parliament for distinct purposes. Now H. and C., though acting as two townships for some purposes, yet for the purpose of county rates, and quoad the act of the 12 Geo. II., they constituted but one place. The sect. 2 must be understood of parishes and places in which one general poor's rate is collected, and cannot therefore apply to a case like the present, where there is no such general fund raised upon the entire district which is assessed to the county rate. The case, therefore, must come within the provision of the 3d section, (post, 924,) that where there is no poor's rate, that is, no poor's rate co-extensive with the district assessed, the county rate shall be levied by the petty constable, "in the same manner as the money for the relief of the poor is by law to be rated or levied," that is, by equal taxation of the inhabitants, &c. of the place rated. The rate, therefore, must be levied equally on the whole of this artificial place or district, being that on which the county rates had, before the act, been usually assessed as if it had been one parish. Grosse, J., and Le Blanc, J., agreed, as did Bayley, J., who said, that by proportions, the legislature only referred to the proportions between the several districts before assessed to the county rates, with reference to the county at large. And see R. v. Austin, D. & R. C. N. P. 24.

And by the same, section 2, "if the churchwardens or overseers, or any of them, shall neglect or refuse so to pay, the high constable shall levy the same by distress (a) and sale of the goods of such churchwardens or overseers so refusing or neglecting, by warrant of two or more justices resident in or near such parish or place.

(a) See form, post, (No. 1.)
(b) See form, post, (No. 2.)
County Rate.

And the receipt of such high constable shall be a full discharge to such churchwardens and overseers, or other persons paying the same. 12 Geo. III. c. 29, s. 2.

Where there is no poor rate, the justices, in their general or quarter sessions, shall by their order direct the sum assessed on such parish, town, or place to be rated and levied by the petty constable, or other peace officer as money for relief of the poor is by law to be rated or levied; which sum so rated and levied shall be paid by him to the high constable, and shall be demanded of, paid by, or levied on such petty constable, in the same manner as before of the churchwardens and overseers. And if any petty constable shall pay such sum before he hath collected it, he may afterwards rate and levy the same, or may be allowed and reimbursed the same out of any constable's or other rate, which the justices in their sessions shall order as direct. Sect. 3. See also further the stats. 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 6, post 930, and 56 Geo. III. c. 49, post, 936.

As money for relief of the poor is to be rated or levied]—That is to say: taxation of every inhabitant, parson, vicar, and other, and of every occupant of lands, houses, tithes, coal mines, or saleable underwoods. Stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 1.

By the same stat. and 12 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 4, and whereas it will be inconvenient to many towns, parishes, and places, in the counties of York, Derby, Durham, Lancaster, Chester, Westmoreland, Cumberland, and Northumberland, that the said rates shall be paid out of the poor rate, the justices at the general or quarter sessions, if they shall think convenient, may order the sum assessed on any such town, parish or place, to be paid by or levied on the petty constable (b) in such manner as is above directed, in cases where no rate is made for the poor.

If they shall think convenient]—By which words the justices in their counties may order the rate to be paid by either of the two methods here mentioned, according to their discretion; that is to say, either by the churchwardens and overseers out of the poor rate, or by the petty constable by an assessment after the manner of the poor rate.

By the same stat., 12 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 6, the said high constables shall pay the same to the treasurer; and the money so paid shall be deemed to be public stock.

Sect. 9. The treasurer's receipt shall be a sufficient discharge to the high constable.

And by sect. 8, "the respective high constables shall and they are hereby required to demand and levy such rates and assessments in manner before directed, and shall account for the same before the said justices at their respective general or quarter sessions, if thereunto required, in the like manner as the said treasurer or treasurers is and are hereby directed to account; and in case such high constables, or any of them, shall neglect or refuse so to demand, levy, or account, then it shall and may be lawful to and for the said justices, at their respective general or quarter sessions, or a greater part of them then and there assembled, to commit such high constable or high constables to the common gaol of the county, riding, division, or town corporate, liberty, or place, there to remain without bail or mainprice, until he or they shall have caused such rates or assessments to be demanded and levied, and shall have rendered a true account or accounts in the manner hereby directed; and in case it shall appear by such account or accounts that any sum or sums of money is or are remaining in his or their hands, which he or they shall have received of the respective churchwardens and

(a) See form, post, (No. 5.)
(b) See form, post, (No. 2.)
(c) See form, post, (No. 3.)
overseers, or other persons, which ought to have been paid to the respective treasurer or treasurers at the time or times limited by this act, or of the respective treasurer or treasurers, in order to be applied to the purposes aforesaid; and if he or they shall neglect or refuse to pay the same over into the hands of the respective treasurer or treasurers, or otherwise, if thereunto required by order of the said justices at their respective general or quarter sessions, or the greater part of them then and there assembled, then it shall and may be lawful for the said justices at such their general or quarter sessions, or the greater part of them then and there assembled, to commit such high constable or high constables to the common gaol of the county, riding, division, city, town corporate, liberty, or place, there to remain without bail or mainprize, until he or they shall have made full payment of the sum or sums of money that shall appear to be due on such account or accounts; and all the accounts and vouchers of the said treasurers and high constables shall, after having been passed by the said justices at their respective general or quarter sessions, be deposited with the clerk of the peace for the time being of each county respectively, or the town clerk, high bailiff, or chief officer of any city, town corporate, or liberty, who is and are hereby required to keep them among the records of such county, city, town corporate, or liberty, to be inspected from time to time by any of the said justices, within the limits of their commissions, as occasion shall require, without fee or reward."

Sect. 17. The justices, at their general or quarter sessions, may oblige by their order the petty constables, or any other person empowered to levy, collect or receive any sum for the purposes aforesaid, and who have any sum in their hands, to account and pay over the same, in like manner as the high constables.

Sect. 6. And the treasurer shall pay so much of the money in his hands to such persons as the justices in sessions shall by their order from time to time appoint, for the uses and purposes of the said above-mentioned acts, and for any other uses and purposes to which the public stock of any county, city, division, or liberty is or shall be applicable.

Sect. 10. No new rate shall be made until it appear by the treasurer’s accounts, or otherwise, that three-fourths of the money collected has been expended for the purposes aforesaid.

Sect. 12. If the churchwardens and overseers of any parish or place shall think such parish or place is over-rated, they may appeal to the next general or quarter sessions against such part of the rate only as may affect such parishes or places; but such rate, upon the appeal, shall not be quashed in regard to any other parishes or places.

Sect. 21. No certiorari to remove any rates, or any orders or other proceedings of the sessions touching such rates, shall be granted but upon motion the first week of the next term after the time for appealing from such rates or orders is expired, and on making it appear to the court by affidavit or otherwise that the merits of the question on such appeal or orders will by such removal come properly in judgment. And no such certiorari shall be allowed until sufficient security be given to the treasurer, in the sum of 100£, to prosecute the certiorari with effect, and to pay the costs if the rates or orders shall be confirmed. Nor shall any such rates, orders, or proceedings be quashed for want of form only.

Sect. 18. And no action shall be commenced against any person who shall have collected or received any money on any rate which shall be quashed on a certiorari or otherwise, for any money collected or received on such rate before the certiorari was brought; but the persons who have paid on such rate more than they ought to have paid shall be repaid, or have the same allowed in the next rate.

Great inequalities and disproportions in the assessments to county rates were produced by length of time and the improper mode of assessments, which the writs of law had not power to remedy; wherefore the 55 Geo. III.

(a) See ante, Appeal. (b) See ante, Certiorari.
COUNTY RATE.

53 Geo. 3, c. 61.
Justices in general or quarter sessions to make a fair and equal county rate, whenever circumstances appear to require it.

Not to alter proportion of any franchise having a separate jurisdiction.

12 Geo. 2, c. 28.
Nor to alter the times of holding any general quarter sessions for assessing the rates of any county.

Decisions on enactment.

County Rate. c. 51, was passed. By that statute it is enacted, "that from and after the passing of this act it shall be lawful for the justices of the several counties of that part of Great Britain called England, assess at their general or quarter sessions, or at any adjournment or adjournments thereof, and they are hereby authorised and empowered whenever circumstnaces appear to require it, to order and direct a fair and equal rate to be made for all the purposes to which the county stock or rates of or shall hereafter be made liable by law, (a) according to the direction hereinafter mentioned; and for that purpose to assess and tax every parish, ship, and other place, whether parochial or extra-parochial, within the respective limits of their commissions, rateably and equally according to a certain pound rate (to be from time to time fixed and publicly declared by the justices,) of the full and fair annual value of the messuages, lands, tenements and hereditaments, rateable to the relief of the poor therein; any law to the contrary thereof notwithstanding: provided also, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to give any jurisdiction to the justices of the peace of the said several counties, over places situate within the limits of any liberties or franchises having a separate jurisdiction, which before the passing of this act were subject to rates in a nature of county rates imposed and assessed by the justices of the peace in such liberties or franchises, or which were exempt from the rate in the county in which they lie, either in the whole or in part; nor to alter or proportion of county rate payable by any liberty or franchise having a separate rate jurisdiction as established between the county and the said liberty or franchise, provided such exemption or proportion shall have been granted, or derived from grant, charter, or any special local act of parliament; nor compel any such liberty or franchise paying to some one or more of the respective specified in the preamble of an act passed in the twelfth year of the reign of the late Majesty King George the Second, intituled, 'An Act for the more asseessing, collecting, and levying county rates,' to pay to any other person therein mentioned, to which such liberty or franchise was not liable to contribute before the passing of the said act; nor to repeal or alter the provisions of any act now in force which shall have fixed the times and places of holding any general or annual general sessions or adjournment thereof, for the assessing the rates of any county, or for the raising, levying, or collecting the same, but that such provisions so fixing the time or place of holding any general or annual general sessions or adjournment thereof, and of doing there exclusively transacting the matters therein mentioned respecting county rates, shall be and remain in full force; and that all other and things which in and by this act are authorised to be done by the justices of the peace at their general or quarter sessions or at any adjournment or adjournments thereof, shall be done and performed exclusively at such general or annual general sessions or at some adjournment thereof, and at no other time or place than such as shall have been fixed by any such act."

It is no ground of appeal against a county rate that individuals in the parish are rated in a higher proportion than in another. R. v. Westmorland, 10 B. & C. 226. (b)

(a) See ante, 919, 920, as to the purposes for which the rate may be made.

(b) In this case a rule had been obtained calling upon the defendant to show cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue, commanding them to cause continuances to their next general quarter sessions of the peace, to be holden in and for the said county, to be entered upon the appeal of the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the town of Shap, in the county of Westmoreland, and J. M., J. W., and J. R., against the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish of Bampton, in the said county, T. R., T. A. W., T. M., and J. M., touching the county rate for the said appellants. It appeared that the following notice of appeal had been served on the respondents: -- "This is to give notice to you and each of you, that the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the town of Shap, in the county of Westmoreland, and J. M., J. W., and J. R., being entitled to the remedy of a writ of mandamus, have applied as aforesaid for the relief of appeals of certain messuages, lands, and tenements in the township and parish of Shap, as your obligations.
Shap, in the county of Westmoreland, and rated to the relief of the poor within the said township in respect thereof, are aggrieved by a certain rate or assessment made by virtue of an order from his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of Westmoreland, at their general quarter sessions assembled, and issued to the constable of the township of Shap, under the hand of T. H., high constable for the division of West Ward in the said county of Westmoreland, on the 1st day of May last past, for the purpose of raising the sum of 101l. 19s. 6d. for and towards a general county rate or assessment in and for the said county of Westmoreland, and that they do intend to appeal against the said county rate or assessment at the next general quarter sessions of the peace to be held at Appleby, in and for the said county of Westmoreland, on Monday, the 23rd of July next; and that the grounds of such appeal are, that T. R., T. A., W. H., T. N. and J. M. and others, are in the general county rate or assessment for the parish or constablewick of Bampton, in the said county of Westmoreland, severally under-rated in respect of the yearly value of their respective messuages, lands, tenements, and premises by them occupied in the said parish or constablewick of Bampton. And also that they the said J. M., J. W., and J. R. are in the said general county rate or assessment for the township of Shap, in the said county of Westmoreland, severally over-rated in respect of the yearly value of their respective messuages, lands, tenements, and premises by them respectively occupied in the said township and parish of Shap, and for that the said rate is in other respects unequal, unjust, defective, and informal. Dated the 26th of June, 1829." The appellants tendered evidence to prove the general inequality and disproportion of the respective county rates of the township of Shap and of the parish of Bampton; but the court of quarter sessions dismissed the appeal on the merits, on the ground that the statement of the causes of appeal contained in the said notices was defective.

After argument, Bayley, J., said, "I am of opinion that this rule must be made absolute. I think that the true construction to be put on the clause giving the right of appeal, is that stated by Mr. Aglionby, viz. that the parish, township, or place must be aggrieved. Here the fact stated in the notice is, that particular individuals are rated higher in the township of Shap than other individuals are in the parish of Bampton. I think that it is incumbent on a party appealing against a county rate to show that the appellant parish, township, or place is rated in a higher proportion, with reference to some other parish, than it ought to be. But no act of parliament having required the grounds of appeal to be specified in the notice, the sessions ought rather to have heard or adjourned the appeal to the next sessions. If the justices thought that the respondents were misled by the terms of the notice of appeal, they ought to have adjourned it. But they refused to hear the appeal altogether, which was improper." Littledale v. Parker, J., concurred. Rule absolute. R. v. Westmoreland, 10 B. & C. 226.

(a) The following is the judgment of Abbott, C.J. in that case:—"I am of opinion, that the city of Bath is liable to contribute to the county rate, and that in this case our judgment should be for the crown. The question depends on the construction to be put upon the 55 Geo. III. c. 61, s. 1, by which a power is given to the justices of the county to tax every parish, township, and other place, whether parochial or extra-parochial, within the limits of their commissions. The first question, therefore, which arises is, whether the city of Bath be within the limits of the jurisdiction of the justices of the county of Somerset. Now it appears from the statement of the case, that they alone have the power of trying felonies committed within the city. It is, therefore, clear, that Bath is within the limits of their jurisdiction. Then comes the proviso, which states, that the act shall not give any jurisdiction to the justices of the county over any places situate within the limits of any liberties or franchises having a separate jurisdiction. Then is the city of Bath a franchise 'having a separate jurisdiction'? I think that these words must mean 'having a separate jurisdiction co-extensive with the city of Bath.' Here it is clear, that the justices of Bath have no such jurisdiction: for their ju-
COUNTY RATE.

In Geo. IV. c. 83.

Return as aforesaid, as to the said justices so assembled shall appear necessary and such allowances and compensations and other expenses shall be thereby incurred, shall be by the said justices so assembled charged on the parish, township or place, whether parochial or otherwise, of which churchwardens or churchwardens, overseers or overseers of the poor, that is to say, so respected or made distinct as aforesaid, in addition to the proportion of said county rate to be paid by such parish, township or place, whether parochial or otherwise, and such allowances, compensations, and expenses as may be raised, levied and collected by such and the like ways as the said county rate can or may be raised, levied and collected and shall be paid therewith, due distinction being made in the case of every additional assessment between the same or sums charged for and on account of any such expenses and the same or sums assessed as and for the county rate. See 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 83, sect. 940.

Sect. 7. That in all cases and places as aforesaid, where there are churchwardens or overseers of the poor, or where no rate is made assessed for the relief of the poor, or where the justices of the peace of the county or of any division thereof, assembled as aforesaid, for the purpose of receiving such returns as aforesaid of the annual value of the church rates to the county rate, the justices shall, at their discretion, must have a full, fair, and just account of the annual value of such property rateable, it shall and may be lawful to and for the said justices, the peace so assembled, to summon before them any one or more substantial inhabitants of such places respectively, or any other person or persons, to give evidence as to the fair value of such rateable property, and then and there to examine such inhabitants and other persons or persons respectively on oath as each any one or more of the said justices is and are hereby authorized to administer, as to the annual value of such property.

Sect. 8. That in such place or places where there is no poor rate, nor overseer of the poor or churchwarden, or other officer, necessary for the execution of the provisions of this act, residing within the limits of the jurisdiction of the justices of the peace of the county requiring such return, in which there is any property liable to the poor rate, but not rate assessed thereto, it shall and may be lawful for the said justices of the peace of the county, assembled as aforesaid, or for the justices of the peace residing and acting for any division of the county in which such place or places situate, at any petty sessions or adjournment thereof, to be held by the within such division as aforesaid, and they are hereby authorized and required to appoint one or more proper persons or persons to act as overseer or overseers, or other such officer as aforesaid, who is and are hereby authorized and required to act within such place or places respectively, effecting the purposes of this act; and such person or persons respectively shall have the like powers vested in him or them, and shall be subject to the same regulations and penalties for effecting all within those purposes, as effectually, to all intents and purposes, as if he or they had been appointed overseer or overseers of the poor, or churchwarden or churchwardens, or other officers or officers, under any law or law now in force.

See 56 Geo. III. c. 49; and 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 85; sect. 940.

Sect. 9. And for the better enabling as well the said justices in petty or quarter sessions assembled, as the justices of the several divisions sit under the order or orders of the justices assembled as aforesaid, respectively to ascertain the fair annual value of all property liable to be so rated; it is hereby further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful to and for such justices, or any two or more of them, from time to time, whenever the same may be, in the judgment of such justices, necessary for the more correct execution of this act, to cause any of the books of assessment of any rates or taxes, parliamentary or parochial, which have lately been, are now, or shall hereafter be laid on any part of the property, liable to be assessed towards the purposes for which a county rate is applicable, and the valuation by which such assessments are or were made, mentioned and described, within any parish or place within the limits of the jurisdiction of the said justices, in the hands of any constable, churchwarden, overseer, assessor, or collector, to be brought before them or him, and to take copies or extracts of and from such books, or any parts thereof, or to order and direct any person to take such copies or extracts from such books, in the hands of them or any of them, without having the same brought before the said justices, or to call before them any such constable, churchwarden, overseer, assessor or collector, to give evidence respecting the same, as they, or he, or any of them shall think fit, such compensation being made to the person or persons employed for any of the purposes aforesaid, as the said justices, or any two or more of them, shall think reasonable; and if any person or persons, in whose custody or power any of the said books may be, shall neglect or refuse to attend the said justices with such book or books, or to permit any such copies or extracts to be taken as aforesaid, or to give such information or evidence on oath as may be required by such justices, (which oath such justices, or any one or more of them, are and is hereby authorised to administer,) then and in every such case, every person who shall so refuse or neglect, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding ten pounds; and moreover it shall be lawful for such justices in the like cases, from time to time to cause copies of the total amount assessed in each parish, township or place, in respect of any aids or taxes payable to his Majesty, his heirs or successors, and the total amount of the valuation of the property on which such assessments were made in any year then elaps'd, to be made out by the clerk to the commissioners of each district within the limits of the jurisdiction of such justices, such compensation being made to the respective clerks as the said justices, or any two of them, shall think reasonable; and if any such clerk shall neglect or refuse to make out such copies within a reasonable time after his receipt of the order of such justices, every such clerk shall forfeit and pay the sum of twenty pounds."

Sect. 10. "And for the better enabling the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, chief constables, and other persons, to make accurate returns as hereinbefore required, in cases where doubts are entertained, be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for them, or any of them, or for such other person or persons as they may select for that purpose, by warrant under the hands and seals of any two or more justices of the peace of the county in general or quarter sessions assembled, to enter upon, view, and examine all and any lands or other property chargeable to the county rate, in order to ascertain the annual value at which the same ought to be charged: provided always, that no such entry shall in any case be made, unless fourteen days' previous notice of the intention of making such entry shall have been given, under the hands and seals of the justices authorising the same, to the churchwardens or overseers, or to the person or persons appointed to act, in default of such churchwardens or overseers of the parish, township or place, whether parochial or otherwise, and to the person or persons whose lands are to be entered upon for the purpose of making such valuation."

Sect. 11. "That whenever the justices in general or quarter sessions assembled shall have ordered any county rate to be made, which they are hereby authorised to order from time to time, whenever the same shall be necessary, and the justices in petty sessions shall by any of the aforesaid ways and means have ascertained to their own satisfaction the fair and just annual value of any or of all the rateable property within their respective divisions, and they are hereby required from time to time to certify under their hands the true amount thereof to the then next general or quarter sessions of the peace for the same county, to the intent that at such general or quarter sessions, or at some adjournment or adjournments thereof, or at some subsequent general or quarter sessions, or adjournment or adjournments thereof, the justices there assembled may from time to time, and as often as they shall deem it necessary, make a fair and equal rate on all such rateable property, or correct any inequalities which upon appeal shall be shown to their satisfaction to exist in any rate now existing or hereafter to be made."
COUNTY RATE.

25 Geo. 3, c. 91.
Justices authorised to issue warrants for levying new rates, according to usual practices.

Sect. 12. "And it shall be lawful to and for the justices of the peace of any county, or the major part of them, in general or quarter sessions or any adjournalment or adjournalments thereof, assembled, as often as they shall have deemed it necessary to make a rate or rates, assessment or assessments on all the rateable property within the limits of their jurisdiction, according to the fair annual value of the same, as derived from any or all of the several sources of information which are hereinbefore mentioned, and they hereby authorised and empowered to order warrants to be from time to time issued, in the same manner as now authorised and practised by law, collecting the county rates, to the several high constables within their respective counties, ordering and requiring them to issue their warrants to the respective overseers of the poor within their respective divisions, to levy, collect, and pay to the said high constables, within a time to be named in the warrant to be issued from the sessions as aforesaid, such rate or rates, assessment or assessments, which each high constable shall at his own good pleasure appoint and fix, to be levied, in such manner, to the treasurer of the county for the time being. To be applied and disposed of in such manner and for such purposes as the county stock or rate is now applicable and hereafter be made applicable by law, and in case any overseer or overseers of the poor, or other person appointed to act as such under the provisions of this act, in any of the several parishes, townships, or places, whether parochial or otherwise, within any county liable to pay the same, shall neglect, make default, or refuse to pay the same within the time to be specified and limited for that purpose as aforesaid, the high constable of the division within which such overseer or overseers, or other person or persons so liable and neglecting to pay, shall reside or be appointed to act, shall and may be lawful for any justice of the peace of the said county, upon complaint thereof made by any such high constable by warrant under the hand and seal of any such justice, to levy the same by distress and sale of the offender’s goods; and the overseer or overseers of the poor of any parish, township, or place, whether parochial or otherwise, or other person or persons appointed to act as such overseer or overseers, shall and may and is and are hereby empowered to levy and raise by an assessment or rate to be fixed and levied upon the several estates and property rates or assessment upon all and every the several estates and property rates or assessment to the relief of the poor, within their respective parishes, townships, or places, whether parochial or otherwise, such sum and sums of money as shall be required and necessary, in order to raise the several sums assessed upon said parishes, townships, or places respectively; or to reimburse such overseer or overseers, or other person or persons as aforesaid, such sum or sums of money as they shall respectively have paid out of such estates and property rates or assessment to be paid by the occupier or occupiers for the time being of such estates and rateable property as aforesaid."

Sect. 13. "And whereas it would be inconvenient and oppressive to many townships or places, that the sum of money which may be assessed on them as for a county rate under this act, should be paid out of any rate made for the relief of the poor, where such poor rate doth not separately apply, distinctly to the parish, township, or place; it is enacted, that it shall be lawful for the justices of the peace, at their general or quarter sessions or any adjournalment thereof, if they shall think convenient, to order the sum of money directed to be assessed as or for the county rate on any such parish, township, or place, whether parochial or otherwise, to be paid and levied in the churchwardens, overseers, or petty constables, of or for any such parish, township, or place, in such manner as is herein contained directed to be paid and levied in cases where no rate is made for the relief of the poor; or thing herein contained, or any law, usage, or custom, to the contrary notwithstanding." See 56 Geo. III. c. 49, and 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 89, post, 940.

Sect. 14. "That if the churchwarden or churchwardens, overseer or overseers of the poor, or other inhabitant or inhabitants of any parish, township, or place, whether parochial or otherwise, where there is no churchwarden or overseer, or person appointed to act as such, shall at any time hare ram a think that such parish, township, or place is aggrieved by any rate now existing or hereafter to be made, either in pursuance of this act or of any act or acts now in force, whether it be on account of the proportions assessed upon the respective parishes, townships, or places being unequal, or on account of some one or more of them being without sufficient cause omitted altogether from the rate, or on account of such parish, township, or place being rated at a higher proportion of the pound sterling according to the fair annual value of the rateable property therein, or on account of some other parish or parishes, township or townships, place or places, being rated at a lower proportion of the pound sterling according to the fair annual value of the rateable property therein, than has been fixed and declared by the justices of the peace of the said county, in sessions assembled, as the basis of the rate of the said county, or on account of any other just cause of complaint whatsoever; it shall be lawful for such churchwarden or churchwardens, overseer or overseers of the poor, or other inhabitant or inhabitants where there is no churchwarden or overseer, or person appointed to act as such, to appeal to the justices of the peace for the county at any general or quarter sessions, against such part of the rate only as may affect the parish or parishes, township or townships, place or places, which are unequally rated, or which shall appear to be over-rated or under-rated, or omitted altogether from the rate; and the said justices are hereby empowered to hear and finally determine the same, and either to confirm such parts of the rate as have been appealed against, or to correct such inequalities, disproportions or omissions, as shall be proved to exist therein, in such manner as to them the said justices shall appear fair, just, and equitable; any thing in this act, or any former act or acts, or any law, usage, or custom to the contrary thereof notwithstanding: provided nevertheless, that upon such appeal, no such rate shall be quashed or destroyed in regard to any other parish, township, or place, unless in cases where the justices of the peace of any county, in general or quarter sessions assembled, or the major part of them, shall deem it necessary to proceed to the making of an entire new rate, and shall proceed therein according to the provisions of this act." And see stat. 56 Geo. III. c. 44; 56 Geo. III. c. 49, s. 25; 57 Geo. III. c. 94, s. 1, 2, and 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 85, s. 1, post, 940.

By this section an appeal is given against a county rate made in fixed proportions invariably adopted for a series of years. R. v. Js. of York, 2 B. & Cen. 771. A rule had been obtained calling upon the defendants to show cause by a writ of mandamus why an order should not issue, commanding them to cause continuance to their next general quarter sessions of the peace, to be held in and for the said city and county, to be entered, upon the appeal of the overseers of the poor of the parish of St. Crux in the said city, against a rate or assessment made by virtue of an order of the court of general quarter sessions of the peace, held for the said city and county, on Friday, the 17th day of October, 1823, whereby the inhabitants of the parish of St. Crux were assessed in the sum of 32l. 14s. 9d. as their proportion of the sum by the court directed to be estreated on the inhabitants of the said city and county, and at such next general quarter sessions of the peace to hear and determine the merits of the said appeal. It appeared that a rate had been made, and imposed upon the respective parties within the city and county in such fixed proportions as had been for a long series of years invariably adopted. Against this rate the parish of St. Crux had appealed, on the ground of being over-rated, but the sessions refused to entertain the appeal, conceiving that they were not authorised by any existing law to vary the fixed proportions of the county rates from the form in which they had for many years existed. After argument by Tindal against the mandamus, and Tolman and Alexander in support of it, Abbott, C. J. said, "We are of opinion, that a power of appealing is given by the fourteenth section of stat. 5 Geo. III. c. 51, in a case like the present; and instead of thinking such power at variance with the object of that act, we consider it the most convenient construction that the statute can receive. The rule must therefore be made absolute." Rule absolute.
County Rate.

Sect. 12. "And it shall be lawful to and for the justices of the peace of any county, or the major part of them, in general or quarter sessions, or any adjournment or adjournments thereof, assembled, as often as they shall have deemed it necessary to make a rate or rates, assessment or assessments on all the rateable property within the limits of their jurisdiction, according to the fair annual value of the same, as derived from any or all of the several sources of information which are hereinbefore mentioned, and they hereby authorised and empowered to order warrants to be from time to time issued, in the same manner as now authorised and practiced by law in collecting the county rates, to the several high constables within their respective counties, ordering and requiring them to issue their warrants to respective overseers of the poor within their respective divisions, to collect, and pay to the said high constables, within a time to be named and limited in the warrant to be issued from the sessions as aforesaid, all such rate or rates, assessment or assessments, which each high constable shall have hereby directed and required to pay, at such time as shall be specified in such warrant, to the treasurer of the county for the time being, to be applied and disposed of in such manner and for such purposes as the court, in its discretion, shall think proper. When the warrant shall be in such manner and for such purposes as the court, in its discretion, shall think proper. When the warrant shall be in any parish, township, or place, whether parochial or otherwise, within any such county, it shall be binding upon the high constable of the division within which such overseer or overseers, or any other person or persons so liable and neglecting to pay the same, to act upon the complaint of the said county, upon complaint thereof made by any such high constable by warrant under the hand and seal of any such justice, to levy the same distress and sale of the offender's goods; and the overseer or overseers of the poor of any parish, township, or place, whether parochial or otherwise, or any other person or persons appointed to act as such overseer or overseers shall and may and is and are hereby empowered to levy and raise an assessment or assessment upon all and every the several estates and property to which the relief of the poor, within their respective parishes, townships, or places, whether parochial or otherwise, such sum and sums of money as shall be required and necessary, in order to raise the several sums assessed upon such parishes, townships, or places respectively; or to reimburse such overseers, or other person or persons as aforesaid, such sum or sums of money as they shall respectively have paid on account of the same; and such rate or assessment to be paid by the occupier or occupiers for the time being of the several estates and rateable property as aforesaid.

Sect. 13. "And whereas it would be inconvenient and oppressive to many townships or places, that the sum of money which may be assessed by the justices of the peace, at their general or quarter sessions, on any adjournment thereof, if they shall think convenient, to order the sum of money directed to be assessed for, or on the county rate on any such parish, township, or place, whether parochial or otherwise, to be paid and levied on the churchwardens, overseers, or petty constables, or for any such parish, township, or place, in such manner as the same is herein directed to be paid and levied in cases where no rate is made for the relief of the poor; any thing herein contained, or any law, usage, or custom, to the contrary notwithstanding." See 56 Geo. III. c. 49, and 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 96, post, 940.

Sect. 14. "That if the churchwarden or churchwardens, overseer or overseers of the poor, or other inhabitant or inhabitants of any parish, township, or place, whether parochial or otherwise, where there is no churchwarden or overseer, or person appointed to act as such, shall at any time have room to repealed) shall be good, valid, and effectual, for the purposes of assessing, levying, collecting, and enforcing the payment of the rate or rates hereafter to be made in pursuance of this act, and for carrying this act into execution.”
County Rate.

Sect. 21. “And whereas several acts have passed in the reign of his present Majesty, and are now in force, empowering the justices of the peace of certain counties to make fair and equal county rates within their respective counties;” it is enacted, “that it shall and may be lawful to and for the said justices respectively, and they are hereby empowered, at any time and at all times after the passing of this act, to proceed in the assessing, levying, and collecting, and enforcing the payment of the county rate, and in all matters relating to the equalizing the same, either under the authority and according to the provisions and enactments of this act, or under the authority and according to the provisions and enactments of the particular acts affecting their respective counties, as to them shall seem fit and proper, in all cases in which the provisions and enactments of this act are not inconsistent with the provisions and enactments of such particular acts.” See 56 Geo. III. c. 49, s. 2, and 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 85, s. 1, post, 940.

Sect. 22. “That the several forfeitures and penalties inflicted by this act shall, if not immediately paid, be levied by distress and sale of the offender’s goods and chattels, by virtue of any warrant under the hand and seal of any one justice of the peace for the county, not only in the county in which the offence shall have been committed, but in any other county, city, town, borough, franchise, or place, (the warrant or warrants for levying the same being in such last-mentioned case first indorsed by some justice of the peace for the county, or mayor, or other head officer of the city, town, borough, or franchise, where any goods of the respective defaulters shall be found,) returning the overplus (if any) after the charges of such distress and sale shall be deducted; and in case sufficient distress shall not be found, then it shall be lawful for such justices to commit the offender to the common gaol of the said county, there to remain without bail or mainprize, for any time not exceeding three calendar months, unless the forfeitures and charges be sooner paid; and the said forfeitures, when recovered, shall be paid to the treasurer of the county, or of any division thereof, in which they shall have been incurred, to be applied in aid of the rates of the said county or division thereof; and no person shall be deemed incompetent to be a witness for the execution of the purposes of this act, or in any appeal or other proceeding instituted by virtue thereof, by reason of his paying or being liable to pay towards the poor rates or county rates within the said county.”

Sect. 23. “That no action or suit shall be brought, commenced, or prosecuted against any person or persons, for any thing done or to be done by virtue of or in pursuance of this act, after three calendar months next after the fact committed; and every such action shall be brought and laid in the county where the cause of action shall have arisen, and not elsewhere; and the defendant or defendants in every such action or suit shall and may plead at his, her, or their election, this act specially or the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon, and that the same was done in pursuance or by the authority of this act; and if upon trial of such action or suit it shall appear to have been so done, or that such action or suit shall have been brought after the time limited for bringing the same as aforesaid, or be brought or laid in any other county than as aforesaid, then and every the said cases the jury shall find a verdict for the defendant or defendants; and in all cases where a verdict shall be found for any defendant or defendants in such action or suit, or the plaintiff or plaintiffs therein shall discontinue the same after the defendant or defendants shall have appeared thereto, or shall be nonsuited, or if upon demurrer, judgment shall be given against such plaintiff or plaintiffs, then and in every such case the defendant or defendants shall recover treble costs, and have the like remedy for recovering the same as any defendant or defendants hath or have for recovering costs of suit in any other cases by law.”

(a) See Constables, ante, 805; post, Justices, Vol. III. 495.
County Rate.

The appeal may be made at any time, though the rate was made under a particular act of parliament, which required the appeal to be made within a certain time. R. v. Js. of Buckinghamshire, 7 B. & Cres. 3; 9 D. & R. S.C.; see ante, Appeal, p. 137 to 141.

In the late case of R. v. Js. of Westmoreland, 10 B. & Cres. 226, it was held not necessary in a notice of appeal against a county rate to specify the grounds of appeal, but if the appellant states in his notice, as cases of appeal, things which are not so, the court of quarter sessions ought to adjourn the appeal if they think the respondents have been misled by the terms of the notice, or otherwise to hear it. See the case more fully noticed, ante, 320, n.

In the same case, it was held no ground of appeal against a county rate that individuals in one parish are rated in a higher proportion than another.

Sect. 15, which enacts that the expense of appeals shall be paid by the parish, or persons appealing, is repealed by the 57 Geo. III. c. 94, s. 2.

Sect. 16. "That it shall and may be lawful for the justices of the peace of any county, in general or quarter sessions, or any adjournment thereof from time to time assembled, to order such allowances and compensation to be made to the overseers, churchwardens, constables, assessors, collectors, clerks, or other persons employed in the execution of this act, which has not herebefore been provided for, from, by and out of the monies assessed, levied and collected by any county rate made under this or any former act, as to the said justices shall appear reasonable and proper."

Sect. 19. "That the justices of the peace of the said several counties hereby authorised and empowered to demand and take, whenever they shall think fit, good and sufficient security, to be approved of by the said justices in general or quarter sessions assembled, from the high constables employed in the collecting and levying the rates; and that if any such high constable, being so called upon by the said justices, shall neglect or refuse to give such security as shall be approved by them, it shall then be lawful for the said justices of the peace in quarter sessions assembled to order and direct the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or other persons appointed to assess, collect, and levy the rates of any parish, township, or place, to pay the quota which shall be assessed thereupon towards the county rate to the treasurer of the county, division, or place, in which such parish, township, or place, shall be situate; and the receipt of such treasurer shall be sufficient discharge for the same." See sect. 2 of 57 Geo. III. c. 94, as to Exclusive Jurisdictions, post, 939.

Sect. 20. "That all and every the clauses, powers, directions, provisions and authorities, contained in the said act made in the twelfth year of his Majesty King George the Second, intituled 'An Act for the more easy assessment, collecting, and levying county rates;' and also so much of another act made in the thirteenth year of the reign of his said late Majesty King George the Second, intituled 'An Act to continue several acts therein mentioned, for punishing such persons as shall wilfully and maliciously pull down or destroy turnpikes for repairing highways; or locks or other works erected by authority of parliament for making rivers navigable; for preventing executions of the occupiers of locks and weirs upon the river of Thames westward and for ascertaining the rates of water carriage upon the said river; for preventing frivolous and vexatious arrests; and for better securing the lawful trade of his Majesty's subjects to and from the East Indies, and for the more effectual preventing all his Majesty's subjects trading thither under foreign commissions; and for limiting the time for suing forth writs of certiorari upon proceedings before justices of the peace, and for regulating the time and manner of applying for the same; for the better and more speedy execution of process within particular franchises and liberties; and for extending the powers and authorities of justices of the peace of counties, touching county rates, to the justices of the peace of such liberties and franchises as have commissions of the peace within themselves, as relate to county rates, in and except such parts thereof respectively as are hereby varied, altered or peace of counties and ridings, and divisions and parts of counties, and other places of distinct and separate jurisdiction, in that part of Great Britain called England, assembled at their several and respective general or quarter sessions of the peace, or at any adjournment thereof, shall be and they are hereby authorised and required, in any case in which any question or doubt does or shall exist, or shall have arisen, or may in the judgment of the said justices be likely to arise, as concerning any boundary between any counties, ridings, divisions, or parts of any county, or other places of distinct and separate jurisdiction, for which they respectively act as such justices, to nominate and appoint two justices of the peace of each such county, riding, division, or parts of any county, or other places of distinct and separate jurisdiction, between which the boundary is required to be ascertained, for the purpose of fixing and determining such boundary, and the clerks of the peace, town clerks, and other proper officer of the several and respective general or quarter sessions of the peace at which such justices shall be appointed, shall forthwith give notice to each other and to such justices of such appointment; and the justices so appointed shall in every such case, as soon as may be after their appointment, meet and proceed to ascertain the boundary, upon such evidence as can be obtained by them, or as they shall deem necessary for that purpose, either by examination of witnesses upon oath, (with oath any one of the said justices is hereby empowered to administer,) or of any maps, plans, surveys, or any other records or documents, or in such other manner as they the said justices so appointed shall think requisite; and it shall be lawful for such justices, or for any persons authorised, under the hand of any three or more of such justices, to enter upon any lands, grounds, or premises, for the purpose of examining the same, or making any measurement, maps or plans thereof, for the purposes aforesaid; and it shall be lawful for the said justices to summon any witnesses to be examined in that behalf, and to impose any penalty or forfeiture not exceeding 10l. upon any witness who shall, without reasonable excuse, refuse or neglect to attend to be examined upon any such summons, which penalty or forfeiture may be recovered as any penalty or forfeiture may be recovered under any of the provisions of the said recited act; and such justices shall thereupon fix, ascertain, and determine the boundary so referred to them to be ascertained, and shall cause the boundary so fixed and determined to be laid down on two maps or plans, to be signed by the said justices so appointed as aforesaid, which shall be deposited with the clerks of the peace, town clerks, or other proper officer, for the counties, ridings, divisions, or parts of counties, or other places of distinct and separate jurisdiction, between which such boundary shall be so fixed and determined, and which maps and plans shall be kept amongst the records of their respective sessions, and shall be received as evidence of such boundaries; and such boundaries, so fixed and determined, shall be and be deemed the boundaries between the respective counties, ridings, divisions, or parts of counties, or other places of distinct and separate jurisdiction, for which the same shall have been so ascertained, for all the purposes of this and of the said recited act, and the carrying the provisions thereof respectively into execution; any thing contained in any other act or acts of parliament, relating to such counties, ridings, divisions, or parts of such counties, or other places of distinct and separate jurisdiction, or any law usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding. See 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 85, post, p. 940.

Sect. 3. "That if any of the four justices so appointed as aforesaid, or who shall be appointed in manner hereinafter mentioned, shall, before the execution of all the powers and authorities hereby in them respectively vested, die, decline or refuse to act, or become incapable of acting, the justices of the peace of counties, ridings, divisions, and parts of counties, and other places of distinct and separate jurisdiction, assembled at their several and respective general or quarter sessions of the peace, or at any adjournment thereof, from which such justice so appointed or to be appointed shall die, decline, refuse to act, or become incapable of acting, shall, and they are hereby authorised and required to appoint another justice in the room of him so dying, declining, refusing to act, or becoming incapable of acting as aforesaid, and so
COUNTY RATE.

36 Geo. 3. c. 43.

In case of difference between justices, a majority to be non-esteemed in suit thereon. and determination boundary.

from time to time as often as any justice so to be appointed as last time shall the, decline or refuse to act, or become incapable of acting; and any justice to be appointed as aforesaid shall have the like power and authority as the justice in whose place he shall be appointed was invested with by virtue of this act: and that notice shall be given by the clerks of the peace, or the clerks or other proper officer, to such justice of his appointment, as was hereinbefore directed."

Sect. 4. "That if it shall happen that the justices so appointed be uncertain, and determine the boundaries as aforesaid, shall disagree as to touching the boundary between any county, riding, division, or parts of a county, or other place of distinct and separate jurisdiction, so referred to meet and agree; and take such justices; and at such meeting the said persons so to be appointed as referees as aforesaid shall, together with the said justices to whom a boundary shall be referred to be ascertained as aforesaid, proceed to ascertain, and determine the boundary about which such disagreement takes place amongst them the said justices, in such and the same manner as with such and the like powers in all respects as hereinbefore expressed so that the determination and decision of the said justices, and of the person whom they shall appoint as referee as aforesaid, or of the major part of them, shall cause the boundary so fixed and determined to be laid down on two maps or plans, to be signed by the said justices and the person so appointed as referee as aforesaid, or by the major part of them, which shall be deposited with the clerks of the peace, town clerks, or other proper officer, hereinbefore directed, and kept amongst the records of their respective sessions, and shall be received as evidence of such boundaries; and such boundaries, so fixed and determined, shall be and be deemed the boundary between the respective counties, ridings, divisions, or parts of county, or other places of distinct and separate jurisdiction, for which the same act have been so ascertained for all the purposes of this and of the said recited act, and the carrying the provisions thereof respectively into execution, and thing contained in any other act or acts of parliament relating to such counties, ridings, divisions, or parts of such counties, or other places of distinct and separate jurisdiction, or any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding.

Sect. 5, which directs how appeals are to be proceeded in, is repealed by stat. 57 Geo. III. c. 94, s. 1.

Sect. 6. "That nothing in this act contained, nor any proceedings under the same, shall extend or be construed to extend, to determine any cause of boundary for any purpose, except for the purpose of assessing, collecting, and levying rates, according to the provisions of this act, and of the said recited act."

Sect. 7. "That all the powers, authorities, provisions, clauses, and regulations contained in the said recited act, shall be deemed and taken to apply this act, as if the same were severally and respectively repeated and reenacted in this act; and this act and the said recited act shall be construed as one act."

Stat. 57 Geo. III. c. 94, after reciting stat. 56 Geo. III. c. 49, and the whereas it is expedient to repeal so much of the said act as directs, that in cases in which any appeal or appeals shall be made under the said recited act (55 Geo. 3, c. 51) to any rate or assessment made in pursuance thereof of the act, the same should be made to the next general or quarter sessions of the peace after the cause of appeal shall have arisen, and that fourteen clear days be
County Rate.

Sect. 2. "That from and after the passing of this act the rate or rates made upon any parish, township, or place (whether extra parochial or otherwise) under any act or acts passed for the assessing, collecting, and levying of county rates, shall be paid, and shall and may be levied, recovered and received, notwithstanding any appeal or appeals may have been made to the general or quarter sessions of the peace against such rate or rates; and such rate or rates shall continue to be raised, levied and received, until the decision of the justices shall be made upon such appeal or appeals: provided always, that if upon the hearing of any such appeal or appeals the court of general or quarter sessions of the peace shall order any rate or assessment to be set aside, decreased, or lowered, and it shall appear to the said court that any parish, township, or place have or hath, previously to the determination of such appeal or appeals, paid any sum or sums of money in consequence of such rates or assessments, which ought not to have been paid or charged therein, then and in every such case the said court shall order such proportion of such sum or sums of money as shall have been so paid by any person or persons, parish, township, or place, subsequently to the notice which shall have been given of such appeal or appeals, to be repaid and returned to the person or persons, parish, township, or place, which have or hath paid the same respectively, out of the general rate of the county in which the cause of appeal shall have arisen: provided always, that fourteen clear days' notice in writing shall be given by the parties intending to appeal against any rate or assessment, to the parties against whose rate the appeal is to be made, the clerk of the peace of the county, and the hundred constable, of the intention to try such appeal at the next general quarter sessions of the peace; any thing in any act or acts to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 3. "That so much of the said recited act as directs that the expenses of all appeals, actions, suits, or proceedings at law, in respect of any thing done in pursuance of the said recited act, shall be paid by such respective parishes, townships, places, and persons as the said justices in general or quarter session shall direct, or such court wherein such proceeding shall be instituted shall order, and shall not be charged to or be paid out of the county rate, shall be and the same is hereby repealed."

Sect. 4. "That in case of any appeals, actions, suits, or proceedings at law respecting any thing done in pursuance of this act, or any other act or acts relating to the county rate, the expenses of all such appeals, actions, suits, or proceedings at law shall be borne and paid by such respective parishes, townships, places, and persons, or such of them, and in such proportions, as the said justices shall upon any appeal in their general or quarter sessions award and order, or as such courts wherein such actions suits, or proceedings shall be instituted shall adjudge and order."

Sect. 5. "And whereas there are several parishes, townships, and places in and over which the high constables have no jurisdiction, it is enacted, "that in all such cases it shall be lawful for the justices of the peace of any county in which such parishes, townships, or places shall be situate, to issue notice in writing should be given of the intention to try such appeal, previous to such general or quarter sessions; and that, notwithstanding such appeal or notice thereof, the rate or rates made upon any parish, township, or place (whether parochial or otherwise) under the said recited act and this act, should be paid, and should and might be levied, recovered and received in the same manner as if no appeal had been made or notice given thereof; and that if upon the hearing of any such appeal or appeals, the court of general or quarter sessions of the peace should order any rate or assessment to be decreased or lowered, and it should appear to the said court that any parish, township, or place have or hath, previously to the hearing such appeal or appeals, paid any sum or sums of money in consequence of such rates or assessments, which ought not to have been paid or charged therein, then and in every such case the said court should order all and every such sum and sums of money to be repaid and returned to the person or persons, parish, township, or place, having paid the same respectively. It is enacted, "that the hereinbefore recited provision shall be and the same is hereby repealed."
In case of difference between justices, a referee to be appointed to meet them, and determine boundary.

Sect. 4. "That if it shall happen that the justices so appointed to fix ascertain, and determine the boundaries as aforesaid, shall disagree in quoad touching the boundary between any county, riding, division, or parts of any county, or other place of distinct and separate jurisdiction, so referred to them under and by virtue of this or the said recited act, and there shall be an equality of votes, so that the said justices cannot make any determinate thereon, then and in such case the said justices, or the major part of them, shall forthwith appoint under their hands such person as they may think proper to act as referee, which person so appointed as referee shall, within twenty-one days from the receipt of such appointment, fix a time and place to meet such justices; and at such meeting the said person so to be appointed as referee as aforesaid shall, together with the said justices to whom any boundary shall be referred to be ascertained as aforesaid, proceed to fix ascertain, and determine the boundary about which such disagreement shall take place amongst them the said justices, in such and the same manner as with such and the like powers in all respects as hereinbefore expressed as to the determination and decision of the said justices, and of the person whom they shall appoint as referee as aforesaid, or of the major part of them, shall be for ever binding and conclusive; and that the said justices, or the person whom they shall appoint as referee as aforesaid, or the major part of them, shall cause the boundary so fixed and determined to be laid down on two maps or plans, to be signed by the said justices and the person so appointed as referee as aforesaid, or by the major part of them, which shall be deposited with the clerks of the peace, town clerks, or other proper officer, as hereinbefore directed, and kept amongst the records of their respective sessions, and shall be received as evidence of such boundaries; and such boundaries, so fixed and determined, shall be and be deemed the boundaries between the respective counties, ridings, divisions, or parts of counties, or other places of distinct and separate jurisdiction, for which the same shall have been so ascertained for all the purposes of this and of the said recited act, and the carrying the provisions thereof respectively into execution, any thing contained in any other act or acts of parliament relating to such counties, ridings, divisions, or parts of such counties, or other places of distinct and separate jurisdiction, or any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 5, which directs how appeals are to be proceeded in, is repealed by stat. 57 Geo. III. c. 94, s. 1.

Sect. 6. "That nothing in this act contained, nor any proceedings under the same, shall extend or be construed to extend, to determine any question of boundary for any purpose, except for the purpose of assessing, collecting, and levying rates, according to the provisions of this act, and of the said recited act."

Sect. 7. "That all the powers, authorities, provisions, clauses, and regulations contained in the said recited act, shall be deemed and taken to apply to this act, as if the same were severally and respectively repeated and reenacted in this act; and this act and the said recited act shall be construed as one act."

Stat. 57 Geo. III. c. 94, after reciting stat. 56 Geo. III. c. 49, and that "whereas it is expedient to repeal so much of the said act as directs, that in all cases in which any appeal or appeals shall be made under the said recited act (55 Geo. 3. c. 61) to any rate or assessment made in pursuance thereof or of this act, the same should be made to the next general or quarter sessions of the peace after the cause of appeal shall have arisen, and that fourteen clear days

COUNTY RATE.
36 Geo. 3, c. 49.

Act not to determine any question of boundary.

Former act extended to this act.

So much of the 55 Geo. 3, c. 49, as respects appeals, &c. repealed.
to, if such constables, churchwardens, overseers, or other officers had resided within the limits of the jurisdiction of the justices making and issuing such precepts, warrants, orders, and directions: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed, deemed or taken to extend to empower any justice or justices of the peace to act in the cases aforesaid, or any of them, beyond the limits of the jurisdiction within which he or they shall be generally appointed and authorised to act as such justices."

Sect. 2. "And whereas by the said recited act of the fifty-sixth year of the reign of his late Majesty, it was enacted, that all messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments situate, lying, or being in any extra-parochial place, or other places, whether rated to the relief of the poor or not so rated, although the same might not be deemed rateable to the relief of the poor within such extra-parochial places, or other places where no rate is made for the relief of the poor, should be and the same were thereby declared to be subject to be assessed, taxed, and rated, by and under the order, direction, and authority of justices of the peace, in such and the same manner as the messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, within any parishes or places where a rate is made for the relief of the poor; and that the justices of the peace should, in all cases where the same might be necessary, appoint proper persons within such extra-parochial or other places, as directed in and by the said therein recited act of the fifty-fifth year of the reign of his late Majesty, for the assessing, taxing, and rating such extra-parochial messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and levying, collecting, and paying over such assessments, taxes, or rates under the provisions of the said recited act: and whereas there are extra-parochial and other places where no rate is made for the relief of the poor, in which there are no messuages, or no person or persons resident proper to be appointed for the assessing, taxing, and rating such extra-parochial or other places, and levying, collecting, and paying over such assessments, taxes, or rates under the provisions of the said last recited act; and it is expedient that in those cases the justices of the peace should be authorised and empowered, in their discretion, to appoint proper persons, who do not reside within such extra-parochial or other places, to assess, tax, and rate all messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments situated in such extra-parochial or other places; it is enacted, that the justices of the peace in and for any county, riding, or division, shall in all such cases, where they shall deem it necessary, appoint proper persons within such county, riding, or division, as directed by and by the said recited act of the fifty-fifth year aforesaid, whether such persons do or do not reside within such extra-parochial or other place as aforesaid, to assess, tax, and rate all such messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments as are situated in such extra-parochial or other places as aforesaid; any thing in the said last recited act to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 3. "And for the more effectually levying money assessed for the purposes aforesaid, it is enacted, that the goods of any person assessed, or by the said recited acts, or this or any of them, made liable to pay the rates thereby authorised to be raised and levied, or any proportion thereof, for any county, riding, division, city, borough, town corporate, or place, and refusing to pay, may be levied by warrant of distress, not only in the place for which such assessment was made, but in any other place within the same county or precinct; and if sufficient distress cannot be found within the said county, riding, division, city, borough, town corporate, or place, on oath made thereof before some justice of any other county or precinct, (which oath shall be certified under the hand of such justice on the said warrant,) such goods may be levied in such other county, riding, division, city, borough, town corporate, or place, by virtue of such warrant and certificate; and if any person shall find him or herself aggrieved by such distress as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for such person to appeal to the next general or quarter sessions of the peace for the county or precinct where such assessment was made, and the justices there are hereby required to hear and finally determine the same."

Sect. 4. "That in all cases where any penalty, forfeiture, fine, or other money may, under or by virtue of the said recited acts or this act, or any of them, by the warrant of any justice or justices of the peace, be directed to

The goods of persons liable to pay rates may be seised by warrant of distress in any other place than the place of assessment, &c.

Appeal to quarter sessions.

Where sufficient distress cannot be found in one
COUNTY RATE.

57 Geo. 3, c. 94.

The 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 85, s. 1, after reciting stat. 12 Geo. II. 8 13 Geo. II. c. 18, 55 Geo. III. c. 51, 56 Geo. III. c. 49, and 57 Geo.
c. 49, and that "whereas there are several parishes, townships, hamlets, places situated in and extending into two or more counties, ridings, or divisions, having separate and distinct commissions of the peace, parish, or towns, having separate and distinct commissions of the peace, parishes, townships, hamlets, and other places being situated in acres, riding, or division, and other part or parts thereof in another county or counties, riding or ridings, division or divisions, and the message, incumbrances, and hereditaments situated in such parishes, townships, hamlets, or other places, are liable to the relief of the poor within the limits of the jurisdiction of the justices making the county rate or rates, whereby considerable difficulties have in such cases arisen in raising the county rates in such divisions;" it is enacted that from and after the passing of this act, all and every the powers and provisions, clauses, pains, penalties, and forfeitures, given, granted, paid, or imposed, by the said recited acts or any of them, shall cease to deem and extend to extend, to all cases and places as are said, where there are no separate churchwardens or overseers of the poor where no separate or distinct rate is made and collected for the relief of poor of any such division, or part of any parish, township, or place, and extending into two or more counties, ridings, or divisions as aforesaid, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes, as if the said powers, provisions, clauses, pains, penalties, and forfeitures, were hereby repealed and re-enacted, as to all such cases and places aforesaid, and that from and after the passing of this act, all and every the churchwardens and overseers of any such parishes, townships, hamlets, or other places as are situated in and extend into two or more counties, r ridings, divisions, having separate and distinct commissions of the peace as aforesaid, shall be subject to the precepts, warrants, orders, and directions of the several justices of the peace for the respective divisions or parts of such parishes, townships, hamlets, or other places, so far as the same may relate to the making of the returns required by the said recited acts or any of them.
In the assessing, levying, and collecting of the proportion of the county rate in such respective divisions or parts of such parishes, townships, hamlets, or other places, or otherwise to the execution of the said recited acts, and of other acts relating thereto, within the limits of the jurisdiction of the justices making and levying such precepts, orders, warrants, directions, and shall be subject to the same pains, penalties, and forfeitures, as aforesaid, neglect and disobedience of such justices, so far as the same may relate to the same, or otherwise to the justice, or otherwise to the execution of the said recited acts, and other acts relating thereto, within the limits of the jurisdiction of the justices making and levying such precepts, orders, warrants, directions, and shall be subject to the same pains, penalties, and forfeitures, as aforesaid, neglect and disobedience of such justices, so far as the same may relate to the same, or otherwise to the
to, if such constables, churchwardens, overseers, or other officers had resided within the limits of the jurisdiction of the justices making and issuing such precepts, warrants, orders, and directions: provided always, that nothing therein contained shall extend, or be construed, deemed or taken to extend to authorize any justice or justices of the peace to act in the cases aforesaid, or any of them, beyond the limits of the jurisdiction within which he or they shall be generally appointed and authorized to act as such justices."

Sect. 2. "And whereas by the said recited act of the fifty-sixth year of the reign of his late Majesty, it was enacted, that all messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments situate, lying, or being in any extra-parochial place, or other places, whether rated to the relief of the poor or not so rated, although the same might not be deemed rateable to the relief of the poor within such extra-parochial places, or other places where no rate is made for the relief of the poor, should be and the same were thereby declared to be subject to be assessed, taxed, and rated, by and under the order, direction, and authority of justices of the peace, in such and the same manner as the messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, within any parishes or places where a rate is made for the relief of the poor; and that the justices of the peace should, in all cases where the same might be necessary, appoint proper persons within such extra-parochial or other places, as directed in and by the said therein recited act of the fifty-fifth year of the reign of his late Majesty, for the assessing, taxing, and rating such extra-parochial messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and levying, collecting, and paying over such assessments, taxes, or rates under the provisions of the said recited act: and whereas there are extra-parochial and other places where no rate is made for the relief of the poor, in which there are no messuages, or no person or persons resident proper to be appointed for the assessing, taxing, and rating such extra-parochial or other places, and levying, collecting, and paying over such assessments, taxes, or rates under the provisions of the said last recited act; and it is expedient that in those cases the justices of the peace should be authorised and empowered, in their discretion, to appoint proper persons, who do not reside within such extra-parochial or other places, to assess, tax, and rate all messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments situated in such extra-parochial or other places; it is enacted, that the justices of the peace in and for any county, riding, or division, shall in all such cases, where they shall deem it necessary, appoint proper persons within such county, riding, or division, as directed in and by the said recited act of the fifty-fifth year aforesaid, whether such persons do or do not reside within such extra-parochial or other place as aforesaid, to assess, tax, and rate all such messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments as are situated in such extra-parochial or other places as aforesaid; any thing in the said last recited act to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding."

Sect. 3. "And for the more effectually levying money assessed for the purposes aforesaid, it is enacted, that the goods of any person assessed, or by the said recited acts, or this or any of them, made liable to pay the rates thereby authorized to be raised and levied, or any proportion thereof, for any county, riding, division, city, borough, town corporate, or place, and refusal of payment, may be levied by warrant of distress, not only in the place for which such assessment was made, but in any other place within the same county or precinct; and if sufficient distress cannot be found within the said county, riding, division, city, borough, town corporate, or place, on oath made thereof before some justice of any other county or precinct, (which oath shall be certified under the hand of such justice on the said warrant,) such goods may be levied in such other county, riding, division, city, borough, town corporate, or place, by virtue of such warrant and certificate: and if any person shall make himself aggrieved by such distress as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for such person to appeal to the next general or quarter sessions of the peace for the county or precinct where such assessment was made, and the justices there are hereby required to hear and finally determine the same."

Sect. 4. "That in all cases where any penalty, forfeiture, fine, or other money may, under or by virtue of the said recited acts or this act, or any of them, by the warrant of any justice or justices of the peace, be directed to be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of any person, if sufficient distress cannot be found within the limits of the jurisdiction of the justice granting such warrant of distress, on oath thereof made by one witness before any justice of the peace of any other county, division, city, borough, town corporate, or place, (which oath shall be by him certified by indorsement on such warrant,) such penalty, forfeiture, or other money, or so much thereof as may not have been before levied paid, shall and may, by virtue of such warrant and indorsement, be raised and levied by the person or persons to whom such warrant of distress shall have been originally directed, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such person or persons in such other county, riding, division, city, borough, town corporate, or place; and the money arising by such distress and sale shall be applied and disposed of for such purpose, and in like manner, as if sufficient goods and chattels of such person or persons had been found within the jurisdiction of the justice originally granting such warrant; and if no remedy distress can be found, such offender or offenders shall and may be forthwith proceeded against according to law."
County Rate.

Sect. 5. "That no justice who shall indorse any certificate upon, or authorise the execution of any such warrant of distress, which may not have been granted within his jurisdiction, shall be answerable or accountable for any irregularity which may have been committed or done in or about obtaining or granting of such warrant of distress."

Forms.

(No. 1.)

To the High Constable of the hundred of , in the county of .

County of WE the undermentioned justices, in His Majesty's name, hereby command you, within days after receipt hereof, to demand, take, and receive of and from the overseers of the poor, and other persons appointed as such, of the several parishes and places hereunder named, (being within said hundred,) the several and respective sums of money hereunder set down, expressed opposite to and against the names of such parishes and places; the said sums being respectively charged and assessed therein and by a rate or rate made at the last general quarter sessions of the peace held at , in , for and towards one general rate or assessment made for raising the sum and sums of money within the hundred of in the said county, to be sufficient to answer the several county charges, expenses, and purposes, to which the public stock of the county is applicable by law; and you are hereby commanded, that upon the receipt of the said several sums of money, you do pass the same at or before the next general quarter sessions of the peace to be held at , in , in the said county, into the hands of C. T. Esquire, the treasurer appointed to receive the same. And if any of the overseers of the poor, or other persons appointed as such, of the said several parishes and places, shall refuse or neglect to pay same within days next after you shall have demanded the same in writing from the said churchwardens or overseers of the poor, or any of them, or left after or any of their dwellinghouse or houses, or apprized on any of the church doors of the parishes or places to which such overseers, or persons appointed to act as such, do belong, that then you inform us, or some other of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county thereof, that such further proceedings may be had and taken as the law directs. And herein fail not at your peril. Given under our hands and seals, at , in the said county, the day of , in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and .

F. A. S.

[Here follows a list of the parishes and places above referred to, and the sums charged and assessed thereon.]

(a) See the 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 12, s. 5, ante, 929, where there are no high constables, other constables may be appointed, and the 12 Geo. II. c. 29, ante, 921. By the 55 Geo. III. c. 61, rates.
Forms.

(No. 2.)

County of & To the Overseers of the Poor of the township [or parish] of , in the said county.

BY virtue of an order of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, in their general [or quarter] sessions assembled, you are hereby required in days' time from your receipt of this precept, or otherwise having had due notice thereof, to pay to me out of the money by you collected or to be collected for the relief of the poor, the sum of , being the proportion of your said township [or parish] for and towards the general county rate. And herein you are not to fail, on the peril that shall ensue thereof. Given under my hand the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and .

J. B. High Constable.

Or, in the northern counties, the justices, if they think fit, instead of ordering the money to be paid by the churchwardens and overseers, may order it to be paid by the petty constables; and then the high constable's precept to the petty constables may be thus:

County of & To the Constable of the township [or parish] of , in the said county.

BY virtue of an order from his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, in the general [or quarter] sessions assembled, you are hereby required to raise the sum of within your constablewick, for which you are to make an equal rate within your said constablewick, and to levy the same in such manner as money for the relief of the poor is by law to be rated or levied; which said sum you are to pay unto me in thirty days' time from your receipt of this precept, or otherwise having had due notice thereof; the same being the proportion of your said constablewick, for and towards the general county rate. And herein you are not to fail, on the peril that shall ensue thereof. Given under my hand the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and .

J. B. High Constable.

(No. 3.)

County of & To J. B. High Constable of the hundred of , in the county of .

WHEREAS information and complaint have been made before us J. P. and L. S. two of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, by A. B. gentleman, treasurer of the public stock of the said county, that you, the said J. B. have neglected and refused to pay to the said A. B. the sum of , being the amount now due and owing from you to the public stock of the said county, and which said sum of has or ought to have been received and levied by you from the overseers of the poor of the respective parishes and townships within your said hundred of .

These are therefore to summon you, the said J. B., to appear before us or others of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, at , in the said county, on the next day of in the forenoon, to answer to the said information and complaint, and to be further dealt with according to law. Given under our hands and seals the day of .

(No. 4.)

County of & To C. D. and E. H. Overseers of the Poor of the township [or parish] of , in the said county.

WHEREAS information and complaint have been made before us J. P. one of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, by J. B. high constable of the hundred of , in the said county, that you the said overseers of the poor of the said township [or parish] of were in pursuance of his warrant, for that purpose to you directed, ordered and required to levy, collect, and pay to the said J. B. the sum of , within the space of days from the receipt [or date, as the case may be] of the said warrant, being the proportion of your said township [or parish] for and towards the general county rate, and that you, the said overseers [although

(a) See the 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 12, ante, 992.
County Rate.

Forms.

you received the said warrant on, &c. have refused and neglected, and do refuse to pay the same:

These are therefore to summon you, the said overseers, to appear before me or one or more of my Majesty’s justices of the peace in and for the said county, at the said county, on the next, at the hour of in the forenoon, to answer to the information and complaint, and to show cause why a warrant of distress should issue forthwith to levy the said sum of upon your goods and chattels, according to the directions of the statute in such case made and provided. Given under my hand and seal the day of in the year of our Lord one thousand, four hundred and .

J. P.

Warrant of distress thereon.

County of To the High Constable of the hundred of , in the said county of WHEREAS at the general or quarter sessions of the peace, held in the said county of , on, &c. a rate or assessment was duly made, pursuant to the statute made and passed in the fifty-fifth year of the reign of his late Majesty, King George the Third, for the purpose therein in that behalf mentioned; and in the said county, there was duly rated and assessed in the sum of of lawful money of Great Britain; and whereas the order of the said justices of the peace at the general or quarter sessions assembled, on, &c. a warrant was duly issued to the high constable of the hundred of , in the said county, ordering and requiring you to issue your warrant to the overseers of the poor of the said township [or parish] to levy, collect, and pay the said rate or assessment of to you, the said constable, within the space of days next following; and whereas you were directed to pay within the space of days to the hands of the treasurer of the said county, to be applied and disposed of in the manner and for the purposes for which the warrant in that behalf mentioned; and whereas the said overseers have refused and neglected to pay the same to you, the said high constable, and you have thereof made complaint to [me] J. P. Esquire, one of his Majesty’s justices of the peace in and for the said county; and whereas C. D. and E. the overseers of the poor of the said township [or parish] having appeared before me in pursuance of my summons for that purpose, have not shown to me any cause why the same should not be paid; these are therefore to require you forthwith to make distress of the goods and chattels of them the said overseers, and if within the space of days next after such distress by you taken, the sum of together with the reasonable charges of taking and keeping the said distress, shall not be paid, that then you do sell the said goods and chattels so by you distrained, out of the money arising by such sale, that you detain the said sum of , as also your reasonable charges of taking, keeping, and selling the said distress, according to you, the said overseers, the surplus on demand. Given under my hand and seal, at this day of, &c.

J. P.

County Treasurer.

[11 Geo. II. c. 20; 12 Geo. II. c. 29; 55 Geo. III. c. 51.]

By the 12 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 6, the treasurers of counties shall be premises resident in the county or division, and shall be appointed by the justices at their general or quarter sessions; first giving sufficient security to be accountable for the money which shall be paid to them in pursuance of this act (for levying of county rates,) and to pay such sums as shall be ordered by the justices in sessions, and for the due and faithful execution of the trust reposed in them.

A quo warranto will not lie against a county treasurer to show by the authority he holds the office, if he has been de facto elected by the justices in quarter sessions; nor will mandamus lie to the justices in sessions to make a new election of a county treasurer, on the ground that one of the justices who had voted at the election had not taken the qualification oath prescribed by stat. 18 Geo. II. c. 30, prior thereto, for the acts of the justice are not void, although he may be liable to penalties. R. v. Js. Herefordshire, and a Treasurer of the same, 1 Chitt. Rep. 709; and see Margate Pier Co. v. Hannah, 3 B. & Ald. 366, post, Vol. III. p. 457.
County Treasurer.

The 11 Geo. II. c. 20, s. 3, which requires his election to be certified into the Court of King's Bench, is repealed by the 53 Geo. III. c. 113, s. 1.

By the 12 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 12, the justices at general or quarter sessions may continue the treasurer from time to time in his office, and remove him at their pleasure, and appoint another in his place; and may allow him a salary not exceeding 20l. a-year, to be paid out of the county rates. See the 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 17, infra, as to his salary.

By sect. 7 & 8. And the treasurer shall keep books of entries of the several sums by him received and paid; and shall deliver in a true and exact account upon oath, if required, of his receipts and disbursements, distinguishing the particular uses to which the several sums have been applied, to the justices at every general or quarter sessions, and shall lay before them the proper vouchers for the same; which accounts and vouchers, after having been passed by the said justices, shall be deposited with the clerk of the peace, to be kept amongst the records, to be inspected by any of the justices without fee.

Sect. 9. And the discharge of the justices, by their order at their general or quarter sessions, shall be a sufficient release and discharge to such treasurer.

By the 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 17. "And whereas the allowance which the justices of the peace are authorised to make to the treasurer or treasurers for his or their care and pains in the execution of his or their office, stands limited by the before recited act made in the twelfth year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Second, to a sum not exceeding twenty pounds a-year; and whereas such sum has been in some, and may be found in many cases inadequate to remunerate him or them for such care and pains; be it hereby further enacted, that so much of the said act as limits the said allowance to twenty pounds a year is hereby repealed; and that it shall and may be lawful for the said justices of the peace, at their respective general or quarter sessions, or the greater part of them then and there assembled, to allow to the treasurer or treasurers of their counties, and to every of them insisting on the same, such reasonable sum or sums of money for such purpose as aforesaid, as they in their discretion shall think fit, of which they are hereby empowered to direct the payment out of the monies arising by the rates of their respective counties: provided always, that no such augmentation of allowance shall be made at any such general or quarter sessions, unless application for such augmentation shall have been made by the said treasurer or treasurers, or the justices of the peace, at some previous general or quarter sessions assembled, and unless notice of the intention of taking the said augmentation into consideration shall have been advertised for three successive weeks in some newspaper usually circulating in such county, in the month immediately preceding the time fixed for considering the same."

Sect. 18. "That the said several treasurers of counties, or of divisions of counties, shall and are hereby required, once in every year, to publish in some one of the newspapers usually circulating in the county or division of the county in which they respectively act, a true and accurate abstract of the account of their receipts and expenditures, under their several heads, for the year immediately preceding the publication of such abstract, signed by the justices of the peace who shall have audited the same, under a penalty of fifty pounds for every omission of such publication."

The condition of a bond, after reciting that the obligor had been nominated treasurer and receiver of the rates and assessments made for the county, upon his giving security to the clerk of the peace for the due and faithful execution of the trusts reposed in him, according to the statute, was, that the obligor should, when he was thereto required by the justices of the peace assembled at quarter sessions, or the major part of them, or by any con-

Vol. I.

3 P
County Treasurer.

As to proof of proceedings in, see post, Evidence, Vol. II. p. 32 to 33.

As to the county court, see ante, County Court; as to the court-baron, ante, Baron Court; as to the court-leet, see ante, Vol. III.; as to the sheriff's tourn, see Courts, Vol. V.; as to the court of sessions, see Sessions, Vol. V.

Where the word courts is used generally in a statute, it must be taken to mean the King's courts at Westminster. Gregory's case, 6 Reg. 30, as 1 B. & Ald. 282.

Criminal Information. See post, Information, Justices, Vol. III. p. 481 to 486.

Credible Witnesses. See post, Evidence, Vol. II. p. 78 to 81.

Customs.

The laws relating to the customs, so far as justices of the peace, constables, and other such officers are concerned therein, being considerably connected with the laws of excise, it is thought proper to refer this subject to the title Excise, Vol. II., where the whole will be more clearly comprehended under one view.

As to customs and usages in general, see post, Vol. V. p. 634 to 636.

As to the proof of custom and usage, see Evidence, Vol. II. p. 31.
The custos rotulorum is he that hath the keeping of the rolls or records of the sessions. (a) He is always a justice of the peace and quorum in the county where he hath his office. He is a man, for the most part, especially picked out either for wisdom, countenance, or credit. He is the principal civil officer in the county, as the lord lieutenant is the chief in military command. 4 Blac. Com. 272. His office is quite distinct from that of the lord lieutenant. He is considered rather in the character of a minister than a judge. Dick. Sessions 31.

By stat. 37 Hen. VIII. c. 1, (which was altered by stat. 3 & 4 Edw. VI. c. 1, but restored by stat. 1 Will. III. c. 21,) no person shall be appointed to the office of custos rotulorum, but such as shall have a bill signed with the King's hand for the same; which bill signed shall be a sufficient warrant to the lord chancellor to make a commission, assigning and authorising thereby the same person to be custos rotulorum, until the King hath by another bill with his own hand appointed one other person to have the same office by himself or his sufficient deputy, learned in the laws, and meet and able to supply the said office.

In pursuance whereof, the last clause in the commission of the peace is generally to this effect: “Lastly, we have assigned you the aforesaid keeper of the rolls of our peace in our said county, and therefore you shall cause to be brought before you and your said fellows, at the days and places aforesaid, the writs, precepts, processes, and indictments aforesaid, that they may be inspected, and by a due course determined, as is aforesaid.” See further the late case of Harding v. Pollock, 6 Bing. 25.

Where the manner of holding a special session is prescribed by the statute which directs it to be holden, the precise requisitions of the statute must of course be obeyed. Where no such direction is to be found, as in the great majority of instances, the special session may be convened at the instance of the custos rotulorum of the county, of the clerk of the peace or his deputy, or of two justices. Dick. Sessions 7; post, Sessions, Special and Petty, Vol. V.

A general session may be convened by any two justices within the jurisdiction, one being of the quorum, or by the custos rotulorum and any one justice, but not by the custos rotulorum alone. Lamb, 375; post, Sessions, Vol. V.

The custos rotulorum, by virtue of his office, having the custody of the rolls of session, ought to attend there by himself or his deputy, who is the clerk of the peace. Crown Circuit Comp. 34.

He is directed by statute to appoint a sufficient person, residing within the county, to execute the office of clerk of the peace by himself or sufficient deputy, such deputy being admitted by the custos rotulorum so often as the office of clerk of the peace shall be vacant. 37 Hen. VIII. c. 1, s. 8; and see the late important case of Harding v. Pollock, 6 Bing. 25, fully confirming the right of the custos rotulorum to appoint the clerk of the peace.

But he may not sell the said place directly or indirectly, under the penalty of losing his own office of custos rotulorum, and forfeiting double the value of what he shall have received, to be recovered by any common informer in the superior courts. 1 W. & M. ss. 1, c. 21, s. 8.

---

(a) Yet so far they remain by reputation of law in custody of all the justices, that a certiorari to remove proceedings is directed to all. Com. Dig. Justices, (D. 4.)

---

3 P 2
THE stat. 59 Geo. III. c. 7, after reciting that "whereas knives, forks, razors, scissors, shears, and other cutlery wares, edge tools and hardware requiring a cutting edge, forged and formed of wrought steel, and iron steel, have for many years been a great branch of trade in England; as such articles being esteemed in foreign countries for their superior value; great quantities thereof have been sent to foreign markets: and whereas practice prevails of casting or forming in a mould from cast iron, brass knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools and hardware requiring a cutting edge, and some of such articles are, by a chemical process, previous to the finishing and polishing thereof, made to resemble so nearly the like sort of articles wrought of steel and iron and steel, as scarcely to be distinguishable from wrought steel and iron and steel, and which persons skilled in the manufacture of cutlery, edge tools and hardware;" enacts, sect. 1, "that from and after the passing of the act it shall be lawful for all and every person and persons who shall make, forge, form or manufacture, or cause, direct or procure to be made, forged, formed or manufactured, by means of the hammer, any knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools and hardware requiring a cutting edge, of wrought steel, or of iron steel, to mark, strike, stamp, grave, or impress, or cause, direct or procure to be marked, struck, stamped, graved or impressed, in and upon any part of such knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools, and hardware requiring a cutting edge, so forged and formed by means of the hammer, wrought steel, or iron steel, the figure or form of a hammer, at any time, and not at any other time except as hereinafter provided, after the forging, and previous to the same respectively being ground or polished, so as to denote that such knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools and hardware requiring a cutting edge, were formed by means of the hammer, wrought steel, and iron and steel, as to distinguish the same articles from such articles cast or formed in mould, or otherwise than by means of the hammer."

Sect. 2. "That it shall be lawful for all and every person and persons who shall, on the passing of this act, have in his, her or their possession an edge tool, and hardware requiring a cutting edge, made, forged, formed or manufactured by means of the hammer, wrought steel, or iron and steel, at any time within the space of a calendar month next after the passing of this act, to mark, strike, stamp, grave or impress, or cause, direct or procure to be marked, struck, stamped, graved or impressed, in and upon any part of such knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools and hardware requiring a cutting edge, so forged and formed by means of the hammer, wrought steel, and iron and steel, so in his, her or their possession, the figure or form of a hammer, so as to denote that such knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools and hardware requiring a cutting edge, were formed by means of the hammer, wrought steel, or of iron and steel, and so as to distinguish the same articles from such articles cast or formed in mould, or otherwise than by means of the hammer."

Sect. 3. "That from and after the passing of this act it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to cast, mark, strike, stamp, grave or impress a cause, direct or procure to be cast, marked, struck, stamped, graved or impressed, in and upon any part of any knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, or any other cutlery articles whatsoever, edge tools and hardware requiring a cutting edge, which shall be cast or formed in mould, or otherwise than by means of the hammer."

Persons having manufactured articles in their possession empowered to mark the same with the figure of a hammer.

Persons casting cutlery wares, edge tools, and hardware requiring a cutting edge, to mark the same with the figure of a hammer, etc.
Cutlers.

or formed otherwise than by means of the hammer, either at the time of casting or forming such articles in the mould, or otherwise than by means of the hammer, or subsequently thereto, and previous to the bonâ fide sale thereof to the user, the figure or form of a hammer, or any symbol or device resembling a hammer, or having any similitude thereto, nor to have in his, her or their possession, for the purpose of sale, or to sell, expose or offer to sale, or cause, direct or procure to be sold, exposed or offered to sale, any knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools and hardware requiring a cutting edge, which shall have been cast or formed in a mould, or otherwise than by means of the hammer, having marked or struck thereon the figure or form of a hammer, or any symbol or device resembling a hammer, or having any similitude thereto; and all and every person and persons who shall cast, mark, strike, stamp, grave or impress, or cause, direct or procure to be cast, marked, stamped, grave or impressed, in or upon any part of any knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools, and hardware requiring a cutting edge, which shall have been cast or formed in a mould, or otherwise than by means of the hammer, either at the time of casting or forming thereof, or subsequently thereto, and previous to the bonâ fide sale thereof to the user, the figure or form of a hammer, or any symbol or device resembling a hammer, or having any similitude thereto; or who shall have in his, her or their possession for the purpose of sale, or who shall sell, expose or offer to sale, or cause, direct or procure to be sold, exposed or offered to sale, any knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools, and hardware requiring a cutting edge, having thereon the figure or form of a hammer, or any symbol or device resembling a hammer, or having any similitude thereto, together with the sum of 5l. for any quantity not exceeding one dozen of such articles so marked, struck, sold or exposed to sale; and for any quantity of such articles exceeding one dozen, 5l. for every one dozen thereof; such sum and sums respectively to be levied, recovered and applied as hereinafter directed."

Sect. 4. "That from and after the passing of this act it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to cast, mark, strike, stamp, grave or impress, or cause, direct or procure to be cast, marked, struck, stamped, grave or impressed, in or upon any part of any knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools and hardware requiring a cutting edge, forged and formed with the hammer, of wrought steel, or of iron and steel, or cast in a mould, either at the time of forging or casting such articles, or subsequently thereto, previous to the bonâ fide sale thereof to the user, any word or words which shall or may denote or indicate the quality of such articles to be otherwise than the real and true quality thereof; nor to have in his, her or their possession for the purpose of sale, nor to sell or expose or offer to sale, or cause, direct or procure to be sold, exposed or offered to sale, any knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools and hardware requiring a cutting edge, forged and formed with the hammer, of wrought steel, and iron and steel, or cast in a mould, having marked thereon any word or words which shall or may denote or indicate the quality of such articles to be otherwise than the real and true quality thereof; and all and every person or persons who shall cast, mark, strike, stamp, grave or impress or cause or procure to be cast, marked, stamped, grave or impressed, in or upon any part of any knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools and hardware requiring a cutting edge, forged or formed with the hammer, of wrought steel, No person to mark any knives, &c. forged with the hammer, or cast in a mould, with any words which shall indicate the quality to be otherwise than the true quality; or have in his possession any such articles improperly marked.

Persons offending.
CUTLERS.

29 Geo. 3, c. 7.

or iron and steel, or cast in a mould, either at the time of forging or casting, or subsequently thereto, previous to the bona fide sale thereof to the user, or person, whose name or name and address or "London," or "London made," or any word or words having any similitude thereto, unless the articles so cast, marked, struck, stamped, graved or impressed, shall have been manufactured within the city of London, or within twenty miles distance thereof; and all and every person or persons to whom the shall cast, mark, strike, stamp, press, or impress, or cause or procure to be cast, marked, struck, stamped, graved or impressed, in or upon any part of any knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools and hardware requiring a cutting edge, forged and formed with the hammer, of wrought steel or iron and steel, or cast in a mould, having thereon any word or words which shall or may denote or indicate the quality of or articles to be otherwise than the real and true quality; or who shall have his, her or their possession for the purpose of sale, or shall sell, expose offer to sale, or cause, direct or procure to be sold, exposed or offered to sale, any knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools and hardware requiring a cutting edge, forged and formed with the hammer, of wrought steel, or iron and steel, or cast in a mould, having thereon any word or words which shall or may denote or indicate the quality of such articles to be otherwise than the real and true quality thereof, shall, in all and every the cases aforesaid, forfeit all and every such knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools and hardware requiring a cutting edge, forged and formed with the hammer, of wrought steel, or iron and steel, or cast in a mould, either at the time of forging or casting such articles, or subsequently thereto, previous to the bona fide sale thereof to the user, the word or words "London," or "London made," or any word or words having any similitude thereto, unless the article so cast, marked, struck, stamped, graved or impressed, shall have been manufactured within the city of London, or within twenty miles distance thereof; or to have in his, her or their possession, for the purpose of sale, or not to sell, expose or offer to sale, or cause, direct or procure to be sold, exposed or offered to sale, any knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools and hardware requiring a cutting edge, forged and formed with the hammer, of wrought steel or iron and steel, or cast in a mould, having thereon the word or words "London," or "London made," or any word or words having any similitude thereto, unless the articles so cast, marked, struck, stamped, graved or impressed, shall have been manufactured within the city of London, or within twenty miles distance thereof; and all and every person or persons to whom the shall cast, mark, strike, stamp, press, or impress, or cause or procure to be cast, marked, struck, stamped, graved or impressed, in or upon any part of any knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools and hardware requiring a cutting edge, forged and formed with the hammer, of wrought steel, or iron and steel, or cast in a mould, having thereon the word or words "London," or "London made," or any word or words having any similitude thereto, previous to the bona fide sale thereof to the user, the word or words "London," or "London made," or any word or words having any similitude thereto, unless the articles so cast, marked, struck, stamped, graved or impressed, shall have been manufactured within the city of London, or within twenty miles distance thereof; or who shall have in his, her or their possession, for the purpose of sale, or shall sell, expose or offer to sale, or cause, direct or procure to be sold, exposed or offered to sale, any knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools and hardware requiring a cutting edge, forged and formed with the hammer, of wrought steel, or iron and steel, or cast in a mould, having thereon the word or words "London," or "London made," or any word or words having any similitude thereto, unless the articles so cast, marked, struck, stamped, graved or impressed, shall have been manufactured...
Cutlers.

Sect. 6. "That from and after the passing of this act, in case any person or persons shall have in his, her, or their possession, for the purpose of sale, or shall sell, expose, or offer for sale, or cause, direct or procure to be sold or offered for sale, any knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, or any other cutlery articles whatsoever, edge tools and hardware requiring a cutting edge, formed with the hammer, or cast in a mould in a finished state, having marked thereon any word or words contrary to the directions of this act, shall, at or upon any information or complaint being laid or made against him, her, or them, prove satisfactorily, by the oath of himself or herself, or any other person, before one or more of his Majesty's justices of the peace, that such knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, or any other cutlery articles whatsoever, edge tools, or hardware requiring a cutting edge, were purchased or came into the possession of him, her, or them, or were made, formed, cast, or manufactured before the passing of this act, then and in such case the person or persons so having the said articles in a finished state in his, her, or their possession, for the purpose of sale, or selling, exposing or offering the same for sale, or causing, directing, or procuring the same to be sold or offered for sale, shall not be liable to the pains and penalties aforesaid."

Sect. 7. "That from and after the passing of this act, in case any person or persons shall have in his, her, or their possession, for the purpose of sale, or shall sell, expose, or offer for sale, or cause, direct or procure to be sold or offered for sale, any knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, or any other cutlery articles whatsoever, edge tools or hardware requiring a cutting edge, cast or formed in a mould, or forged and formed with the hammer, which shall not have been made, formed, cast, or manufactured before the passing of this act, having marked thereon the figure or form of a hammer, or any word or words contrary to the directions of this act, shall, at or before any information or complaint shall be laid or made against him, her, or them, prove satisfactorily by the oath of himself, herself, or themselves, before one or more of his Majesty's justices of the peace, that he, she, or they purchased such articles, with the figure, words, or marks thereon respectively, without knowing at the time of such purchase that the same were articles marked contrary to the directions of this act, and shall discover to any two or more justices of the peace the name or names of the person or persons of whom he or she purchased the same, so that such person or persons shall be prosecuted to conviction for the same, then and in such case the person or persons who shall have in his, her, or their possession any of such articles aforesaid, for the purposes aforesaid, shall not be liable to the pains and penalties aforesaid, but shall be entitled to two third parts of the penalty as other informers."

Sect. 9. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for any two or more of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the county, city, or place where the offender or offenders shall reside, or where the offence shall be committed, to hear and determine any offence or offences against this act; and all such justices are hereby authorised and required, upon any information exhibited or complaint made in that behalf, to summon the party or parties accused, and the witnesses on each side, and to examine into the matter of such complaint; and upon due proof thereof, either by confession of the party complained of, or by the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, to give judgment or sentence for the pecuniary penalty, with costs, to be allowed..."
by such justices, and to award and issue out their warrant under their hands and seals for the levying such penalty and costs on the goods and chattels of the offender or offenders, and to cause sale to be made thereof on such goods and chattels shall not be redeemed within five days after the day of the seizure, rendering the overplus (if any,) after defraying the expenses of such distress and sale, to the person or persons whose goods or chattels shall have been so distrained and sold; and for want of a sufficient distress, such justices shall and may commit such offender or offenders to his Majesty's gaol for the county, city, or place, where such offence shall be committed as aforesaid, there to remain for any time not exceeding two calendar months, unless payment shall be sooner made of the said pen and costs."

Sect. 9. "That if any person or persons shall think himself aggrieved by the judgment of such justices, he, she, or they, upon giving security with a sufficient surety to the amount of the value of such penalty or penalties and costs, together with such further costs as shall be awarded in case such judgment shall be affirmed, appeal to the general quarter sessions of the peace for the county, city, or place, where such conviction shall be made; and the justices at such sessions are hereby empowered to summon and examine witnesses on oath, and to hear and finally determine the matter of the said appeal, and to award such costs as the said court shall think reasonable to the party in whose favour such appeal shall be determined."

Sect. 10. "That it shall be lawful for any justices of the peace, before whom any information may be laid, and also for the said justices in quarter sessions assembled, (if they respectively should think fit,) to mitigate the said penalties in such manner as to them shall seem expedient; provided that such penalties shall in no case be mitigated to less than half, or five such penalties shall be less than the sum of 50l. to less than 25l.

Sect. 11. "That no conviction made upon any offence or offences an act mentioned or created, shall be set aside in or by any court whatever for want of form, or through the mistake of any fact, circumstance or other matter whatsoever; provided that the material facts alleged in such conviction, and upon which the same shall be grounded, be proved to the satisfaction of the said court; any law, statute, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 12. "That a conviction in the form and to the effect following, (mutatis mutandis,) as the case may require, shall be good and effectual in all intents and purposes whatsoever, without further stating the case, or the facts or evidence in any particular manner; (that is to say,)"

Form of conviction.

"BE it remembered, that on the day of in the year of our Lord A. B. came before us C. D. and E. of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, city, or parish, the case may be, and informed us, that G. H. of the day of now last past, at in the said county, city, or place, as the case may be; here set forth the fact for which the information is laid. Whereupon the said G. H. after being duly summoned to answer the charges, appeared before us on the day of at in the said county, city, or place, and having heard the charge contained in the said information, declared he was not guilty of the said offence, [or, as the case may happen to be, did not appear before us, pursuant to the said summons, or, did neglect and refuse to make any defence against the said charge, but the same being fully proved before us, upon the oath of J. K. a credible witness [or as the case may happen to be,] acknowledged and voluntarily confessed the same to be true; and it manifestly appeared to us, that the said G. H. is guilty of the offence charged upon him in the said information; we do therefore hereby condemn him of the offence aforesaid, and do declare and adjudge that he the said G. H. has forfeited the said [here describe the articles formed, cast, sold, or offered to sale, or being marked according to the directions of this act,] together with the sum of lawful money of Great Britain, for the offence aforesaid, to be disposed of as the law directs, according to the form of the statute in that case made and provide. Given under our hands and seals the day of."
Cutlers.

Sect. 13. "That if any person shall be summoned as a witness to give evidence before such justices of the peace, touching any of the matters relative to this act, either on the part of the informer or of the person or persons accused, and shall neglect or refuse to appear at the time and place to be for that purpose appointed, without a reasonable excuse for such his, her, or their neglect or refusal, to be allowed of by such justices of the peace, or appearing shall refuse to be examined on oath and give evidence before such justices, then every such person shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of 10l. to be levied and paid in such manner and by such means as are herein directed as to other penalties."

Sect. 14. "That it shall and may be lawful to and for any justice of the peace of the county, city, or place where the offence is committed, or where the offender or offenders reside, by warrant under his hand and seal, to cause any such knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, or any other cutlery articles whatsoever, edge tools or hardware requiring a cutting edge, as shall be liable to be forfeited by virtue of this act, to be seized, and the same when seized to keep in safe custody, for the purpose of producing the same in evidence upon any prosecution to be instituted or carried on for the pecuniary penalties incurred in respect thereof; and when and as soon as the further production thereof in evidence shall become unnecessary, then the same shall, by order of such justices, be destroyed, or disposed of in any manner as the court before which such articles shall be produced may direct."

Sect. 15. "That no information shall be exhibited for any of the offences aforesaid, unless within the space of six calendar months after the commission of such offences respectively."

Sect. 16. "That one third part of the pecuniary penalties to be recovered as aforesaid shall be paid and payable to the poor of the parish, township, or place where the offence shall be committed, and the other two third parts of such penalties to the person or persons who shall inform of any the offences aforesaid."

Sect. 17. "That in all informations, complaints, and other proceedings, in pursuance of this act, or in relation to any matter or thing herein contained, any inhabitant of the parish, township, or place in which any offence or offences shall be committed, contrary to the true intent and meaning of this act, shall be admitted to give evidence, and shall be deemed competent witnesses, notwithstanding his, her, or their being an inhabitant or inhabitants of the parish, township, or place, wherein any such offence or offences shall be supposed to have been committed."

Sect. 18. "That in case any person or persons who shall be liable to any of the penalties aforesaid, by reason of any thing done by him, her, or them, under the order, direction, or procurement of any other person or persons, shall, before any information or complaint shall be laid or made against him, her, or them, discover to any two or more justices the name or names of the person or persons by whose order, direction, or procurement he, she, or they shall have done such act, which shall have made him, her, or them liable to any of the penalties, so that the person or persons, by whose order, direction, or procurement, he, she, or they shall have done such act, shall be prosecuted to conviction for the same, then and in such case such person or persons who shall give such information, or make such complaint, shall not be liable to the pains and penalties aforesaid, but shall be entitled to two third parts of the penalty as other informers."

See further as to cutlers and artificers in the cutlery trade, title, Servant, Servants in.

See ante, Alehouses; post, Errise, Vol. II.
Dancing. See Disorderly Houses, post, p. 958.

Dead Bodies. See ante, Burial; Church, p. 615.

Deaf Witness. Examination of, post, Evidence, Vol. II. p. 86.

Death-bed Declarations. Evidence of, see Evidence, Vol. II. p. 33, 34.

Debtors. See ante, Bankrupt; Gaol, Vol. II.; Insolvent Debtors, Vol. III.

Deceit. See ante, Cheat.

Decency. See ante, Bathing; Lewdness, Vol. III.

Declarations. See Evidence, Vol. II. p. 29 to 33.

Deer. See Game, Vol. II.

Defamation. See Libel, Vol. III.; Slander, Vol. V.

Demurrer.

A DEMURRER (from demorari) signifies an abideing in point of law, upon which the defendant joins issue, allowing the facts to be true as laid in the indictment. Wood's Inst. b. 4, c. 5.

In criminal cases, not capital, if the defendant demur to an indictment, &c., whether in abatement or otherwise, the court will not give judgment against him to answer over, but final judgment, 2 Hawk. c. 31, s. 7; R. v. Gribson, 8 East, 112; but in capital cases this seems otherwise. See 2 Hawk. by Curwood, c. 31, s. 5.

Demurrers, however, to indictments are seldom used; since the same advantages may be taken from a plea of not guilty; or oftentimes afterwards in arrest of judgment, when the verdict has established the fact. 4 Bla. Com. 334. See post, Indictment, Vol. III. p. 352, the stat. of 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 20, as to what defects are cured after verdict, and must be demurred to, if defendant intends taking advantage of them.

As to amendments, see ante, Amendment.

As to demurrers to evidence, post, Evidence, Vol. II. p. 92.

(No. 1.)

AND the said C. D., in his own proper person, cometh into court here, and having heard the said indictment or information read, saith that the said indictment or information and the matters therein contained, in manner and form as the same are above stated and set forth, are not sufficient in law, and that he the said C. D. is not bound by the law of the land to answer the same: and this he is ready to verify. Wherefore, for want of a sufficient indictment, or information in this behalf, the said C. D. prays judgment, and that by the court here he may be dismissed and discharged from the said premises in the said indictment or information specified.

(No. 2.)

AND A. B., who prosecutes for our said Lord the King in this behalf, saith, that the said indictment, and the matters therein contained, in manner and form as the same are above stated and set forth, are sufficient in law to compel the said C. D. to answer the same; and the said A. B., who prosecutes as aforesaid, is ready to verify and prove the same, as the court here shall direct and award. Wherefore, inasmuch as the said C. D. hath not answered to the said indictment, nor hitherto in any manner denied the same, the said A. B., for our said Lord the King, prays judgment, and that the said C. D. may be convicted of the premises in the said indictment specified.

The like form, mutatis mutandis, may be adopted in the case of informations, and of indictments in the Court of King's Bench.

(No. 3.)

AND A. B., who prosecutes for our said Lord the King in this behalf, as to the said plea of the said C. D. by him above pleaded, saith, that the same, and the matters therein contained, in manner and form as the same are above pleaded and set forth, are not sufficient in law to bar or preclude our said Lord the King from prosecuting the said indictment against him the said C. D.; and that our said Lord the King is not bound by the law of the land to answer the same: and this he the said A. B., who prosecutes as aforesaid, is ready to verify. Wherefore, for want of a sufficient plea in this behalf, the said A. B., for our said Lord the King, prays judgment, and that the said C. D. may be convicted of the premises in the said indictment specified.

The like forms, mutatis mutandis, may be adopted in the case of informations and of indictments in the Court of King's Bench. A demurrer to a plea in abatement in the same form, except that it concludes with praying judgment, and that the said indictment may be adjudged good, and that the said C. D. may further answer thereto, &c.
Demurrer.

(No. 4.)

AND the said C. D. saith, that his said plea by him above pleaded, and the matter therein contained, in manner and form as the same are above pleaded and set forth, are sufficient in law to bar and preclude our said Lord the King from prosecuting the said indictment against him the said C. D.; and the said C. D. is ready to verify and prove the same, as the said court here shall direct and amend. Wherefore, inasmuch as the said A. B. for our said Lord the King hath not answered to said plea, nor hitherto in any manner denied the same, the said C. D. prays judgment, and that by the court here he may be dismissed and discharged from the said premises in the said indictment specified.

The joinder is the same, if the demurrer be to a plea in abatement, except that it concludes with praying judgment, and that the said indictment may be quashed, &c.

---

Deodand.

DEODAND is, when any movable thing inanimate, or beast animate, doth move to or cause the untimely death of any reasonable creature, by mischance, without the will or fault of himself, or any person. 3 Inst. 57.

By deodand is meant whatever personal chattel is the immediate occasion of the death of any reasonable creature, which is forfeited to the King, to be applied to pious uses, and distributed in alms by his high almoner, though formerly destined to a more superstitious purpose. It seems to have been originally designed, in the blind days of popery, as an expiation for the sins of such as were matched away by sudden death, and for that purpose ought properly to have been given to Holy Church, in the same manner as the apparel of a stranger, who was found dead, was applied to purchase masses for the good of his soul. And this may account for that rule of law, that no deodand is due, where an infant under the age of discretion is killed by a fall from a cart, or horse, or the like, not being in motion; whereas if an adult person falls from thence and is killed, the thing is certainly forfeited. 1 Bla. Com. 300.

This forfeiture is still part of the casual revenue of the crown, unless where lords of franchises are entitled to it by grant; for no man can prescind to it, or to the goods of self-murderers or other felons, or of out-laws, happening within his royalty. Post. 265.

It seems clearly settled, contrary to the former opinions, that a horse, or the like, killing an infant within the age of discretion, is as much forfeited as if he were of age. 1 Hawk. c. 26, s. 4.

Also it was anciently holden, that things fixed to a freehold, as the wheel of a mill, or a bell hanging in the steeple, may be deodands; but by the later resolutions they cannot, unless they were severed before the accident happened. 1 Hawk. c. 26, s. 5.

If a man riding on the shafts of a waggon fall to the ground and break his neck, the horses and waggon only are forfeited, and not the loading, because it no way contributed to his death; for which reason, where a thing not in motion causes a man's death, that part thereof only which is the immediate cause is forfeited. As where one climbing upon the wheel of a cart while it stands still, falls from it, and dies of the fall, the wheel only is forfeited. But if he had been killed by a bruise from one of the wheels being in motion, the loading also would have been forfeited, because the weight thereof made the hurt thereof the greater. And it is a general rule, that wherever the thing which is the occasion of a man's death is in motion at the time, not only that part thereof which immediately wounds him, but all things which move together with it, and help to make the wound more dangerous, are forfeited also. Id. s. 6. Thus a cart met a loaded waggon upon the road, and the cart endeavours to pass by the waggon was driven up a high bank and overturned, and threw a person that was in the cart just before the wheels of the wagon, and the wagon ran over him and killed him: it was resolved in this case that the cart, wagon, loading, and all the horses were deodands, because they all moved to the death. 1 Salk. 220.
Deodand.

No deodands are due for accidents which happen out of the jurisdiction of the common law, as where a man falls from a ship in salt water and is drowned; 1 Hawk. c. 26, s. 6; but if a man fall from a ship or boat in fresh water and be drowned, the vessel is forfeited. 1 Com. 302. If the party wounded die not of his wound within a year and day after he received it, there shall be nothing forfeited; for the law doth not look on such a wound as the cause of a man’s death, after which he lives so long. But if the party die within that time, the forfeiture shall have relation to the wound given, and cannot be saved by any alienation or other act whatsoever in the mean time. 1 Hawk. c. 26, s. 7.

However, nothing can be forfeited as deodand, nor seized as such, till it be found by the coroner’s inquest to have caused a man’s death. But after such inquisition, the sheriff is answerable for the value of it, and may levy the same on the town where it fell, and therefore the inquest ought to find the value of it. 1 Id. s. 8.

And if the coroner omits his duty in this case, the inquisition may be made by the commissioners of the gaol delivery, oyer and terminer, or of the peace. 1 Hale, 419.

After all, as this forfeiture seemeth to have been originally founded rather in the superstition of an age of ignorance than in the principles of sound reason and policy, it has not of late years met with great countenance in Westminster-hall; and when juries have taken upon them to use a judgment of discretion, not strictly within their province, for reducing the quantum of the forfeiture, the Court of King’s Bench have refused to interpose in favour of the crown or lord of the franchise. In the case of R. v. Rolfe, coroner of Kent, H. 5 Geo. II., the coroner’s inquest found that a man sitting on his wagon accidentally fell to the ground, and that the horses drawing the wagon forward one of the fore-wheels crushed his head, of which he instantly died, and then concluded that only the wheel, on which they set a small value, moved to his death. A motion was made, in behalf of Mr. Monpesson, lord of the franchise, for quashing this inquisition, upon affidavits tending to show that the cart and horses were equally instrumental, which indeed the finding of the jury did sufficiently imply. But the court was very clear that neither this court nor the coroner can oblige the jury to conclude otherwise than they have done, and would not suffer the affidavits for quashing the inquisition to be read. A like cause came on, M. 29 Geo. II., R. v. Drew, coroner of Middlesex. The coroner’s jury, upon view of the body of a person killed by the like accident, found that only one wheel of the wagon moved to the death. The court, on motion, in behalf of the lord of the franchise, granted a rule for showing cause why the inquisition should not be quashed for this misbehaviour of the jury. On the day for showing cause, the counsel for the lord of the franchise informed the court that upon looking into precedents he was satisfied he could not support the rule; and thereupon it was discharged. The case of R. v. Rolfe was mentioned on this occasion, and greatly relied on. 2 Bac. Abr. 294; 1 Com. 302.

These forfeitures are now generally mitigated to something very trifling.

Depositions. See Coroners, ante, p. 878; Examination, Vol. II. p. 97, 98; Evidence, Vol. II. p. 46, 53.
Disorderly House.

By the 25 Geo. II. c. 36, (made perpetual by 28 Geo. II. c. 18,) section 1, reciting, "the multitude of places of entertainment for the lower sort of people is another great cause of thefts and robberies, as they are thereto tempted to spend their small substance in violecent pleasures, and in consequence are put on unlawful methods of supplying their wants, and renewing their pleasures," in order therefore to prevent the said temptation to theft and robberies, and to correct as far as may be the habit of idleness, which have become too general over the whole kingdom, and is productive of much mischief and inconvenience:" it is enacted, "that from and after the 1st day of December, 1752, any house, room, garden, or other place kept for public dancing, music, or other public entertainment of the like kind, in the city of London and Westminster, or within twenty miles thereof, without a license had for that purpose from the last preceding Michaelmas quarter sessions of the peace, to be held for the county, city, riding, liberty or division in which such house, room, garden, or other place is situate, (whereby authorised and empowered to grant such licenses as they in their discretion shall think proper,) signified under the hands and seals of four of the justices there assembled, shall be deemed a disorderly house: and every such license shall be signed and sealed by the said justices in open court, and afterwards be publicly read by the clerk of the peace, together with the names of the justices subscribing the same; and no such license shall be granted at any adjourned sessions; nor shall any fee or reward be taken for any such license: and it shall and may be lawful to search for any constable, or other person, being thereunto authorised, by warrant under the hand and seal of one or more of his Majesty's justices of the peace of the county, city, riding, division, or liberty where such house or place shall be situate, to enter such house or place, and to seize every person who shall be found therein, in order that they may be dealt with according to law, and every person keeping such house, room, garden, or other place, without such license as aforesaid, shall forfeit the sum of 100l. to such person as shall sue for the same; and be otherwise punishable as the law directs in cases of disorderly houses."

Sect. 3 enacts, "that in order to give public notice where places are licensed pursuant to this act, there shall be affixed and kept up in some notorious place over the door or entrance of every such house, room, garden, or other place, kept for any of the said purposes, and so licensed as aforesaid, an inscription in large capital letters, in the words following, viz. LICENSED PURSUANT TO ACT OF PARLIAMENT OF THE TWENTY-FIFTH OF KING GEORGE THE SECOND; and that no such house, room, garden, or other place, kept for any of the said purposes, although licensed as aforesaid, shall be open for any of Disorderly House.

he said purposes before the hour of five in the afternoon; and that the affixing and keeping up of such inscription as aforesaid, and the said limitation or restriction in point of time, shall be inserted in, and made conditions of, every such license; and in case of any breach of either of the said conditions such license shall be forfeited, and shall be revoked by the justices of peace in their next general or quarter sessions, and shall not be renewed; nor shall any new license be granted to the same person or persons, or any other person on his or their or any of their behalf, or for their use or benefit, directly or indirectly, for keeping any such house, room, garden, or other place, for any of the purposes aforesaid.

Sect. 4 provides, "that nothing in this act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to the theatres royal in Drury Lane and Covent Garden, or the theatre commonly called the King’s Theatre in the Haymarket, or any of them; nor to such performances and public entertainments as are or shall be lawfully exercised and carried on under or by virtue of letters-patent, or license of the crown, or the license of the lord chamberlain of his Majesty’s household; any thing herein contained notwithstanding."

Sect. 5, reciting, "that in order to encourage prosecutions against persons keeping bawdy-houses, gaming-houses, or other disorderly houses," enacts, "that if any two inhabitants of any parish or place, paying scot and bearing lot therein, do give notice in writing to any constable (or other peace officer of the like nature, where there is no constable) of such parish or place, of any person keeping a bawdy-house, gaming-house, or any other disorderly house, in such parish or place, the constable, or such officer as aforesaid, receiving such notice, shall forthwith go with such inhabitants to one of his Majesty’s justices of the peace of the county, city, riding, division, or liberty in which such parish or place does lie; and shall, upon such inhabitants making oath before such justice, that they do believe the contents of such notice to be true, and entering into a recognizance in the penal sum of 20l. each, to give or produce material evidence against such person for such offence, enter into a recognizance in the penal sum of 30l., to prosecute with effect such person for such offence at the next general or quarter sessions of the peace, or at the next assizes to be held for the county in which such parish or place does lie, as to the said justice shall seem meet; and such constable or other officer shall be allowed all the reasonable expenses of such prosecution, to be ascertained by any two justices of the peace of the county, city, riding, division, or liberty where the offence shall have been committed, and shall be paid the same by the overseers of the poor of such parish or place; and in case such person shall be convicted of such offence, the overseers of the poor of such parish or place shall forthwith pay the sum of 10l. to each of such inhabitants; and in case such overseers shall neglect or refuse to pay to such constable or other officer such expenses of the prosecution as aforesaid, or shall neglect or refuse to pay, upon demand, the said sums of 10l. and 10l., such overseers, and each of them, shall forfeit to the person entitled to the same double the sum so refused or neglected to be paid."

Sect. 6. "That upon such constable or other officer entering into such recognizance to prosecute as aforesaid, the said justice of the peace shall forthwith make out his warrant to bring the person so accused of keeping a bawdy-house, gaming-house, or other disorderly house, before him, and shall bind him or her over to appear at such general or quarter session or assizes, there to answer to such bill of indictment as shall be found against him or her for such offence; and such justice shall and may, if in his discretion he thinks fit, likewise demand and take security for such person’s good behaviour in the mean time, and until such indictment shall be found, heard and determined, or be returned by the grand jury not to be a true bill."

The 58 Geo. III. c. 70, s. 7, after reciting the above provision of 25 Geo. II. c. 36, s. 5, and that it is expedient, that when any two inhabitants of any parish or place, paying scot and bearing lot therein, shall give notice in writing to any constable of such parish or place, of any person keeping a bawdy-house, gaming-house, or any other disorderly house in such parish or place, that the overseers of the poor of such parish or place shall have thereof, it is enacted, "that a copy of the notice (e) which shall be given shall also be served on or left at the place of such overseers of the poor of such parish or place, or one of them, and such overseer or overseer of the poor shall be summoned or have reasonable time to attend before such justice of the peace before whom such complaint shall have notice to attend; and if such overseers or overseer of the poor shall refuse to enter into such recognizance to prosecute such offender so constable is in and by the said act required to enter into, then it shall be necessary for, nor shall such constable be required to enter into such recognizance; but if such overseers or overseer of the poor shall neglect to give such justice on having such notice, or shall attend and shall declare refuse to enter into such recognizance to prosecute, then such constable enter into the same, and shall prosecute, and shall be entitled to be excepted to be allowed as in and by the said act is directed."
Disorderly House.

By the 25 Geo. II. c. 36, s. 7, "if any such constable shall neglect to enter into such notice, upon such notice, to go before any justice of the peace, or to enter into such recognizance, or shall be wilfully negligent in carrying on the prosecution, he shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of £20 to all such inhabitants so giving notice as aforesaid."

Sec. 8, reciting, that "by reason of the many subtle and cunning evasions of persons keeping bawdy-houses, gaming-houses, or disorderly houses, it is difficult to prove who is the real owner or keeper thereof, which means many notorious offenders have escaped punishment."

"that any person who shall at any time hereafter appear, act, or be held or herself as master or mistress, or as the person having the care, management, or management of any bawdy-house, gaming-house, or disorderly house, shall be deemed and taken to be the keeper thereof, and shall be liable to be prosecuted and punished as such, notwithstanding he shall not in fact be the real owner or keeper thereof."

Sec. 9 provides, "that upon any such prosecution against any person keeping a bawdy-house, gaming-house, or other disorderly house, any person may give evidence against the defendant or on behalf of the defendant such prosecution, notwithstanding his or her being an inhabitant or person of the said parish or place, or having entered into such recognizance as aforesaid."

Sec. 10 enacts, "that no indictment which shall at any time after the said 1st day of June be preferred against any person for keeping a bawdy-house, gaming-house, or other disorderly house, shall be removed by writ of certiorari into any other court; but such indictment shall be heard and finally determined, at the same general or quarter session or other court where such indictment shall have been preferred, (unless the court think proper, upon cause shown, to adjourn the same,) any such writ or allowance thereof notwithstanding."

Sec. 14. "That no action shall be brought by virtue of this act, sales in the same shall be commenced within the space of six calendar months after the offence committed."

Common gaming-houses are in general deemed nuisances. In an indictment for keeping one it seems to be sufficient to allege, that the defendant kept a common gaming-house. R. v. Rogier, 1 B. & C. 275; 2 D. & R. 431, S. C. In that case it was held, that the keeping a common gaming-house, and for lucre and gain unlawfully causing and procuring divers idle and evil-disposed persons to frequent and come to play together, at a game called rouge et noir, and permitting the said idle and evil-disposed persons to remain playing at the same game for divers large and excessive sums of money, is an indictable offence at common law.

(e) See form post, (No. 2).
Disorderly Houses.

It seems that it is an offence for which a feme covert may be indicted. 1 Russ. 299; R. v. Williams, Salt. 384.

Any number of persons may be included in the same indictment, for keeping different disorderly houses, stating that they "severally" kept, &c. such houses. Colyer's Statt. 416.

It seems that it is necessary to state where the house is situate, and the time, so as to make a particular statement of the offence, which is the keeping of the house. But particular facts need not be stated; and though the charge is thus general, yet, at the trial, evidence may be given of particular facts, and of the particular time of doing them.

It is not necessary to prove who frequents the house, for that may be impossible; but if any unknown persons are proved to be there, behaving disorderly, it is sufficient to support the indictment. 1 Russ. 502; and see J. Anson v. Stuart, 1 T. R. 754. See Colyer's Statutes, 416; and see further, post, Gaming, Vol. II.; Abuses, Nuisance, Vol. III.

-- THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C. D. late of, &c. and E. F. late of the same place, on, &c. and on divers other days and times between that day and the day of taking this inquisition, with force and arms, at, &c. aforesaid, and within twenty miles of the cities of London and Westminster, unlawfully did keep and maintain a certain room and place for public dancing and music, situate in the parish of, in the county of, aforesaid, and within twenty miles of the cities of London and Westminster, without a license had for that purpose, from the last preceding Michaelmas quarter sessions of the peace for the county aforesaid, signified under the hands and seals of four or more of the justices there assembled at such session, according to the directions of the statute in such case made and provided, to the great damage and common nuisance of all the lige subjects of our said Lord the King, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity. And the jurors aforesaid, on their oath aforesaid, further present, that the said C. D. and E. F. on, &c. aforesaid, with force and arms, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, unlawfully did keep and maintain, within twenty miles of the cities of London and Westminster, a certain room for public dancing without a license had for that purpose from the then last preceding Michaelmas quarter sessions of the peace, holden for the county of Middlesex, in which the said room is situate, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity. [Add another count like the second, using the word "music" instead of "dancing."] And the jurors aforesaid, on their oath aforesaid, do further present, that the said C. D. and E. F. with force and arms, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, on the day and year aforesaid, did keep and maintain a certain common ill-governed and disorderly room for public music and dancing, and in said room, for their own lucre and gain, did cause and procure divers persons, as well men as women of evil name and fame, and of dishonest and improper conversation and conduct, to frequent and come together, to the great damage and common nuisance of all the lige subjects of our Lord the King, and against the peace of our said Lord the King his crown and dignity.

- THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that A. B. constable of the parish [or township] of, in the county of, and E. F. and G. H. overseers of the poor of the said parish [or township], WE, J. J. and K. L. two of the inhabitants of the said parish [or township], paying rent and bearing lot therein, do give you and each of you notice, that J. O. of the said

Forms.

(No. 1.)

Indictment on 25 Geo. 3. c. 36, for keeping an unlicensed dancing house.

Second count.

Third count.

Fourth count, for a nuisance at common law.

-- To A. B. constable of the parish [or township] of, in the county of

We, J. J. and K. L. two of the inhabitants of the said parish [or township], paying rent and bearing lot therein, do give you and each of you notice, that J. O. of the said

Vol. I.

3 Q

Notice by two inhabitants to the constable and overseers, to ground a prose-Disorderly Houses.

The parish of [gentleman,] doth keep a gaming-house [or bawdy-house, or disorderly house, as the case is,] to wit, at a massage and premises in the parish aforesaid, and we do hereby require you, the said constable and overseers, forthwith to proceed before some one of His Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of to the intent that such proceedings may be had for the prosecution of the said J. O., for the said offence, as in and by the statute made and passed in the twenty-fifth year of the reign of the late King George the Second, intituled "An Act for the better preventing thefts and robberies, and for regulating places of public entertainments, and persons keeping disorderly houses," and also in and by a statute made and passed in the fifty-eighth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Third, and required.

Witness our hands, this ... day of "...", J. J.

K. L.

(No. 3.)

Affidavit of truth thereof before a justice.

J. J. and K. L. severally make oath and say, that they severally believe the contents of the notice hereunto annexed, (a copy of which they havecause to be served on A. B. constable of the parish [or township] of and also on E. P. and G. H. overseers of the poor of the said parish [or township], in the said county be true in substance and fact.

Sworn by, &c. this ... day of ... before me, J. P. ... Esquire, one of His Majesty's justices of the peace in ... and for the county of J. P.

(No. 4.)

Constable's or overseer's recognizance to prosecute.

BE it remembered, that on, &c. at ... in the said county, A. B. and ... constables of the parish [or township] aforesaid, [or E. P. and G. H. overseers of the poor of the said parish, or township,] personally came before me, J. P. ... Esquire, one of His Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, acknowledged himself [or themselves] to be indebted to our sovereign Lord the king the penal sum of pounds.

Whereas J. J. and K. L. two of the inhabitants of the said parish [or township], by given notice in writing to the above bounden A. B. constable of the said parish [or township, or E. P. and G. H. overseers of the poor of the said parish, or township,] J. O. of the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, [gentleman,] doth keep a gaming-house, [bawdy-house, or disorderly house,] in the said parish [or township] in the said county, and having severally made affidavit of their belief in the truth of the contents of the said notice, have also severally entered into a recognizance in the penal sum of pounds each before me, the said justice, on condition that they shall give or produce material evidence against the said I. O. for the said offence. Now the condition of the present recognizance is such, that if the above bounden A. B. [or E. P. and G. H.,] and shall prosecute with effect the said I. O. for the said offence, then this recognizance to be void, otherwise of force.

Acknowledged before me, J. P.

(No. 5.)

Warrant to apprehend the keeper of a disorderly house.

To the Constable of the parish [or township] of ... in the said county.

WHEREAS J. J. and K. L. two of the inhabitants of the parish [or township] of in the said county of paying rent and bearing lot within the said parish [or township,] have given notice in writing to A. B. constable of the said parish [or township,] and also to E. P. and G. H. overseers of the poor of the said parish [or township,] that I. O. of the said parish [or township,] [gentleman,] doth keep a gaming-house, [bawdy-house, or disorderly house,] in the said parish [or township,] and have also this day severally made affidavit before me one of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, that they believe the contents of the said notice to be true; and have also severally entered into a recognizance in the penal sum of pounds each, on condition to give or produce material evidence against the said I. O. These are therefore to command you forthwith to bring the said I. O. before us.

(a) See the acts, ante, 969.
Forms.

the day of next, at the hour of in the noon, at to be bound over to appear at the next [general quarter] sessions of the peace to be held in and for the said county, there to answer to such bill of indictment as shall be found against him for such offence. Given under my hand and seal, &c.

(No. 6.)

WHEREAS A. B. constable of the parish [or township] of in the to wit. said county, hath this day made oath before us, J. P. and L. M. Esquires, two of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, that he hath truly and truly and baken side expended the sum of in the prosecution of one I. O. for keeping a gaming-house, [havens, house, or other disorderly house], at aforesaid, in pursuance of the condition of the said A. B.'s recognisances: Now we the said justices do hereby ascertain and allow the said A. B. the said sum of as and for the reasonable expenses of the said prosecution, and we do hereby require the overseers of the poor of the said parish of forthwith to pay the said A. B. the said sum of.

In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands, at aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, this day of, &c. J. P.

L. M.

Dissenters.

I. Of Protestant Dissenters in general, 963.

[1 Eliz. c. 2; 23 Eliz. c. 1; 29 Eliz. c. 6; 35 Eliz. c. 1; 3 Jac. I. c. 4; 3 Jac. I. c. 5; 1 W. & M. c. 18; 52 Geo. III. c. 155; 53 Geo. III. c. 160.]

II. Dissenting Ministers, 967.

[1 W. & M. c. 18; 10 Ann. c. 2; 19 Geo. III. c. 44; 42 Geo. III. c. 90; 43 Geo. III. c. 10; 43 Geo. III. c. 96; 52 Geo. III. c. 155.]

III. Dissenting Schoolmasters, 971.

[23 Eliz. c. 1; 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 4; 19 Geo. III. c. 44.]

I. Of Protestant Dissenters in general.

By the 1 Eliz. c. 2, s. 14, every person not having reasonable excuse shall resort to his parish church or chapel, or upon reasonable let thereof, to some usual place where common prayer shall be used, on every Sunday and holiday; on pain of punishment by the censures of the church, or of forfeiting for every offence 12L. See post, Lord's Day, Vol. III. p. 657.

Every person above the age of sixteen, who shall not repair to some church or chapel, or usual place of common prayer, shall forfeit for every month 20L. And if he shall forbear for twelve months, he shall be bound to the good behaviour till he conform. 23 Eliz. c. 1.

Every offender in not repairing to church, having been once convicted, shall, without any other indictment or conviction, pay half-yearly into the exchequer 20L. for every month afterwards, until he conform; which, if he shall omit to do, the King may seize all his goods, and two parts of his lands. 29 Eliz. c. 6.

And the King may refuse the 20L. a month, and take two parts of the land, at his option. 3 Jac. I. c. 4.

No recusant in not repairing to church, being convicted thereof, shall enjoy any public office, or shall practise law or physic, or be executor, administrator, or guardian. 3 Jac. I. c. 5.

And if any person refusing to repair to church shall be present at any assembly, meeting, or conventicle, under pretence of any exercise of religion, he shall be imprisoned till he conform; and if he shall not conform in three Dissenters.

Privilege given by the act of toleration.

Places of meeting to be certified.

Lutherans.

All places of religious worship to be certified and registered.

Penalty for permitting meetings in places not duly certified.

Months, he shall abjure the realm; which if he shall refuse to do, or the abjuration shall not go, or shall return without license, he shall be guilty of felony without benefit of clergy. (a) And whether he shall abjure or not, he shall forfeit his goods, and shall forfeit his lands during life. 35 Eliz. c. 1.

Several statutes relating to this subject were repealed at the time of the Revolution, and the 1 Will. III. c. 18, s. 1, was passed, (commonly called the Act of Toleration, declared by stat. 19 Geo. III. c. 44, to be a public act,) and which enacts that neither the statutes aforesaid nor any other made against papists and popish recusants, (except stat. 25 Car. II. c. 2, concerning qualifying for offices, and 32 Car. II. st. 2, c. 1, containing the declination against popery,) shall extend to any person dissenting from the church of England, who shall, at the general sessions of the peace to be held for the county or place where such person shall live, take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy, and make and subscribe the said declaration against popery, at which the court shall keep a register, and no officer shall take any fee above 6d. for registering the same, nor that more than once, and 6d. for a certificate thereof signed by such officer.

Provided that no congregation or assembly for religious worship shall be permitted until the place of meeting be certified to the bishop of the diocese, or to the archdeacon of the archdeaconry, or to the justices of the peace, the general or quarter sessions of the county, city or place. And the register or clerk of the peace shall register or record the same, and give certificate thereof to any who shall demand the same; for which no greater fee shall be taken than 6d. And provided, that during the time of meeting, the door shall not be locked, barred or bolted. Sect. 19 & 5.

A congregation of Lutherans, using the German language in their service, are within the protection of the above act of William. R. v. Hake, Peri. 142; 5 T. R. 542, S. C.

The stat. 52 Geo. III. c. 155, s. 1, repeals certain old statutes, and in sect. 2 enacts, that no congregation or assembly for religious worship of Protestants, (at which there shall be present more than twenty persons besides the immediate family and servants of the person in whose house or room whose premises such meeting, congregation, or assembly shall be had,) shall be permitted or allowed, unless and until the place of such meeting. if the same shall not have been duly certified and registered under any former act or acts of parliament relating to registering places of religious worship, shall have been or shall be certified to the bishop of the diocese, or to the archdeacon of the archdeaconry, or to the justices of the peace at the general or quarter sessions of the peace for the county, riding, division, city, town, or place in which such meeting shall be held; and all pieces of meeting which shall be so certified to the bishop's or archdeacon's court shall be retained by such court once in each year to the quarter sessions of the county, riding, division, city, town or place, and all places of meeting which shall be so certified to the quarter sessions of the peace shall be also returned once in each year to the bishop or archdeacon; and all such places shall be registered in the said bishop's or archdeacon's court respectively, and recorded at the said general or quarter sessions; the registrar or clerk of the peace respectively is hereby required to register and record the same; and the bishop or registrar, or clerk of the peace, to whom any such place of meeting shall be certified under this act, shall give a certificate thereof to such person or persons as shall request or demand the same, for which there shall be no greater fee nor reward taken than 2s. 6d.; and every person who shall knowingly permit or suffer any such congregation or assembly as aforesaid to meet in any place occupied by him, until the same shall have been so certified as aforesaid, shall forfeit for every time any such congregation or assembly shall meet contrary to the provisions of this act, a sum not exceeding 20s. or less than 20s., at the discretion of the justices who shall convict for such offence. (b)

(a) The benefit of clergy is now abolished. See ante, Clergy, Benefit of.
(b) R. v. Hall, 1 T. R. 320. This was a conviction on stat. 32 Car. II. c. 1.
Of Protestant Dissenters in general.

And by sect. 11 of the same statute, no meeting, assembly, or congregation of persons for religious worship shall be had in any place with the door bolted

Door not to be barred, &c.

repealed by stat. 52 Geo. III. c. 155, s. 1. The following is the form of such conviction.

"Parts of Kent, in ) BE it remembered, that on the 2d day of March, in the the county of Lincoln, 46th year, &c. at New Sleaford, in the parts of K. aforesaid, &c. Robert Benson, Clerk, came before me Richard Brown, Esquire, one of the justices, &c. and gave me the said justice to understand and be informed that one Samuel Hall, carpenter, being the occupier of a certain dwelling-house, situate in the parish of Heckington, in the parts and county aforesaid, did, on the 26th of February now last past, at the parish of Heckington aforesaid, wittingly and willingly suffer a meeting and unlawful assembly of divers persons to be held in his said dwelling-house, for the exercise of religious worship, in other manner than according to the liturgy and practice of the Church of England, between the hours of one and eight o'clock in the afternoon of the same day; at which meeting and unlawful assembly, five persons and more were assembled together over and above those of the said S. Hall's household; (the dwelling-house in which the said meeting and unlawful assembly was held not being certified to the bishop of the diocese, or to the archdeacon of that archdeaconry, or to the justices of the peace at their general or quarter sessions of the peace for the parts and county in which the said meeting was held, nor registered in the said bishop's or archdeanry register, against the form of the statutes in such case made and provided, whereby the said S. Hall hath forfeited the sum of 20l. to be distributed, &c. And now, on the 6th day of the said month of March, in the forty-sixth year, &c. at, &c. came the said S. Hall before me the said justice, in pursuance of my summons, &c. when the said information, together with the examinations in writing of Joseph Wilkinson and Joseph Chamberlain, both of H. aforesaid, two credible witnesses, taken upon their respective corporal oaths before me the said justice, being openly read, which said examinations set forth, that on the said 26th day of February, &c. said J. Wilkinson and J. Chamberlain went to the dwelling-house of the said S. Hall, at H. aforesaid, and found a great number of people assembled at the dwelling-house of the said S. Hall, and that one Joseph Merryweather was preaching to the said assembly; that the said dwelling-house at which the said meeting and assembly was held, was not certified or registered as by law required, and that they also saw there Peter Jarvis, John Taylor, William Taylor, and Robert Bowles, all of the said parish of H. attending the said meeting. And the said S. Hall being now here required by me to answer the premises, he the said S. Hall pleaded and confesseth the offence charged upon him in and by the said information. Whereas, &c. he hath forfeited 20l.

Several objections were taken to this conviction: 1st, The information is not in the present tense. It is stated that the informer came before the justice and gave him to understand, &c. 2dly, That the evidence was not given in the presence of the defendant, which it ought to have been; the defendant should have been called on to plead before the evidence was received; but the justice read over improper evidence, which should not have been given, and then called on the defendant to answer the premises, by which means he was confounded and induced to plead guilty. 3dly, Though this is charged as an offence against statute 52 Car. II. only, yet it concludes contrary to the statutes, which is fatal. 4thly, The information does not contain a charge within the stat. 22 Car. II. c. 1, upon which the justice prosecutes to convict; and though it profess to set out an offence against that statute, yet it is not confined to that statute only, but negatives several exceptions in 1 Will.
c. 18. Therefore, though it was not necessary to negative any of the exceptions under the latter act, yet having undertaken so to do, the omission of any one is fatal, and it is not stated, that he did not take the oaths, &c. which is required by the third section of that statute. The court said, that however inclined they were to listen to trivial objections to such prosecutions, yet none of the present were sufficient in point of law. As to the first, the words objected to were better in the past than present tense, because they referred to a time past, (viz.) the time of making the information. The second is cured by the defendant pleading guilty. As to the third and fourth, this is a conviction on 22 Car. II.; therefore the exceptions in 1 Will.
c. 18, need not have been negatived, and may be rejected as surplusage; for if a subsequent statute make any exception to a former one, it is incumbent on the defendant to show by way of defence that he comes within such exception. And, besides, the 13th section of 22 Car. II. directs that that act shall be construed most largely and beneficially for the suppressing of conventicles, &c. and that no proceedings thereupon shall be impeached for want of form. Conviction affirmed.
or barred, or otherwise fastened, so as to prevent any person entering during the time of any such meeting, &c. and the person teaching or presiding at any such meeting, assembly or congregation, shall forfeit for every time any such meeting, &c. shall be held with the doors locked, &c. as aforesaid, not exceeding 20l. nor less than 40l., at the discretion of the judge convicting for such offence.

By the 1 W. & M. c. 18, s. 18, any person who shall willingly, and of purpose maliciously or contemptuously, come into any cathedral, or parochial church, chapel, or other congregation permitted by this act, and disturb the same, or misuse any preacher or teacher, shall, on proof thereof before any justice by two witnesses, find two sureties in 50l.; and in default of such sureties shall be committed to prison till the next sessions; and on conviction at such sessions shall forfeit 20l. to the King.

On an indictment on this act, it is no defence that the violence was committed in the defendant's asserting his right to the clerk's reading desk. R v. Hube, Peake, 132; 5 T. R. 542.

It need not be proved that the minister has taken the toleration oath.

R v. Hube and others, 5 T. R. 542, the defendants were indicted on the 1 W. & M. c. 18, and the indictment was by certiorari removed by the prosecutor into the King's Bench before verdict. And it was moved that the penalty of 20l. was to be paid upon conviction of the said offence at the said general or quarter sessions, the statute intended to confine the cognizance of the offence to the sessions, and that the power to remove by certiorari was therefore taken away by necessary implications. But the court held that the certiorari was not taken away by this statute, and that the indictment was therefore well removed.

By stat. 52 Geo. III. c. 155, s. 12, "if any person or persons, at any time after the passing of this act, do and shall wilfully and maliciously or contemptuously disquiet or disturb any meeting, assembly, or congregation of persons assembled for religious worship, permitted or authorized by this act, or any former act or acts of parliament, or shall in any way disturb, molest or misuse any preacher, teacher, or person officiating at such meeting, assembly or congregation, or any person or persons there assembled, such person or persons so offending, upon proof thereof before any justice of the peace by two or more credible witnesses, shall find two sureties to be bound by recognizances in the penal sum of 50l. to answer for such offence, and in default of such sureties shall be committed to prison, there to remain till the next general or quarter sessions; and upon conviction of the said offence, at the said general or quarter sessions, shall suffer the pain and penalty of 40l."

In the case of R v. Wadley, 4 M. & S. 506, it was held, that an indictment upon stat. 52 Geo. III. c. 155, s. 12, may be removed into the Court of King's Bench by certiorari before trial.

It seems that the 53 Geo. III. does not alter the common law with respect to impugning the doctrine of the Trinity, but only removes the penalties imposed on persons denying such doctrines by 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 32, and extends to such persons the benefits conferred on all other Protestant dissenters by 1 Will. & Mary, sess. 1, c. 18. R v. Waddington, 1 B. & Cen. 26.

By stat. 1 Will. & Mary, c. 18, s. 7, if any person dissenting from the church of England as aforesaid shall be appointed to the office of high constable, petty constable, churchwarden, overseer of the poor, or any other parochial or ward office, and shall scruple, to take upon him the office, in regard of the oaths or otherwise, he may execute the same by a sufficient deputy, that shall comply with the laws on this behalf: provided that the deputy be allowed and approved by such person, and in such manner, as such officer should by law have been allowed and approved.

But no congregation shall be permitted by this act until the place of the meeting shall be certified to the bishop or the archdeacon, or the justices at the sessions for the place in which, &c. and registered in the bishop's or archdeacon's court, or recorded at the session. Sect. 19.

The provisions contained in the act of Will. & Mary, and in the 9 & 10
II.]

Dissenting Ministers.

Will. III. respecting the denial of the Trinity, are repealed by the stat. 53 Geo. III. c. 160.

In the case of Lewis v. Hammond, 2 B. & A. 206, where a turnpike act exempted persons from toll “in going to and returning from their proper parochial church, chapel, or other place of religious worship on Sundays;” it was held that the word “parochial” extended over the whole clause; and therefore that a disenter was not within the exemption in going to and returning from his proper place of religious worship, situate out of the parish in which he resided. And see post, Highways, Vol. III. p. 187, 188.

II. Dissenting Ministers.

The three statutes, viz. 17 Car. II. c. 2, 22 Car. II. c. 1, and 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 1, relating to the disabilities of dissenting ministers before the revolution, are repealed by stat. 52 Geo. III. c. 155, s. 1.

By stat. 19 Geo. III. c. 44, s. 1, every person dissenting from the church of England, in holy orders, or pretended holy orders, or pretending to holy orders, being a preacher or teacher of any congregation of dissenting Protestants, who shall take the oaths and make and subscribe the declaration against popery required by the 1 Will. & Mary, c. 18, to be taken, made, and subscribed by Protestant dissenting ministers, and shall also make and subscribe the declaration in the words following; viz. I, A. B., do solemnly declare, in the presence of Almighty God, that I am a Christian and a Protestant, and as such I believe that the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament, as commonly received among Protestant churches, do contain the revealed will of God; and that I do receive the same as the rule of my doctrine and practice; shall be entitled to all the benefits of the said act of 1 Will. & Mary, c. 18, and 10 Ann. c. 2. And the justices at the sessions where any Protestant dissenting minister shall live, are required to tender and administer the said last-mentioned declaration to such minister, upon his offering himself to make and subscribe the same, and thereof to keep a register; for the registering of which he shall pay 6d. to the officer of the court, and no more; and 6d. for a certificate thereof signed by such officer.

By stat. 10 Ann. c. 2, s. 9, any preacher or teacher of any congregation of dissenting Protestants, duly qualified according to the act of Will. & Mary, shall be allowed to officiate in any congregation, although the same be not in the county where he was so qualified, provided that the place of meeting hath been duly certified and registered; and such teacher or preacher shall, if required, produce a certificate of his having so qualified himself, under the hand of the clerk of the peace where he was qualified, and shall also, before any justice of such county or place where he shall so officiate, make and subscribe such declaration, and take such oaths as aforesaid, if required.

And every such teacher and preacher, that is a minister, preacher, or teacher of a congregation, having taken the oaths and subscribed as aforesaid, shall from thenceforth be exempted from serving on any jury, or from being chosen or appointed to bear the office of churchwarden, overseer of the poor, or any other parochial or ward office, or other offices, in any hundred of any shire, city, town, parish, division, orwapentake, by stats. 1 Will. & Mary, c. 18, s. 11, and 19 Geo. III. c. 44, s. 1; and from serving in the militia, either personally or by substitute, if he be a licensed teacher of any separate congregation, and has been licensed twelve months previous to the yearly general meeting appointed to be held in October, &c. by stats. 42 Geo. III. c. 90, and 43 Geo. III. c. 10; and from serving under the Army of Reserve Act, “if he be a licensed teacher of any separate congregation in holy orders, or pretended holy orders, and not carrying on any other trade, or exercising any other occupation for his livelihood, except that of a schoolmaster,” by 43 Geo. III. c. 96, s. 12.

Any other Parochial Offices.—Stat. 1 Will. & Mary, c. 18, s. 11, extends to all parish offices, whether they existed at that time, or were created since Protestant dissenting ministers who shall take the oaths, &c. required by the Toleration Act, &c. shall be entitled to all the benefit of that statute and 10 Ann. c. 2.

Being qualified may officiate in any county.

Exposed from offices.
Dissenters.

it was decided that a Baptist preacher, qualified according to that act, was exempted from serving the office of one of the collectors of the rates for rebuilding St. Olave's church in Southwark, under stat. 10 Geo. III. c. 18. And it was also ruled that the party was equally entitled to his exemption, though he was engaged in trade.

R. v. The Justices of Denbighshire, 14 East, 285; and see 15 East, 575. 589. A motion was made upon stat. 1 Will. & Mary, c. 18, s. 8, (the Toleration Act,) for a mandamus to the justices of Denbigh at their next sessions, to admit David Lewis to take the oaths and make and subscribe the declaration required under that statute. The motion was made upon an affidavit of David Lewis, in which he described himself as a Protestant dissenter, who 'preaches to several congregations of Protestant dissenters;' stating the circumstances of his application to the justices at their last sessions, and of his tendering himself to take the oaths and make and subscribe the declaration mentioned in the statute; that the chairman of the court required of him a certificate of his having a separate congregation, and that upon his saying he had no separate congregation, the sessions refused to administer the oath to him, &c. After the words of the Toleration Act had been stated, Lord Ellenborough, C. J. inquired whether the person applying now swore to the fact of his being the teacher or preacher of any separate congregation of Protestant dissenters? and being answered in the negative, Bayley, J. asked if he were not the teacher or preacher of any certain congregation, under what description in the 5th clause he brought himself? To which it was answered, as a teacher or preacher of several congregations of Protestant dissenters, though not attached to any particular separate congregation of his own. Lord Ellenborough, C. J. The chairman of the sessions might have been wrong in asking this person for a certificate of his having a separate congregation; but still, to entitle himself to succeed in his application, he ought to show himself to be the acknowledged teacher or preacher of some particular congregation, or to bring himself within some other qualifying description in the act, in order to be entitled to the exemption which he seeks. Groot. J. agreed. Le Blanc, J. If the party be in holy orders, or pretend to holy orders, though he have no particular congregation of his own, he would come within the 4th section; but if he applied merely as a teacher or preacher, not pretending to holy orders, he must state himself to be the teacher or preacher of some particular congregation of Protestant dissenters by whom he is recognised in that character. Bayley, J. This clause of the Toleration Act meant to relieve persons who had Protestant dissenting congregations severally attached to them at the time they made the application to the sessions, from the penalties imposed by former acts, for officiating as preachers of such congregations. Rule refused.

This decision occasioned the passing of the following act.

By the 52 Geo. III. c. 155, s. 3, "Every person who shall teach or preach in any congregation or assembly as in this act aforesaid, (ante, 964,) in any place, without the consent of the occupier thereof, shall forfeit for every such offence any sum not exceeding 30l. nor less than 4os. at the discretion of the justices who shall convict for such offence."

Sect. 4. "That from and after the passing of this act, every person who shall teach or preach at, or officiate in, or shall resort to any congregation or congregations, assembly or assemblies, for religious worship of Protestants, whose place of meeting shall be duly certified according to the provisions of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the certifying and registering of places of religious worship, shall be exempt from all such pains and penalties under any act or acts of parliament relating to religious worship, as any person who shall have taken the oaths and made declaration prescribed by or mentioned in an act made in the first year of King William and Queen Mary, intituled 'An Act for enacting their Majesties' Protestant subjects dissenting from the churches of England from the penalties of certain laws,' or any act amending the said post, tit. Oaths, Vol. III.) is by law exempt, as fully and effectually as such pains and penalties, and all other acts enforcing the
Dissenting Ministers.

were recited in this act, and such exemptions as aforesaid were severally and separately enacted in relation thereto."

Sect. 5. "That every person not having taken the oaths and subscribed the declaration hereinafter specified, who shall preach or teach at any place of religious worship certified in pursuance of the directions of this act, shall, when thereto required by any one justice of the peace, by any writing under his hand or signed by him, take, and make, and subscribe in the presence of such justice of the peace, the oaths and declarations specified and contained in an act passed in the nineteenth year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Third, intituled 'An Act for the further relief of Protestant dissenting ministers and schoolmasters,' (see post, @§§§, Vol. III.); and no such person who, upon being so required to take such oaths and make such declaration as aforesaid, shall refuse to attend the justice requiring the same, or to take and make and subscribe such oaths and declaration as aforesaid, shall be thereafter permitted or allowed to teach or preach in any such congregation or assembly for religious worship, until he shall have taken such oaths, and made such declaration as aforesaid, on pain of forfeiting, for every time he shall so teach or preach, any sum not exceeding ten pounds nor less than ten shillings, at the discretion of the justice convicting for such offence."

Sect. 6. "That no person shall be required by any justice of the peace to go to any greater distance than five miles from his own home, or from the place where he shall be residing at the time of such requisition, for the purpose of taking such oaths as aforesaid."

Sect. 7. "That it shall be lawful for any of his Majesty's Protestant subjects to appear before any one justice of the peace, and to produce to such justice of the peace a printed or written copy of the said oaths and declaration, and to require such justice to administer such oaths and to tender such declaration to be made, taken, and subscribed by such person; and thereupon it shall be lawful for such justice, and he is hereby authorised and required to administer such oaths, and to tender such declaration, to the person requiring to take and make and subscribe the same; and such person shall take and make and subscribe such oaths and declaration in the presence of such justice accordingly; and such justice shall attest the same to be sworn before him, and shall transmit or deliver the same to the clerk of the peace for the county, riding, division, city, town, or place for which he shall act as such justice of the peace, before or at the next general or quarter sessions of the peace for such county, riding, division, city, town, or place."

Sect. 8. "That every justice of the peace before whom any person shall make and take and subscribe such oaths and declaration as aforesaid, shall forthwith give to the person having taken, made, and subscribed such oaths and declaration, a certificate thereof under the hand of such justice, in the form following; that is to say,

"I A. B. one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the county, [riding, division, city or town, or place, as the case may be] of do hereby certify, that C. D. of, &c. [describing the christian and surname and place of abode of the party.] did this day appear before me, and did make and take and subscribe the several oaths and declaration specified in an act made in the fifty-second year of the reign of King George the Third, intituled, [set forth the title of this act. (a)] Witness my hand, this day of one thousand eight hundred and"

"And for the making and signing of which certificate, where the said oaths and declaration are taken and made on the requisition of the party taking and making the same, such justice shall be entitled to demand and have a fee of two shillings and sixpence, and no more: and such certificate shall be conclusive evidence that the party named therein has made and taken the oaths and subscribed the declaration in manner required by this act."

Sect. 9. "That every person who shall teach or preach in any such congregation or assembly, or congregations or assemblies as aforesaid, who shall employ himself solely in the duties of a teacher or preacher, and not follow

Exemption from civil and military offices and duties.

(a) "An Act to repeal certain acts, and amend other acts relating to religious worship and assemblies, and persons teaching or preaching therein."
that act. And therefore, in the case of Kenward v. Knowles, C. P. Will. 463.

it was decided that a baptist preacher, qualified according to that act, was exempted from serving the office of one of the collectors of the rates for rebuilding St. Olave's church in Southwark, under stat. 10 Geo. III. c.18.

And it was also ruled that the party was equally entitled to his exemption, though he was engaged in trade.

R. v. The Justices of Denbighshire, 14 East, 285; and see 15 East, 576.

589. A motion was made upon stat. 1 Will. & Mary, c. 18, s. 8, (the Toleration Act,) for a mandamus to the justices of Denbigh at their next sessions.

to admit David Lewis to take the oaths and make and subscribe the declaration required under that statute. The motion was made upon an affidavit of David Lewis, in which he described himself as "a Protestant dissenter," who "preaches to several congregations of Protestant dissenters;" stating the circumstances of his application to the justices at their last sessions, and of his tendering himself to take the oaths and make and subscribe the declaration mentioned in the statute; that the chairman of the court required of him a certificate of his having a separate congregation, and that upon his saying he had no separate congregation, the sessions refused to admit the oath to him, &c.

After the words of the Toleration Act had been stated, Lord Ellenborough, C. J. inquired whether the person applying now swore to the fact of his being the teacher or preacher of any separate congregation of Protestant dissenters? and being answered in the negative, Bayley, J. asked if he were not the teacher or preacher of any certain congregation, under what description in the 8th clause he brought himself? To which it was answered, as a teacher or preacher of several congregations of Protestant dissenters, though not attached to any particular separate congregation of his own.

Lord Ellenborough, C. J. The chairman of the sessions might have been wrong in asking this person for a certificate of his having a separate congregation; but still, to entitle himself to succeed in his application, he ought to show himself to be the acknowledged teacher or preacher of some particular congregation, or to bring himself within some other qualifying description in the act, in order to be entitled to the exemption which he seeks. Gresw.

J. agreed. Le Blanc, J. If the party be in holy orders, or pretend to holy orders, though he have no particular congregation of his own, he would come within the 8th section; but if he applied merely as a teacher or preacher, not pretending to holy orders, he must state himself to be the teacher or preacher of some particular congregation of Protestant dissenters by whom he is recognised in that character. Bayley, J. This clause of the Toleration Act meant to relieve persons who had Protestant dissenting congregations severally attached to them at the time they made the application to the sessions, from the penalties imposed by former acts, for officiating as preachers of such congregations. Rule refused.

This decision occasioned the passing of the following act.

By the 52 Geo. III. c. 155, s. 3, "every person who shall teach or preach in any congregation or assembly as in this act aforesaid, (ante, 964.) in any place, without the consent of the occupier thereof, shall forfeit for every such offence any sum not exceeding 30l. nor less than 40s. at the discretion of the justices who shall convict for such offence."

Sect. 4. "That from and after the passing of this act, every person who shall teach or preach at, or officiate in, or shall resort to any congregation or congregations, assembly or assemblies, for religious worship of Protestants, whose place of meeting shall be duly certified according to the provisions of this act, or any other act or acts of parliament relating to the certifying and registering of places of religious worship, shall be exempt from all such pains and penalties under any act or acts of parliament relating to religious worship, as any person who shall have taken the oaths and made the declaration prescribed by or mentioned in an act made in the first year of the reign of King William and Queen Mary, intituled 'An Act for exempting their Majesties' Protestant subjects dissenting from the church of England, from the penalties of certain laws,' or any act amending the said act, (see post, tit. Oaths, Vol. III.) is by law exempt, as fully and effectually as if all such pains and penalties, and the several acts enforcing the same, Dissenting Ministers.

were recited in this act, and such exemptions as aforesaid were severally and separately enacted in relation thereto.

Sect. 5. "That every person not having taken the oaths and subscribed the declaration hereinafter specified, who shall preach or teach at any place of religious worship certified in pursuance of the directions of this act, shall, when thereto required by any one justice of the peace, by any writing under his hand or signed by him, take, and make, and subscribe in the presence of such justice of the peace, the oaths and declarations specified and contained in an act passed in the nineteenth year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Third, intituled 'An Act for the further relief of Protestant dissenting ministers and schoolmasters,' (see post, Oaths, Vol. III.); and no such person who, upon being so required to take such oaths and make such declaration as aforesaid, shall refuse to attend the justice requiring the same, or to take and make and subscribe such oaths and declaration as aforesaid, shall be thereafter permitted or allowed to teach or preach in any such congregation or assembly for religious worship, until he shall have taken such oaths, and made such declaration as aforesaid, on pain of forfeiting, for every time he shall so teach or preach, any sum not exceeding ten pounds nor less than ten shillings, at the discretion of the justice convicting for such offence."

Sect. 6. "That no person shall be required by any justice of the peace to go to any greater distance than five miles from his own home, or from the place where he shall be residing at the time of such requisition, for the purpose of taking such oaths as aforesaid."

Sect. 7. "That it shall be lawful for any of his Majesty's Protestant subjects to appear before any one justice of the peace, and to produce to such justice of the peace a printed or written copy of the said oaths and declaration, and to require such justice to administer such oaths and to tender such declaration to be made, taken, and subscribed by such person; and thereupon it shall be lawful for such justice, and he is hereby authorised and required to administer such oaths, and to tender such declaration, to the person requiring to take and make and subscribe the same; and such person shall take and make and subscribe such oaths and declaration in the presence of such justice accordingly; and such justice shall attest the same to be sworn before him, and shall transmit or deliver the same to the clerk of the peace for the county, riding, division, city, town, or place for which he shall act as such justice of the peace, before or at the next general or quarterly sessions of the peace for such county, riding, division, city, town, or place."

Sect. 8. "That every justice of the peace before whom any person shall make and take and subscribe such oaths and declaration as aforesaid, shall forthwith give to the person having taken, made, and subscribed such oaths and declaration, a certificate thereof under the hand of such justice, in the form following; that is to say,

"I A. B. one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the county, [riding, division, city or town, or place, as the case may be, of do hereby certify, that C. D. of, &c. [describing the christian and surname and place of abode of the party] did this day appear before me, and did make and take and subscribe the several oaths and declaration specified in an act made in the fifty-second year of the reign of King George the Third, intituled, [set forth the title of this act. (a)] Witness my hand, this day of one thousand eight hundred and

"And for the making and signing of which certificate, where the said oaths and declaration are taken and made on the requisition of the party taking and making the same, such justice shall be entitled to demand and have a fee of two shillings and sixpence, and no more: and such certificate shall be conclusive evidence that the party named therein has made and taken the oaths and subscribed the declaration in manner required by this act."

Sect. 9. "That every person who shall teach or preach in any such congregation or assembly, or congregations or assemblies as aforesaid, who shall employ himself solely in the duties of a teacher or preacher, and not follow

(a) "An Act to repeal certain acts, and amend other acts relating to religious worship and assemblies, and persons teaching or preaching therein."
Dissenters.

or engage in any trade or business, or other profession, occupation, or employment, for his livelihood, except that of a schoolmaster, and who shall produce a certificate of some justice of the peace, of his having taken and subscribed the oaths and declaration aforesaid, shall be exempt from the civil services and offices specified in the said recited act passed in the first year of King William and Queen Mary, and from being bailees to serve and from serving in the militia or local militia of any county, town, parish, or place in any part of the United Kingdom."

Sect. 10. "That every person who shall produce any false or untrue certificate or paper, as and for a true certificate of his having taken and subscribed the declaration by this act required, for the purpose of claiming any exemption from civil or military duties as aforesaid, under the provisions of this or any other act or acts of parliament, shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of 50L.; which penalty may be recovered by suit to the use of any person who will sue for the same by any action of debt, bill, plaint, or information in any of his Majesty's courts of record at Westminster, or the courts of great sessions in Wales, (a) or the courts of crown palatine of Chester, Lancaster, and Durham, (as the case shall require) wherein no esoin, privilege, protection, or wager of law, or more than one imprisonment shall be allowed."

Sect. 13. "That nothing in this act contained shall affect or be construed to affect the celebration of divine service according to the rites and ceremonies of the united church of England and Ireland, by ministers of the said church, in any place hitherto used for such purpose, or being now or hereafter duly consecrated or licensed by any archbishop or bishop, or any person lawfully authorized to consecrate or license the same, or to affect the jurisdiction of the archbishops or bishops, or other persons exercising like authority in the church of the United Kingdom over the said church according to the rules and discipline of the same, and to the laws and statutes of the realm; but such jurisdiction shall remain and continue as if this act had not passed."

Sect. 14. "That nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to the people usually called Quakers, nor to any meetings or assemblies for religious worship held or convened by such persons; or in any manner to alter or repeal or affect any act, other than and except the act passed in the reign of King Charles the Second hereinafter repealed relating to the people called Quakers, or relating to any assemblies or meetings for religious worship held by them."

Sect. 15. "That every person guilty of any offence, for which any pecuniary penalty or forfeiture is imposed by this act, in respect of which special provision is made, shall and may be convicted thereof by information upon the oath of any one or more credible witness or witnesses before any two or more justices of the peace acting in and for the county, riding, city, or place wherein such offence shall be committed; and that all and every the pecuniary penalties and forfeitures which shall be incurred or become payable for any offence or offences against this act, shall and may be levied by distress under the hand and seal, or hands and seals, of two justices of the peace for the county, riding, city, or place in which any such offence or offences was or were committed, or where the forfeiture or forfeitures was or were incurred, and shall when levied be paid one moiety to the informer, and the other moiety to the poor of the parish in which the offence was committed; and in case of no sufficient distress whereby to levy the penalties, or any or either of them imposed by this act, it shall and may be lawful for any such justices respectively, before whom the offender or offenders shall be convicted, to commit such offender to prison for such time not exceeding three months, as the said justices in their discretion shall think fit."

Sect. 16. "That in case any person or persons who shall hereafter be convicted of any of the offences punishable by this act, shall conceive him, her, or themselves to be aggrieved by such conviction, then and in every such case (a) The Welsh jurisdiction is abolished by 1 Will. IV. c. 76, post. 8 Wals. Vol V.
Dissenting Ministers.

Case it shall and may be lawful for such person or persons respectively, and he, she, or they shall or may appeal to the general or quarter sessions of the peace held next after such conviction in and for the county, city, or place, giving unto the justices before whom such conviction shall be made, notice in writing within eight days after any such conviction, of his, her, or their intention to prefer such appeal; and the said justices in their said general or quarter sessions shall and may, and they are hereby authorised and empowered to proceed to the hearing and determination of the matter of such appeal, and to make such order therein, and to award such costs to be paid by and to either party, not exceeding 40l. as they in their discretion shall think fit."

Sect. 17. "That no penalty or forfeiture shall be recoverable under this act, unless the same shall be sued for, or the offence in respect of which the same is imposed is prosecuted before the justices of the peace or quarter sessions, within six months after the offence shall have been committed; and no person who shall suffer any imprisonment for nonpayment of any penalty shall thereafter be liable to the payment of such penalty or forfeiture."

Sect. 18. "That if any action or suit shall be brought or commenced against any person or persons for any thing done in pursuance of this act, that every such action or suit shall be commenced within three months next after the fact committed, and not afterwards, and shall be laid and brought in the county wherein the cause or alleged cause of action shall have accrued, and not elsewhere; and the defendant or defendants in such action or suit may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence on any trial to be had thereupon, and that the same was done in pursuance and by authority of this act; and if it shall appear so to be done, or if any such action or suit shall be brought after the time so limited for bringing the same, or shall be brought in any other county, city, or place, that then and in such case the jury shall find for such defendant or defendants; and upon such verdict, or if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall become nonsuited, or discontinue his, her, or their action or actions, or if a verdict shall pass against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, or if upon demurrer, judgment shall be given against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, the defendant or defendants shall have and may recover treble costs, and have the like remedy for the same, as any defendant or defendants hath or have for costs of suit in other cases by law."

The goods in a dissenting chapel, vested in trustees, cannot be laid as the property of a servant who had the custody of the chapel, and of the things in it, to clean and keep in order, although he has the key of the chapel, and no one but the minister has another key. R. v. Hutchinson & another, Ry. & M. C. C. R. 412.

III. Dissenting Schoolmasters.

By the 23 Eliz. c. 1, if any person shall keep a schoolmaster, who shall not repair to church, or be allowed by the bishop, he shall forfeit 10l. a month, and the schoolmaster shall be imprisoned for a year.

By the 13 and 14 Car. II. c. 4, every schoolmaster keeping any public or private school, and every person instructing or teaching any youth in any house or private family as a tutor or schoolmaster, shall, before his admission, subscribe before the ordinary the declaration of conformity to the liturgy of the church of England, on pain of being disabled to hold the said school, and ipso facto deprived of the same. And every such school shall be void, as if such person so failing were naturally dead. And if any schoolmaster or other person instructing or teaching youth in any private house or family as tutor or schoolmaster, shall teach any youth as tutor or schoolmaster before license obtained from the bishop or ordinary of the diocese, and before such subscription as aforesaid, he shall for the first offence be imprisoned three months, and for the second and every other offence be imprisoned three months, and forfeit 5l. Sect. 8, 9, 11.

Time for suing for penalties.
Limitation of actions.
Describing property in larceny.
Penalty on schoolmasters not repairing to church.
Schoolmasters to conform to the liturgy of the church of England.
Dissenters.

But by stat. 19 Geo. III. c. 44, s. 2, no dissenting minister, nor any other Protestant dissenting from the church of England who shall take the aforesaid oaths, and make and subscribe the above-mentioned declaration against popery, and the declaration herein-before mentioned, shall be prosecuted in any court whatsoever for teaching and instructing youth as a tutor or schoolmaster.

Sect. 3. Provided, that this shall not extend to the enabling of any person dissenting from the church of England to hold the mastership of any college or school of royal foundation, or of any other endowed college or school for the education of youth, unless the same shall have been founded since the first year of King William and Queen Mary, for the immediate use and benefit of Protestant dissenters.

The forms of the said oaths and declaration are inserted under title Oaths, Vol. III.

Forms.

(No. 1.)

Certificate of having taken the oaths before a justice, pursuant to 22 Geo. 3. c. 155. (a)

County of J J. P. Esquire, one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county of , do hereby certify that C. D. of , in the county of , did this day appear before me, and did make, and take, and subscribe, the several oaths and declaration contained and specified in an act met in the thirty-second year of the reign of King George the Third, intituled "An Act to repeal certain acts, and amend other acts, relating to religious worship and assemblies, and persons teaching or preaching therein." Witness my hand, this day of , in the year, &c.

J. P.

(No. 2.)

Conviction.

See form of conviction for holding a meeting in unregistered house, &c. on 22 Car. II. c. 1, ante, 964, 965.

(No. 3.)

Commitment for disturbing a congregation of dissenters during divine service.

[Commencement as usual, as ante, p. 8, (No. 1.)] on, &c. at, &c. in the said county, did willingly, and of purpose, maliciously and contemptuously come into a certain congregation of Protestant dissenters, then and there assembled for the worship of Almighty God, in a certain meeting-house there situate, then and long before certified, registered and recorded, according to the direction of the statute in that case made and provided, and did then and there wilfully, willingly, and of purpose, maliciously and contemptuously disrupt and disturb the said congregation, the doors of the said meeting-house, where the said congregation were so assembled, not being then locked, barred or bolted. And you the said keeper, &c. [as ante, p. 8, (No. 1.)] to the end.

(No. 4.)

Indictment for disturbing congregation, on statute 22 Geo. 3. c. 185. (b)

—— THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that A. B., late of, &c. and C. D., late of, &c. on, &c. with force and arms, at, &c. did, during the time of divine worship, unlawfully, wilfully, maliciously, and contemptuously disrupt and disturb a certain congregation of Protestant dissenters from the church of England, being then and there lawfully assembled for the purpose of religious worship in a certain chapel and premises situate and being in the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, the said chapel being then and there duly certified and registered pursuant to the statutes in such case made and provided, in contempt of public worship, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our Lord the King his crown and dignity.

And the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do further present, that the

(b) See other forms, 2 Chit. C. L., 966.
Archib. C. L. See R. v. Cherre, 4 B. & Distress for Kent.

said A. B. and C. D. afterwards, (to wit) on the said, &c. with force and arms, at, &c. during the time of divine worship, unlawfully, wilfully, maliciously and contumaciously disquiet and disturb a certain other congregation of Protestant dissenters from the church of England, being then and there duly and lawfully assembled, for the purpose of religious worship, in a certain meeting-house and premises, situate and being in the parish aforementioned, in the county aforementioned, the said last mentioned meeting-house being then and there duly certified and registered pursuant to the statutes in such case made and provided, in contempt of public worship, against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our Lord the King his crown and dignity.

Distress. (a)

A DISTRESS is the taking of a personal chattel out of the possession of the wrong-doer into the custody of the party injured, to procure satisfaction for the wrong committed, and is of two kinds, either for cattle trespassing and doing damage (b), or for non-payment of rent or other duties.

(a) A very considerable portion of this title may not be applicable to a work this is a treatise on real property but it is; and the rest being cursorily considered in prior editions, it is thought fit to enlarge thereon in the present one, especially on a subject of such general interest and importance. As to Distresses in general, see Brabury on Distresses, Gilbert on Distresses, Com. Dig. Distress, Bac. Abr. Distress, Wilkinson on Replevin.

(b) A man may distrain beasts damage feasant, that is, doing damage or trespassing upon his land; for all chattels whatever are distrainable damage feasant, it being but natural justice that whatever doth that injury should be a pledge to make compensation for it. Gith. Dist. 24, 38; 3 Blac. Com. 6. If a man take cattle, and put them into the land of another man, the tenant of the land may take these cattle, damage feasant, though the owner was not privy to the cattle being damage feasant, and he may keep them against the true owner, till satisfaction of the damages. 1 Roll. Abr. 665; Roll. Rep. 449. If a man come to distrain, and see the beasts in his ground, and the owner chase them out on purpose before the distress taken, feasant, it being but natural justice that he cannot distrain them. Co. Lit. 161; 2 Bac. Abr. 354. For distress damage feasant is the strictest distress that is, and the thing distrained must be taken in the very act; for if the goods are once off, though on fresh pursuit, the owner of the ground cannot distrain them. 12 Mod. 681. If ten head of cattle were doing damage, a man cannot take one of them and keep it till he be satisfied for the whole damage, but for its own damage only; but he may bring an action of trespass for the rest. Vasper v. Edwards, 12 Mod. 660. If a man hath common for ten cattle, and he puts in more, the surplusage above ten may be taken damage feasant. 1 Roll. Abr. 665. But this must be where the number is absolutely certain, as for ten, twenty, or thirty cattle, without any relation to the quantity of land, and not where he claims for so many cattle for such a number of acres; for in the former case the overcharge is clear and self-evident, but in the latter it depends upon the number of acres, and requires a medium to determine the number of cattle; that is, an admeasurement of the land. For where the question depends upon a collateral fact, or upon a matter of judgment, the party interested can never be a competent judge in his own cause. And the court said, the right of distraining seemed to turn upon this, that wherever there is a colour of right for putting in the cattle a commoner cannot distrain, because it would be judging for himself in a question that depends upon a more competent inquiry: but where cattle are put upon the common without any colour or pretence of right, the commoner may distrain them; and therefore he may distrain the cattle of a stranger. Hall v. Harding, 4 Burr. 2426; 1 Blac. Rep. 673. Where cattle have trespassed upon a party’s land, it is not advisable to distrain where his title to the locus in quo is doubtful; but the party should proceed by action. 1 Saund. 346 e, n.
Distress for Rent.

We shall under this title notice only the latter kind of distress; and under this, First, Of Distresses for Rent; and, Secondly, Of Distresses under Warrants of Justices.

I. DISTRESS FOR RENT.

The remedy for recovering rent by way of distress seems first to have come over to us from the civil law; for anciently, in the feudal law, not paying attendance at the lord’s courts, or not doing the feudal service, was a forfeiture of the estate. But these feudal forfeitures were afterwards turned into distresses, according to the pignoriary method of the civil law; that is, the land that is let out to the tenant is hypothecated, as a pledge in his hands, to answer the rent agreed to be paid to the landlord, and the whole profits arising from the land are liable to the lord’s seizure for the payment and satisfaction thereof. Gilb. 2. The distress, being a pledge, could not be sold till the 2 Will. & Mary, c. 5, post, 993.

Concerning which we will show—

I. When in general Allowed, and who may Distrain, 974 to 977.
II. What may be Distrained, 977 to 981.
III. At what Time the Distress shall be taken, 981.
IV. Where the Distress shall be made, 982.
V. Goods fraudulently conveyed off Premises, 983 to 987.
VI. Manner of taking the Distress, and what a taking, 987.
VII. When a Party may distrain Twice, 988.
VIII. Distress must be reasonable, 989.
IX. When taken how to be proceeded in till Sale, 989 to 992.
X. Repleving Distress, 992.
XI. Sale and Costs of Distress, 993 to 997.
XII. Irregularity of Proceedings and tender of Amend, 997.
XIII. Rent in case of Extent, or Execution, or Bankruptcy, 997.
XIV. Rent on Death of Tenant for Life, 999.
XV. Rent, how far Recoverable by Executors and Administrators, 1000.
XVI. Rescous or Pound Breach, 1001.
XVII. Tenant deserting Premises, 1002.
XVIII. Landlord re-entering on Non-payment of Rent, 1003.
XIX. Rent on Tenant holding over, 1004 to 1007.
XX. Attorning to Strangers, 1007.
XXI. Forms, 1007.

I. When a Distress for Rent allowed, and who may Distrain.

It may now be laid down as an universal principle, that a distress may be taken for any kind of rent in arrear, the detention whereof beyond the day of payment is an injury to him that is entitled to receive it. Woodf. 356; 3 Blac. Com. 6.
When allowed and who may Distain.

By the common law a distress could not lie for rent-seck. However, by stat. 4 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 5, the like remedy may be had by distress, impounding, and sale, in cases of rent-seck, rents of assize, and chief rents, as in case of rents reserved upon lease.

No distress can be taken for a rent reserved on a letting of mere personal property; (5 Co. 17; 3 Wils. 27; and where land itself is not demised, but the mere use of it, a distress for rent thereon cannot be made under such a demise; (8 B. & Cres. 141); for a rent cannot issue out of a privilege or easement. Id. A distress may be made for rent of a ready-furnished house or lodging, because it is then considered that the rent issues out of the principal, the real property demised. 2 New Rep. 224; and see 6 B. & Cres. 251; 6 Bingh. 105.

The distress for rent must be for rent in arrear; therefore it may not be made on the same day on which the rent becomes due; for if the rent be paid in any part of that day, whilst a man can see to count money, the payment is good.

It must not be after tender of payment of the entire rent due; for if the landlord come to distrain the goods of his tenant for rent behind, before the distress the tenant may upon the land tender the arrearsages, and if after that a distress be taken it is wrongful distress; and if the landlord have distrained, if the tenant before the impounding thereof tender the arrearsages, the landlord ought to deliver the distress, and if he do not, the detainer is unlawful. Even so it is, in case of a distress by damage feasant (or damage done by cattle trespassing); the tender of amends before the distress maketh the distress unlawful; and after the distress, and before the impounding, the detainer unlawful. 2 Inst. 107; 3 Stark. 171. But in this case, although the owner tender sufficient amends, yet he cannot take his beasts out of the pound, if the amends be refused; but he must replevy; and if it be found at the trial that the amends were not sufficient, the person on whom they trespassed shall have damages; if the amends tendered were sufficient, then the owner of the beasts shall have damages. D. & St. 112. Where a distress is made after a sufficient tender, and no subsequent demand, trespass or case lies. Braucome v. Bridges, 1 B. & C. 145; 2 D. & R. 256, S. C.

By special agreement, or local custom, a distress may be made before the rent falls due. Gilb. 56; Harg. Co. Lit. 47 b. n. 6.

Where a landlord takes a less rent than that agreed on for a length of time he cannot in general distrain for that not actually paid. Where a landlord's receiver allowed the tenant to make a deduction in respect of a payment for land tax every year for seventeen years greater than the landlord was liable to pay, the landlord knowing, or having the means of knowing, all the facts, it was held that he could not distrain for the amount erroneously allowed, though the receipt given every year showed the amount paid and the amount deducted. Bramston v. Robins, 4 Bing. 11.

The taking even of a bond, (3 Price, 572,) or a bill of exchange or note, and giving a receipt, (B. N. P. 82,) for the rent, does not, until payment, preclude the landlord from distraining. A judgment, however, thereon would so preclude him. Id. An agreement to take interest on rent in arrear does not so preclude him. 2 Chit. Rep. 245.

There must be actual demise.

A landlord has no right to distrain unless there be an actual demise to the tenant at a fixed rent. And therefore where a tenant was in possession under a memorandum of an agreement to let on lease with a purchasing clause for 21 years, at the clear net rent of 63l., the tenant to enter at any time on or before a particular day, it was held, that this only amounted to an agreement for a future lease, and that no lease having been executed, and no rent subsequently paid, the landlord was not entitled to distrain. Dunk v. Hunter, 5 B. & A. 322. And so where a party is in possession under an agreement for a lease, and no implied tenancy can be raised from other circumstances, the owner cannot distrain the first year distrain for non-payment of rent. Hegan v. Johnson, 2 Town. 148. But, per Bayly, J in the case of Dunk v. Hunter, the remedy is by action for use and occupation.

So as Lord Coke says, Co. Lit. 96 a, it is a maxim in law, that no distress can be taken for any services that are not put into certainty, nor can be reduced to any certainty, for id certum est quod certum reddi potest; but yet, in many cases, there may be certainty in uncertainty. Therefore if a man hold land, paying so much per acre, although in the terms of the demise the number of acres be not fixed, the lord may distrain. Vin. Ab. Distress, (E.)
Distress for Rent.

Where plaintiff entered a farm under an oral agreement for a lease of ten years, though the time of paying the rent was settled, but it did not appear what was the amount to be paid, and the lease was never granted, but plaintiff occupied according to the terms of the proposed lease, and paid a certain rent for two years, it was held the lessor might distrain. Knight v. Bennett, 3 Bingh. 361.

Where an estate has been let without in any way fixing the amount of rent, the only remedy for such rent by action.

There cannot be a distress for double value under the 4 Geo. II. c. 28, but there may be for double rent under the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 18. See Timmins v. Robinson, 3 Burr. 1603, 1608; Bla. Rep. 533.

The landlord must at the time of distress be entitled to the legal reversion in the premises in respect of which the rent is due. The common law only allowed distresses when the relation of landlord and tenant subsisted, and when consequently feudal service could be performed. If therefore the landlord, before or after the rent became due, and before payment, either by his own conveyance to another or otherwise, has no longer the legal estate in the premises, he cannot distrain. Gilb. Act. Debt, 411; Bro. Debt, p. 53; Vaughan, 40; Bac. Ab. Distress, (A). And where a landlord demises his whole interest to another, he cannot distrain. Therefore where an avowant, who had a term which expired on the 11th Nov. 1826, let the premises orally from the 11th Sept. to the 11th Nov. in that year for 270s., payable immediately, it was held that this was a lease of which parol evidence might be given, and not an assignment requiring a writing, but that being a demise of the whole of the avowant’s interest, he had no right to distrain. Reece v. Corrie, 5 Bingh. 24. When a lessee has not the legal estate or reversion, he should reserve a power to distrain, which will entitle him to do so. Co. Lit. 47 a; 5 Co. 3.

When a lease or tenancy has expired, so that the party holding possession is no longer a tenant, the landlord cannot in general distrain, because of the want of a subsisting tenancy. It is prudent and not unusual therefore to provide that the last quarter’s rent shall be paid at a day prior to the determination of the lease, so as to enable the landlord to distrain before the tenant’s removal. Co. Lit. 47 b. This, however, is in many cases rendered superfluous by the 8 Ann. c. 14, (which we shall hereafter notice,) which provides that if a person retain possession of the estate after the expiration of his tenancy, the landlord, if his interest continues, may distrain within 6 months. See post, 1004. And besides this, the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 18, (which we shall hereafter notice,) enables a landlord to distrain for double rent if a tenant do not deliver up possession after the expiration of his own notice to quit. See post, 1005.

If also by agreement or custom the tenant has an away-going crop, and right to hold over to clear the same, the landlord may, during such occurrence of the term, distrain at common law. 1 Hen. Bla. 8; Doug. 201; 3 Bingh. 364.

By stat. 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 23, landlords, or persons acting under their orders, may enter upon land allotted to them under any inclosure act, and seize and distrain for rent, notwithstanding the commissioners’ award shall not have been executed. See further, Inclosures, Vol. III. p. 314.

A devisee may distrain for rent devised to him out of lands if the land is charged with a distress, and not otherwise. Stepp. Touch. 439.

A mortgagee, after notice given of the mortgage to the tenant in possession under a lease prior to the mortgage, may distrain for the rent in arrear at the time of the mortgage, (although he was not in actual seisin of the premises, or in receipt of the rents and profits, at the time it became due,) as well as for rent which may accrue after such notice, the legal title to the rent being in the mortgagee. Moss v. Gallimore, Doug. 278.
I. When allowed and who may Distrain.

A receiver appointed by the Court of Chancery may distrain for rent where he sees it necessary, and need not apply first to that court for a particular order for the purpose. He should distrain in the name of the person who had the right. Pitt v. Snowden, 1 Atk. 750.

One joint tenant may distrain alone, but then he must avow in his own right and as bailiff to the other. 5 Mod. 73. One tenant in common may distrain for his share of the rent upon the terre tenant holding under him and another tenant in common, and he may do so where such tenant has paid the whole rent to the other tenant in common after notice not to pay it. 5 T. R. 246. One joint tenant may, without the assent of his fellows, appoint a bailiff to distrain for rent due to all the joint tenants. 4 Bingh. 582. See *3 Chit. P. L. 5*th ed. 1056, n.

One of several coheirs in gavelkind may distrain for rent due to him and his companions without their actual authority. 2 Brod. & B. 465.

The lessor or landlord himself may make the distress; in general, however, he employs some third person, called a "bailiff." The authority given on this employment may be parol, but in general it is in writing, (usually called a "warrant of distress," ) and it is best it should be so. The authority should be given by all the parties entitled to distrain. 1 Leon. 50.

A man indeed may distrain for another person without any express authority: if he afterwards obtains the assent of such person, such assent will have relation to the time of the distress taken. Gib. Distress, 32.

By stat. 2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, s. 5, if any distress and sale shall be made for rent in arrear and due when none is in truth due, the owner shall recover double value with full costs. The owner may sue either in trespass or case, post, 997.

And if the distress be taken of goods without cause, the owner may make rescous: but if they be distrained without cause and impounded, the owner cannot break the pound and take them out, because they are in the custody of the law. 1 Inst. 47; post, 1001.

II. What may be Distrained.

It may be laid down as a general rule, that all chattels personal the landlord finds on the premises, whether they in fact belong to the tenant, a lodger, or other stranger, are liable to be distrained, unless particularly protected or exempted.

But a distress for rent must be of a thing, whereof a valuable property in is somebody; and therefore dogs, bucks, does, conies, and the like, that are fere nature, cannot be distrained. 1 Inst. 47. But deer in an inclosed ground may be distrained for rent. Devices v. Powell, Willes, 46. So may odges: a man may have a valuable property in a dog. Ib. 48. See title Dog, post.

Whatever is in a man's present use or occupation, is during that time privileged from distress; as a horse on which he is riding, or an axe with which he is cutting wood. Co. Lit. 47 a. This rule extends even to the case of a distress damage feasant; for although it is said to have been formerly held, that horses might be severed from the plough, or a horse taken damage feasant, and impounded, although a rider were upon him; such distress is now determined to be unlawful, as it would be liable to lead to a breach of the peace. Vide Hargrave's note (12) on Co. Litt. 47 a, & 6 T. R. 139. So nets or ferrets cannot be taken damage feasant in a warren, if they are in the hands of a person using them. And although it was formerly considered, that a cart and horses when carrying corn, or hay, might be distrained for rent-service, it seems now to be held, that such a distress would be illegal, as being made on things in immediate use. On the same ground it has been determined, that a loom cannot be distrained when in the hands of the weaver; nor wearing apparel, if in actual use; but if put off, though only for the purpose of repose, it is liable to be taken as a distress for rent. 1 Esp. 206; Brady, 207, 208.

Valuable things in the way of trade are not liable to distress. As a horse.

Vol. I.

3 R

When allowed and who may Distrain.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Receiver.</th>
<th>Joint tenants, &amp;c.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Coheirs in gavelkind.</td>
<td>Bailiffs.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Distraining where no rent is due.

| 2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5. | Rescue. |

All goods on premises.

| Valuable property. |

Things in use.

Goods of others in way of trade.
standing in a smith's shop to be shod, or in a common inn; or cloth in a tailor's house, or corn sent to a mill or market. For all these are practised and privileged for the benefit of trade. Bradley, 207, 208. So goods are principal in the hands of a factor for sale, are privileged from distress for reasons due from such factor to his landlord, on the ground that the rule of public convenience, out of which the privilege arises, is within the exemption of landlord's general right to distress, and therefore that such goods are protected for the benefit of trade. Gilman v. Elton, 6 Moore. C. P. R. 3 B. & B. 75, S. C. So goods landed at a wharf and consigned to a broker as agent of the consignor, for sale, and placed by the broker in the wharfer's warehouse for safe custody until an opportunity of selling them should occur, are not distrainable for rent due in respect of the wharf and warehouse, as they were brought to the wharf in the course of trade. 1 Brough 283. Nor is a horse that has carried corn to a mill to be ground during the grinding is tied to the mill door, distrainable. Creswell v. Smith, 596. Goods in possession of an innkeeper, or carrier, though the carrier be not a public one, are exempt. 1 Salk. Com. 249. Cattle driven to a distant market, and put into land to rest for one night, cannot be distrained for rent. 2 Vernon, 150; 2 Sawurd, 290, n. 7; 3 Blair. Com. 8, Christianus' note.

But these general rules must be understood with some limitation, for although the goods of a guest at a public inn are privileged from distress, there is such a place in public juris, and all men have a right to use it without molestation; yet this exemption was held not to extend to the case of a chariot standing in the coach-house of a livery-stable keeper; for that is a common inn, and the hire of its standing may be considered as part of the profits of the premises. Francis v. Wyatt, 3 Burril. 1498; S. C. 1 Blair R. 483. The goods to be exempted from distress must also be within the premises of the inn, and not on other premises at a distance belonging to it. And even within the inn itself the exemption does not extend to the goods of a person dwelling therein as a tenant rather than a guest. Bradley, 208, ante, 102, 103; post, 990.

With respect to the remedy over by an undertenant or lodger, or the party against the person owing the rent, see cases cited in 3 B. & C. R. 799. It may be laid down as a general rule, he has such remedy by action for indemnifying. In 3 B. & C. R. 799, it was held that where the tenants in premises had underlet a part by deed, and the original landlord distrained for rent upon the undertenant, the landlord could not support an assumpsit against his immediate lessee for an implied promise to indemnify him against the rent payable to the superior landlord.

By the ancient common law of England, no man shall be distrained by the utensils or instruments of his trade or profession, as the axe of the carpenter, or the book of a scholar, a stocking-frame or a loom, implements of handbandy, beasts of the plough and sheep, which are all privileged from distress, not only while in actual use, but whilst any other sufficient distress can be found on the premises. Co. Lit. 47 a; Simpson v. Hartley, 512; Gorton v. Falkner, 4 T. R. 565; and vide 1 Stryde N. P. 648. It should seem, that if there be a reasonable ground for presuming the not sufficient other goods, the landlord may distrain implements of trade and is not bound to sell the other goods first. 2 Chesh. Rep. 167; 6 Pac. 5. And this rule holds only in distresses for rent arrear, amercements, and like; but doth not extend to cases where a distress is given in the nature of an execution by any particular statute, as for poor rates, and the like. 3 Set. 136. So in Hutchison v. Chambers, on a special verdict, several saddles were distrained for the poor rate, which were stated to be beasts of the plough and cart, when there were other goods more sufficient to answer the value of the demand. It was objected that by stat. 51 H. Ill. 3, (which was also in affirmation of the common law,) none shall be restrained by his beasts that gaine his land. The court were unanimously of opinion, that beasts of the plough are distrainable under stat. 48 Eliz. 2 and such like acts of parliament. 1 Burril. 579.

Furnaces, cauldrons, or other things fixed to the freehold, or the doers of windows of a house, or the like, cannot be distrained. Co. Lit. 47 a, Stryde N. P.
II.]

What may be Distrained.

this rule extends to such things as are essentially parts of the freehold, although for a time removed: therefore, a mill-stone is not distrainable, though it be removed out of its proper place in order to be picked; because such removal is out of necessity, and the stone still continues part of the mill; so it is of a smith’s anvil on which he works, for this is accounted part of the forge, though it be not actually fixed by nails to the shop. Bro. Abr. Distress, pl. 23.

On the subject of “fixtures,” we refer to Mr. Amos’s excellent book, the only one, we believe, which has been exclusively devoted to that complicated and difficult subject.

And by stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 8, the landlord or his steward, or other person empowered by him, may take and seize any cattle or stock feeding on any common appendant or appurtenant, or belonging to the premises, corn, grass, hops, roots, fruits, pulse, or other product growing on the estate, as a distress for rent; and the same may cut, gather, make, cure, carry and lay up when ripe in the barns or other proper place on the premises; and if there shall be no barn or proper place on the premises demised, then in any other barn or proper place which he shall procure as near as may be to the premises; the appraisement whereof shall be taken when cut, gathered, cured and made, and not before.

Sect. 9. And notice of the place where the goods so distrain’d shall be lodged, shall in one week after the lodging thereof be given to the tenant, or left at the last place of his abode.

A tenant whose standing corn and growing crops have been seized as a distress for rent before they were ripe, cannot maintain an action upon the case under 2 W. & M. c. 6, s. 28, against the landlord or his bailiff for selling the same before five days, or a reasonable time have elapsed after the seizure, such sale being wholly void. Owen v. Legh and another, 3 B. & A. 470.

The word “product” in the statute, does not extend to trees and shrubs growing in a nurseryman’s ground, but it is confined to products of a similar nature with those specified in that section, to all of which the process of becoming ripe, and of being cut, gathered, made, and laid up when ripe was incidental. Clark v. Gaskarth, 8 Tant. 431; 2 Moore, 491, S.C.

Trees, shrubs, and plants, growing in a nursery-ground, cannot be distrain’d for rent. Id. see also Clark v. Calvert, 3 Moore, 96.

When corn, grass, &c. growing, is distrain’d, it may, when ripe, be laid up in barns or other proper places on the premises, and shall not be appraised or sold until it shall have been ripe, cut, gathered, cured, and made. Peacock v. Purvis, 2 B. & B. 362: 5 Moore, 79, S.C. Growing crops taken under a fi. fa. in the hands of the sheriff’s vendee, are protected from the landlord’s distress for rent subsequently accruing, unless perhaps allowed to remain uncut for an unreasonable time. Id.

For the protection of landlords, the stat. 56 Geo. III. c. 50, s. 1, enacts, that no sheriff or other officer, in England or Wales, shall, by virtue of any process of any court of law, carry off or sell, or dispose of for the purpose of being carried off from any lands let to farm, any straw threshed or unthreshed, or any straw of crops growing, or any chaff, colder, or any turnips, or any manure, compost, ashes, or sea-weed in any case whatsoever, nor any hay, grass or vetches, nor any roots or vegetables, being the produce of such lands, in any case where, according to any covenant or written agreement entered into and made for the benefit of the owner or landlord of any farm, such hay, grass or grasses, vetches and vetches, roots or vegetables, ought not to be taken off or withheld from such lands, or which by the tenor or effect of such covenants or agreements ought to be used or expended thereon; and of which covenants or agreements such sheriff or other officer shall have received a written notice before he shall have proceeded to sale.

Sect. 2 enacts, that the tenant shall give notice to the sheriff of the existence of covenants, and the sheriff to the landlord.

Sect 3 empowers such sheriff or other officer to dispose of the produce, subject to an agreement to expend it on the land.

3 R 2
Distress for Rent.

Sect. 6. In all cases where any purchaser or purchasers of any produce hereinbefore mentioned shall have entered into any agreement with such sheriff or other officer, touching the use and expenditure thereon lands to let to farm, it shall not be lawful for the owner or landlord of such lands to distraint for any rent on any corn, hay, straw, or other pro-cuts thereof, which at the time of such sale and the execution of such agreements entered into under the provisions of this act, shall have been grown on the soil and sold, subject to such agreement by such sheriff or other officer nor on any turnips, whether drawn or growing, if sold according to the provisions of this act; nor on any horses, sheep, or other cattle, nor on all beasts whatsoever, nor on any wagons, carts, or other implements of hus-bandy, which any person or persons shall employ, keep, or use on the lands for the purpose of thrashing out, carrying, or consuming any such corn, hay, straw, turnips, or other produce under the provisions of the act, and the agreement or agreements directed to be entered into between the sheriff or other officer, and the purchaser or purchasers of such crops and produce as hereinbefore are mentioned. See 2 B. & B. 362; ante, 979.

The crown, or its process, not being in any way allied to in this state is not affected by the provisions it contains for preserving covenants between the tenants and landlords of lands, &c. let to farm; the Court of Exchequer to a writ of rendition, and the sheriff, on a writ of vendition after so extent, could not sell the crops, &c. taken under it, subject to any condition that the same should be used and expended according to the covenants of the lease. R. v. Osbourne, 6 Price, 94.

At common law such things only can be distrained as may be restored in the owner in the same plight as they were in at the time of taking them, and for this reason sheaves and shocks of corn were not distrainable; but by sec.
2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, s. 3, persons having rent-arrear on any demis, lease, or contract, may seize and secure any sheaves or cocks of corn, or corn loose or in the straw, or hay, being in any barn or granary, or upon any hovel, stack, or rick, or otherwise upon any part of the land charged with rent, and may lock up or detain the same in the place where found, in the nature of a distress, so as the same be not removed to the damage of the owner out of the place where found and seized, but be kept there (as es-pounded) till reprieved or sold. This provision extends to corn in whatever state it may be, whether threshed or not. Latto, 214. If standing corn be sold under an execution, and afterwards cut by the vendee, it cannot be distrained before it is fit to be carried. Gilb. Distr. 50; Peacock v. Parry, 9 B. & B. 362; 5 Moore, 97, S. C.; 1 Price, 277; ante, 979, post, 911.
Secus where it is permitted to remain an unreasonable time. Id. Com.
Rep. 203.

Milk, fruit, and the like, cannot be distrained, as they cannot be restored in as good a plight as when taken. 3 Bla. Com. 9. Query, whether now as the distress may be sold, such things as will not injure in the five days, cannot be distrained.

Generally, whatever goods and chattels the landlord finds upon the pre-misses, whether they in fact belong to the tenant or a lodger or a stranger, are distrainable by him for rent; for otherwise a door would be opened to infinite frauds upon the landlord; and the lodger or stranger hath his remedy over by action on the case against the tenant, if by the tenant's fault the goods are distraincd, so that he cannot render them when called upon.
See 3 Bla. Com. 8; ante, 978.

But on particular circumstances perhaps a court of equity may relieve.
As in Foukes v. Joyce, 3 Lev. 260; 2 Vent. 50, a person driving sheep to London to sell, by agreement with the master of an inn put them into the ground at so much a score for the night. The landlord seeing them, asked whose they were, but consented to their staying there, and afterwards dis-strained them for rent due to him from the master of the inn: and it was adjudged for the landlord. But in the same case, upon a bill for relief in equity, the lords commissioners seemed to think that the grounds lying to the inn and used therewith, ought to have the same privileges the inn hath, and What may be Distrained.

That a passenger’s cattle ought not to be distrainable there. 2 Vern. 129. And on the ground of a fraudulent consent by the landlord it was decreed that he should answer for the value of the sheep, and pay costs both in law and equity. Proc. Ch. 7. And a court of law in the present day would, it seems, be of opinion, that cattle belonging to a drover, being put into the ground with the consent of the occupier to graze only one night in their way to a fair or market, would not be liable to the distress of the landlord for rent. 2 Sound. 290, n. (7); ante, 978.

Where a stranger’s beasts escape into the land, they may be distrained for rent, though they have not been levant and couchant, (that is, not having so long remained upon the ground as to have lain down and risen up again to feed,) provided they are trespassers; but if the tenant of the land is in default in not repairing his fences, whereby the beast came into the land, the landlord cannot distrain such beasts, though they have been levant and couchant, unless he have caused notice to be given to the owner, and the owner suffers them to remain there afterwards. Lut. 364; see Jones v. Powell, 5 B. & C. 647. But such notice, it is said, is not necessary where the distress is by the lord of the fee for an ancient rent, or by the grantee of a rent-charge. Woodf. 301. Where the cattle escape accidentally, there they are not distrainable until they have been levant and couchant; but if they escape by default of their owner, they are distrainable the first minute. Per Treby, C.J. 1 Ld. Raym. 169. “And if the cattle of one man escape into the land of another, it is no excuse that the fences were out of repair if they were trespassers in the place from whence they came. If it be a close, the owner of the cattle must show an interest or right to put them there. If it be a way, he must show that he was lawfully using the way; for the property is in the owner of the soil, subject to an easement for the benefit of the public.” Per Heath, J., Dowaston v. Payne, 2 H. Bla. 531.

Things for which a replevin will not lie, so as to be known again, as money out of a bag, cannot be distrained. 2 Bac. Abr. 109; Moore, 394. But money in a bag sealed may be distrained, for the bag sealed may be known again.

Goods in the custody of the law are not distrainable; therefore goods distrained for damage feasant cannot be taken for rent, nor goods in a bailiff's hands on an execution, nor goods seized by process at the suit of the King, because they are in the custody of the law. Co. Lit. 47; Park. 120. But the goods so in custody must be removed from the premises within a reasonable time, or they will not be protected. 1 Price, 277; 1 M. & S. 711; 2 B. & B. 362; 5 Moore, 97, S.C.; ante, 980. Goods taken under a void outlawry are liable to a distress for rent. 7 T. R. 259. “We have already noticed the provisions of the 56 Geo. III. c. 50, ante, 979, as to distraining growing crops seized in execution, and see further as to distresses on goods under an execution, or in cases of bankruptcy, post, 997, 998.

By the 7 Anne, c. 12, s. 3, it is enacted, that process of distress against the goods of any ambassador or other public minister, &c. of a foreign state, or of their domestic servants, shall be void. But the goods, to entitle them to protection, must be for the necessary convenience of the ambassador or other public minister; and in the late war, where a British-born subject, employed as first chorister at the Portuguese ambassador’s chapel with a salary, rented and occupied a house, and let part of it in lodgings, and a distress was levied on his goods for a poor’s rate; it was held, that they were not protected by the statute, even assuming him to be a domestic servant of the ambassador. 2 D. & R. 833; 1 B. & C. 554, S.C.

III. At what Time the Distress shall be taken.

For a rent or service the lord cannot distrain in the night, but in the daytime; and so it is of a rent-charge; but for damage feasant, one may distrain in the night; otherwise it may be, the beasts may be gone before he can take them. 1 Inst. 142, (a).
Distress for Rent.

For before sunrise, or after sunset, no man can distraint but for damage to tenant. Mirror, c. 2, s. 26; see also Rep. 7 (a).

In general the distress cannot be on the day the rent falls due; when otherwise, see ante, p. 975. It cannot be made in general after the expiration of the tenancy, when otherwise, ante. 973.

IV. Where the Distress shall be made.

The King’s officers, as sheriffs and others, shall not take distresses in the fees wherewith churches in times past have been endowed; but distresses may be taken in possessions of the church newly purchased. Edw. II. c. 9.

A man may distraint in places or lands within the fee, or premises demised liable to distress, and not elsewhere. 52 Hen. III. c. 51; 2 Inst. 131; Mir. c. 2, s. 26.

And by the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 8, the landlord may distraint any cattle or stock of the tenant, depasturing on any common appendant or appurtenant, or any ways belonging to the premises demised. The right given by this act is confined to cattle and live stock, so that a distress could not be made on a cart standing on a common, unless fraudulently removed. 4 Compl. 136.

No person (except the King’s officers) shall take distresses in the King’s highway. 52 Hen. III. c. 51. And the reason is, because the King’s subjects ought to have free passage as well to fairs and markets as about their other affairs. But this rule is confined to the first taking of the distress; for if the lord coming to distraint see the beasts within his fee, and before he can distraint them they are chased into the highway, he may distraint them therein. 2 Inst. 131, 132. And this statute, though passed for a remedy to the party distrained on does not avoid the distress. Id. F. N. B. 90; 4 Bingh. 140.

A barge attached by a rope to a wharf in the river Thames, in the space between high and low water mark, cannot be distraint on for rent in arrear, in respect of the wharf and premises attached to it. Bussard v. Capel, 8 B. & Cres. 141, overruling 4 Bingh. 137, S.C.

V. Goods fraudulently conveyed off the Premises.

If the lessor did not find sufficient or any goods on the premises demised, he could formerly resort to no where else to distraint, and therefore tenants who were knavish made a practice to convey away their goods and stock fraudulently from the premises demised, in order to cheat their landlords. But now, by stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 1, it is enacted, "that from and after the 24th day of June, in the year of our Lord, 1738, in case any tenant or lessee, lessee or lessor, for life or lives, term of years, at will, sufferance or otherwise, of any messuages, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, upon the demise or holding whereof any rent is or shall be reserved, due, or made payable, shall fraudulently or clandestinely convey away, or carry off or from such premises, his, her, or their goods or chattels, to prevent the landlord or lessee, landlords or lessors, from distraining the same for arrears of rent so reserved, due, or made payable; it shall and may be lawful to and for every landlord or lessor, landlords or lessors, within that part of Great Britain called England, dominion of Wales, or the town of Berwick upon Tweed, or any person or persons by him, her, or them for that purpose lawfully empowered, within the space of thirty days next ensuing such conveying away or carrying off such goods or chattels as aforesaid, to take and seize such goods and chattels, wherever the same shall be found, as a distress for the said arrears of rent; and the same to sell, or otherwise dispose of, in such manner as if the said goods and chattels had actually been distraint by such lessor or landlord, lessees or landlords, in and upon such premises for such arrears of rent; any law, custom, or usage to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."
Sec. 2. "That no landlord or lessee, or other person entitled to such arrears of rent, shall take or seize any such goods or chattels as a distress for the same, which shall be sold bond fide, and for a valuable consideration, before such seizure made, to any person or persons not privy to such fraud as aforesaid; anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sec. 7. "Where any goods or chattels fraudulently or clandestinely conveyed or carried away by any tenant or tenants, lessee or lessees, his, her, or their servant or servants, agent or agents, or other person or persons aiding or assisting therein, shall be put, placed, or kept in any house, barn, stable, outhouse, yard, close, or place locked up, fastened, or otherwise secured, so as to prevent such goods or chattels from being taken and seized as a distress for arrears of rent; it shall and may be lawful for the landlord or landladies, lessor or lessors, his, her, or their steward, bailiff, receiver, or other person or persons empowered to take and seize, as a distress for rent, such goods and chattels (first calling to his, her, or their assistance the constable, headborough, borsholder, or other peace officer of the hundred, borough, parish, district, or place, where the same shall be suspected to be concealed, who are hereby required to aid and assist therein; and in case of a dwellinghouse, oath being also first made (a) before some justice of the peace of a reasonable ground to suspect that such goods or chattels are therein) in the day time, to break open (b) and enter into such house, barn, stable, outhouse, yard, close, and place, and to take and seize such goods and chattels for the said arrears of rent, as he, she, or they might have done by virtue of this or any former act, if such goods and chattels had been put in any open field or place."

Sec. 3. "And to deter tenants from such fraudulent conveying away their goods and chattels, and others from wilfully aiding or assisting therein, or concealing the same, it is enacted, that from and after the said 24th day of June, if any such tenant or lessee shall fraudulently remove and convey away his or her goods or chattels as aforesaid, or if any person or persons shall wilfully and knowingly aid or assist any such tenant or lessee in such fraudulent conveying away or carrying off of any part of his or her goods or chattels, or in concealing the same; all and every person and persons so offending shall forfeit and pay to the landlord or landladies, lessor or lessors, from whose estate such goods and chattels were fraudulently carried off as aforesaid, double the value of the goods by him, her, or them respectively carried off or concealed as aforesaid; to be recovered by action of debt in any of His Majesty's courts of records at Westminster, or in the courts of session in the counties palatine of Chester, Lancaster, or Durham, respectively, or in the courts of grand sessions in Wales; (c) wherein no essoin, protection, or wager of law shall be allowed, nor more than one imprisonment."

Sec. 4. "That where the goods and chattels so fraudulently carried off or concealed shall not exceed the value of 50l. it shall and may be lawful for the landlord or landladies, from whose estate such goods or chattels were removed, his, her, or their bailiff, servant, or agent, in his, her, or their behalf, to exhibit a complaint in writing (d) against such offender or offenders, before two or more justices of the peace of the same county, riding, or division of such county, residing near the place whence such goods and chattels were removed, or near the places where the same were found, not being interested in the lands or tenements whence such goods were removed; who may summon (e) the parties concerned, examine the fact, and all proper witnesses, upon oath, or if any such witness be one of the people called Quakers, upon affirmation required by law; and in a summary way determine, whether such person or persons be guilty of the offence with which he or they are charged; and to inquire in like manner of the value of the goods and chattels by him, her, or them respectively so fraudulently carried off or concealed as

(a) See form, (No. 15), post.
(b) See form, (No. 16), post.
(c) The Welch jurisdiction is abo-

Where goods not exceeding 50l. in value are con-

(d) See form, (No. 7), post.
(e) See form, (No. 8), post.
Distress for Rent.

The two justices' order, if such appeal, not to be executed.

Cases and Decisions on the Act]—The first and second sections of this act are remedial, and not penal, and should be construed liberally. See Stanley v. Wharton, 9 Price, 301.

The act applies to the goods of the tenant only, which are fraudulently removed, and not those of a stranger; (Thornton v. Adams, 5 M. & S. 38); and it does not apply to an undertenant removing to avoid the distress of a landlord on his immediate tenant. (Id. 2 Stra. 787). A creditor may, with the assent of the debtor, remove goods from the premises for the payment of a bona fide debt, without incurring the penalty of stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 2, against persons assisting in removing goods. Back v. Meats, 5 M. & S. 200.

In order to justify the landlord in seizing, under this statute, within thirty days, goods removed off the premises, as a distress for rent, wherever found, it has been considered that the removal must have taken place after the rent became due, and must have been clandestine; (Watson v. Main, 3 Exp. 15; see also 2 Campd. 294, n. 2); but this is questionable, and with good reason: see 4 Campb. 136, per Lord Ellenborough, C. J.

The first and second sections apply to all cases where a landlord is, by the conduct of his tenant in removing goods from premises for which the rent is due, turned over to the barren right of bringing an action for his rent. Where, therefore, a tenant openly and in the face of day and with notice to his landlord, removed his goods without leaving sufficient on the premises to satisfy the rent then due, and the landlord followed and distrained the goods, it was held, that although the removal might not be clandestine, yet, as it was fraudulent, (which was a question for a jury,) the landlord was justified under the act in seizing the goods. 4 D. & R. 33. The removal need not be clandestine as well as fraudulent; (Id.); and it is immaterial whether the concealment took place by night or with any concealment. Id. 1 C. & P. 121 has been held under the third section, as we have seen supra. that a creditor, with the assent of his debtor, may take possession of the goods of the latter, and remove them from the premises for the purpose of satisfying a bona fide debt, without incurring the penalty inflicted by that section.

(a) See forms, (No. 9 and 10), post. (d) See form, (No. 13), post.
(b) See form, (No. 11), post. (e) See form, (No. 14), post.
(c) See form, (No. 12), post.
Goods Fraudulently Conveyed off the Premises.

although such creditor takes possession knowing the debtor to be in distressed circumstances and under an apprehension that the landlord will distrain. S M. & S. 200. It is not necessary to show, in proof of concealment of cattle, that they were withdrawn from sight; if they have been removed to a neighbour's field so as to cause the landlord difficulty in finding them, it is sufficient. Stanley v. Wharton, 9 Price, 301.

And in an action on the third section of the statute against the tenant, which section is remedial as well as penal, (8 B. & Cres. 537,) it is not necessary to show an actual participation in the act if the removal was with his privity; (Lyster v. Brown, 3 D. & R. 501; 1 C. & P. 121, S. C.); nor is it necessary that it should be proved that a distress was in progress or about to be put in execution, or even contemplated, it is enough that the rent be shown to be in arrear, and that the goods were removed afterwards. Stanley v. Wharton, 10 Price, 198. To make a third party liable, it must be proved he assisted in the removal, and was also privy to the fraudulent intent. 8 B. & Cres. 537. In such action against a third person, the acts and orders of a tenant are admissible evidence of his own fraud, and of knowledge on the part of the defendant, if by other evidence he is proved to have contributed to the facility of it; and circumstances of suspicion may be laid before the jury to prove such fraudulent co-operation as the legislature contemplated. Stanley v. Wharton, 10 Price, 138; 9 Price, 301.

Justices either of the county from which the tenants fraudulently remove goods, or of that in which they are concealed, may convict the offenders within their respective counties. R. v. Morgan, Cald. 156.

The value of the goods being under 50l. does not render it compulsory on the party to have recourse to the summary remedy before two justices under the fourth section. Stanley v. Wharton, 9 Price, 301; Horsefall v. Davy, Holt, C. N. P. 147; M. & M. 175.

The fact of the landlord's having in the first instance made his complaint under the act before a magistrate, will not prevent him from afterwards bringing an action. Horsefall v. Davy, 1 Stark. 169. Holt, C. N. P. 147, S. C.

As to orders in general see post, Order, Vol. III. An order of magistrate, under the act, need not enumerate or specify the particular goods alleged to have been removed. R. v. Rabbits, 6 D. & R. 341.

It is not necessary to set out the evidence in an order made by one or more of the justices. R. v. Bissex, Sayer, 304; 29 & 30 Geo. II.; MS. (Burn) S. C. (a)

(a) R. v. Bissex, T. 29 & 30 Geo. II. MS. (Burn), S. C. Sayer, 304. Order made by two justices, reciting that a complaint had been made to them in writing by A. Clavey against J. Bissex, that he the said Clavey demised his estate in the parish of Shelley, in the county of Somerset, to William Thatcher, at the yearly rent of 44l., and that there was due in arrear from Thatcher to him for rent of the said estate, on the 5th day of April last, 24l. 15s. 6d.; and that he the said Clavey would have distrained the goods and chattels of the said W. Thatcher upon the said estate, in order to obtain satisfaction of the said rent; but to prevent him from so doing, the said Bissex, on or about the 27th, 28th, and 29th days of August last, did knowingly and wilfully aid and assist the said Thatcher in fraudulently conveying and carrying off from the said estate his the said Thatcher's goods and chattels, and also in concealing the same, being under the value of 50l.; that is to say, two cows, one heifer, and ten hundred weight of cheese, of the value of 20l.; whereby the said Clavey was prevented from distraining the same in order to obtain satisfaction for the said rent, and contrary to the statute 11 Geo. II., and therefore praying us to grant him our warrant of summons, requiring you the said J. Bissex to appear before us, and that we would examine the fact, and thereupon make such order therein for his relief as the said statute directs and requires, and as should be agreeable to justice; whereupon we the said justices, residing near the said estate from whence the said goods and cattle were removed, and neither of us any way interested in the said estate, did issue our warrant of summons, requiring you the said J. Bissex to attend us thereon to answer the said complaint; and you having attended accordingly, and we in your presence having examined the witnesses produced DISTRESS FOR RENT. [V.

The charge though set out in the order in the alternative will be good, by the said A. Claye upon oath, and heard what was alleged by you in your defence, do adjudge that the said complaint is true; and that the said goods and cattle of the said W. Thatcher, which you so aided and assisted in conveying and carrying off from the said estate, and also in concealing the same, were of the value of 20L., and that you have thereby forfeited double the value of the said goods and cattle, being the sum of 40L., to the said complainant A. Claye, by virtue of the said statute: we, therefore, in pursuance of the said statute, do adjudge, order, and require you the said J. Bissex, within the space of three days from the date hereof, to pay to the said A. Claye the sum of 40L., which if you shall neglect to do, such further proceedings will be then had against you to enforce the payment thereof as the said statute directs and requires. Given under our hands and seals this 5th day of January, 1756. This order was affirmed by the sessions upon appeal. Both the orders were removed by certiorari into the King's Bench. It was moved to quash the same. Objections taken: 1. The complaint is said to be taken in writing, but not upon oath. 2. It is only said, that he demised to W. Thatcher; but not said for what estate or term. 3. It is stated, so much was due for rent, but not said for what term; it might be due twenty years ago: it is not stated to be due when Thatcher removed his goods. 4. The words of the order are, goods and cattle; of the statute, goods and chattels. 5. No certain time is alleged when the defendant aided and assisted; only said, on or about the 20th, 27th, or 28th of August. 6. Not stated that Thatcher did carry off his goods, nor that Bissex the aid and assist him in carrying them off. 7. They adjudge the complaint true, but do not state the evidence; and this is a conviction, not an order; and for any thing that appears, it might be upon Claye's evidence alone. 8. It is not stated that the goods were under the value of 50L., which is the ground of the justices' jurisdiction. 9. The words of the statute are, if any person shall be a tenant of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments: the word used in the order is estate; which may be a thing incorporeal, or may mean the interest in the land, and so not within the statute. 10. It should appear whether the landlord has a right to distraint: by stat. 8 Ann. c. 14, the landlord may distrain at any time within six months after the expiration of the term; it does not appear that these six months were not expired; and if they were, this is no offence. After consideration, Mr. J. Denison delivered the resolution of the court: I think the most material objection is, whether this is an order or a conviction. If a conviction, the evidence ought to have been set out. And there has been no doubt, (notwithstanding the case of R. v. Poulson, 1 Saik. 369,) that in a conviction the evidence must be set out, that the court may judge upon it. So it was held by Lord Hardwicke, in the case of R. v. Lloyd, Stra. 996; and in that case it was objected that as it subjected the party to a penalty, though in the statute it was called an order, yet it should be construed as a conviction; but the court said, every act of the justices, which subjects the party to a penalty, shall not be construed as a conviction; R. v. Verney, 680. 2 Ser. pages 1; upon the statute for licensing alehouses, considered as an order; R. v. Blackwell, M. 4 G. II.; which the court said was a strong case, and must be considered as an order. I understood from Lord Hardwicke, in the case of R. v. Lloyd, that his ground of the difference was founded upon the expressions of the statute, and not upon the penalty; as where the words of the statute are, 'of which he shall be convicted,' it is to be construed as a conviction. Here it is extremely strong; the statute calls it an order: and in the nature of it, it is the examination upon a complaint. If the party were never summoned, this court, upon affidavit, will grant an information against the justices; but the summons need not be set out; and the court will intend that the justices have done right, in case the complaint does not appear upon the face of the order. As to the 1st objection: this is not an information, but a complaint; when the party is summoned, the witnesses are to be examined upon oath, but the complaint need not be upon oath. In answer to the 2d objection: as the order has followed the words of the statute, we will not intend it a case wherein the justices had not a jurisdiction. The court will not, in case of an order, intend that the justices have done wrong. As to the 3d objection: it is sufficiently alleged in an order; his assisting the tenant to carry away the goods, as it is here alleged, is sufficient to show the rent continued then to be in arrear; and the rather, as the defendant might have availed himself of the rent paid, by proving it before the VI. Manner of taking Distress and what is a taking.

This has already been partially considered as far as respects the time and place of taking and the goods that may be taken, ante, 977 to 982. Gates or inclosures may not be broken open, nor thrown down, to make a distress. 1 Inst. 161. Nor may the lessor enter into the tenant’s house, unless the doors are open. 2 Bac. Abr. tit. Distress, 347. Upon a question about taking a distress, it was held by the Lord Chief Justice Hardwicke, (Exeter Sum. Ass. 1736,) that a padlock put on a barn door could not be opened by force, to take the corn by way of distress. 9 Vin. Abr. 128, pl. 6. But if the outer door of a house be open, one may break an inner door to take a distress. Cases Temp. Hardw. 168; Bull. N. P. 7th edit. 81 c. But except it be in this case where the goods are clandestinely conveyed, it may seem from what hath been said that the landlord hath no means to come at the goods in order to make distress, if the tenant shall think fit to lock up his gates, and shut the doors. Vide stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 7, justices. I much doubt whether in a declaration it would not be sufficient to say, the rent was in arrear at such a day; and I think it would lie upon the defendant to prove that the rent does not remain in arrear. As to its not being said for what time the rent was due, this is mere matter of form. As to the 5th objection: about, in common parlance, means in this case three days, or near it. They might be three days in carrying the goods away. The days are not material, even in legal proceedings. 1 Lord Raym. 581. And in the case of R. v. Simpson, H. 3 Geo. II. Str., 46, the day and hour in a conviction are not material. By this statute no time is limited, no complaint shall be made; it may be made at any time. Suppose that the defendant had paid the penalty on a different complaint made, he might easily have shown it. As to the 6th, the answer is obvious: if Thatcher had not carried his goods away, the defendant could not have aided in carrying them. The statute makes two offences; one, carrying the goods away, the other, aiding in carrying them away. It is only necessary here to state the offence which the defendant had been guilty of, which this order does in the words of the statute. In the case of R. v. Monk, M. 13 G. II. there was a conviction for aiding and assisting in killing a buck. It was objected, that it was not charged the buck was killed. But the court held, that as the conviction was in the words of the statute, it was sufficient. And the court held they were all principals, as well those that killed the buck as those that assisted. And this was the case of a conviction. All the other objections may have this general answer; that in case of orders, where the justices have jurisdiction, we will intend they have acted right; and if they have done wrong, they may be punished by an information. Let the orders be confirmed.

(a) So in R. v. Middlehurst, 1 Burr. 399. Two justices made an order against one T. M. for wilfully and knowingly aiding and assisting J. C. the tenant of Sir T. F. in fraudulently removing and conveying away five cows and other goods, or in concealing the same. Which order, on the return, to the sessions, was confirmed. It was moved to quash these orders, upon two objections: 1. That it is not described sufficiently what the offence is. 2. That the charge was in the disjunctive, that he assisted the tenant in removing or concealing the goods. By Lord Mansfield, C. J. Upon indictments it hath been determined that an alternative charge is not good (as, forged or caused to be forged); though one only need be proved, if laid conjunctively (as, forged and caused to be forged); but I do not see the reason of it: the substance is exactly the same; the defendant must come prepared against both; and it makes no difference to him in any respect. But this is an order; and being good in substance, needs not be literally so strict. And by the court, the rule to show cause was discharged, and consequently both orders affirmed.
Distress for Rent.

With respect to what is a good taking, if a landlord come into a house, and seize upon some goods as a distress, in the name of all the goods of the house, that will be a good seizure of all. 6 Mod. 215. Where a landlord's agent went upon the tenant's premises, walked round them, and gave a written notice that he had distrained certain goods lying there for an arrear of rent, and that unless the rent was paid or the goods replevied within five days, they would be appraised and sold, and then went away not leaving any person in possession; it was held, that this was a sufficient taking to give the tenant a right of action for an excessive distress, (there being one,) and that quitting the premises without leaving any one in possession was not an abandonment of the distress, the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 10, giving the landlord power to impound or otherwise secure the goods on the premises distrained. Stouden v. Earl Falmouth, 8 B. & Cres. 456. A landlord to whom rent was in arrear, hearing his tenant and a stranger disputing about the property of an article on the premises early in the morning, entered and said, "the article shall not be removed till my rent is paid." The stranger nevertheless removed the article on the same day, after such removal the landlord sent his broker to distrain for the rent; it was held, that the distress was sufficiently commenced by the landlord to entitle him to the article in question. Wood v. Nunn, 5 Bing. 10.

VII. When a party may Distress twice.

When a man is entitled to distrain for an entire duty, he ought to distrain for the whole at once, and not for part at one time, and part at another: as in the case of Wallis v. Savill, Lutw. 1532, a second distress was held unjustifiable, because both distresses were taken for one and the same rent, and it was the lessor's folly that he had not taken a sufficient distress at first. But if he distrains for the whole, and there is not sufficient on the premises or he happens to mistake the value of the thing distrained, and so takes an insufficient distress, he may take a second distress to complete his recovery. For if a man seize for the whole sum that is due to him, and only mistake the value of the goods seized, (which may be of very uncertain, or even imaginary value, as pictures, jewels, race-horses, and the like,) there is no reason why he should not afterwards complete his execution by making a further seizure, provided it be for the same sum due. 1 Burr. 589.

The restriction which existed on this subject at the common law was removed by stat. 17 Car. II. c. 7, which enables the lessor, or his executors or administrators, to make a second distress, in case there be not sufficient goods found on the premises at the time of the first distress, or that the party mistake the value of the things distrained, a provision which is calculated as much for the benefit of the tenant as that of his landlord; for as it was observed by Lord Mansfield, in the case of Hutchins v. Chambers, (1 Burr. 579,) if a person were not permitted to distrain a second time, in case he at first makes an insufficient distress, it might induce him to a necessity of taking effects of very great value; which, in things of an ascertainable or imaginary value, he might do without being guilty of an excessive distress, and this would be far more prejudicial to the tenant, than to allow a second distress to be made. Bradly, 130.

Thus by the statute, in all cases where the value of the cattle distrained shall not be found to be to the full value of the arrear distrained for, the party to whom such arrears were due, his executors or administrators, may distrain again for the residue of the said arrears. So in like manner, where the distress is made by virtue of the warrant of a justice of the peace, in nature of an execution. And the distinction seemeth to be this; where a person hath an entire duty, he shall not split the entire sum, and distrain for part of it at one time, and for part of it at another time, and so toties quatenus.
VIII. Distress shall be reasonable.

By statute 52 Hen. III. c. 4, distresses shall be reasonable and not too great; and he that taketh great and unreasonable distresses shall be grievously amerced. For example, if the lord distrain two or three oxen for 12d. or the like small sum, and the owner replevy the oxen, and the lord avow the taking of them for the 12d. of his own showing, he shall make fine; or the party may have his action upon this statute. 2 Inst. 107. If the lord distrain an ox, or horse, for a penny, if there were no other distress upon the land helden, the distress is not excessive; but if there were a sheep, or a swine, or the like, then the taking of the ox or horse is excessive, because he might have taken a beast of less value. 2 Inst. 107.

If the distress be unreasonable the owner may sustain a special action on the case against all or any of the parties concerned in making it; (1 Burr. 379; 2 Sirw. 851; 3 Lev. 48; 2 Kemp. 294); he cannot sue in trespass; (Id.); unless the distress was of gold or silver of certain known value. 1 Burr. 590. In such action express malice need not be proved. 6 Esp. 71. It is no bar to such action that the tenant tendered the rent before the distress; (1 B. & Cres. 145); or that between the distress and sale the parties came to an arrangement respecting the sale. 1 Bing. 401; 8 Moore, 451, S. C.; 2 B. & Cres. 821; 4 D. & R. 539, S. C.

IX. Distress when taken, how to be proceeded in till Sale.

After having taken the distress, the party distraining proceeds to take an inventory of the goods and chattels he may deem sufficient to cover the amount of the rent distrained for, and the costs and charges of the distress and sale. Though usual and always advisable, there is no absolute necessity to make out this inventory. By the 53 Geo. III. c. 194, the inventory is subject to a stamp of 2s. 6d.

After or before this inventory is made, it is necessary to give the tenant or owner of the goods distrained on, notice of the distress, with the cause of the taking, the amount of the rent distrained for, and informing the party that unless the rent and costs be paid in five days the same will be sold.

The statute 2 W. & M. ss. 1, c. 5, s. 1, directs that this notice should be of the cause of the distress, and left at the chief mansion house or other most notorious place on the premises charged with the rent distrained for. In the notice it is not necessary to mention when the rent became due for which the distress was made; (Moss v. Gallimore, Doug. 279); and if mentioned, a mistake therein is immaterial. Id. 7 T. R. 654. A personal service on the owner of the goods will dispense with the necessity of leaving such notice at the dwellinghouse, as directed by the act. Walter v. Rumbal, 1 Id. Raym. 53. Though the notice under this act should it seems be in writing, unless it be a personal one on the owner of the goods, when it may be by parol. See 12 Mod. 76.

The party distraining next proceeds to impound the goods taken. By the common law a distress might in general be impounded, in a proper pound, where the party pleased. 2 Inst. 106. Cattle may be impounded in a pound overt (a) or public pound, or on the premises, where the owner may

(a) By pound overt is meant an open pound, as a public penfold made for that purpose, or an open field where the owner may go to his goods at pleasure.
Distress for Rent.

give them meat and drink without trespass to any other. But if they are put in a pound covert, as in a house or private pound, the distrainer must keep them with meat and drink at his peril, and for which he shall have no satisfaction. 1 Inst. 47.

But if the distress be of utensils of household, or such like dead goods, which may take harm by wet or weather, or be stolen away, there he must impound them in a house, or other pound covert, within three miles in the said county; for if he impound them in a pound covert he must answer for them. 1 Inst. 47.

By the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 10, any person distraining for rent may impound or otherwise secure the distress, of what kindsoever it be, in such place, or on such part of the premises chargeable with the rent, as shall be most convenient; and may appraise and sell the same upon the premises, as any person before might have done off the premises, by virtue of statutes 2 W. & M. c. 5, and 4 Geo. II. c. 28.

In Washborn v. Black, 11 East, 405, the law was admitted to be that without consent the distrainer ought either to have put the goods all into one room and kept possession of that only, or to have removed the goods out of the house; but very slight evidence of consent was admitted.

Impounding out of the county.

By the 52 Hen. III. c. 4, none shall cause any distress that he hath taken to be driven out of the county where it was taken; and if one neighbour do so to another of his own authority, (as for damage feasant, or rent-charge, 2 Inst. 206,) he shall make fine as for a thing done against the peace; and if the lord so presume to do against the tenant, he shall be grievously punished by amerciament. Before this act, at the common law, a man might have driven the distress to what county he pleased; which was mischievous for two causes: 1. Because the tenant was bound to give the beasts being impounded in an open pound sustenance, and being carried into another county by common intentment, he could have no knowledge where they were. 2. He could not know where to have a repliey; but the party was, before this statute, driven to his action upon the case. 2 Inst. 106. And albeit this statute be in the negative, yet if the tenancy be in one county, and the manor in another county, the lord may drive the distress which he taketh in the tenancy to his manor in the other county; for the tenant is out of both the said mischiefs; for the tenant, by doing suit and service to the manor by common intentment, may know what is done there, and therefore may give his beast sustenance. And to know where to have his repliey, the bailiff of the manor usually drives the cattle distrained to the pound of the manor. And hereby it is to be noted, that a case out of the mischief out of the meaning of the law, though it be within the latter. 2 Inst. 106.

And by the 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 12, s. 1, it is further enacted, that no distress of cattle shall be driven out of the hundred, rape, wapentake, or lathe, where such distress shall be taken, except it be to a pound covert within the same shire, not above three miles distant from the place where the said distress was taken; and no cattle nor other goods distrained for any cause at one time shall be impounded in several places, whereby the owner may be constrained to sue several replieyes; on pain of 100s. to the party grieving, and treble damages.

In Gimbert v. Peake, 2 Stra. 1272, the defendant justified impounding cattle damage feasant. It appeared that the impounding was in another county. And Lee, C. J. held, it did not make him a trespasser, though it subjected him to the penalty of stat. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 12; and the action should have been on the statute.

By the 2 W. & M. ss. 1, c. 5, s. 9, corn or hay, loose, &c. shall not be removed, &c. from the place where seized, but kept there till replieved or sold. See Com. Dig. Distress, (D. 1.)

without trespass. And by pound covert locked up or secured, where he cannot is meant a place covered, or close, as a go to them at his pleasure. house, or place where the goods are Impounding out of the hundred, &c.

In several places.

Corn or hay not removable.
IX.] Distress when taken, how to be proceeded in till Sale.

By the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 8, ante, 979, growing corn crops and product seized for rent, when ripe and cut, are to be impounded on the premises demised; and in case there be no proper place to impound them on the premises, then they are to be impounded in another place "as near as may be to the premises."

As to rescous and pound breach, see post, 1001.

Cattle distraint may not be worked or used. And the principle has been carried so far, that it seems to be the better opinion, that even milk kine cannot be milked by the distrainer, in order to prevent them from being damaged; because the owner would perhaps have come to milk his cattle before they had sustained any material injury, and it is not necessary for the security of the distrainer, who, if the cattle die without his default, may make another distress. Brettby, 241, and the authorities there cited.

So if the distress be lost by the act of God, as if the distress die in the pound, without any default in the distrainer, in such case he who made the distress may distrain again. 1 Salk. 248.

It is the distrainer's own fault, if he put the distress in a pound which will not hold it; but he cannot justify the tying of cattle in the pound; and if he tie a beast, and it is strangled, he must pay damages. S. C.

By the common law it seems the goods when distrained on for rent, ought to have been removed off the premises immediately, or at all events in a reasonable time after the taking. Mod. Ca. 215. But now by the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 10, ante, 990, they need not be so. By operation of that act, and the 2 W. & M. ss. 1, c. 5, s. 1, the removal ought to take place a reasonable time after the expiration of five days from the time of the taking, exclusive of the day of taking. Griffin v. Scott, 2 Ld. Raym. 1424; 1 Stra. 717; Pitt v. Sheu, 4 B. & A. 208; 1 H. Bla. 15. In 2 Ld. Raym. 1424, it was considered three days after the fifth day was an unreasonable time; but in 4 B. & A. 208, eight days after was considered reasonable; this reasonable time however being a question for a jury, no fixed rule can be laid down, each case depending on its own peculiar facts.

By consent, which is not unusual, the party distraining may keep in possession on the premises after the expiration of the time allowed for that purpose; otherwise he would become a trespasser. 11 East, 395. Slight evidence of such consent will suffice. 11 East, 405, n. a. The request of the tenant will not it seems justify the landlord in detaining the goods of a lodger upon the premises beyond the proper time of settling. See Fisher v. Algar, 2 C. & P. 374. By the request not to remove, the tenant or owner of the goods does not waive any right of action he may have. 1 Bing. 401; 4 D. & R. 539; 2 B. & C. 821, S. C.

Generally speaking there does not appear to be any notice of removal requisite; where, however, the distress is on growing corn, hay, or product, as allowed by the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 8, ante, 979; the tenant must in pursuance of the 9th section (ante, 979,) of that act, have notice of the place where the goods are lodged given within a week after such lodging.

After the expiration of five days, exclusive of the day of taking, it is necessary before selling that "the person distraining," shall, with the sheriff or undersheriff of the county, or with the constable of the hundred, parish, or place where such distress shall be taken, (who are required to be aiding or assisting therein,) cause the goods distrained to be appraised by two sworn appraisers, (whom such sheriff, undersheriff, or constable, are empowered to swear,) who are to appraise the same truly according to the best of their understandings. 2 W. & M. ss. 1, c. 5, s. 1, post, 993.

The person distraining must not be one of the appraisers. B. N. P. 81; 1 Stark. 172; 2 Bing. 337. The appraiser must not be sworn before the constable of another parish. M. & M. C. N. P. 172; 1 H. Bla. 13. Where the premises partly lay in the hundred of Andover, and partly in the hundred of Kinalsay, the constable of Kinalsay was held the proper officer to

HOW TO PROCEED AFT SEIZE AND BEFORE SALE.

Growing corn, &c.
11 G. 3, c. 19, s. 8.
Pound breach.
Using the goods distrained.

Distress dying.
Killed.

Distress when taken, how to be proceeded in till Sale.

The true construction of stat. 2 W. & M. ss. 1, c. 5, post, 993, in requiring an appraisement, is, that the value of the goods might be ascertained by a fair estimate made at the time of the distress; and that, if on such value there should not be thought sufficient without them, the landlord might distrain beasts of the plough. Where, therefore, there had been such an appraisement on oath, and no evidence was offered to show that there was a sufficient distress without taking the beasts of the plough, the Court of Exchequer held, that it was not necessary that the other goods should all have been first disposed of before the latter were sold; unless they were wrongfully taken in the first instance, such sale was not a sufficient ground to support an action on stat. 51 Hen. III. stat. 4. Jenner v. Yolland, 6 Price, 3.

---

X. Repleving the Distress. (a)

Replevy.

It is worthy of observation how provident the law is, that men's beasts, cattle, or other goods be not unjustly or excessively distrained; and if they be, that deliverance be speedily made of them by replevy (or taking back the pledge); otherwise the husbandry of the realm, and men's other trades, might be overthrown or hindered. 2 Inst. 137.

To which purpose it is enacted by stat. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 12, s. 3, that the sheriff of every county shall, at his first county day, or in two months after he hath received his patent of office, appoint and proclaim in the shire town four deputies at the least, dwelling not above twelve miles one distant from another, to make replevies; on pain of 5l. for every month that he shall lack such deputy or deputies, half to the king, and half to him that shall sue in any court of record.

11 Geo. 2, c. 19. The sheriff or other officer, having authority to grant replevins, shall, in every replevin of distress for rent, take in his own name from the plaintiff and two sureties, a bond in double the value of the goods distrained, to be ascertained on the oath of one witness not interested in the goods, and conditioned for prosecuting the suit with effect, and without delay, and for duly returning the goods distrained, in case a return shall be awarded, before any deliverance be made of the distress; and the sheriff shall assign such bond to the avowant, or person making comansance. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 23. In Richards v. Acton, a rule was made on J. G. the replevin clerk, R. J. the undersheriff, and E. P. the clerk of the county court, to discover the names of the pledges taken upon granting the replevin in this cause, and to show cause why they should not pay the defendant 57l. 15s., being the damages and costs recovered by him in this cause, together with the costs of the application. The distress was for rent; and on replevin brought the defendant had a verdict with the damages and costs above-mentioned. On cause being shown, the court held that as well the high sheriff and undersheriff as the replevin clerk (who is their deputy) are answerable to the defendant in replevin for the sufficiency of the pledges; they therefore discharged the rule against the county court clerk, but with regard to the high and undersheriff, and the replevin clerk, they made the rule absolute. 2 Bla. Rep. 1220.

To the avowant or person making comansance]—Avowry is where one takes a distress, and the person distrained sues a replevin; then he that took the distress must avow and justify in his plea, for what cause he took it, if he took it in his own right; and this is called an avowry; if he took it in the right of another, then, when he hath showed the cause, he must make comansance.

(a) As to replevins and the action of replevin in general, see Wilkinson on Replevin, Bradby on Distresses.
X.]  Repleving the Distress.

Sance of the taking, as bailiff or servant to him in whose right he took it.

Terme de la Ley.

And the sheriff having taken bond from the plaintiff in replevin as aforesaid, he ought forthwith to make deliverance of the goods or cattle distrained; and if the distress be drawn into a house or other strong-hold, the sheriff or his bailiff, after demand made for deliverance of the distress, may break open the house to repley them; for though a man's house is privileged by common law for himself, his family, and his own goods, so that the sheriff cannot break it open to attach any of them, in a civil action at the suit of a private person, yet a man's house could not privilege or protect the goods of another person unjustly taken, so as to prevent the officer to make replevin; because the privilege and security of a man's house could but protect his own goods.

2 Inst. 140.

The owner may repley at any time before the goods are actually sold, though after the five days.  See Jacob v. King, 1 Marsh. 135; 5 Taunt. 457.

There is no eventual benefit to be derived from repleving the goods and bringing an action of replevin, if ever so small a sum was due for rent, and the entry was lawful; replevin may certainly be brought to try the legality of the distress for rent; but if any sum were due, and the distress were for a greater sum, or excessive, or otherwise irregular, the remedy should be by action on the case.  See 1 Chit. Plead. 130; post, 997.

The sheriff is responsible to the landlord for the sufficiency of the sureties in the replevin bond, as also for the sufficiency of the pledges, under the stat. Westm. 2, c. 2; and an action on the case may be maintained against him if they or either be not sufficient sureties.  See H. N. P. 60. But the sheriff is not liable if the sureties were to all appearances, and after his using reasonable diligence and inquiry, sufficient at the time, though it turn out afterwards otherwise. 5 Taunt. 225; 1 Marsh. 27, S. C.; 8 Moore, 27; 3 Stark. 168. In such action the sheriff is liable to that amount only for which the sureties could have been liable, if sufficient. 4 T. R. 433; 2 H. Blac. 547. If notice were previously given to the sheriff, it seems the costs of an ineffectual action against the sureties might be recovered.  See Baker v. Garratt, 3 Bing. 56.

As to the liability of the sureties and the action against them on the bond, see cases and law, 1 Chit. Col. Civ. Stat. 676, notes.

XI. Sale and Costs of the Distress.

When impounded, the goods were formerly only in the nature of a pledge or security to compel the performance of satisfaction; and upon this account hath been held, that the distrainer is not at liberty to work or use a distrainted beast. And thus the law still continues with regard to beasts taken tamage feastant, and distresses for suit or services, which must remain impounded till the owner makes satisfaction, or contests the right of distraining, by repleving the chattels. 3 Bla. Com. 13; ante, 973.

Distress taken for an offence presented in the leet may of common right be sold, because it is a court of record; but otherwise it is of distresses in courts that are not of record. 12 Mod. 330.

A distress for an amercement in a court-baron cannot be sold; but in such a case a distress infinite shall go. 1 Bulst. 52, 53.

In like manner, before stat. 2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, distress for rent in arrear could not be sold, but only detainted till payment of the rent: but by the said statute, sect. 1, it is enacted, that "whereas the most ordinary and ready way for recovery of arrears of rent is by distress, yet such distresses not being to be sold, but only detainted as pledges for enforcing the payment of such rent, the persons distraining have little benefit thereby:" therefore from henceforth, "where any goods or chattels shall be distrained (a) for any rent Distress in nature of a pledge.

Sale of distress for offence presented in leet.

For amercement in court-baron.

2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, authorising a sale on distress for rent.

(a) See forms, post, (No. 1 to 6.)

3 S

Vol. I.

35 Distress for Rent.

SALE AND COUTS.

reserved and due upon any demise, lease, or contract whatsoever, and the tenant or owner of the goods so distrainted shall not, within five days next after such distress taken, and notice thereof (with cause of such taking) left at the chief mansion-house, or other most notorious place on the premises charged with the rent distrainted for, reply the same, with sufficient security to be given to the sheriff according to law, that then in such case, after such distress and notice as aforesaid, and expiration of the said five days, the person distrainting shall and may, with the sheriff or undersheriff of the county, or with the constable of the hundred, parish, or place where such distress shall be taken (who are hereby required to be aiding and assisting therein) cause the goods and chattels so distrainted to be appraised by two sworn appraisers (whom such sheriff, undersheriff, or constable are hereby empowered to swear) to appraise the same truly, according to the best of their understandings; and after such appraisement shall and may lawfully sell the goods and chattels so distrainted for the best price that can be gotten for the same, towards the satisfaction of the rent for which the said goods and chattels shall be distrainted, and of the charges of such distress, appraisement, and sale, leaving the overplus (if any) in the hands of the said sheriff, undersheriff or constable, for the owner's use."

Sect. 3 of the same act empowers the sale of corn and hay, &c. distraint loose on the premises.

By stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 8, the landlord may, in convenient time, appraise, sell, or otherwise dispose of the cattle, &c. (in this section allowed to be distrainted) towards satisfaction of the rent and charges of distress and sale; the appraisement to be taken thereof when cut, gathered, cured, and made, and not before. Vide ante, 979.

After complying with the requisites pointed out by those statutes, and which we have already noticed, the landlord may proceed to a sale.

By the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 10, the sale may take place on the premises or it may so elsewhere.

The sale must not take place within the five days, otherwise an action might be maintained, on the equity of the 2 W. & M., against the parties selling. 1 H. Blac. 13; 4 B. & A. 208. The five days are to be reckoned exclusive of the first; Pitt v. Show, 4 B. & A. 208; 1 H. Blac. 13; therefore the sale must not take place until the sixth day, exclusive of the day of taking. A reasonable time after the expiration of the five days is allowed to the landlord for appraising and selling the goods distrainted, for he cannot appraise or sell until after the five days have elapsed, and the act directs he shall sell for the best price; the making the appraisement, and notifying the intended sale and selling for the best price, must take some time after the expiration of the five days, and it is for a jury to say, in each case, whether more than reasonable time has been taken. Pitt v. Show, 4 B. & A. 208.
Sometimes the tenant or owner requests the landlord not to sell, and in such case he need not. The request must proceed from the owner of the goods

The sale need not be by auction, though it is usually so. The landlord and in general, any person may be a purchaser.

Upon the equity of the 2 W. & M., sess. 1, c. 5, s. 1, the distraintee must sell for the best price that can be obtained for the goods, and an action lies he do not. The price at which the goods were appraised will be presumed to be the best, until the contrary is proved. Walter v. Rumbal, 4 Mod. 390.
Com. Dig. (D. 8).

It appears that there is no order required by law to be observed in the sale of the goods, as where the beasts of the plough should be postponed to the other goods; and therefore it is not a cause of action that the beasts of the plough have been sold before the other goods were disposed of, where the distress
S. C.

It is not necessary that the sheriff or constable should be present at the sale, but the appraisers being regularly sworn, may with the distraintee procceed to sell. 4 Mod. 391; Com. Dig. Distraint, (D. 8).
Sale and Costs of the Distress:

We have already seen how growing crops should be sold, ante, 979. A sale of growing corn before it is ripe is void. See Owen v. Legh, 3 B. & A. 470.

Costs of Distress]—By the words of the 2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, s. 1, the distrainer for rent may deduct from the amount of the produce of the goods on sale, besides the rent, all reasonable charges attending the distress.

The man in possession of the goods, where the rent does not exceed 20l., is in general to be paid 2s. 6d. per day, if the tenant keeps him, and 3s. 6d. if he keeps himself.

By the 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 12, s. 2, “no person or persons shall take for keeping in pound, impounding or poundage of any manner of distress, above the sum of 4d. for any one whole distress, that shall be so impounded; and where less hath been used, there to take less; upon the pain of 5l., to be paid to the party grieved, over and beside such money as he shall take above the sum of 4d.; any usage or prescription to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding.”

By stat. 57 Geo. III. c. 93, intituled “An Act to regulate the costs of distresses levied for payment of small rents,” after reciting that “whereas divers persons acting as brokers, and distraining on the goods and chattels of others, or employed in the course of such distresses, have of late made excessive charges, to the great oppression of poor tenants and others; and it is expedient to check such practices,” enacts, that “no person whatsoever making any distress for rent, where the sum demanded and due shall not exceed the sum of 20l. for and in respect of such rent, nor any person whatsoever employed in any manner in making such distress, or doing any act whatsoever in the course of such distress, or for carrying the same into effect, shall have, take or receive out of the produce of the goods or chattels distrained upon and sold, or from the tenant distrained on, or from the landlord, or from any other person whatsoever, any other or more costs and charges for and in respect of such distress, or any matter or thing done therein, than such as are fixed and set forth in the schedule hereunto annexed (a) and appropriated to each act which shall have been done in the course of such distress; and no person or persons whatsoever shall make any charge whatsoever for any act, matter, or thing mentioned in the said schedule, unless such act shall have been really done.”

Sect. 2. “That if any person or persons whatsoever shall in any manner levy, take, or receive from any person or persons whatsoever, or retain or take from the produce of any goods sold for the payment of such rent, any other or greater costs and charges than are mentioned and set down in the said schedule, or make any charge whatsoever for any act, matter, or thing mentioned in the said schedule and not really done, it shall be lawful for the party or parties aggrieved by such practices to apply to any one justice of the peace for the county, city, or town, and acting for the division where such distress shall have been made, or in any manner proceeded in, for the redress of his, her, or their grievance so occasioned; whereupon such justice shall summon the person or persons complained of to appear before him at a reasonable time to be fixed in such summons; and such justice shall examine into the matter of such complaint by all legal ways and means, and also hear in like manner the defence of the person or persons complained of; and if it shall appear to such justice that the person or persons complained of shall have levied, taken, received, or had other and greater costs and charges than are mentioned or fixed in the schedule hereunto annexed, or made any charge for any matter or thing mentioned in the said schedule, such act, matter, or thing not having been really done, such justice shall order and adjudge treble the amount of the monies so unlawfully taken, to be paid by the person or persons so having acted to the party or parties who shall thus have preferred his, her, or their complaint thereof, together with full costs; and in case of non-payment of any monies or costs so ordered and adjudged to be paid, such justice shall forthwith issue his warrant to levy the same by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the party or parties ordered to pay such monies or costs, rendering the surplus (if any) to the owner or owners, after the payment of the charges of such distress and sale; and in case no sufficient distress can be had, such justice shall by warrant under his hand commit the party or parties to the common gaol or prison within the limits of the jurisdiction of such justice, there to remain until such order or judgment shall be satisfied."
Distress for Rent.

Sect. 3. "That it shall be lawful for such justice, at the request of the party complaining or complained against, to summon all persons as witnesses, and to administer an oath to them, touching the matter of such complaint or defence against it; and if any person or persons so summoned shall not obey such summons, without any reasonable or lawful excuse, or refuse to be examined upon oath, or if a Quaker, upon solemn affirmation, then every such person so offending shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding 40s., to be ordered, levied, and paid in such manner and by such means, and with such power of commitment, as is hereinbefore directed as to such order and judgment to be given between the party or parties in the original complaint, excepting so far as regards the form of the order, and hereinafter provided for."

Sect. 4. "That it shall be lawful for such justice, if he shall find that the complaint of the party or parties aggrieved is not well founded, to order and adjudge costs, not exceeding 20s., to be paid to the party or parties complained against, which order shall be carried into effect, and levied and paid in such manner, and with like power of commitment, as is hereinbefore directed as to the order and judgment founded on such original complaint: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall empower such justice to make any order or judgment against the landlord, for whose benefit any such distress shall have been made, unless such landlord shall have personally levied such distress; provided always, that no person or persons who shall be aggrieved by any distress for rent, or by any proceedings had in the course thereof, or by any costs and charges levied upon them in respect of the same, shall be barred from any legal or other suit or remedy which he, she, or they might have had before the passing of this act, excepting so far as any complaint to be preferred by virtue of this act shall have been determined by the order and judgment of the justice before whom it shall have been heard and determined; and which order and judgment shall and may be given in evidence, under the plea of the general issue, in all cases where the matter of such complaint shall be made the subject of any action."

Sect. 5. "That such orders and judgments on such complaints shall be made in the form in the schedule hereunto annexed, and may be proved before any court by proof of the signature of the justice by such order and judgment; and such orders as regard persons who may have been summoned as witnesses shall be made in such form as to such justice shall seem most fit and convenient."

Sect. 6. "That every broker or other person who shall make and levy any distress whatsoever shall give a copy of his charges, and of all the costs and charges of any distress whatsoever, signed by him, to the person or persons on whose goods and chattels any distress shall be levied, although the amount of the rent demanded shall exceed the sum of 20l."

Sect. 7. "That a fair printed copy of this act shall be hung up in some convenient place in such halls or rooms where the justices of each and every county in England and Wales shall hold either their quarter or other sessions."

SCHEDULE of the Limitation of Costs and Charges on Distresses for Small Renta.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Description</th>
<th>£</th>
<th>s</th>
<th>d</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Levying distress</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>0 3 0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Man in possession, per day</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>0 2 6</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Sale and Costs of the Distress.

Appraisement, whether by one broker or more, 6d. in the 1l. on the value of the goods.

Stamp, the lawful amount thereof.

All expenses of advertisements, if any such . . . . . 0 10 0

Catalogues, sale and commission, and delivery of goods, 1l. in the 1l. on the net produce of the sale.

The 6th section of this act, compelling brokers to give copies of their charges of distress, applies only to cases where the goods have been sold. See 5 Bingh. 39.

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 17, extends the provisions of this act of 57 Geo. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 17. III. to distresses for rates, taxes, impositions, and assessments, ante, 630.

Overplus—After complying with all the foregoing requisites, if there be any overplus, after paying the rent and charges of the distress, appraisement and sale, the same should be immediately left in the hands of the sheriff, undersheriff, or constable of the hundred, parish, or place where the distress was taken, for the owner’s use; see 2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, s. 1, ante, 993, 994; otherwise a special action on the case will lie.

XII. Irregularity in the Proceedings and Tender of Amends.

The 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 19, declares, that where any distress shall be made for any kind of rent justly due, and any irregularity shall be afterwards done by the party distraining, or his agent, the distress itself shall not be therefore deemed unlawful, nor the distrainer a trespasser ab initio, but the party aggrieved may recover satisfaction for the special damage in an action of trespass or on the case, at the election of the plaintiff; and if he recover, he shall have full costs.

Sect. 20. But no tenant shall recover on such action, if tender of amends hath been made before the action brought.

If the first entry be illegal and unjustifiable, as if the party distraining should break open the outer door or the like, his subsequent proceedings would not be protected, it should seem, under this act, and he would be a wrong-doer in every respect. See M. & M. 173. Trespass may be maintained if the distrainer keep too long in possession; 11 East, 395; or if he expel the tenant the premises. 1 East, 139. Where a distress is made after a sufficient tender, and there has been no subsequent demand, trespass or case lies. 1 B. & Crec. 145; 2 D. & R. 256, S. C. For any subsequent irregularity, the remedy is by special action on the case. See various precedents of declarations, 2 Chit. Pleading, 717, &c.

If the judge certify under the 43 Eliz. c. 6, it will deprive the plaintiff of costs, notwithstanding the enactments as to them in the above act of 11 Geo. II. 5 B. & A. 796.

XIII. Rent in case of an Extent, or Execution, or Bankruptcy, &c.

In R. v. Cotton, T. 1755, it was determined by the barons of the exchequer, and affirmed on a writ of error, that if a distress be made for rent, and before the five days given by act of parliament have expired, an extent is issued, though it be not levied, for a debt due to the crown, the extent shall take place of the distress, because the distrainer neither gains a general nor a special property, nor even the possession of the cattle or things distrained. The distress is only a pledge in his hands for the rent. But the extent binds the property of the goods of the king’s debtor from the test of it. Park, 112.

But by stat. 8 Ann. c. 14, s. 1, no goods being on any message, lands, Arrears of rent to be first paid not or tenements, leased for life, term of years, at will, or otherwise, shall be liable to be taken by execution, unless the party, at whose suit the execution is sued out, shall, before the removal of such goods from off the premises, pay to the landlord or his bailiff all such rent as shall be then due for the premises, provided that it amount not to more than one year's rent; and if the said arrears shall exceed one year's rent, then the party paying such landlord one year's rent may proceed to execute his judgment.
Distress for Rent.

If the sheriff does not comply with this act, he will be liable to an action at suit of the landlord. 1 Stra. 212. But he will not be so liable, unless there be a demand for the rent before the removal by the party entitled to it. The sheriff is not bound to find out what rent is due to the landlord and pay it him, but the landlord must give him notice. Smith v. Tanton, 3 Term. 400; Arnott v. Garnett, 3 B. & A. 440. No particular form of notice is requisite. Andrews v. Dixon, 3 B. & A. 645; 4 Moore, 473. In 3 B. & A. 440, the court on motion ordered a year's rent out of the proceeds, while in the sheriff's hands, to be paid to the landlord, though the sheriff had no notice of the rent being due till after the removal. But an action for money had and received could not be sustained against him. Green v. Austin, 3 Camp. 260.

A demand on the sheriff by a person to whom administration is afterwards granted will not operate by relation. 2 Stra. 97; 3 Term. 400.

There must be a subsisting tenancy to entitle the landlord to the rent. Hodgson v. Gacogne, 5 B. & A. 88. In an agreement for assigning a lease for a sum of money, to be paid on or before a distant day, the lessee agreed to make some alterations on the premises, which his assignee was to occupy, paying until the completion of the assignment "at the rate of 100l. per year, in half yearly payments." The lessee afterwards agreed to allow 12l. for some of the alterations he ought to have made, the rent were never completed, and the assignee paid in advance 10l. It was held that the sheriff levying on the goods of the assignee under a fi. fa. was bound to pay over to lessee half a year's rent due, and that the 12l. and 10l. were in part payment of rent, as they were intended to be allowed out of the first payment due by the assignee to the lessee. Saunders v. Magrave, 6 B. & Cres. 324; 2 C. & P. 264, S. C.

The landlord, to be entitled to the rent, must also be the immediate one and not the ground landlord. 2 Stra. 787.

An executor or administrator is entitled to arrears accrued in the testator's lifetime; 1 Stra. 212; and so is a trustee of an outstanding satisfied term in trust for mortgagees. 4 Moore, 473; 2 B. & B. 67.

The statute extends to an execution at the suit of the defendant for costs. 2 Wils. 140. But a commission of bankruptcy is not an execution within the statute. 15 East. 230. Goods taken on a copias utlagatum are within it. Bumb. 5, 194, 269; 7 T. R. 284. So are goods taken on a pone per radios issuing out of the court of pleas of Durham; in which case the goods are forfeited to the bishop, who afterwards assigns them over to the party. Brandling v. Barrington, 6 B. & Cres. 467.

The sheriff must satisfy the landlord in the first instance; 4 Moore, 473; and before the removal of any part of the goods. Id.; 2 B. & C. 67. A bill of sale is a removal. Barnes, 211.

No deduction for poundage can be made from the rent. Stra. 643.

In case of two executions, there shall not be two years' rent paid to the landlord; for the intent of the act was to reserve to the landlord only the rent for one year, and it was his own fault if he let more run in arrear. Therefore one year's rent to the landlord being paid to him on the first execution, the sheriff is not to levy for him again any thing on a subsequent execution; 2 Stra. 1024; 2 B. & B. 362, 366; 5 Moore, 97, S. C.; unless perhaps the goods be not removed in a reasonable time. 1 Price, 277; 1 M. & S. 711.

The landlord's claim under the statute may be supported for forehand rent. 7 Price, 690. So for rent that falls due on the day of the levy. Todd, 8 ed. 1054. But rent arising after the seizure under the execution is not within the act, and cannot be deducted. Hoakins v. Knight, 1 M. & S. 245.
XIII. In case of an Extent, Execution, &c.

sheriff taking corn in the blade under a fi. fa., and selling it before rent due, is not liable to account to the landlord of the defendant under this act of Anne, for rent accruing subsequently to the levy and sale, although he has given notice, and though the corn be not removed from the premises until long afterwards, when a considerable portion of rent has become due; the landlord’s remedy in such case is by distress. Guillaume v. Barker, 1 Price, 274. And the landlord of premises on which goods have been seized under an extent in aid is not entitled under the act to call on the sheriff to pay twelve months rent due before the tests of the writ. R. v. Decoeur, 2 Price, 17.

Bankruptcy and Insolvency]—The landlord may distrain before an act of bankruptcy by his tenant for the whole amount due. After an act of bankruptcy also he may distrain, even although the messenger be actually in possession of the goods on the premises; 1 Atk. 103; 2 T. R. 600; and formerly he might have distrained for the whole rent due, but now by the 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, s. 74, the distress shall not be available for more than one year’s rent, and the landlord must prove under the commission for the residue. The 31st section of the General Insolvent Act, 7 Geo. IV. c. 57, contains a similar provision.

Though in the case of the tenant’s becoming bankrupt a landlord may distrain for his rent upon the bankrupt’s goods, either before or after the assignation under the commission, yet if he neglect to do so, and suffer the goods to be sold by the assignee, he can only come in for his rent pro rata with the other creditors. Anom. 1 Atk. 102; and Ex parte Deschames, ib. 103; and see Arch. B. L. 83.

So in the case Ex parte Devisme, Jan. 1776, where the question was, whether the landlord was entitled to have a year’s rent paid to him out of the effects of a bankrupt (his tenant), such effects having been seized under the commission, and removed by the messenger from the demised premises in respect of which the rent was in arrear, Lord Chancellor Bathurst was clearly of opinion, upon the authority of the two cases from 1 Atk. (supra), that the landlord could only come in as a common creditor. And he added, that if the legislature had intended to prefer the landlord, they would have done so under the statute of Anne, as they did in the insolvent debtor’s act. MS. Vide Cooke’s B. L. 191, 6 ed.

In Bradby v. Ball, 1 Bro. 427, it was decided that the landlord has no lien upon the goods after they are removed from the premises.

——

XIV. Rent on Death of Tenant for Life.

The stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 15, declares, whereas where any lessor or landlord, having only an estate for life in the lands, tenements, or hereditaments demised, happens to die before or on the day on which any rent is reserved or made payable, such rent or any part thereof is not by law recoverable by the executors or administrators of such lessor or landlord; nor is the person in reversion entitled thereto, other than for the use and occupation from the death of the tenant for life, of which advantage hath often been taken by the under-tenants, who thereby avoid paying anything for the same; for remedy thereof, it is enacted, that where any tenant for life shall happen to die before or on the day on which any rent was reserved or made payable, upon any demise or lease of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, which determined on the death of such tenant for life, the executors or administrators of such tenant for life may, in an action on the case, recover of such under-tenant, if such tenant for life die on the day on which the same was made payable, the whole, or if before such day, then a proportion of such rent, according to the time such tenant for life lived of the last year, or quarter of a year, or other time in which the said rent was growing due.

Upon the death of tenant in tail, the rent shall be apportioned. In Distress for Rent.

XIV. Rent on Death of Tenant for Life.

Pagett v. Gee, Dec. 4, 1753, M.S. (Burn), and Amb. 198. Tenant in tail, remainder to the defendant in fee, leases for years, and dies without issue a week before the day of payment of the half year’s rent. The lessee, at the day, pays all the half year’s rent to the defendant. The executor of the tenant in tail brings his bill for apportionment of the rent.—By the Lord Chancellor Hardwicke: This point has never been determined; but this is so strong a case, that I shall make it a precedent. There are in it two grounds for relief in equity. The first arises on the statute of the 11 Geo. II. The second arises on the tenant’s having submitted to pay the rent to the defendant.—

The relief arising upon the statute is either from the strict legal construction or equity formed upon the reason of it. And here it is proper to consider what the mischief was before the act, and what remedy is provided at common law. If tenant for life, or any who had a determinable estate, died but a day before the rent reserved on a lease of his became due, the rent was lost. For no one was entitled to recover it. His representatives could not, because they could only bring an action for use and occupation; and that would not lie where there was a lease, but debt or covenant. Nor could the remainderman; because it did not accrue in his time. Now this act appoints the apportioning the rent, and gives the remedy. But there are two descriptions of the persons to whose executors the remedy is given. In the preamble, it is one having only an estate for life. In the enacting part, it is tenant for life. Now tenant in tail comes expressly within the mischief. I do not know how the judges at common law would construe it, but I should be inclined in this court to extend it to them. I should make no doubt were this the case of tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct; for he is considered in many respects as tenant for life only. He cannot suffer a recovery. He may be enjoined from committing waste of trees growing for ornament or shelter, though not from committing common waste. Were it the case of tenant for years determinable on lives, he certainly must be included within the act, though it says only tenant for life: it would be playing with the words to say otherwise. These cases show the necessity of construing this act beyond the words. Tenant in tail has certainly a larger estate than a mere tenant for life; for he has the inheritance in him, and may when he pleases turn it into a fee: but if he does not, at the instant of his death he has but an interest for life. Such too is the case of a wife tenant in tail ex provisone mariti. Upon this point I give no absolute opinion. As to the equity arising from this statute, I know no better rule than this, equitas sequitur legem.—But I ground my opinion in this case upon the tenant’s having submitted to pay the rent. He has held himself bound in conscience to pay it, for the use and occupation of the land the last half year. He paid it to the defendant, which he was not bound to do in law. And in such a case the persons he pays it too shall be accountable, and considered as receiving it for those who are in equity entitled to it. The division must be that prescribed by the statute; and then the plaintiff is entitled to such a proportion of the rent as accrued during the testator’s life. And accordingly it was decreed.

Sir W. D. Evans, in his Collection of Statutes, has strongly impugned the authority of this case, as also Mr. Swanston in his notes to Ex parte Smyth, 1 Swani. R. 341, where the law relative to this section of the above act is collected. See also 2 Sound. Rep. by Patteson & Williams, 288 e, n. 2.

Where a tenant for life, in pursuance of a leasing power, has in due form granted a lease, which continues after his death, the whole rent goes to the remainder-man, who may sue for it. 1 Swani. 337; 8 Ves. 311; 2 Ves. & B. 394.

XV. Rent how far Recoverable by Executors or Administrators.

By the 32 Hen. VIII. c. 37, s. 1, forasmuch as by the order of the common law the executors or administrators of tenants in fee simple, fee tail, XV.

Rent how far recoverable by Executors.

and for term of life, of rent services, rent charges, rent seacks, and fee farms, have no remedy to recover such arrears of the said rents or fee farms as were due to their testators in their lives, nor yet the heirs of such testator, nor any person having the reversion of his estate after his decease, may distrain or have action to levy the same, it is enacted, that the executors and administrators of every such person to whom any such rent or fee farm shall be due and not paid at the time of his death, may have an action of debt for the same against the tenant who ought to have paid the same, or against his executors or administrators; or may distraint upon the premises, so long as they continue in the possession of such tenant in demesne, who ought immediately to have paid the same to the testator in his life, or of any other person claiming the same only by and from such tenant by purchase, gift, or descent.

In like manner the husband may have action, or distrain for arrears due in the life-time and in the right of his wife. Sect. 3.

And if any person shall have any rents or fee farms for the life of any other person, which shall be behind and unpaid at the death of such other person, if his executors or administrators, may have action of debt against the tenant in demesne that ought to have paid the same when it was first due, his executors or administrators, or may distrain for the same upon the premises in such like manner as he might have done if the person by whose death the estate was determined had been in full life. Sect. 4.

Fee farm is, when the lord upon the creation of the tenancy reserves to himself and his heirs either the rent for which it was before let to farm, or at least a fourth part of the value; without homage, fealty, or other services, beyond what are especially comprised in the feoffment; and it is called a fee farm rent, because a farm rent is reserved upon a grant in fee. 2 Inst. 44.

The recital of the above act is explained in Co. Lit. 162 a, b. Lord Coke there recommends the remedy by distress as most plain and certain.

The act is a remedial law, and extends to all tenants for life. Co. Lit. 162 a, b.

A creditor by elegit of tenant for life of a rent charge is not within the act; B. N. P. 56; nor the executors of a grantee of a rent charge for years, if he so long live. Id.

It seems an unsettled question whether the executor of a person seised in fee of land, who had demised it to a tenant for years, can, after the death of the lessor, distrain for arrears of rent. See Selw. N. P. 5 ed. 664; B. N. P. 57; 2 Moore, 48; 1 B. & B. 279; 8 Taunt. 159, S. C.

If a tenant for years underlet for years and die, it is clear that his executor may distrain for arrears at common law; for such arrears were never separated from the reversion, and both belong to the executor. Latch. 211.

The act does not extend to copyhold rents. Yelv. 135.

XVI. Of Rescous and Pound Breach.

By the common law, if a man break the pound or the lock of it, or part of it, he greatly offendeth against the peace, and doth trespass to the king, and to the lord of the fee, and to the sheriff, and hundredors, in breach of the peace, and to the party, and to the delaying of justice; and therefore hue and cry is to be levied against him, as against those who break the peace. Mir. c. 2, s. 26. And the party who distrained may take the goods again, wheresoever he shall find them, and impound them again. 1 Inst. 47.

The forcibly rescuing goods distrained, and the rescuing cattle by the breach of the pound in which they have been placed, have been considered as offences at common law, and made the subject of indictment. 1 Russ. 363. (a)

An indictment will lie for taking goods forcibly, if such taking be proved to be a breach of the peace; but as a mere trespass, without circumstances of violence, is not indictable, it has been doubted whether even a pound breach, which has been considered a greater offence at common law than a rescue, is an indictable offence, if unaccompanied by a breach of the peace. But, on the other hand, it has been submitted, that as pound breach is an injury and insult to public justice, it is indictable as such at common law. 2 Citen. C. L 204, note (B); 1 Russ. 363.

(a) See form, (No. 17), post.

The civil remedy, however, given by stat. 2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, s. 4, will, in most cases of a pound breach, or a rescue of goods distrained for rent, be found the most desirable mode of proceeding where the offenders are responsible persons. That statute enacts, that, upon pound breach or rescous of goods distrained for rent, the person grievous shall, in a special action of the case, recover treble damages and costs against the offenders or against the owner of the goods if they come to his use.

Treble damages. In Firth v. Purvis, 5 T. R. 432, it was held to be no answer to an action on this statute, that the rent in demand was tendered after the distress and impounding.

Treble costs, &c. In Leason v. Storey, 1 Lea. Ryes. 20, it was adjudged that the costs shall be trebled as well as the damages.

What shall be a rescous. In the case of Deacon v. Morris, 2 B. & A. 393, it was decided that in an action on a statute which gives treble damages, the plaintiff is entitled to treble costs as well as treble damages.

Where a man hath taken distress, and the cattle distrained, as he is driving them to the pound, go into the owner's house, if he that took the distress demand them of the owner, and he deliver them not, this is a rescous in law. 1 Inst. 161; 6 Bac. Abr. tit. Rescue, (A.)

There can, however, be no rescous but where the party has had the actual possession of the cattle or other things whereof the rescous is supposed to be made; for if a man come to arrest another or to distress, and be disturbed regularly, his remedy is by action on the case. 1 Inst. 161; 6 Bac. Abr. 87; and the authorities there cited.

If a distress be taken without cause before it is impounded, the party may make a rescous, but if it be impounded he cannot justify the breach of the pound to take it out of the pound, because the distress is then in the custody of the law; if, however, the pound be unlocked, it seems he may take them. See B. N. P. 61.

As to the punishment, &c. of persons guilty of a pound breach on a distress made under a Turnpike Act, see post, Rightways, Vol. III. p. 203, 204.

Provision for landlords where tenants desert the premises.

11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 16. By stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 16, after reciting that "whereas landlords are often great sufferers by tenants running away in arrear, and not only suffering the demised premises to lie uncultivated without any distress thereon, whereby their landlords or lessors might be satisfied for their rent-arrears, but also refusing to deliver up the possession of the demised premises, whereby the landlords are put to the expense and delay of recovering in ejectment;" it is enacted, "that from and after the said 24th day of June, 1738, if any tenant holding any lands, tenements or hereditaments, at a rack-rent, or where the rent reserved shall be full three-fourths of the yearly value of the demised premises, who shall be in arrear for one year's rent, shall desert the demised premises, and leave the same uncultivated or unoccupied, so as no sufficient distress can be had to counteract the arrears of rent; it shall and may be lawful to and for two or more justices of the peace of the county, riding, division or place, (having no interest in the demised (a) See form, (No. 21), post.
XVII. Tenant deserting Premises.

1008 Tenant deserting Premises.

premises,) at the request (a) of the lessor or landlord, lessors or landlords, or his, her or their bailiff or receiver, to go upon and view the same, and to affix, or cause to be affixed, on the most notorious part of the premises, notice (a) in writing, what day (at the distance of fourteen days at least) they will return to take a second view thereof; and if upon such second view the tenant, or some person on his or her behalf, shall not appear and pay the rent in arrear, or there shall not be sufficient distress upon the premises; then the said justices may put the landlord or landlords, lessor or lessors, into the possession of the said demised premises; and the lease thereof to such tenant, as to any demise therein contained only, shall from thenceforth become void."

Sect. 17. "That such proceedings of the said justices shall be examinable in a summary way by the next justice or justices of assize of the respective counties in which such lands or premises lie; and if they lie in the city of London or county of Middlesex, by the judges of the Courts of King’s Bench or Common Pleas; and if in the counties palatine of Chester, Lancaster, or Durham, then before the judges thereof; and if in Wales, then before the courts of grand sessions (b) respectively; who are hereby respectively empowered to order restitution to be made to such tenant, together with his or her expenses and costs, to be paid by the lessor or landlord, lessors or landlords, if they shall see cause for the same; and in case they shall affirm the act of the said justices, to award costs not exceeding 5l. for the frivolous appeal."

In this and similar cases, justices ought to make a record of the whole proceedings. In the case of Batten v. Carew, in trespass against two magistrates for giving plaintiff’s landlord possession of a farm as a deserted farm, they produced in evidence a record of their proceedings under that act, which set forth all such circumstances as were necessary to give them jurisdiction, and by which it appeared that they had pursued the directions of the statute; it was held that this record was conclusive as an answer to the action. "It is a general rule and principle of law," said Abbott, C. J. in delivering his opinion on this case, "that where justices of the peace have an authority given to them by an act of parliament, and they appear to have acted within the jurisdiction so given, and to have done all that they are required by the act to do in order to originate their jurisdiction, a conviction drawn up in due form and remaining in force, is a protection in any action brought against them for the act so done." See Batten v. Carew, 5 D. & R. 558; 3 B. & C. 649, S. C. infra.

The provisions of the above statute are extended, by stat. 57 Geo. III. c. 52, to tenants who shall be in arrear one half year’s rent, and who shall hold the lands under any demise or agreement, whether written or verbal, and although no right or power of re-enter be reserved or given to the landlord in case of non-payment of rent.

In the case of Exparte Pilton, 1 B. & A. 369, where a tenant ceased to reside on the premises for several months, and left them without any furniture or sufficient other property to answer the year’s rent, it was held that the landlord might properly proceed under stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 16, to recover the possession, although he knew where the tenant then was, and although the justices found a servant of the tenant on the premises, when they first went to view the same.

It is not necessary that any information or complaint on oath should be made in order to justify the interference of magistrates under the above act. Batten v. Carew, 5 D. & R. 558; 3 B. & Cress. 649, S. C.

XVIII. Landlord Re-entering on Non-payment.

In case where an half year’s rent shall be in arrear, and the landlord or lessor hath right by law to re-enter for non-payment thereof, he may, without

(a) See form, (No. 22), post.

(b) The Welsh jurisdiction is now abolished by the 1 Will. IV. c. 70, post, Wales, Vol. V.
Distress for Rent.

any formal demand or re-entry, serve a declaration in ejectment (the statute here contains a direction as to the mode of proceeding in certain particular cases): and on recovering judgment and execution without payment of rent and arrears together with full costs, and without bill filed within six months after execution, shall hold the premises discharged from the lease. But this not to bar the right of any mortgagee, provided the mortgagee, within six months after judgment and execution executed, pay all rent in arrear, and costs and damages, and perform the lessee’s covenants. And if the defendant file a bill in equity, he shall not have an injunction against the proceedings at law, unless he shall bring the arrears into court, and also the costs taxed in the said suit. Provided, that if the tenant shall before the trial in ejectment pay or tender to the lessor, or pay into court all the arrears and costs, the proceedings on the ejectment shall thenceforth cease. 4 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 2, 3, 4.

The law and decisions on this provision will be found fully collected in 1 Chit. Col. Civ. Stat. 666, 7, n.

XIX. Tenant Holding Over.

We have already seen that there can be no distress where there is no tenancy, ante, 966. But by stat. 8 Ann. c. 14, s. 6, 7, whereas tenants par autre vic (that is, holding during the life of another person), and lessees for years, or at will, frequently hold over after the determination of the lease: and whereas after the determination of such or any other leases no distress can be made for arrears of rent that grew due on such leases before the determination thereof; it is therefore enacted that it shall be lawful to restrain after the determination of such lease, in the same manner as if it had not been determined: provided that the distress be made within six calendar months after the determination of the lease, and during the continuance of such landlord’s title or interest, and during the possession of the tenant from whom such arrears became due.

This act is not confined to a tortious holding over or to a holding over of the whole, and therefore a landlord who permits his tenant to retain possession of part of a farm after the tenancy has expired, may restrain under this act on that part within six months after the expiration of the tenancy. Nuttall v. Staunton, 6 D. & R. 155; 4 B. & Cress. 51, S. C.

A distress may be made after the expiration of six months, during the time that the tenant, according to the custom of the county, has the away-going crops on the premises. Bevan v. Delahay, 1 H. Black. 5. So where by agreement as well as custom of the county a tenant was to have the use of the barns and gate rooms to thresh out his corn and fodder his cattle till the May-day after the expiration of his term; his term expired at Michaelmas, 1824, and he was restrained by injunction, at the instance of his landlord, from carrying off the premises corn in the straw; and in January, 1825, his landlord distrained a rick of corn on the premises; it was held the distress was valid. Knight v. Bennett, 3 Bing. 364. But a termor, who lets to an under-tenant, cannot, after his term expired, enforce the continuance of the under-tenancy by distress, if the under-tenant refuse to acknowledge him as landlord, or to pay him under threat of distress, although the under-tenant still retains the possession. Burne v. Richardson, 4 Taunt. 720.

And by stat. 4 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 1, if any tenant for life or years or other person who shall come into possession by, from, or under or by collusion with him shall wilfully hold over any lands, after the determination of such term, and after demand made, and notice in writing given for delivering the possession thereof, he shall, for the time that he shall so hold over, pay at the rate of double the yearly value thereof, to be recovered by action of debt in any court of record.

This act is a remedial law. 5 Burr. 2694.
Notwithstanding the order in which the words are placed in this act, it is evident that the notice should be previous, otherwise it would be absurd and impossible to be complied with, to require after the expiration of the term that the tenant should quit at the expiration. The notice to quit, therefore, may be given before the expiration of the lease or time of demise, or after. Cutting v. Derby, 2 Bla. Rep. 1075; 5 Burr. 2694.

The right to recover on the notice is not waived by giving a second notice after the expiration of the first. Messenger v. Armstrong, 1 T. R. 53. The notice must be in writing; Timmins v. Rowlinson, 3 Burr. 1607; and be a valid notice. 4 B. & C. 922; 7 D. & R. 411, S. C. A notice to quit, "or I shall insist upon double rent," does not give the tenant an option to continue the possession paying double rent. Doe d. Matthews v. Jackson, Doug. 175. A receiver in chancery, duly appointed, is a sufficient person to give the notice. 5 Burr. 2694; 1 B. & P. 385.

A weekly tenant is not within the act. Loyd v. Rosbee, 2 Camp. 453; sed vid. Co. Lit. 54 b. A tenant holding over under a fair claim of right, is not within the act, although it be decided eventually that he has no right; 5 Esp. 203; 9 East, 313; but this seems questionable.

After a landlord has recovered in ejectment against his tenant, he may maintain debt on this act for double the yearly value of the premises during the time of the holding over after the landlord's notice to quit. 9 East, 310.

The only remedy for the double value is by action as pointed out by the act: a distress for it is not sustainable, ante, 976.

But after all, this remedy by action seemeth not altogether adequate to the evil: for three reasons, 1. Because such action is certainly tedious and expensive. 2. It is uncertain, when the action is over, whether the tenant will be able to pay. 3. What is chiefly wanted, namely putting the landlord into possession, is not obtained by such action, but for that he shall be still to seek. A more short and easy method of ousting the tenant of his possession seemeth more eligible in the like cases.

The stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, recites, whereas great inconveniences have happened to landlords, whose tenants have power to determine their leases by giving notice to quit the premises, and yet refusing to deliver up the possession when the landlord hath agreed with another tenant for the same; it is therefore enacted, that if any tenant shall give notice of his intention to quit the premises at a time mentioned in such notice, and shall not accordingly deliver up the possession at the time in such notice contained, he, his executors or administrators, shall from thenceforward pay double rent, during all the time he shall so continue in possession, to be recovered in like manner as the single rent. Sect. 18.

A question arose in the case of Timmins v. Rowlinson, 1 Bla. Rep. 533; 3 Burr. 1603; whether the tenant was liable to pay double rent for not quitting after a parol notice; and further, as he held under a parol demise as tenant from year to year, whether this was a holding under the above statute, so as to subject the tenant to double rent for not quitting after notice. And it was held immaterial whether the tenant held under a lease or a parol demise, whether the tenant's notice be in writing or by parol.

But the statute applies only to cases where the tenant has the power of determining the tenancy by a notice, and where he has actually given a valid notice, sufficient to determine his tenancy, or the bad notice has been assented to by the landlord in writing. Johnson v. Huddlestome, 7 D. & R. 411; 4 B. & C. 922, S. C.

If the landlord accept the single rent after the tenant has given notice, and hold over, it is a waiver of his claim to the double rent given by the statute. Doe v. Batten, 1 Coup. 243.

It has been decided, that a notice to quit, as soon as he can get another situation, is too vague to entitle the landlord to double rent under the above statute. Although the tenant quit the premises and underlet them. Farrow v. Elkington, 2 Camp. 593.
Distress for Rent.

But this remedy, is like manner as the former, seemeth not appositive to the main purpose. The statute proceeds upon a supposition that the tenant is a man of substance; which probably may not be the case. It is most likely that if he were able to live elsewhere, he would not chose to hold over under such circumstances, nor perhaps would the landlord want to be rid of him. The putting him out of possession, by some expeditious and easy method, seemeth the more adequate remedy in this case also, in like manner as is provided in the case where the tenant deserteth the premises, as hereafter followeth.

In the case of Right v. Derby & another, 1 T. R. 159, Lord Mansfield said, that when a lease is determinable on a certain event, or at a particular period, no notice to quit is necessary, because both parties are equally apprised of the determination of the term. But if there be a lease for a year, and by consent of both parties the tenant continue in possession afterwards, the law implies a tacit renewal of the contract. They are supposed to have renewed the old contract which was to hold for a year; and in that case it is necessary, for the sake of convenience, that if either party should be incensed to change his mind, he should give the other half a year’s notice before the expiration of the next, or any following year (a). See 2 Bla. Rep. 1124.

It must be half a year’s notice, that is, reckoning from one feast day to another; six month’s notice (i.e. a notice on the 26th of March to quit on the 29th of September), is insufficient. Id.

And when rent is reserved quarterly, it does not dispense with the regular notice to quit required by law, but is merely a collateral matter; and such notice is half a year’s, and not six months’ notice. 1 Esp. 266.

Whatever doubts may have been entertained, it is now settled that in the case of a tenancy from year to year as long as both parties please, if the tenant die intestate, his administrator has the same interest in the land which his intestate had; for such tenancy is a chattel interest, and whatever chattel the intestate had must vest in his administrator, as his legal representative, therefore, half a year’s notice must be given to the representative, whether executor or administrator, of a yearly tenant deceased, or an ejectment will not lie. 3 T. R. 13; 6 T. R. 298.

And there is no distinction between houses and lands as to the time of giving notice to quit. 3 T. R. 16; 3 Wils. 25. Though the rule does not apply as to lodgings. 3 B. & C. 88; 4 D. & R. 693, S. C.

Notice to quit ought to be in writing; and it should be certain and clear, and not optional or ambiguous. 1 Doug. 176.

It has been held that if a tenant from year to year hold from Old Michaelman, a notice to quit at Michaelman generally, is good. Doe d. Hinde v. Vince, 2 Campb. 256.

Lord Kenyon, C. J. in Doe d. Matthewson v. Wrightman, 4 Esp. 5, held that a notice to quit on the 25th of March or the 8th of April was sufficient.

And where there is any doubt as to the precise commencement of a tenancy, the most eligible seems to be “to quit at the expiration of the current year of the tenancy which shall expire next after the end of one half-year from the service of the notice.” 2 Camp. 258, (5).

An irregular notice may be waived by the landlord or tenant on whom it is served not dissenting there to. See 1 Esp. 266; Chit. jun. Cont. 103.

As the tenant is entitled to notice, so also is the landlord, if the tenant be desirous to quit.

A tenant from year to year may quit sometimes without notice, if the premises be so out of repair that he cannot live therein. R. & M. C. N. P. 265.

On holding over after the expiration of an agreement for a lease, no notice to quit is necessary. 1 M. & P. 183.

In the case of Goodright v. Cordwont, 6 T. R. 219, it was determined, (a) As to notices to quit in general, see Chit. jun. Contracts, 100; and the more recent cases in 2 R. & M. 268; 6 B. & C. 126; 4 D. & R. 246.

Attorning to Strangers.

that if a landlord receive rent due after the expiration of the notice to quit, it is a waiver of that notice. In this case, the landlord gave the tenant notice to quit at Old Michaelmas, 1792, and afterwards received a half-year's rent due on 5th April, 1793.

Such mere acceptance of rent, however, is not absolutely a waiver, but is matter of evidence only as to the meaning of the parties at the time, to be left to the jury under the circumstances of the case. 1 Coop. 295.

But a distress taken for rent accrued after the expiration of a notice to quit, is a waiver of that notice; for though in the mere acceptance of rent the quo animo is to be left to the jury (for the acceptance of money is equivocal, it may be in satisfaction for a trespass, or it may be for rent,) yet a distress is an act not to be qualified, and amounts to a confirmation of the tenancy. 1 H. Black. 311.

See the 1 Geo. IV. c. 87, for enabling landlords more speedily to recover possession of lands and tenements unlawfully held over by tenants, and for the cases decided on this act, see 1 Chit. Col. Civ. Stat. 680; Tidd, 9th edit. 1221.

XX. Attorning to Strangers.

The stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 11, declaring that whereas the possession of estates is rendered precarious by tenants attorning to strangers, enacts, that all such attornment shall be void, unless the same be made pursuant to some judgment at law or decree in equity, or be with the consent of the landlord, or be to a mortgagee after the mortgage is become forfeited.

Tenants to whom any declaration in ejectment shall be delivered shall forthwith give notice thereof to the landlord, on pain of forfeiting to him the value of three years’ improved or rack rent; and the landlord may make himself defendant by joining with the tenant, or may appear by himself. Sect. 12, 13.

And if the tenant shall not give notice to the landlord, and the plaintiff shall obtain judgment against him by default, the court, on application, will set aside the judgment, and order the tenant to pay the costs. 3 Burr. 1996.

XXI. Forms, List of.

Warrant of Distress, (No. 1.)
Inventory of Goods, (No. 2.)
Notice of Distress, (No. 3.)
Appraisers’ Oath, (No. 4.)
Form of the Appraisement, (No. 5.)
Consent for Distraint to continue in Possession, (No. 6.)
Complaint on stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 4, before a Justice where Goods clandestinely removed, in order to commit the offenders, (No. 7.)
Warrant thereon to summon the Parties concerned, (No. 8.)
Order of Justices thereon, (No. 9.)
The like in another form, (No. 10.)
Warrant of Distress in case the Offenders having notice neglect or refuse to pay pursuant to the preceding Order, (No. 11.)
Constable’s Return thereon of Want of Distress, (No. 12.)
Commitment thereon to House of Correction, (No. 13.)
Recognition on Appeal against a Conviction by two Justices for fraudulently assisting to convey Goods off the Premises to avoid a Distress, (No. 14.)
Complaint on 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 3, before a Justice where Goods being fraudulently removed and secured in a dwellinghouse, to prevent them from being taken as a Distress for Rent, (No. 15.)
Warrant thereon to follow and search for Goods fraudulently removed to prevent a Distress, (No. 16.)
Information for a Rescue and Pound Breach at Common Law, (No. 17.)
Forms.

Information and Complaint to recover possession of Deserted Premises upon view of two Justices, where no sufficient Distress can be made to counteract Arrears of Rent. (No. 18.)

Notice to be affixed on Premises being Deserted. (No. 19.)

Record of putting the Landlord in Possession. (No. 20.)

The practical directions which were inserted in this part of the work in prior editions will be found, ante, 989 to 992.

---

Warrant of distress.

I DO hereby authorize you, A. B. of in the county of ... distain the cattle, goods, and chattels of A. T. of in the said county, in the premises [or as the case may be] which he holds of me, situate in the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, for ... arrear of rent due to me for the said premises at last past; and for your so doing this shall be a sufficient warrant. Witness my hand the day of ....

---

Inventory of goods.

AN inventory of the several cattle, goods, and chattels distrained by us whose names are underwritten, the day of ... in the year ... in the premises of A. T. in ... by the authority and on the behalf of A. L. of ... for ... pounds arrear of rent due to him the said A. L.

In the dwellinghouse:
- One table,
- Six chairs, etc.

In the cow-house:
- Six cows,
- Two calves, etc. [and so on as the case may be.]

---

Notice.

TAKE notice, that by the authority and on the behalf of your landlord, A. L. I have this day of ... in the year of our Lord ... distrained the several [cattle,] goods, and chattels specified in the schedule hereunto annexed in your premises ... for ... pounds arrear of rent due to him the said A. L.; and if you shall not pay the said rent so due and in arrear as aforesaid, or reply to the said [cattle,] goods, and chattels, I shall after the expiration of five days from the date hereof cause the said [cattle,] goods, and chattels to be appraised and sold according to the statute in such case made and provided. Given under my hand the day and year first above written.

A. D.

---

Appraisers’ oath.

YOU and each of you shall well and truly appraise the goods and chattels mentioned in this inventory, according to the best of your understanding: So help you God.

---

Form of the appraisement.

The appraisement may be in the form of the inventory, specifying the particulars and their respective valuation: and then add at the end, appraised by us this day of ... in the year ... A. P. [Sworn Appraiser. B. P. [Sworn Appraiser.]

---

But if the tenant request the landlord to give further time for selling the goods

(a) If the landlord himself distrain, the forms may be readily altered.

(b) Ante, 991.
distrained, and the landlord consent, it is best for the tenant to sign a memorandum thereof to the following effect:

I A. T. do hereby request that A. L. my landlord, who on the last, distrained my [cattle] goods, and chattels on my premises at
in the county of will forbear the said thereof until the next, in order to enable me to discharge my said rent; and I do consent that the said [cattle] goods, and chattels so distrained may remain at my proper cost and in my possession upon the premises where they now are until that time, and I undertake not to replevy the said [cattle] goods, and chattels. In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand the Witness, A. W.

A. T.

(No. 7.)
Be it remembered, that this day of A. B. of complaineth that A. T. hath fraudulently and clandestinely removed and conveyed away certain goods and chattels of the said A. T. not exceeding the value of 50l. from certain premises to prevent the said A. B. from distraining the said goods and chattels for arrears of rent due to the said A. B. for the said premises. And that A. O. of [yeoman] and B. O. of [yeoman] wilfully and knowingly sided and assisted the said A. T. in so fraudulently and clandestinely removing and conveying away the said goods and chattels in concealing the same; contrary to the form of the statute in such case made and provided. A. B.
Exhibited on the day of before me Esquire, a justice of the peace residing near the place whence the said goods and chattels were removed, and not being interested in the said premises whence such goods and chattels were removed.

(No. 8.)

To the Constable of
and others whom this may concern.

WHEREAS a complaint in writing hath been this day of exhibited before me J. P. Esquire, a justice of the peace for the said county, [residing near the place whence the goods and chattels hereafter mentioned were removed, or, near the place where the goods and chattels hereafter mentioned were found, not being interested in the premises whence the same were removed] by A. B. of [gentleman], setting forth that A. T. of [yeoman] hath fraudulently and clandestinely removed and conveyed away certain goods and chattels of the said A. T. not exceeding the value of 50l. from the premises at, to prevent the said A. B. from distraining the said goods and chattels for arrears of rent due to the said A. B. for the said premises. And that A. O. of [yeoman] and B. O. of [yeoman] wilfully and knowingly sided and assisted the said A. T. in so fraudulently and clandestinely removing and conveying away the said goods and chattels, and in concealing the same; against the form of the statute in such case made and provided. This is therefore to command you forthwith to summon the said A. T., A. O., and B. O. to appear before two or more justices of the peace at on the day of at the hour of to answer the matter of the said complaint. Given under my hand and seal at the day of

J. P. (L. B.)

(No. 9.)

WHEREAS A. T. of, &c. was on, &c. at, &c. upon a complaint in writing to wit, duly made and exhibited before J. P. Esquire, one of his Majesty’s justices of the peace for the said county [residing near the place whence the goods and chattels hereafter mentioned were removed, not being interested in the premises whence the same were removed] with having fraudulently and clandestinely removed and conveyed away his goods and chattels, not exceeding the value of 50l. from certain premises at to prevent A. B. from distraining the said goods and chattels for arrears of rent due to A. B. for the said premises. And whereas A. O. and B. O. were on the day and year aforesaid, upon the said complaint duly made, charged before the said J. P. Esquire, with having wilfully and knowingly sided and assisted the said A. T. in so fraudulently and clandestinely removing and conveying away the said goods and chattels, and in concealing the same: And the said J. P. Esquire, as such justice, having summoned the parties con-

(a) Ante, 989.
(b) Ante, 983.
(c) By the 3 Geo. IV. c. 23, ante.
(d) Ante, 984.
Vot. I. 3 T
BE it remembered, that on the day of [in the year of our Lord] in the county of [A. L. of, &c. [gentleman.]] if the complaint is exhibited by the bailiff, servant, or agent of the landlord, say, bailiff, servant, or agent, as the case may be, of [A. L. of, &c. [gentleman.]] in his own person came before me, [or us.], J. P. Enquire, one [or two] of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, and residing near the place whence the goods and chattels hereinbefore mentioned were removed, [or if the proceedings are before justices residing near the place where the goods and chattels were found, say, residing near the place where the goods and chattels hereinbefore mentioned were found, we or either of us not being interested in the same describe the place whence such goods and chattels were removed, as near as may be, dwelling-house, cottage, close, &c. as the case may be, or say, in the premises where such goods and chattels were removed as hereafter mentioned.] and [if the complaint is exhibited by the bailiff, servant, or agent of the landlord, say, at the instance and on the behalf of the said A. L.] and informed me, [or us.], that A. O. of the parish of [in the county of [yeoman.]] [or one A. T. naming the tenant,] for [the half of] a year next before and ending at and upon the [25th day of December.] in the year of our Lord was held and enjoyed a certain [here shortly describe the demised premises.] and premises with the appurtenances, situates and being in the parish of [in the county of as tenant thereof to the said A. L. under a demise thereof theretofore made, at the yearly rent of payable to the said A. L. [half-yearly,] to wit, on the [24th day of June and the 25th day of December.] by even and equal portions; and that on the said [25th day of December.] in the said year of our Lord the sum of [the rent for the half year.] ending on the said [25th day of December.] is the said year of our Lord, on that day in that year became and was, and still is due, in arrear, and unpaid from the said A. T. to the said A. L. and that the sum of [of the rent aforesaid so being due, in arrear, and unpaid from the said A. T. to the said A. L. (b)] the said A. T. that is to say, on the day of [in the year of our Lord] fraudulently and clandestinely conveyed away and carried off and from the said demised premises, one, &c. [describe the goods removed and conveyed away,] being the goods and chattels and every part thereof, or if the complaint against such third person is for concealing the goods so fraudulently carried off the premises, say, and that the said A. O. afterwards, and after the said goods and chattels were so fraudulently and clandestinely conveyed away and carried off and from the said demised premises as aforesaid, to wit, on the same day and year aforesaid, at the parish of [in the county of as tenant thereof to the said A. L.] fraudulently and knowingly aid and assist the said A. T. in concealing the said goods and chattels and every part thereof, contrary to the force of the statute in such case made and provided; whereby and by force of the said statute, the said A. O. held [time of the removal, omit these words]

(a) See ante, 983, 984.
(b) If the rent was not due at the in brackets.
Forms.

forms.

forfeited to the said A. L. from whose estate the said goods and chattels were so fraudulently carried off as aforesaid, double the value of the said goods so by him carried off and concealed as aforesaid. Whereupon, &c. [here proceed as directed in the form prescribed by the 3 Geo. IV. c. 25, s. 1, ante, 836, (a) stating the adjudication thus: Therefore it manifestly appearing to us that the said A. O. is guilty of the said offence, charged upon him in the said information, we do hereby convict him of the offence aforesaid, and do declare and adjudge, that he the said A. O. hath forfeited the sum of lawful money of Great Britain, (being double the value of the said goods and chattels in the said information mentioned,) for the offence aforesaid, to be paid according to the form of the statute in that case made and provided. Given under our hands and seals the day of in the year of our Lord

J. P. (L. S.)
K. P. (L. S.)

(No. 11.)

To the Constable of and others whom this may concern.

WHEREAS A. T. of [yeoman,] A. O. of [yeoman,] and B. O. of [yeoman,] were by an order dated the day of under the hands and seals of us and justices of the peace of (residing near, &c. not being interested in, &c. as in the order,) ordered to pay the sum of to or before the day of being double the value of certain goods and chattels of the said A. T. which the said A. T. was before us duly convicted of having fraudulently and clandestinely removed and conveyed away, from [as in the order] to prevent one A. I. from distraining the said goods and chattels for arrears of rent due to the said A. L. for the said premises, and which the said A. O. and B. O. were also duly convicted before us of having wilfully and knowingly aided and assisted the said A. T. in so fraudulently and clandestinely removing and conveying away, and in concealing the same: and whereas the said A. T., A. O., and B. O. having notice of our said order, have refused or neglected to pay, and have not paid, the said sum of pursuant thereunto, and the same hath been fully proved before us: these are therefore to command you to levy the said sum of by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the said A. T., A. O., and B. O. and we do hereby order and direct the goods and chattels so to be distrained to be sold and disposed of within days, unless the said sum of for which such distress shall be made, together with the reasonable charges of taking and keeping such distress, shall be sooner paid: (c) and you are also hereby commanded to certify to us what you shall do by virtue of this our warrant.

Given under our hands and seals at the day of

(No. 12.)

I A. C. constable of do hereby certify and justices of the peace of that I have made diligent search for, but do not know of nor can find any goods and chattels of and or of any of them, by distress and sale whereof I may levy the sum of pursuant to their warrant for that purpose. Dated the day of

Given under my hand this day of

(No. 13.)

To the Constable of and also to the Keeper of the House of Correction at in the county of

WHEREAS A. T. and J. O. and L. O. were by an order dated the day of under the hands and seals of us justices of the peace of

(a) State the evidence, and as nearly as possible in the words used by the witness; it will be necessary to have proof of the particulars of the demise; the amount of the rent in arrear; the fact of removing the goods, and the circumstances of privacy or fraud attending it; and if the complaint is against a third person for assisting, the fact of such assistance and its particular manner; or if the complaint against such third person is for concealing the goods or chattels so fraudulently conveyed away by the tenant, the fact of concealing such goods and chattels, and which of them in particular, and the place where they were found so concealed; and, lastly, the value of the goods so removed and carried away or concealed.

(b) See ante, 984.

(c) 27 Geo. II. c. 20, post, 1017; and 5 Geo. IV. c. 18, post, 1018.
Distress for Rent.

Forms.

(No. 14.)

BE it remembered, that on, &c. in the year of the reign of our sovereign lord William the Fourth, by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith, C. D. of in the said county, [farmer] and E. F. of in the said county [farmer] personally came before us, J. P. and K. P. Esquires, two of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, and acknowledged themselves to owe to our said lord the King, the sum of (b), to be levied of their goods and chattels, lands and tenements, to the use of our said lord the King, his heirs and successors, if the said C. D. shall make default in the condition following:

The condition of this recognisance is such, that whereas the said C. D. in this day duly convicted before us, the above-named justices of the peace, of having wilfully and knowingly asstated and assisted G. H. of, &c. [farmer] on the day of and convey in fraudulently and clandestinely removing and conveying away the goods and chattels of the said B. O. from (describing the place, house, tenement, &c. and the parish where situate, &c.) not exceeding the value of fifty pounds, and in concealing the same, so as to prevent A. B. of, &c. from taking and seizing the same for arrears of rent due to the said A. B. from the said G. H. for certain premises, situate at , aforesaid; for which offence the said C. D. has been adjudged to forfeit to the said A. B. the sum of , being double the value of the said goods and chattels by the said C. D. so carried off and concealed; Now if the said C. D. shall personally appear at the next [quarter sessions] the peace to be held at , for the said county of , and commence and prosecute an appeal against the said conviction, and pay such costs as shall be then and there awarded by the said court against the said C. D., and not depart without leave of the court, then this recognisance to be void.

Acknowledged before us, J. P.

K. P.

(No. 15.)

BE it remembered, that this day of A. I. of [yeoman.] complainteth and maketh oath that certain goods and chattels of A. O. of [yeoman.] hath within thirty days last past been fraudulently and

(a) See stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 5 sum ordered to be paid by the conviction. See the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 6, & 8, ante, 984.

(b) The amount must be double the sum paid, ante, 984.
clandestinely conveyed and carried away from by the said A. O. his servant or servants, agent or agents, or other person or persons, aiding or assisting therein to prevent A. B. from distraining the said goods and chattels for arrears of rent due to the said A. B. for the said and that the said goods and chattels are put, placed, or kept in the house, [barn, stable, outhouse, yard, close, or other place,] of at locked up, fastened, or otherwise secured so as to prevent the said goods and chattels from being taken and seized as a distress for arrears of rent: and that the said A. I. hath a reasonable ground to suspect, and doth suspect, that the said goods and chattels are in the [dwellinghouse] of the said A. I. Taken and sworn at the day of before A. I.:

(No. 16.)

--- To all Constables, and other his Majesty's Officers of the Peace, whom these to wit, § may concern.

WHEREAS A. B. of, &c. hath this day of exhibited his complaint and made oath before me, J. P. one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county of that certain goods and chattels of E. F. have been within thirty days last past fraudulently and clandestinely conveyed and carried away from a certain [house] and premises, situate, &c., by the said E. F., his servant or servants, agent or agents, or other person or persons aiding or assisting therein, to prevent the said A. B. from distraining the said goods and chattels for arrears of rent due from the said E. F. to the said A. B. for the said house and premises. And that the said goods and chattels are in the house, [barn, stable, outhouse, yard, close, or other place of the said E. F. [or of J. H.] situate and being in, &c. in the parish of, &c. within the said county, locked, fastened, or otherwise secured, so as to prevent the said goods and chattels from being taken and seized as a distress for arrears of rent; and that the said A. B. hath a reasonable ground to suspect, and doth suspect, that the said goods and chattels are in the said house, [barn, &c.] of, &c. These are therefore to command you, and each and every of you, to aid and assist the said A. B., his steward, bailiff, receiver, or other person or persons empowered to take and seize as a distress for rent the said goods and chattels, in the time day, to break open and enter into the said house, [barn, stable, outhouse, yard, close, or other place of the said, &c. as, &c. aforesaid, and to take and seize the said goods and chattels for the said arrears of rent according to law. Given under my hand and seal, at, &c. the day of, &c.

J. P. (L.S.)

(No. 17.)

--- THE information and complaint of A. I., constable of [as the case § may be] in the said county, taken and made upon oath before me, J. P. Esquire, one of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county, the day of , in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and : who says, that as constable of the said parish of [or, bailiff, &c. or as the case may be,) he received a warrant under the hand and seal of E. E. Esquire [or, as the case may be,) one of his Majesty's justices of the peace in and for the said county of , bearing date the instant, by which he, the said constable, was commanded to sell such and so much of the goods and chattels of A. O. late of , in the said county, yoman, as should satisfy and pay T. K. constable of the aforesaid parish of , the sum of , being the charges of conveying the said A. O. to the house of correction [or as the case may be] of the said county, as , in the said county, to which house of correction [or as the case may be] he the said A. O. was committed for a misdemeanour [or felony, as the case may be,) by a warrant under the hand and seal of the said E. E. ; that under the said warrant first before mentioned, he the said informant yesterday morning, being the day of , instant, took a distress on a quantity of potatoes [or as the case may be,) belonging to the said A. O., in a house in the village of , in the parish of , in the county aforesaid, and put a lock on the door; but that last evening the said lock so placed on the said distress was wilfully broken by B. O. [or, the said A. O. as the case may be,) of , in the said county, [labourer,) and that the said potatoes, so taken as a distress, were rescued by the said B. O. [as, A. O., as the case may be,) in breach of the peace, and to the delaying of justice. He therefore prays that hue and cry may

(a) See the act, ante, 963. (b) Ante, 1001.
Distress for Rent.

In the matter of the complaint of A. B. against C. D. for a breach of the provisions of an act of the fifty-seventh year of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled An Act [here insert the title of this act, ante, 995] I, E. F. a justice of the peace for the county of , and acting within the division of , do order and adjudge that the said C. D. shall pay to A. B. the sum of , as a compensation and satisfaction for unlawful charges and costs levied and taken from the said A. B. under a distress for rent; and the further sum of for costs on this complaint.

(Signed) E. F.

Order and judgment of the justice before whom complaint is preferred on the 28 Geo. 3, c. 63, for taking too much costs, where the order and judgment is for the complainant.

In the matter of the complaint of A. B. against C. D. for a breach of the provisions of an act of the fifty-seventh year of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled An Act [here insert the title of this act, ante, 995] I, E. F. a justice of the peace for the county of , and acting within the division of , do order and adjudge that the complaint of the said A. B. is unfounded, [if costs are given] and I do further order and adjudge, that the said A. B. shall pay unto the said C. D. the sum of for costs.

(Signed) E. F.

Information and complaint to recover possession of deserted premises, upon view of two justices, where no sufficient distress can be made to counteract arrears of rent.

County of THE information and complaint of , of , in the county of , taken this day of , one thousand eight hundred and no, who with, that he, the said , did demiss at rack rent the messuage, lands, or tenement, lastly called , situate at or near , in the parish of , in the county of , and that , in the county of , is the tenant holding the same at rack rent: and that on the day of last past, there was in arrear, and due unto , the said , from , the said , tenant of the said demised premises, one year's rent thereof, and that he, the said , hath deserted the said demised premises, and left the same uncumbered, so as no sufficient distress can be had to counteract the said arrears of rent, whereupon I the said , do request A. I. and I. P., two of His Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, to go and view the said premises, and settle the most notorious part thereof notice in writing, what day they will return to take a second view, and that a due remedy may be provided me, according to the form of the statute in that case made.

Taken before us this said day of , one thousand eight hundred and 00.

Mr. C. D.

TAKE notice, that upon the complaint of E. A. of , in the county of , made unto A. P. and B. P. Esquires, two of His Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, that you the said A. S. have deserted the messuage and tenement called , consisting of , situate, lying, and being at , in the county aforesaid, unto you demised at rack rent by the said E. A., and that there is an arrear and due from you the said A. S. unto the said E. A. one year's rent for the said demised premises, and that you have left the said premises uncultivated and unoccupied, so that no sufficient distress can be had to counteract the said arrears of rent; and that the said justices, (having no interest, nor either of us having any interest in the said demised premises,) on the said complaint as aforesaid, and at the request of the said E. A., have this day come upon and viewed the said demised premises, and do the said complaint to be true; and on the day of this present month of , we will return to take a second view thereof, and if upon such second view you, or one person on your behalf, shall not appear and pay the said rent in arrear, or there shall not be sufficient distress on the said premises, then we the said justices will put the said E. A. into the possession of the said demised premises, according to the form of the statute in such case made and provided. In witness whereof we have hereunto set our hands and seals, and have caused this notice to be affixed on the outer door of the [mansion-house,) the same being the most notorious part of the said premises, this day of , in the year of the reign of our sovereign lord William the Fourth, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King.

(a) The form is prescribed by the act, ante, 995, 996.
(b) Ante, 1002.

(No. 22.)
County of BE it remembered, that on the day of , in the year of the reign of our sovereign lord George the Fourth, of the United to wit. Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith, at , in the said county, A. L. of , in the said county , complained unto us J. P. and K. P. Esquires, two of the justices of our said lord the King, assigned to keep the peace within the said county, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors in the said county committed, that he the said A. L. did demise at rack rent unto A. T. of , husbandman, a messuage and tenement called , consisting of , situate, lying, and being at aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, and that on the said day of , in the year aforesaid, there was in arrear and due unto the said A. L. from him the said A. T., the tenant of the said demised premises, one year's rent thereof, and that he the said A. T. hath deserted the said demised premises, and left the same uncultivated and unoccupied, so as no sufficient distress could be had to countervail the said arrears of rent; whereupon the said A. L., then and there, to wit, on the said day of , in the year aforesaid, at aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, requested of us the said justices that a due remedy should be provided, according to the form of the statute in that case made and provided; which complaint and request by us the aforesaid justices being heard, we (having no interest, nor either of us having any interest in the said demised premises,) on the said day of , in the year aforesaid, at aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, did personally go upon and view the said demised premises, and then and there, upon our own proper view, did find the said complaint to be true, and did then and there affix, on the most notorious part of the said demised premises, to wit, upon the outer door of the [mansion-house,) a notice in writing under our hands and seals, that we the said justices, on the day next, would return to take a second view thereof; upon which said day of , in the year aforesaid, we did return and take a second view of the said premises, and there, upon our own proper view, did find that he the said A. T. did not appear, nor any person on his behalf, to pay the said rent in arrear, and that there was no sufficient distress upon the said premises, nor upon any part thereof, to countervail the said arrear of rent: therefore we the said justices, at aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, on the day of aforesaid, did put the said A. L. into possession of the said demised premises, according to the form of the statute aforesaid. In witness whereof we the said justices unto this record do set our hands and seals, the day of , in the year of our Lord .

II. DISTRESS BY WARRANT OF JUSTICES.

A distress by warrant of justices of the peace is usually issued for the purpose of compelling payment of a penalty or costs. A magistrate has no power whatever at common law to issue such a warrant, his authority for that purpose can only be derived from act of parliament, and then only in case it is expressly given. The magistrate therefore must be guided in his proceedings in this respect by the express enactment of the legislature.

Sometimes this authority to justices is given by the statute, directing him to exercise it immediately upon nonpayment of the penalty; in other cases, only upon failure of payment after a certain number of days. In the latter case no demand is it seems necessary to enable the magistrate to issue the

(a) Ante, 1003.
Distress under Justice's Warrant.

WARRANT OF JUSTICES.

Distress by warrant after the expiration of the time limited for payment. 6 East, 73; Paley, 234.

Several statutes give a power of appeal to the party convicted, and at the same time provide that, upon the appeal and security given for the prosecuting it, the distress shall be stayed until the appeal be determined. In such cases after the determination of the appeal, if the time limited for making the distress be expired, the magistrate may it seems issue his warrant immediately without any fresh demand, for the time runs from the order. 6 East, 75. But if the warrant has been issued before and suspended by the appeal, it is better after the decision of the appeal to apply to the magistrate and lay the facts before him, before proceeding to the execution of the warrant. Per Lawrence, J. 6 East, 69; Paley, 234.

In a distress for poor rates a summons is necessary before issuing the warrant; (R. v. Benet, 6 T. R. 198; post, 60th, Vol. IV.); and the same should be issued in most cases where the distress is for a mere rate or assessment.

As to when a demand and refusal of a land tax or assessed tax rate is necessary before distress, see Gibbs v. Head, 8 B. & Cress. 528; post, 29th, Vol. III, p. 509.

If there be reasonable ground for the magistrate's doubting his authority to grant the desired warrant of distress, he had better not do so; and the court would not compel him to act. R. v. Jr. Bucks, 1 B. & Cress. 485; 2 D. & R. 687; 1 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 366, S. C.

Oath.

If an oath or affirmation be required before granting the warrant of distress, the same may be made before any justice acting under the statute which authorises the levy. 15 Geo. III. c. 39; post, 66th, Vol. III.

Form of warrant.

With respect to the warrant of distress itself, it is directed to the constable or other proper officer of the parish or district in which the goods to be distrained upon are to be found. It then shortly recites the conviction, and commands the officer to levy the sum specified, directing to whom it is to be paid. It should state when the distress is to be sold. 27 Geo. II. c. 20, post, 1017. It should be warranted by the conviction. 2 Id. Raym. 1189. Very often the form of the warrant is prescribed by the act allowing it to be issued. The warrant should in general be under the hand and seal of the magistrate, and in most statutes it is required to be so. Post, 83d, Vol. V. But in Willes, Rep. 411, it was held that a warrant of distress, granted by two justices under stat. 9 Geo. II. c. 23, which refers to stat. 12 Car. II. c. 24, a. 45, on a conviction for selling spirituous liquors without a license, need not be under the seal of the justices; it is sufficient if it be under their hands. See further, post, 83d, Vol. V.

Who to execute it.

The constable or parish officer, or other known officer in a borough or other special jurisdiction, is the proper person to execute the warrant. Paley, 235. He is bound to execute and return the warrant if delivered to him in a reasonable time. Post, 127, ante. As to the place where they may execute it, see 5 Geo. IV. c. 18, a. 6, post, 1020.

Mode of execution.

The mode of executing warrants in general will be found treated of under post, title, 83d, Vol. V.

In cases of distress for the levy of penalties there seems to be no power to break open doors or gates, in case they are locked up or shut, unless such penalty or part thereof be given to the King; which matter may seem to require some consideration. See 2 Hawk. c. 14, a. 5; 2 Jones, 233; 1 B. & A. 227; 2 B. & A. 592; 3 B. & A. 330. And as to breaking open doors in general, post, 83d, Vol. V.; Roane, Vol. III, p. 278, 279.

It should seem that in general the law as to what may be taken in execution under a writ of fieri facias would be here applicable. See Tidd's Pract. 9th ed. 1004, 8th.

If the party convicted be a feme covert, the goods of the husband are not in general liable to be distrained on, unless there be an express authority for it in the act of parliament allowing the distress, as there is in the 22 Car. II. c. 1. See 11 Co. 61 b; Paley, 237.
Distress under Justices Warrant.

By the 27 Geo. II. c. 20, s. 2, post, 1017, the officer, upon the execution of the warrant, is bound, if required, to show it to the person whose goods are distrained, and to suffer a copy of it to be taken.

Sale]—Before the stat. 27 Geo. II. c. 20, there was no time limited for the sale of the goods; by section 1, however, of that act it is enacted, that in all cases where any justice of the peace is, or shall be, required or empowered, by any act of parliament, to issue a warrant of distress for the levying of any penalty inflicted, or any sum of money directed to be paid by or in consequence of such act, it shall be lawful for the justice granting such warrant therein to order and direct the goods and chattels so to be distrained to be sold and disposed of within a certain time to be limited in such warrant, so as such time be not less than four days, nor more than eight days, unless the penalty or sum of money for which such distress shall be made, together with the reasonable charges of taking and keeping such distress, be sooner paid.

It had before been solemnly resolved that these words in an act of parliament, "to be levied by distress," must be understood of "distress and sale." 1 Salk. 379; Carth. 502; 1 Ld. Raym. 583; 6 Mod. 83.

The sale ought to be by the officer for ready money, and if he sells on credit, he will be liable for the produce. Simble, Morley v. Hocker, 6 Mod. 83.

Costs and Charges]—Before the 18 Geo. III. c. 19, ante, 903, 809, except where special provision was made for levying the costs and charges, no more than the mere penalty could in any case be levied. That act, however, first empowered the justice to give costs, and at the same time authorised the recovery of the amount in addition to the penalty if under 5l. If the penalty amounts to or exceeds that sum, the costs are still to be deducted out of it, provided the deduction does not exceed one-fifth of the penalty.

The costs of the distress are given by several statutes, in certain cases of warrants of distress; though it seems, from the case of Moyne v. Cockedge, Will. 636, that such a power is impliedly given in all acts that authorise the levying of a sum of money by a warrant of distress. To remove all doubts, however, the stat. 27 Geo. II. c. 20, s. 1, enacts, "that in all cases where any justice or justices of the peace is or are, or shall be, required or empowered by any act or acts of parliament now in force, or hereafter to be made, to issue a warrant of distress for the levying of any penalty inflicted, or any sum of money directed to be paid, by or in consequence of such act or acts, it shall and may be lawful for the justice or justices granting such warrant, therein to order and direct the goods and chattels so to be distrained to be sold and disposed of within a certain time to be limited in such warrant, so as such time be not less than four days, nor more than eight days, unless the penalty or sum of money for which such distress shall be made, together with the reasonable charges of taking and keeping such distress, be sooner paid."

And by sect. 2, "the officer making such distress shall and is hereby empowered to deduct the reasonable charges of taking, keeping, and selling such distress, out of the money arising by such sale; and the overplus (if any) after such charges, and also the said penalty or sum of money shall be fully satisfied and paid, shall be returned on demand to the owner of the goods and chattels so distrained; and the officer executing such warrant, if required, shall show the same to the person whose goods and chattels are distrained, and shall suffer a copy thereof to be taken."

Sect. 3. But this shall not extend to alter any provisions relating to distresses to be made for the payment of tithes and church rates by the people called Quakers, contained in stats. 7 & 8 Will. III. c. 94, and 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 6.

There is no power given by this act to the justices to ascertain such charges; therefore it seemeth that the officer executing the warrant shall be the sole judge thereof in the first instance, and afterwards, if the owner of Distress under Justices Warrant.

The goods distrained shall be dissatisfied, the reasonableness thereof shall be determined by a judge and jury upon an action brought.

But by special statutes, this power of ascertaining the charges of distress and sale is sometimes given to the justices, as is set forth in this book under the respective titles.

The above-mentioned statutes of the 7 & 8 Will. III. c. 34, and 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 6, relate not only to tithes and church rates, (by which last seeming only to be understood the churchwardens' rate for the repair and other uses of the church,) but also to any customary or other rates, dues, or payments, belonging to any church or chapel, which of right by law and custom ought to be paid for the stipend or maintenance of any minister or curate officiating in any church or chapel. Therefore, for any thing that appears from the words of this statute, unless it be in the case of tithes or church rates, the justices may order the distress for those other dues and payments to be detained for a certain time, and the officer may deduct the charges not only of distaining, but also of keeping and selling the distress; whereas by those former acts above mentioned, the officer was only allowed to deduct the necessary charges of distaining.

Now by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 17, ante, 630, the provisions of the 57 Geo. III. c. 93, ante, 995, regulating the costs of distresses for rent not exceeding 20l. are extended to distresses not exceeding 20l. for land tax, assessed taxes, poor's rates, church rates, tithes, highways rates, sewers rates, or any other rates, taxes, impositions, or assessments whatever.

Formerly there was no means of levying the penalty if the offender was not possessed of sufficient goods to answer it within the jurisdiction of the convicting magistrate, for the levy could not be made elsewhere. But now by stat. 33 Geo. III. c. 55, s. 3, reciting, "And whereas warrants of distress granted by justices of the peace are sometimes ineffectual, by reason of the goods and chattels of the persons against whom such warrants are granted, being out of the jurisdiction of the justice granting the same," it is enacted, that in all cases where any penalty, forfeiture, fine, or other money may by warrant of any justice of the peace be directed to be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of any person, if sufficient distress cannot be found within the limits of the jurisdiction of such justice, on oath thereof made by one witness before any justice of any other county or place, (which oath shall be by him certified by indorsement on such warrant,) such penalty, forfeiture, fine, or other money, or so much thereof as may not have been before levied or paid, shall and may, by virtue of such warrant and indorsement, be levied by the person to whom such warrant was originally directed, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such person in such other county or place; to be applied in like manner as if sufficient distress had been found within the jurisdiction of the magistrate originally granting such warrant; and if no such distress can be found, such offender shall be proceeded against according to law.

Provided that no justice who shall indorse any certificate upon, or authorise the execution of any such warrant of distress which may not have been granted within his jurisdiction, shall be answerable for any irregularity which may have been committed in or about the obtaining or granting of such warrant.

By the 5 Geo. IV. c. 18, s. 6, post, 1020, constables may execute warrants out of their precincts, provided it be within the jurisdiction of the justice granting or backing the same.

By stat. 5 Geo. IV. c. 18, intituled "An Act for the more effectual recovery of penalties before justices and magistrates on conviction of offenders; and for facilitating the execution of warrants by constables," reciting that "by several acts, certain penalties and forfeitures are imposed on persons for offences committed against the directions of such acts, which are directed to be recovered before any justice or justices of the peace, or any magistrate or magistrates, within their respective jurisdictions; and on non-payment thereof, such penalties and forfeitures, together with the reasonable costs and charges attending the several convictions, are directed to be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender or offenders, by warrant under the hand and seal of such justice and magistrate respectively: and whereas no power is given to such justices and magistrates, on conviction of such offenders, to detain him, her or them in custody till return is made to the warrant of distress, for the purpose of ascertaining whether such offenders have any goods and chattels to satisfy such penalties, forfeitures, costs and charges, whereby such offenders frequently escape any punishment for their offences: it is enacted, "that from and after the passing of this act, (31 Mar. 1824,) whenever any penalty or forfeiture is or shall be directed to be recovered before any justice or justices of the peace, or magistrate or magistrates for any county, riding, soke, city, division or place, and such justice or justices of the peace, magistrate or magistrates, is or are authorised and empowered, on the conviction of the offender or offenders, in default of payment of such penalty or forfeiture, together with the reasonable costs and charges attending such conviction, to cause the same to be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender or offenders, by warrant or warrants under the hand and seal of such justice or magistrate, or hands and seals of such justices or magistrates, together with the reasonable costs of such distress and sale; and in case upon a valuation being taken of the goods and chattels of the offender or offenders, sufficient distress for the payment of all such penalties and forfeitures and other costs and charges cannot be found, or in case it shall appear to such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, either by the confession of the offender or offenders or otherwise, that the offender or offenders has or have not sufficient goods or chattels whereupon the same may be levied, within the jurisdiction of such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, no sale shall take place of the goods and chattels of such offender or offenders, but it shall be lawful for such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, to commit such offender or offenders to the common gaol or house of correction, for such time and in such manner as in such acts respectively mentioned and directed, then and in every such case it shall and may be lawful to and for such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, at his or their discretion, to order the offender or offenders so convicted to be kept and detained in safe custody until return shall be made to such warrant or warrants of distress, unless such offender or offenders shall give sufficient security, to the satisfaction of such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, for his, her or their appearance before him or them on such day or days as shall be appointed for the return of such warrant or warrants of distress, such day or days not being more than eight days from the time of taking such security; and such security such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, is and are hereby empowered to take by way of recognizance or otherwise, as to him or them shall seem right and proper; or in case it shall appear to the satisfaction of such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, either by the confession of the offender or offenders or otherwise, that he, she or they hath not or have not goods or chattels within the jurisdiction of such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, sufficient whereon to levy all such penalties and forfeitures, costs and charges, such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, may at his or their discretion, without issuing any warrant of distress, commit the offender or offenders for such period of time, and in such and like manner, as if a warrant of distress had been issued and a nulla bona return thereon."
Distress under Justices Warrant.

Sect. 2. "And whereas by some acts certain penalties or sums of money are to be recovered before a justice or justices of the peace, or a magistrate or magistrates, and he or they is and are authorised to issue forth his or their warrant for levying such penalties or sums of money by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender or defendant; but no further remedy is provided in case no sufficient goods and chattels can be found whereon to levy such penalties or sums of money; for remedy whereof, it is further enacted, that whenever it shall appear to any such justice or justices of the peace, magistrate or magistrates, by whom any penalty or sum of money is adjudged to be paid, upon the return of any such warrant of distress, that..."
Distress under Justices Warrant.

no sufficient goods and chattels of the offender or defendant can be found whereon to levy the sum adjudged to be paid, and all costs and charges, within the jurisdiction of such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, or in case it shall appear to such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, either by the confession of the party or parties, or otherwise, that he, she or they have not sufficient goods and chattels within the jurisdiction of such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, sufficient whereon to levy such sum of money, costs and charges, such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, at his or their discretion, and without issuing any warrant of distress, may proceed in such and the like manner as if a warrant of distress had been issued and a nulla bona returned thereon; and it shall be lawful for such justice or justices, or magistrate or magistrates, to issue forth his or their warrant for committing such offender or defendant to the common gaol for any term not exceeding three calendar months, unless the sum adjudged to be paid, and all costs and charges of the proceedings, shall be sooner paid; provided always, that the amount of such costs and expenses shall be specified in such warrant of commitment."

Sect. 3. "That in the case of any offender or offenders committed to the common gaol or house of correction for default of payment of such penalty or forfeiture, together with the reasonable costs and charges attending the conviction, if such offender or offenders shall at any time, during the period of his, her or their imprisonment, pay or cause to be paid to the governor or keeper of the prison, the full amount of such penalty, together with the costs and charges, it shall be lawful for such governor or keeper of such prison, and he or they are hereby required forthwith to discharge such offender or offenders from his or their custody."

Sect. 4. "And whereas cases may occur where the recovery of such penalty or forfeiture by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender or offenders may appear to the justice or justices of the peace, or magistrate or magistrates, for any county, riding, soke, city, division or place, to be attended with consequences ruinous, or in an especial manner injurious to the offender or offenders and their family or families; be it enacted, that the justice or justices, and magistrate or magistrates aforesaid, shall be empowered, and they are hereby authorised, in all cases and upon all such occasions as to them shall seem fit, and where such consequences are likely to arise, to cause to be withheld the issue of any warrant or warrants of distress, and to commit the offender or offenders aforesaid immediately after conviction, and in default of payment of the penalty or forfeiture, with costs and charges, to the common gaol or house of correction, for such time and in such manner as are in such acts respectively mentioned and directed: provided always, that it be by the desire or with the consent in writing of the party or parties upon whose property the penalty or forfeiture is to be levied."

Sect. 5. "That nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to that part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland called Scotland."

Sect. 6. "And whereas warrants addressed to constables, headboroughs, tithingmen, borsholders, or other peace officers of parishes, townships, hamlets or places, in their characters of and as constables, headboroughs, tithingmen, borsholders or other peace officers of such respective parishes, townships, hamlets or places, cannot be lawfully executed by them out of the precincts thereof respectively, whereby means are afforded to criminals and others of escaping from justice: for remedy whereof, be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful to and for each and every constable, and to and for each and every headborough, tithingman, borsholder or other peace officer for every parish, township, hamlet or place, to execute any warrant or warrants of any justice or justices of the peace, or of any magistrate or magistrates within any parish, township, hamlet or place, situate, lying or being

(a) See this section already noticed, ante, 799, 1 B. & C. 288; 3 D. & K. M. C. 323, ante, 799.
Distress under Justices Warrant:

within that jurisdiction for which such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, shall have acted when granting such warrant or warrants, or when backing or indorsing any such warrant or warrants, in such and the like manner as if such warrant or warrants had been addressed to such constable, headborough, tithingman, borsholder or other peace officer, specially by his name or names, and notwithstanding the parish, township, hamlet or place in which such warrant or warrants shall be executed, shall not be the parish, township, hamlet or place for which he shall be constable, headborough, tithingman or borsholder, or other peace officer, provided that the same be within the jurisdiction of the justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, so granting such warrant or warrants, or within the jurisdiction of the justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, by whom any such warrant or warrants shall be backed or indorsed.

Return of Warrant]—The constable is bound to certify to the justice, at the time assigned for the return of the warrant, what he has done upon it. R. v. Wyatt, 1 Salk. 380. He need not, nor should he return the warrant itself, for that is for his own justification. 2 Ld. Raym. 1196.

If the constable refuses to certify what he has done, or if he has levied the penalty and refuses to pay it over, he may be proceeded against by indictment or information; or it seems the justices before whom the warrant is returnable may fine him. Paley, 244. The Court of King's Bench will not grant a mandamus. R. v. Nash, 2 Ld. Raym. 996; 6 Mod. 83; ante, Cons- table, p. 811.

Replevin]—It may be as well to observe that where goods are taken by way of a levy, as for a penalty on a conviction under a statute, it is generally in the nature of an execution; and unless replevin be given by the statute, it will not lie, the conviction being conclusive and its legality not questionable in replevin. Fenton v. Boyle, 2 New Rep. 399; 6 Bac. Abr. 5th ed. 58, Replevin, (O.); Com. Dig. Action, (M.); 6 Willes, 673, n. b; 1 B. & B. 57; 7 B. & C. 338. In some cases where a special inferior jurisdiction is given to justices, and they exceed it, replevin lies. Willes, 673, n. b. It lies for goods distrained under a warrant from commissioners, authorised by act of parliament, to levy rates for specific local purposes, with power of distress. 1 Sacrat. 301; and see 1 B. & B. 57. It lies to try the legality of a distress for poor rates, where there is a total want of jurisdiction; as if the party distrained on was not an occupier; (see 7 B. & C. 398; 3 Wils. 442; 1 Salk. 205; 6 East, 283); or for a sewers' rate; semble, 6 T. R. 522; Hard. 478.

Forms.

(No. 1.)

In the said county, and to all other Constables in and for the said county.

WHEREAS C. D. late of [or, on the day of instant], duly convicted before [me], J. P., one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, for that he the said C. D. [and c. state the offence, as in the conviction], against the form of the statute in that case made and provided; and [I] the said J. P., thereupon adjudged the said C. D., for his said offence, to [and set out the adjudication as in the conviction]: and whereas the said C. D., being so convicted as aforesaid, and being required to pay the said sums, hath not paid the same or any part thereof, but therein hath made default; these are therefore to command you forthwith to make distress of the goods and chattels of the said C. D.; and if, within the space of [see ante, 1017.] days next after the making of such distress, the said sums, together with the reasonable charges of taking and keeping the said distress, shall not be paid, then you do sell the said goods and chattels so by you distrained, and out of the money arising by such sale, that you do pay one moiety of the said sum of so forfeited as aforesaid, together with the said sum of for costs unto A. B., who hath informed me of the said offence; and the said other moiety of the said sum General form of warrant of distress for penalty and charges of distress.

Distress under Justices Warrant.

Forms.

Of so forfeited as aforesaid, unto the use of his Majesty, [or, unto the overseers of the poor of the said parish of [where the said offence was committed. for the use of the poor of the said parish, or, according to the statute, which enables us to who is to have the penalty]; rendering the surplus on demand unto the said C. D., the reasonable charges of taking, keeping and selling the said distress being first demanded. And if no such distress can be made, that then you certify the same unto me, to the end that such further proceedings may be had therein as to the law doth appertain. Given under my hand and seal this day of, &c.

J. P.

---

(constable's return thereto.)

[Kent.]-I, E. F., constable of , in the county aforesaid, do hereby certify J. P., Esquire, one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, that by virtue of this warrant I have made diligent search for the goods and chattels of the within-mentioned C. D., and that I can find no sufficient goods or chattels of the said C. D. whereon to levy the sums within mentioned. Witness my hand the day of, &c.

E. F.

---

General form of commitment for want of distress.

[Kent.]-To the Constable of in the said county, and to the keeper of the house of correction in the said county.

WHEREAS C. D., late of in the said county, [labourer,] was on the day of last past, duly convicted before [me] J. P., one of his Majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, for that he the said C. D. [&c. state the offence as in the conviction], against the form of the statute in that case made and provided; and [I] the said J. P. thereupon adjudged the said C. D., for his said offence, to [&c. set out the adjudication as in the conviction]: and whereas afterwards, on the day of in the year aforesaid, [I] the said J. P. issued a warrant to the constable of , commanding him to levy the said sums by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the said C. D.; and whereas it appears to me, as well by the return of the said constable to the said warrant of distress as otherwise, that the said constable hath made diligent search for the goods and chattels of the said C. D., but that no sufficient distress can be found whereon to levy the same: these are therefore to command you, the said constable of aforesaid, to take the said C. D. and him safely to convey to the [house of correction] at aforesaid, and there to deliver him to the said keeper thereof, together with this present; and I do hereby command you the said keeper of the said house of correction to receive the said C. D. into the said house of correction, there to imprison him [and keep him to hard labour] for the space of calendar months, unless the said sums shall be sooner paid; and for your so doing this shall be your sufficient warrant. Given under my hand and seal at in the county aforesaid, this day of, &c. in the year of the reign of William the Fourth.

J. P.

---

Award of costs and warrant of distress for.

See the forms, ante, 906.

---

Distringas. See Process, Vol. V.

---

Divine Service. See ante, Church; Public Worship, Vol. V.
Dogs.

As to the duty on dogs, see post, Craw, Vol. V. So far as dogs fall under the consideration of the Game laws, see post, title Game, Vol. II.

As to the stealing of dogs, see post, Larceny, Vol. III. p. 572. The law takes notice of a mastiff, hound, spaniel, and tumbler, as valuable things. 1 Saund. 84.

Other dogs are not considered in law of any intrinsic value, and at common law are not the subject of larceny. See 4 Bla. Com. 236. But several statutes have been passed to protect the property in them against theft, &c. See Larceny, Vol. III. p. 572.

Mischievous Dogs]—A mastiff, going in the street unmuzzled, from the ferocity of his nature being dangerous and cause of terror to his Majesty’s subjects, seemeth to be a common nuisance, and consequently the owner may be indicted (a) for suffering him to go at large.

And in Smith v. Pellah, 2 Stra. 1264, it was ruled, that if any dog has once bit a man, and the owner having notice thereof keeps the dog, and lets him go about or lie at his door, an action will lie against him at the suit of the person bit, though it happened by his treading on the dog’s toes; for it was occasioned by his not killing the dog on the first notice, and the safety of the King’s subjects ought not afterwards to be endangered. And see Blackman v. Simons, 3 Car. & P. 138.

If a man knowingly keeps a dog accustomed to bite, and any person coming by chance in his way be bitten, an action lies against the owner, though he had no malice against the particular individual. Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., in the case of Townsend v. Wathen, 9 East, 280.

Where the defendant’s dog was reported to be mad, and the defendant tied him up, but he broke loose, and bit the plaintiff’s child, who died of hydrophobia; it was held that the defendant was liable in damages to the amount of the apothecary’s bill for attending the child; and Lord Kenyon, to prove the scienter, admitted evidence of reports in the neighbourhood that the dog had been bitten by a mad dog. Jones v. Perry, 2 Esp. 482; differently reported, Peake’s Evid. 5th ed. 292. The defendant was bound to destroy or effectually secure the dog.

And in Blackman v. Simons, 3 C. & P. 138, it seems to have been considered that in general the owner of a vicious animal, after notice of its having done an injury, is bound to secure it at all events, and is liable in damages to a party subsequently injured, if the mode he has adopted to secure it becomes ineffectual.

But if a dog accustomed to bite be let loose at night for the protection of the defendant’s yard, and the injury arise from the plaintiff’s ineffectually going into the yard after it has been shut up, no action will lie. Brock v. Copeland, 1 Esp. 203.

And in a late case at nisi prius, it was considered that a person cannot recover damages for an injury received from the bite of a dog placed in a yard for the protection of outhouses, unless he had such reasonable and justifiable cause for being in the place where the dog was as might be pleaded in answer to an action of trespass; and if he had such cause, the circumstance of there being a notice on a board, in large letters, warning persons to beware of the dog, will not be an answer to an action by him for the injury, if it appear that he was not able to read. Sarch v. Blackburn, 4 C. & P. 297.

If no suspicion be thrown upon the plaintiff by the defendant in such a case, it may be taken he had such cause, provided the dog is put in a place.

(a) See form of indictment, post, 1025.
forming part of another entrance to the house of the defendant, although there may be other entrances of a more public description by which the plaintiff might have proceeded. Sarch v. Blackburn, 4 C. & P. 297.

In the same case Tindal, C. J., said, "I think a man has no right to place a dog so near the door of his house that any person coming to ask for money; or on other business, might be bitten; and so with respect to a footpath, though it be a private one, a man has no right to put a dog with such length of chain and so near that path that he could bite a person going along it."

Where the allegation in the declaration was that the dog was accustomed to bite mankind, and that the defendant knew it, it was held by Abbot, J., that proof that the defendant had warned a person to beware of the dog lest he should be bitten, was evidence to go to the jury in support of the allegation. Judge v. Cox, 1 Stark. 285; and see 1 B. & A. 823. Though when it was alleged that the defendant knew that the dog was accustomed to bite sheep, the Court of King's Bench held that proof that the dog had jumped at a man and chased sheep, was not evidence to support the allegation. Bartley v. Halliwell, 2 Stark. 214; 1 B. & Ald. 620, S. C.

So in an action for keeping a dog which bit the plaintiff, proof that the dog was of a fierce and savage disposition, and generally tied up by the defendant, and that defendant promised to make plaintiff a pecuniary remuneration after the latter had been bit by the dog, was not considered sufficient. Beck & Wife v. Dyson, 4 Campb. 196.

In order to maintain an action for biting by the defendant's dog, it must be proved also that he knew his dog to be used to bite; but one instance is sufficient in that case. 12 Mod. 555; R. v. Haggins, 1 Ld. Rep. 196.

If a man has a dog that kills sheep, this is not a public nuisance, but the owner of the dog (knowing thereof) is liable to an action; but if he is a coward of such quality, he shall not be punished for this killing; and in an action upon the case for such killing, the plaintiff shall be required to prove in evidence that the dog had used to kill sheep. Dyer, 25; Ht. 171.

And if a man keeps a dog accustomed to bite sheep, and he knows it, notwithstanding he keeps the dog still, and afterwards the dog bites a sheep, this shall be actionable, although he had been known before to bite sheep only; because the owner, after notice of the first mischief, ought to have destroyed or hindered him from doing any more hurt. 1 Ld. Rep. 16; Bull. N. P. 77.

But if my dog kills your sheep, and I freshly after the fact tender ye the dog, you are without remedy. Fitz. N. B. 69, L. b. Sed quasi tuus.

Noisy Dogs—Generally speaking, an action will not lie for such things as merely abridge the gratification of the plaintiff in the enjoyment of his property; and where the plaintiff brought his action against the defendant for keeping his dogs so near the plaintiff's house that his family were prevented from sleeping during the night and were much disturbed during the day, and the jury found a verdict for the defendant, though no evidence was given by him, the court refused to grant a new trial. Street v. Tugwell, 6th N. P. 1047; see post. Sanis, Vol. III. p. 914.

Dogs Straying—An action of trover was brought for a pointing dog. The plaintiff proved the dog to be his property, and that it was found in the defendant's house twelve months after it was lost. The defendant said the dog strayed there casually, and demanded 20s. for twenty weeks' keep before he would deliver up the dog. A verdict was given for the plaintiff subject to the opinion of the court whether this refusal amounted to a conversion of the dog. But the counsel for the defendant declined arguing the question; and the plaintiff had judgment. Binstead v. Buck, 2 Bla. K. 1117.

Dogs' Collars—A remark has been made by Sir John Fielding, in Dogs.

Observations on the Penal Laws, which ought to be repeated here. He recommends it to all persons to put brass or steel collars on their dogs' necks, with the name and place of abode of their owners, and to fasten them with a padlock; for the stealing such collars being felony, it will facilitate the punishing of the offender; and the dog, when found, is recoverable by action.

—— THE jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath present, that C. D. late of, &c. on the, &c. in the year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord William the Fourth, by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith, and on divers other days and times between that day and the day of the taking of this inquisition, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, near unto the King's common highway, there unlawfully did keep, and still doth keep, a certain large dog of a fierce and furious nature; and the said dog, on the day and year aforesaid, and on the said other days and times, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, near unto the said highway, there unlawfully did permit and suffer, and still doth permit and suffer, to go unmade and at large; by reason whereof the liege subjects of our said Lord the King, on the day and year aforesaid, and on the said other days and times, at the parish aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, could not nor can they now go, return, pass and labour in and through the said highway there, without great danger and hazard of being bit, maimed and torn by the said dog, and losing their lives, to the great damage, terror and common nuisance of all the liege subjects of our said Lord the King, in, by and through the said highway there going, returning, passing, repassing, and labouring, to the evil example of all others, and against the peace of our Lord the King his crown and dignity. (See a form, post, Nuisance, Vol. III. p. 919.)

Dower. See post, Forfeiture, Vol. II.

Drunkenness. See Alehouses, ante, 100, 101.

(a) See other precedents, 3 Ch. C. L. 642, 3.
Blackstone's Commentaries.

Just Published, in Four Thick Volumes, Octavo. Price 3l. 13s. 6d.

A NEW AND GREATLY IMPROVED EDITION OF COMMENTARIES

ON

THE LAWS OF ENGLAND,

BY SIR W. BLACKSTONE, Knt.

WITH THE AUTHOR'S ANALYSIS Prefixed to EACH Book, AND A MEMOIR OF HIS LIFE.

The Eighteenth Edition, with copious Notes.

* * * This Edition contains such of the Notes of the late Professor Christian as are considered useful; and the Second Volume is enriched with numerous Annotations from the MSS. of a learned Law Lord. The object of the publishers has been to present to the profession an edition of this celebrated Work, comprising all the important alterations which the Law of England, particularly the Criminal Law, has recently undergone; and they trust that those alterations will be found so fully and correctly incorporated in the Notes as to render this edition a valuable assistant to every student and practitioner in the profession, whether attached to equity, common law, or criminal practice.

REPORTS OF CASES FOR THE USE OF MAGISTRATES.

In Three Vols. 8vo. boards, and Vol. IV. Parts I. II. & III.

The design of the present work is to obviate the serious objections which gentlemen have to purchase the general Reports of King's Bench Cases, where the Cases interesting to Magistrates form so small a portion compared with those which concern the profession. Early publication, portability of form, and moderation of expense, are some of the inducements which the publishers hold out to engage the attention of gentlemen to the present work.

Vol. I. and Vol. II. Parts I. and II.

These Reports will be published as often as there may be sufficient matter to form a Part. They are in continuation of Dowling and Ryland's Magistrates Cases; a few Copies of which are still on sale.